Mr. CUMMINS. The opportunity, however, may come oftener. I myself am not in sympathy with the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota, because I do not believe we have reached a time when we should put a man in the penitentiary for lying. If you apply it to this particular object, you might just as well apply it to the most ordinary affairs of life; and my observation has been that if you should make it a criminal offense for a man to lie-or to prevaricate, if I may use a gentler term—you would rapidly depopulate the country.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. On page 2 of the proposed substitute, lines 4, 5, and 6, it is proposed to strike out the words "building, office, or other place connected with the national defense.' Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to confine somewhat the territory or the place which it would be a crime to approach or enter. It must be recalled that the last clause in this paragraph provides or any prohibited place within the meaning of section 6 of this chapter. I intend to offer an amendment to that section when we reach it; and in order to understand clearly the amendment that I now offer, I desire to refer to section 6 for a moment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to make a suggestion to the Senator from Iowa. Possibly the idea has occurred to him, but I am not sure. The War College down here would be excluded from the operation of the act if the amendment now offered by the Senator prevailed, would it not?
Mr. CUMMINS. It would not.

Mr. WALSH. Under what feature of the bill as it remained would the War College be included?

Mr. CUMMINS. As I just remarked, the last clause of the paragraph is:

or any prohibited place within the meaning of section 6 of this chapter. Mr. WALSH. Oh. That is to say, the President might issue a proclamation under the provisions of section 6 designating the War College?

Mr. CUMMINS. As it is now the reference is to a place designated by the President of the United States; but I do not believe that it ought to remain in its present unrestricted form. Section 6 now says:

The President of the United States shall have power to designate any place other than those set forth in paragraph (a) of section 1 hereof as a prohibited place for the purposes of this chapter, on the ground that information with respect thereto would be prejudicial to the national defense.

At the proper time, when I reach it, I intend to move that after the word "hereof," in line 7, there be inserted these words: In which anything for the use of the Army or Navy is being prepared or constructed.

But at this moment the question is whether the words "building, office, or other place connected with the national defense shall be stricken out. I believe they ought to be stricken out, because in the effort to reach one building like the War College, for instance, you have to take in every building in the United States if it is directly or indirectly connected with the national defense. In order to reach one office that may very properly be segregated from other offices, and from which the public may be very properly excluded, you take in every office in the country if it can be in anywise connected with the national defense, and I believe that the Senator from North Carolina is of the opinion that it need not be connected with the Army or the Navy. It need not be connected with the military forces of the country. It may be anything that is used, directly or indirectly, in the support of the Army or the Navy.

Of course every appropriation is connected with the national defense. Every inquiry concerning military training is connected with the national defense. Every movement of our citizens is connected with the national defense, for they are all a part of the militia of the United States. All people from 18 to 45 constitute the militia of the United States, and they are protected just as much by the terms of this law as are the members of the Regular Army or the Organized Militia.

I appeal to the sober and considerate judgment of the Senator from Montana. Does he desire to fling this net around every building and every office which may be connected with the public defense in the tenuous and remote way I have just mentioned? We have gone mad, Mr. President. We have formentioned? We have gone mad, Mr. President. We have forgotten that we live in a republic. We are thinking only of German spies and English spies, and this bill will not help in any respect to catch an English spy or a German spy. A spy enters an office or a place or a building for the purpose of obtaining information that he can communicate to the enemy or to a hostile power. How does it help to arrest me if I enter or approach such an office for a perfectly innocent object? It does not assist the Government in the detection of the criminal, because when the criminal is detected then the Government must prove these things, and in proving these things it will establish his unlawful intent.

There has not been an instance since the war in Europe in which such a law as this would have been of the least benefit in detecting or arresting or convicting a criminal against our country. There have been some instances in which men who have violated what ought to be the law of the country have escaped, and I want the law strengthened so that if such things occur in the future they will be brought to justice.

I have no objection to the subsequent parts of this measure save in one respect, which is not very material; but when you pass this law and the people of the country understand it they will appreciate that from every building and every office that is in any way connected with the national defense they are to be excluded, and it is criminal if they approach any such building or office with the intent to secure information. I leave out the words "to which they are not lawfully" entitled, because they mean nothing to me. I do not know who is entitled to any particular information, nor do I believe the rest of the country will be able to find out who is entitled to such information. When you extend this tyrannical power to cover every building and every office you will offend the just sensibilities of a people of a free country.

If you so frame the law that the President can extend the operation of the law to any building or any office or any place that is in some way attached to the military department of the Government, there can be no objection to that; people will understand it and, I think, will approve it, but they will not approve attempting in this indirect way to establish martial law throughout the whole United States.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator proposes to strike out one of the most important parts of the bill, relating to plans, code books, and signals, which are kept in some building or some office and are necessary to the national defense. I know that some of our plans have been abstracted; one or two signal books have gone; a code book has gone; and there is no law to stop it. Now the Senator proposes to strike out the word "building" and the word "office," and that is where they are kept. It seems to me they are the most important words in the sentence.

Mr. CUMMINS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERMAN. Certainly.

If these words were stricken out, would not Mr. CUMMINS. the President have the power to issue an order making any such office or building as has just been described by the Senator a prohibited place?

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President-

Mr. CUMMINS. I ask the question and I beg the Senator to answer it

Mr. OVERMAN. I am going to answer the question. In this section we go on to describe the place where they are prohibited, including buildings and offices. For fear that we have not covered everything, in order to protect the national defense, in section 6 we give power to the President to designate, in his judgment, other places and stations that are to be pro-tected. That is the reason for section 6. Senators do not know, the Senator from Iowa does not know, of the places that ought to be protected. If the time shall come when some places that ought to be protected are not included in the section then we want to give the Executive of the Government the power to designate other places which should be protected from spies. That is what it is for-to protect the Government from spies and from traitors. I would hang every one of them.

Mr. CUMMINS. I wish the Senator from North Carolina would use the word "spy" in the act and the word "traitor" in the act instead of in his speeches.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from North Carolina a question. Does he not complain of certain overt acts and the loss of valuable documents, code books, and other things belonging to the United States Government? Why can not the Senator specify the things he wants to protect and the things which it is improper for citizens to take and stand on that? Why does the Senator want to go so far as to make it a crime for a citizen of the United States innocently and in the course of other perfectly legitimate business to of certain overt acts and the loss of valuable documents, code approach and go into quite ordinary places or talk about mili-tary matters in the War Department or any other of the places mentioned in the act?

The bill is so broad in its language that, as I said, it implies nervousness and a lack of detailed conception of what is really desired. Everybody knows how these things have been stolen in a general way, and I imagine the Navy has taken proper pre-cautions to prevent the stealing of any more code books from our

It is largely a question of personnel. You can enact all the laws that you want between now and doomsday and you can not control the man who has enlisted for the purpose of stealing a code book if he gets a chance. It is a question of vigilance on the part of our officers in not letting the wrong kind of people in the wrong place. It is very far-fetched legislation to throw a net all over this country and make things that are absolutely innocent in themselves the subject of possible criminal prosecution.

When the Senator speaks he has a perfectly clear line of objects in his mind, thoroughly legitimate, entirely proper, with which every American citizen ought to sympathize, but to take this kind of a law and make it applicable in times of peace in a democratic country is without precedent and certainly without just cause.

Mr. OVERMAN. It would be impossible to specify these places. No Senator knows what are these plans or what specific articles are in some buildings that ought to be protected, and we made it general to protect everything connected with the national defense amendment of the Senator from Iowa.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the

Mr. OVERMAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll. The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst Brady Brandegee Broussard Smith, Ga. Smith, Md. Smith, S. C. Johnson, Me. Johnson, S. Dak. Oliver Overman Overman
Page
Penrose
Phelan
Pittman Poindexter
Pomerene
Ransdell
Reed
Robinson
Shafroth Jones Jones
Kenyen
Kern
Kirby
Lea, Tenn.
Lee, Md.
Lewis Lodge
McCumber
Martin, Va.
Martine, N. J. Catron Chamberlain Smoot Stone Swanson Tillman Clapp Enderwood Vardaman Wadsworth Walsh Williams Colt Cummins Fall Hardwick Shafroth Hughes Husting Sheppard

Mr. SHEPPARD. I wish to state that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Sherman], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Smrrh], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson], the Sen ator from Florida [Mr. Fletcher], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Chamberlain], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Rans-DELL], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] are absent on official business.

Mr. WALSH. I rise to state that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Chilton] has been called from the city on account of the serious illness of a member of his family.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-five Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. I ask for a division.

The amendment, on a division, was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the amendment which I send to the

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment vill be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 16, strike out the words "without lawful authority" and insert "in violation of a statute or a lawful order of the President of the United States."

Mr. CUMMINS. This amendment touches the same subject covered by the first amendment which I offered, and it would have the same effect as to this part of the bill that my former amendment would have had upon that part of it to which it was directed.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, let me appeal to the Senator from Iowa. We have had a test vote on this question. Will be not withdraw this amendment?

Mr. CUMMINS. If I may have an opportunity to be heard, I am sure I will not disappoint the Senator from North Carolina.

I was remarking that the Senate had voted upon the same proposition in principle and I do not intend to prolong the discussion by restating my views upon this particular subject. I intend to offer the amendment simply in order that my record shall be straight upon this subject. I do not intend to allow a bill of this sort to pass without doing what I can do to eliminate its enormities; and, much to my regret, I must take up some time in tendering these amendments. I submit the present amendment, however, simply saying that it involves the same principle which was involved in the amendment upon which the yeas and nays were ordered and taken this forenoon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The Secretary. On page 3, line 14, it is proposed to strike out the words "not lawfully entitled to receive it," and to insert in lieu thereof the words "who is forbidden by statute or a lawful order of the President of the United States to acquire or receive it."

Mr. CUMMINS. This amendment also embodies the same idea, and is an attempt to protect, if I can, the great body of the population of the United States from the danger which I think is contained in the proposed statute. I shall not say anything more about it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the amendment which I send to the

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be stated.

The Secretary. On page 3 it is proposed to strike out from lines 14, 15, and 16 the words:

Or willfully retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, this amendment is of an entirely different character and presents a very different subject. I have not pointed out the defect, as I look at it, in the bill in this respect. Therefore I shall trespass upon the time of the Senate long enough to indicate what the bill really does in this regard.

Paragraph (d) of section 1 provides:

Whoever, lawfully or unlawfully-

Now, remember that-

(d) whoever, lawfully or unlawfully having possession of, access to, control over, or being intrusted with any document, writing, code book, signal book, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, blue print, plan, model, instrument, appllance, note, or information relating to national defense, willfully communicates or transmits, or attempts to communicate or transmit, the same to any person not lawfully entitled to receive it. tled to receive it.

The Senate has just voted against an amendment of mine which substitutes for the phrase "not lawfully entitled to receive it" the phrase "who is forbidden by statute or a lawful order of the President of the United States to acquire or receive it." It then proceeds with the further offense, "or willfully retains the same."

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President-

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I merely wish to make an inquiry. Does the Senator from Iowa think there is any vital difference between the phrase "not lawfully entitled to receive it" and the phrase "forbidden by law to receive it"

Mr. CUMMINS. There is all the difference that exists between safety and danger.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I was not able to hear the Senator's argument on that question; but on first impression there does not appear to me to be a vital difference between the phrase "lawfully authorized to receive it" and "not forbidden to receive it."

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, there is a very great difference, which I have attempted to point out at so much length that I would not dare to take up time in repeating it. I will, however, have to go back now in order to connect myself with the present admendent, for that does not cover the particular subject referred to by the Senator from Washington,

Whoever is in possession of any information, whether it is lawfully in his possession or unlawfully in his possession, and willfully retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it, becomes subject to the penalties of this paragraph and section; that is to say, if I, being in lawful possession of information concerning the national defense, refuse to deliver that information to the President or to a general of the Army or to an admiral of the Navy, I become a criminal.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Pardon me a moment for an inquiry.

This provision reads:

Willfully communicates or transmits or attempts to communicate or ansmit the same to any person not lawfully entitled to receive it.

Of course the General of the Army is lawfully entitled to receive it.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, just a moment. Mr. WILLIAMS. And, of course, the Secretary of War is lawfully entitled to receive it.

Mr. CUMMINS. The difficulty with the Senator from Mississippi is that I am not considering that at all-

Mr. WILLIAMS. And, of course, the President is entitled to receive it.

Mr. CUMMINS. I am not considering that part of the bill. have passed on to another part, and the present amendment does not relate to that part of the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understood the Senator's amendment to strike out the language "willfully communicates or transmits or attempts to communicate or transmit the same to any person not lawfully entitled to receive it."

Mr. CUMMINS. It does not.
Mr. WILLIAMS. What is the Senator's amendment?
Mr. CUMMINS. It proposes to strike out the words "or willfully retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it.'

I hope the Senate will appreciate this most remarkable situation; and in view of the fact that I was just interrupted-and very properly so-by the Senator from Mississippi, I must restate it. If anyone, officer of the Government or otherwise-and that covers a Senator of the United States, of course, or a Member of the House of Representatives-is lawfully in possession of information concerning the national defense, no matter what part of the national defense, and some other officer of the Government who has been directed to receive it asks for the information, the one who has possession of it must give it to him or become a criminal.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, the provision reads:

Or willfully retains the same and falls to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it.

Suppose the United States is in a state of war or menaced by war, as is the case right now, and the Senator from Iowa or I should happen to have information of value to the executive officers of the Government, and we willfully retained that information, of benefit perhaps to a belligerent Government about to engage in war with us, and we failed to deliver it on demand? It is not a question of voluntary failure to deliver it. The Secretary of War or the President writes to me or to the Senator and says:

I am informed that you have certain information that is of value to the United States, or may be of value against the United States in behalf of some foreign Government, and I ask you what it is.

The language is-and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it.

Does not the Senator from Iowa think that if he or I had that Does not the Senator from flows think that if he of I had that information and willfully retained it, or failed upon demand to communicate it to the proper officials of this Government, we would be guilty of constructive treason—

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And absolute disloyalty to the United of the Constructive treason—

Mr. WILLIAMS. And absolute disloyalty to the United States." but these United States of America, not "this United States," States, including Iowa and Mississippi? but these United

Mr. CUMMINS. I think these United States would be of little value if it were not for Iowa and Mississippi [laughter], and therefore under no circumstances would I want to exclude either of those Commonwealths.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I merely used that phrase to indicate that Iowa and Mississippi were both interested in this question.

Mr. CUMMINS. Yes; they are both interested, and I think are both desirous of good government and desirous of preserving some of the forms of a republic. I ask, though, the Senator from Mississippi this question: He is an officer of the Government and I am an officer of the Government; he has possession lawfully of information concerning the public defense, and I want it. I go to him and say: "I want you to give me that information; I am entitled to receive it." This bill will make the Senator from Mississippi a felon if he declines to give it to me. Now, I have no objection to saying that when the President of the United States wants from a citizen information that is of value to the country, he shall have it. The whole difficulty with this bill is that, in order to reach a few very proper cases, we have brought within its scope a thousand cases that are improper and that ought not to be included in the law.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me, this provision does not read "retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to any officer or employee of the United States"; it does not read in that way; it reads "retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it." No Senator is an officer of the United States entitled to receive from another Senator the information which that Senator may have. This provision only applies to his failure or refusal to give the information to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it. That, of course, does not contemplate the idea that I must communicate to the Senator from Iowa every piece of information that I have, or that he must communicate to me every piece of information that he has. It merely means just what it says, "to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it." Now, who is the officer—

Mr. CUMMINS. That is just what I was about to ask the Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Wait a moment. Who is the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it? A naval or a military officer in charge or in control, or the President of or any other defense of the United States, or the Secretary of War, or the Secretary of or to me to be important?

the Navy. Now, the Senator can not make any more out of it to save his life.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, suppose that I know how many bushels of wheat or corn have been raised in Iowa during the year, and assume that such information is connected with the national defense, will the Senator from Mississippi tell me what particular officer is entitled to demand and receive that information from me?

Mr. WILLIAMS, Yes; I can tell the Senator. The President of the United States, the Secretary of War within his province, the Secretary of the Navy within his province, the commandant of the post within his province, the commandant at Fort Myer, in connection with the city of Washington, within his province, and any other officer charged with the defense of the United States at the locality at which the Senator or I might be at the moment resident.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I have some objection to being really in the power of one master, but I did not dream that I was to be put under the power of so many masters, whose views on the subject might be somewhat conflicting.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me for just one further observation: Every citizen in time of war or in time of the menace of war-in time of war, especially-is under a great many superior officers—the captain of the company, the colonel of the regiment, the commander of the brigade, the commander of the division, the commander of the corps, the general in supreme command, the Secretary of War. We can not live in this world in competition with people who are violating the law of nations agreed upon by the civilized world without subjecting ourselves to some sort of subordination to military authority. and that military authority will go from the captain of the company up to the general of the Army. The observation about being submitted to so many commands is, I think, not well taken. We have got to be submitted to all sorts of commands if we are faced with a situation that we are apprehending.

I ask the Senator's pardon for interrupting him so long. Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I am very glad to hear an interruption of that kind, because there is a great deal of force in what has just been said if it were in any degree or any respect applicable to the present bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does not the Senator admit that we are now, every day, living in daily apprehension of war?

Mr. CUMMINS. Will the Senator from Mississippi allow me just a moment in my own behalf? Of course we are; but this bill is not limited to the time of apprehension of war. It is not limited to threatened war. It will be just as applicable 10 years hence, in a time of profound peace, as it is now, or as it is after hostilities shall begin, if unfortunately they do begin. There are certain paragraphs in the bill which are limited to a time of war; but this paragraph, the one that I am discussing, is the law that is proposed for the American people permanently and during times of peace.

If it should be limited to a time of war, or even threatened war, a large part of my objection to it would at once disappear. But we are changing the entire fabric of our Government here; we are changing the entire policy which we have pursued for so many years in establishing a system of this sort among the people in time of peace. What I have said, I repeat—that I do not intend, or I hope I shall not be compelled, to submit in a time of peace to the demand of an Army or a Navy officer, I care not whether he is of high degree or of low degree, insisting that I shall deliver to him information which I have acquired with regard to the national defense.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will pardon me a moment further. Why should the Senator or I refuse to give to a military officer of the United States any information which either he or I possess that would be important for the defense of the United States? Now, in connection with that question the Senator will remember that this entire bill is a bill for the defense of the United States; and the Senator will remember that his amendment is to strike out the words. "or willfully retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive No officer of the United States is entitled to receive information that you or I possess except upon the assumption of a state of war, a condition of war, or a condition of apprehended immediate war.

I should like to ask the Senator upon what principle he could justify his refusal or my refusal, in time of war or of anticipated war, or even in times of peace, to give any officer of the United States charged with the defense of the United States any information that we had with regard to the fortifications or any other defense of the United States that seemed to him

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, the only reply I make is that there are some privileges which a citizen may enjoy in time of peace. He has no privileges in time of war. I agree to that. I agree that the law disappears.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not agree with that.
Mr. CUMMINS. Well, just a moment; allow me to talk just a moment. I say that a citizen has no privileges in time of war, such as we have been discussing here, and I am not arguing this bill from the standpoint of war. I am arguing it from the standpoint of peace, and I think the mere fact that I am a free man, a free citizen of the United States, gives me the right to refuse to give to any officer of the Government information which I may have acquired in a perfectly lawful way, if I choose to refuse it. It might just as well be said that we should pass a law that would enable any officer of the Army or Navy to command the distinguished Senator from Mississippi to rise in his place and make a speech upon a subject. There is no limit to the invasion of the rights of citizenship if an officer of the Army or Navy can, in time of peace, command a citizen to communicate to him information which he has lawfully acquired touching the na-tional defense—and that means touching American life, because all of it is a part of the national defense, as has been declared here over and over again. If we can confer on any officer such power as that, then of course we can attach to it the proper penalties. We can say that the officer can put him on the rack until he discloses what he has.

Why. Mr. President, those were just the atroclous policies pursued in the time of the Inquisition. Those were the things done when it was sought to extort from victims some information with regard to the good of the church, or, at a later time, some information with regard to the good of the government. It has been that power which has been relied upon for more acts of infamy in the history of the world than any other power ever exerted by organized society.

I do not believe it is necessary for the public welfare or for the public defense that this obligation be put upon citizens of the country in times of peace, and it is for that reason that I have offered the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, in the first place I deny that in matter of substance and common sense we are now living in a time of peace. It is true that formally and nominally the United States is not at war with anybody; but it is also true that pretty nearly all the other nations of the world are at war with one another. This entire statute is based upon the apprehension of war; and the Senator from Iowa seems not to have read, or if he has read seems not to have fully comprehended, or if he has comprehended seems not to have fully realized, the exact sense in which his amendment would be taken in connection with this bill.

The Senator offers his amendment on lines 14 to 17 on page 3. Now, the language which accompanies the language which he wishes to strike out is this-and I ask the careful attention of the Senate to the language:

Whoever, lawfully or unlawfully, having possession of, access to, control over, or being intrusted with—

What?-

any document, writing, code book, signal book, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, blue print, plan, model, instrument, appliance, note, or information relating to the national defense—

Relating to the national defense-willfully communicates or transmits or attempts to communicate or transmit the same to any person not lawfully entitled to receive it, or willfully retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it—

Shall be punished as prescribed in the bill. Now, the Senator proposes to strike out the words:

or willfully retains the same and fails to deliver it on demand to the officer or employee of the United States entitled to receive it—

Fails to deliver what?-

any document, writing, code book, signal book, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, blue print, plan, model, instrument, appliance, note, or information relating to the national defense.

Any man who would refuse to communicate to the Government of his own country "any document, writing, code book, signal book, sketch, photograph," and so forth, "or information relating to the national defense, upon proper inquiry by the proper officer, would be spiritually a traitor to his own land. There is no reason why he should be protected.

The Senator says that there are no privileges in time of I beg to differ from him there. Every American citizen in time of war, unless he is within the line of hostilities, has a right to every constitutional protection that is thrown around him by the bill of rights and the 10 first amendments to the Constitution and the balance of that instrument; and even the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case that went up from Arkansas, in which Judge Garland was concerned-I do not remember the title of the case—said that outside of the boundary of hostilities the martial law of the United States could not apply, and the man had a right to his ordinary constitutional privileges of citizenship. There is nothing in this bill that takes it away from him. The only thing in this bill is this: That if I have information useful to my country, my land, my motherland-not, as the Germans call in their absurd spirit of dominance, fatherland, but as we English-speaking people call it in tenderness, our motherland-if I have any information useful to my motherland, it shall be a crime for me willfully to refuse to disclose it on demand of the proper officer of the United States—these United States, Mississippi, Iowa, California, Minnesota, all the balance of these United States, coupled together for common defense. That was the only reason why they were coupled together. It is the only reason why their citizens are coupled with one another—for common defense against a foreign foe; and here we are hesitating about whether or not we shall make it a crime to refuse to give to the Government of these coupled United States, coupled against the world in common defense, information that is useful for the common defense. To whom? To "any officer entitled to re-

Why, even during the War between the States, when you people up North went pretty far, nobody, except in temporary aberration of judgment for a short time, ever contended that a citizen of the United States in Indiana or Illinois or Ohio or Minnesota did not have the same constitutional privileges and rights that he had in times of peace, except that if he was within the lines of military operations he was subjected to martial law.

I say that no man has any right to refuse any information necessary, or thought by these United States to be necessary, to "the public defense," much less has he any right to refuse to hand over a document, a writing, a code book, a signal book, a sketch, a photograph, perhaps of our fortifications of the Narrows at New York, or Fort Henry and Fort Charles, protecting the Chesapeake, and thereby protecting the Capital of the United States, or a photographic negative, a blue print, a plan, model, instrument, appliance, or note, as outlined in this act. That is outside of the general language "or information relating to the national defense." There is nothing in this bill requiring you or me or anybody to give any information that does not relate to the national defense. How can a man excuse himself, if he is loyal to his motherland, in failing or refusing to give any information that is germane to the national defense?

think, with all due deference to the Senator from Iowa, that he really did not think about the clause of which this amendment is a part, and a necessary part, and of the efficacy and efficiency of which he would deprive the clause if his amendment were agreed to.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, of course what the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] has just said with relation to the duty of an American citizen to his country, in time of war or in time of peace, to furnish the Government generally with any information necessary for its defense is taken by everyone for granted. With the objection of the Senator from Iowa to this language in the bill I do not agree.

There are two rules of ordinary statutory construction. This is merely a matter now of statutory construction. There are two rules that are ordinarily followed by a court. One of the two rules that are ordinarily followed by a court. first is that the court, in undertaking to ascertain the meaning of the legislature, never presumes that the legislature intended a futile or a foolish thing. That may be a violent presumption. However, it is a principle of law with reference to statutory construction by which every court is supposed to be guided.

The second is one, it seems to me, that would settle the controversy being discussed now in any court in the world, that where a matter is defined by statute and there is a further classification of the acts which are prohibited, and those acts are set forth in specific acts, and then there are general terms following, the general terms are always construed as applied to like acts. I have never known any deviation from this rule of construction. To say that a Senator of the United States should be intrusted with a blue print or a document of any kind or any other information relating to the national defense by an officer of the United States, taking it out of the possession of the custodian, should be guilty of a crime when he refuses the demand to return it to the possession of the proper custodian would be, of course, foolish.

The illustration the Senator has used-information which might come into his possession with reference to the food supply, the corn crop or the wheat crop of the State of Iowa-of course, would be one of those which the court would reject under the first rule I have referred to-that the legislation is not presumed to attempt a foolish or a futile thing. However, to apply the illustration as any court, in my judgment, would apply it, certainly as I would apply it, to the case before us, as to what the word "information" meant, aside from the general proposition that it means acts of a like character to those enumerated specifically, I would say, if it became necessary for the United States to ascertain exactly how many bushels of corn there were in the States of the Union necessary for the public defense, furnishing all the land and naval forces and feeding all the population, if it became necessary to ascertain that information, if it became necessary for the United States of America to ascertain how many bushels of wheat were to-day in the elevators within the State of Iowa as a part of the national defense or upon which to base measures for the national defense, that information so obtained was in the possession of the Senator from Iowa, it being a matter necessary for the national defense, and the Senator from Iowa was to refuse to deliver that information to the party who had obtained it or to the party whose business it was to obtain it, I should say that the Senator from Iowa was guilty under this act if he retained it, that if he refused to deliver that information he would be guilty. That is all there is to this provision.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment

of the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the following amendment: The Secretary. Strike out paragraph (e), page 3.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, the amendment strikes out the paragraph which makes negligence a crime. I discussed it at some length on Saturday, and I shall not take up the time of the Senate in repeating what I then said. I do not believe we have reached a time in this country, especially when we are at peace, when it should be made a crime to commit an act of negligence, even though it be gross negligence, unless some one or something is harmed or injured by the act of negligence. I do not know of any law in the world which makes an act of gross negligence a crime unless it is followed by injury.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Iowa forgets about speed laws. If I go speeding at a reckless rate down Pennsylvania Avenue I may not do anybody any harm, but I am punished, notwithstanding, simply because the tendency of that thing is to result in harm to people. That is the theory upon which this part of the bill is framed. We punish one who through gross neglect loses important documents relating to the national defense-plans of defense, and otherwiseeven though no harm comes to the Government, because if things of that kind are overlooked it is not at all improbable that those documents will get into the hands of some foreign power with which, unfortunately, we may in future be at enmity.

I think, upon reflection, the Senator from Iowa will not feel that in his statement he is quite accurate.

Mr. CUMMINS. I think the Senator from Montana is wrong in his application of the instance he put. Suppose a man does race down Pennsylvania Avenue at a grossly negligent speed, and there is no law which fixes the speed, no law which determines how fast he can go, if he injures no one he does not become a criminal. There is not a law I remember anywhere that would punish him as a criminal. If Congress fixes a speed which travelers must regard on the streets of Washington, then if he exceeds the speed he would even be guilty of a crime.

Mr. OVERMAN. One of the oldest cases I remember when I read Blackstone was that of a man on top of a building who was so grossly negligent that he allowed a brick to fall over and kill a man, and that was a crime under the law.

Mr. CUMMINS. That is what I said a moment ago. That was followed by some injury.

Mr. OVERMAN. This gross negligence is a quasi crime, and we have made it an unlawful act.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not know what the Senator means by a quasi crime. Negligence subjects one to civil penalties. There may be damages recovered for negligence of various grades, but I do not know of any law that makes negligence of any degree a crime unless some one is injured or something is injured. I think, though, it is not comparable with some of the other things in the bill. I am becoming numb, absolutely numb, as I hear such legislation defended. I have offered the amendment because I believe we ought to have no such statute; but if other things I have mentioned do not appeal to Senators I am sure this will not.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the following amendment. The Secretary. It is proposed to strike out paragraph (f), pages 3 and 4.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, this is the paragraph which makes it a crime to post a letter or document containing any matter written in any medium which is not visible until subjected to heat, chemicals, or some other treatment. I made some observations upon it Saturday, but I have no reason to think they made any impression. My remarks upon it, I have no doubt, are just as invisible upon the minds of those Senators who are here as is the ink which is to be made criminal here

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa. [Putting the question.] The noes seem to have it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. May we have the amendment read? Mr. CUMMINS. I ask for the year and nays upon it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, my attention was diverted for a moment. I desire to say a word about the amendment. I believe that paragraph (f) can scarcely be justified, and I think upon reflection the Senator from North Carolina will agree that it may very properly go out. I can not believe that there is much occasion for it. If writing of that character could be utilized for the purpose of conveying to an enemy information concerning the national defense, in order to get a conviction we would be obliged to establish that the communication was made in that manner. Yet it seems to me that it would be next to impossible to establish that a communication was made in that manner unless one possessed the secret by which the invisible writing could be brought out. If it was brought out then the character of it would be disclosed. It carries, as a matter of course, a communication that is entirely innocuous upon a matter totally unrelated to the public defense, as well as one which would fall within that class. It does not seem to me that we can justify ourselves in a sweeping provision of this character.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH. I will be glad to yield. Mr. WADSWORTH. Does it not seem also to the Senator that it should apply to a communication in code? If we are to forbid secret communications of any sort, why not include communications in code between two gentlemen?

Mr. WALSH. I would not be able to distinguish any differ-

Mr. WADSWORTH. I believe this is a rather remarkable provision in the bill, because apparently the provision does not relate to national defense whatsoever.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will put the question again.

Mr. OVERMAN. This matter was discussed by the committee good deal. I remember the Senator from Montana [Mr. Walsh] was opposed to it in the committee, but I think he yielded. I know very little about how this is done. I am told that there is a good deal of secret information conveyed by this method; that sometimes they may have invisible writing, by which you can take up the paper and it will not show a thing, but it is detected and the information conveyed when it is subjected to heat. That sort of information I know is conveyed now throughout the world by means of invisible writing by the application of some chemical. I admit what the Senator from Montana says as to proving it, but it does not do any harm if you can not prove it. This is to stop people from trying to convey secret information or hostile information against the Government by some kind of a method that I know has been used by means of chemicals.

Mr. TOWNSEND. This does not refer to information connected with the Army at all.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is what it is intended to do.
Mr. TOWNSEND. It is not mentioned anywhere.
Mr. OVERMAN. We can only reach it by prohibiting the whole thing. However, I am willing to let it go out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CUMMINS. I am very much obliged. I offer the following amendment: After the word "in," in line 12, page 5, I move to insert the word "willful."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment

offered by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, this seems to me to be rather an obvious omission. I hope the Senator from North Carolina will be willing to insert it in the bill. The provision to which it is directed reads as follows:

Whoever, in time of war, in violation of regulations to be prescribed by the President, which he is hereby authorized to make and promul-gate, shall collect, record, publish—

And so forth.

It is highly essential, I think, that the violation should be a willful one; that is to say, inasmuch as we are about to delegate to the President the authority to prescribe rules with regard to speech and publications, no one should be held guilty of a violation of the regulation unless he had or should have had knowledge of the regulation. We are all held to have knowledge of a law which has passed in the regular way and published as provided by the Constitution and the statutes, but how are men to be informed with regard to the regulation that may be prescribed by the President? Does not the Senator think that before one is punished merely for publishing or communicating or speaking of these things it should be a willful violation?

Mr. OVERMAN. the word "willful"? Where does the Senator propose to put in

Mr. CUMMINS. I propose to put it in after the word "in" and before the word "violation," in line 12, page 5.
Mr. OVERMAN. Will the Senator read it as he proposes to insert it?

Mr. CUMMINS. I will read it as it would be if my amendment were adopted:

Whoever, in time of war, in willful violation of regulations to be prescribed by the President, which he is hereby authorized to make and promulgate, shall collect, record, publish, or communicate, or attempt to elicit any information with respect to the movement, numbers, description, condition—

And so forth.

Mr. OVERMAN. This is a time of war, and I do not think the word "willful" should be in there. Everybody ought to be forbidden from doing the act which is denounced whether willful or not. I am opposed to the amendment.

Mr. CUMMINS. I know that my only chance is to appeal to the Senator from Montana [Mr. Walsh]. He is the only one who can convince the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. OVERMAN. He did not convince me on the former

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the Senator from Iowa does me too much honor. Let me inquire of the Senator, though, just what case he contemplates reaching by this wording. What class of violations would be exempted? I find it a little difficult to understand just exactly what the significance of the matter is. The President issues and promulgates certain rules and regulations concerning the collection and dissemination of information touching these matters in time of war. These are all published, and, under well-accepted rules, everyone takes judicial notice of those rules and regulations. Now, a newspaper man, in violation of those rules and regulations. Now, a newspaper man, in violation of those rules and regulations, collects and publishes the information. It is the purpose to make him amenable to the provisions of the proposed act. How could a man collect this information and disseminate it in violation of man collect this information and disseminate it in violation of the rules and regulations without doing it willfully?

Mr. CUMMINS. My idea is that the word "willfull" contemplates knowledge of the regulations. I as somewhat fearful plates knowledge of the regulations. I as somewhat fearful of mere regulations. They have not the publicity of law, and it might very well be that in obscurer portions of the country—not in New York, not in Chicago, not in Washington, but in parts of the country that are somewhat remote from the seat of government—a great many people would violate this paragraph in utter ignorance of the existence of any such regulations.

Now, mark you, if it only referred to newspapers, I would not be here to say a word upon this point. I assume that they would know what the regulations of the President are. I am opposed, of course, to giving the President the power to suppress newspapers entirely, absolutely, as this provision does; but that is a very little thing as compared with many other features of this bill. It is true that we never have had a law which contemplated the absolute suppression of all news, of all communication between citizens relating to the national defense, but I am not now discussing that. However, in my own State and in the Senator's State there are a great many people who communicate with each other concerning the national defense who will be in entire ignorance of the fact that they have been forbidden to do so by the President, for, mark you, this is not confined to publications or newspapers. It says Shall collect, record, publish, or communicate, or attempt to elicit any information with respect to the movement, numbers, description, condition, or disposition of any of the armed forces, ships, aeroplanes, or war materials of the United States, or with respect to the plans or conduct, or supposed plans or conduct of any naval or military operations, or with respect to any works or measures undertaken for or connected with, or intended for the fortification or defense of any place, or any other information relating to the public defense or calculated to be, or which might be, useful to the enemy.

If two farmers in Iowa or two miners in Montana were sitting down together and discussing the public welfare, and one of them-I am assuming now that it had been forbidden by the President to do so-should communicate to the other any information with regard to the movement, numbers, description, condition, or disposition of any part of the armed forces of the country or any information relating to the public defense, he would become a criminal. I do not think he ought to become a criminal unless he knows that he has been forbidden by an Executive order to do those very common, ordinary, and, as we have hitherto supposed, legitimate things. Does not the Senator from Montana believe that so much security, at any rate, should be preserved?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, it will be borne in mind that, in the first place, this provision applies only to time of war; in the second place, it will be borne in mind that the thing is expressly forbidden by rules and regulations promulgated by the President of the United States as Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy.

The Senator from Iowa has often said in the course of this The Senator from Iowa has often said in the course of this discussion that in time of war he is willing to accord the most extraordinary powers to the President of the United States. Of course, this is an extraordinary power; but I was not sufficiently imaginative to think that the Senator intended by the word "willful," as it applied here, to excuse one who could plead ignorance of the rules and regulations. These rules and regulations, of course, have the force of law; and no man is required to excuse himself, under well-established principles. permitted to excuse himself, under well-established principles, for the violation of a criminal statute by asserting that he did not know what the law was; and ! dare say the Senator from Iowa will recognize that the whole value of the provision is gone if a man may say, "I did not know anything about the regulations."

Of course, the Senator from Iowa presents an extreme case of two neighbors sitting down to talk about the war that unfortunately is progressing; but it is scarcely conceivable, Mr. President, that the President of the United States, in issuing his rules and regulations, will frame them in such a way as to forbid communications of that character. I think, if that is the significance that is to be given to the word "willful" in the act, I must turn a deaf ear to the personal appeal made to me by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President, this is one of the points with reference to which I must desert the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Cummins]. I am inclined to think that item (c) is absolutely correct. As has been pointed out, it applies to times of war; it applies to military movements in time of war, and if you will permit me to illustrate by an anecdote, I can show just exactly what kind of a situation it would apply to.

I had this statement from Gen. Grant's Engineer Chief of Staff, that on a certain occasion Gen. Meade, having heard of an exposed and unprotected position south of the Potomac, massed troops—infantry, artillery, and cavalry and proper supplies—at a given point for the purpose of attacking the unprotected place. He did it with great secrecy, as he thought, and he was ready to make the attack when a full report was printed in one of the morning papers of New York, describing every movement he had made for the purpose of this secret attack. Gen. Meade was rather a testy officer, and he had the two reporters involved tried by court-martial, drummed out of camp, and prohibited from again being seen within the limits of the Federal lines. The result of it was that the whole press got down on Meade, and he was given what was known as the "silent treatment" so effectively, as this general officer told me, that he thought many of the Federal troops in the Battle of Gettysburg did not know that Meade was their commanding officer.

Mr. President, that is an illustration of an absolutely wrongful act committed by newspaper enterprise—both wrongful acts—and that is the kind of a wrongful act that this section (c) prohibits, and prohibits with a great deal of vigor. I think it is all right; but when you go back to section (d), on page 3—we have passed that, but it may yet come up in the Senate— I think that is as far in the wrong as the provision under discussion is right.

Eliminating certain of the parenthetical sentences, subdivision (d) would simply read:

Whoever, lawfully or unlawfully, having possession of information relating to the national defense willfully communicates or transmits the same to any person not lawfully entitled to receive it shall be punished—

And so forth.

That, I take it, Mr. President, is aimed at any newspaper reporter who gets any kind of information about military matters in time of peace. Now, I desire to give an illustration where newspaper enterprise was of a good deal of use to the country within a few months in connection with a matter affecting the National Guard. It will be recalled that, under a suspension of the rules, an appropriation of $2,000,000 was put through here last summer on the Army appropriation bill to provide for the dependents of members of the National Guard who were serving under the President's call. That provision was in vigorous language, and yet, Mr. President, somebody That provision was in vigorous language, and yet, Mr. President, somebody in the War Department had the Secretary of War refer that provision to the Treasury Department, and the Treasury Department knocked the heart out of that appropriation by the construction they put upon it. Fortunately for the country and fortunately for the National Guard, a newspaper man discovered what was going on. He published it in the evening expressions and was reasonable by an appropriate which I ning newspapers, and we were able, by an amendment which I offered to the revenue bill, to correct that construction by the Treasury Department of the amendment which provided for the dependent families of soldiers serving in the National Guard at the border.

Mr. President, fortunately the enterprise of a newspaper man gave us the necessary information and we were able to prevent that crippling effort directed against the efficiency of the National Guard.

There was a legitimate exposure in time of peace of some-thing affecting the national defense which that reporter had a perfect right to print, and that reporter ought not to be sent to jail for printing it; and yet, under subdivision (d), on page 3, a reporter publishing such information, upon which the Senate of the United States acted, immediately would be sent to jail.

This illustration shows in what an excited and hysterical manner this proposed statute is being considered. The demarcation or line to be drawn through the whole effort to enact a law of this kind should be between times of peace and times of war. In times of war it is the patriotic duty of the press to keep silent as to the number, condition, and movement of Federal troops. In times of peace in a Republic like ours, in my humble judgment, the more they discuss the condition of our military affairs, the better it will be for the country.

Mr. OVERMAN. Question!

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to a small matter in this bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. I suggest to the Senator that he allow us to dispose of the amendment that is now pending.

I did not Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Very well.

understand that an amendment was pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Hollis in the chair). question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa, which the Secretary will state.

The Secretary. On page 5, line 12, before the word "violation," it is proposed to insert the word "willful"; so as to read "in willful violation of regulations to be prescribed by the President," and so forth.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" seem to have it; the "ayes" have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Caroline asks for a division.

The amendment was rejected on a division.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the following amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The Secretary. On page 5, it is proposed to strike out in lines 22, 23, and 24, the following words:

or any other information relating to the public defense or calculated to be, or which might be, useful to the enemy.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, we have already given to the President the right to prescribe what shall be promulgated, published, or communicated-with respect to the movement, numbers, description, condition, or disposition of any of the armed forces, ships, aeroplanes, or war materials of the United States, or with respect to the plans or conduct, or supposed plans or conduct, of any naval or military operations, or with respect to any works or measures undertaken for or connected with or intended for the fortification or defense of any place.

I have no objection to so much of the paragraph. It is limited to a time of war; and, while it is vastly more stringent than the provisions any other country in the world ever had in time of war, vastly more comprehensive than either England, France, or Germany has at the present time, if I understand their laws aright-I only understand them by knowing what is being said in those countries and what is being printed in the newspapers there, and I assume that all of it is lawfultheless I am willing to fall in with this march toward militarism and arbitrary government so far as to give the President in time of war authority to suppress all newspapers and all information and command silence among all the people with regard to these things, namely, "the movement, numbers, description, condition, or disposition of any of the armed forces, ships, aeroplanes, or war materials of the United States." Of course he could foreclose discussion in Congress about those intent to"?

things just as readily as he could foreclose discussion among private citizen about them. Possibly that will be one of the advantageous things that will be accomplished under the act. If I have objection to that I make none now. But when we get toward the close of the paragraph we see this language:

Or any other information relating to the public defense

Now, I do not know, as I have said a great many times, what does relate to the public defense, and no human being can define it. Nobody has attempted to define it in this debate; and I repeat that I assume that it embraces everything which goes to make up a successful national life in the Republic. It begins with the farm and the forest, and it ends with the Army and the Navy. Now, I am unwilling to give the President, even in time of war, the right to lay an embargo upon information concerning those subjects. I think it unwise, and it is a power that might easily be abused.

But that is not all:

Or which might be useful to the enemy.

If the President can determine what in his judgment could be or might be useful to the enemy, he could by the exercise of that discretion infinitely broaden his powers and suppress practically everything, every word, written or spoken. I do not believe in it, and therefore I have moved to strike it out; and the paragraph after it is stricken out will be strong enough. I think, to meet the views of the most ardent militarist.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa, which the Secretary will read

The Secretary. On page 5, lines 22, 23, and 24, it is preposed to strike out:

Or any other information relating to the public or calculated to be, or which might be, useful to the enemy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. President, I desire to call the chairman's attention to some language which occurs in line 24, on page 3, which reads:

Whoever, within the United States, sends by post, or otherwise, any

Mr. OVERMAN. That has gone out.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Has that been stricken out?

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I was not aware of the fact

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which send to the desk

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The Secretary. On page 6, it is proposed to strike out of lines 5 and 6 the words "cause disaffection in or to," and out of line

6 the words "operations, or."

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, if this amendment were adopted, section 3 would read:

Whoever, in time of war, shall, by any means or in any manner, spread or make reports or statements, or convey any information, with intent to interfere with the success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or shall—

And so forth. The words I seek to strike out are "cause disaffection in or to," in lines 5 and 6, and the words "operations, or," in line 6.

I suppose Senators know that we are here creating a sub-

Whoever, in time of war, shall, by any means or in any manner, spread or make reports or statements-

They may be perfectly true; they may be highly necessary and desirable; but if the intent is to interfere with the operations of the military or naval forces of the United States, the man who utters or makes these statements becomes a criminal. If this were the law in England, I wonder whether the agitation which led to the leadership and the promotion of Lloyd George would have taken place? I wonder if the articles in the London Times which exposed the errors, the mistakes, the blunders which had been committed in the Dardanelles campaign would ever have seen the public eye or been heard by the public ear? I wonder if the agitation in France which finally led to the deposit of great power in the hands of the premier would ever have taken form? Is it possible that Members of Congress are to be told that in time of war no man can utter a criticism that may interfere with the military or naval forces of the United

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, does not the Senator entirely overlook the significance and importance of the words "with

Mr. CUMMINS. No. If I believe the welfare of my country and the success of the military forces of the United States requires a criticism, I claim the right to utter it, and I intend to utter it, and that is my sworn duty.

Mr. WALSH. But, Mr. President, that is not the act that is denounced here.

Mr. CUMMINS. It is the act that is denounced here, as I view it

Mr. WALSH. The act denounced by this bill is the spreading of statements with intent to cause disaffection among the troops and to interfere with the military operations of the country. There must be the specific intent to do the wrong.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I can not understand the mental operations of those who are supporting this bill. I admire their alertness in always finding a refuge of that sort; but the bill says:

Whoever, * * with intent to * * interfere with the operations * * of the military * * forces of the United erations

That is one statement of the bill. Now, if any citizen saw great blunders being made, disaster immediately before us, and if he could not rise and intentionally interfere by speech, if possible, with the operations that were in progress, we have become Indeed a nation without spirit and without liberty.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President—
Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. THOMAS. I merely interrupted to suggest to the Senator that striking out the word "disaffection," on line 9, and the word "or," on line 10, would seem to be necessary to perfect the whole amendment.

Mr. CUMMINS. My amendment strikes out the words "cause disaffection in or to."

Mr. THOMAS. That is in lines 5 and 6; but in line 9 is the word "disaffection," and on line 10 is the word "or."
Mr. CUMMINS. No; I am quite willing to leave the latter part of the section as it is, because

Mr. THOMAS. There is nothing to give force to the word "disaffection" where it appears the second time, if it is allowed to remain in the bill.

Well, the word "such" might be stricken Mr. CUMMINS.

Mr. THOMAS. No; the words "disaffection, or," so as to read "calculated to cause such interference."

Mr. CUMMINS. No; the Senator from Colorado does not quite grasp what I mean,

Mr. THOMAS. I understand the Senator's purpose. Mr. CUMMINS. I believe that a man who writes or promulgates or spreads a false report to bring about disaffection or interference ought to be very severely punished; but the man who states a truth, something that he believes to be necessary in order to accomplish ultimate success, ought not to be punished.

Mr. THOMAS. Then the word "such" should be eliminated. Mr. CUMMINS. I think so, if my amendment is adopted.

I am willing to attach any punishment that may be suggested for one who, with intent to interfere with the success of our military forces, shall make statements, true or false; but when it is said that no one in this country can make a truthful statement if he has intent to interfere with what is going on in the military world, I think that you are sapping the very life-blood of a free people. If this had been the law, as I said before, the great movement which led to the reformation of the English military strength and promoted the present leader to his place of authority would have been a criminal movement, and it likewise would have been criminal for the same reformation to have been undertaken in France,

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President Mr. CUMMINS. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. If any such significance is to be given to the bill at all, I am very sure the Senator will recognize that none of us could give it any support whatever; but, of course, we differ with the Senator with respect to that matter, and none of us can conceive that it would. Now, the Senator is at perfect liberty, if this should become a law, to say whatever he chooses in criticism of any campaign that is waged.

Mr. CUMMINS. Do I not intend by that criticism to interfere with the movements of the military forces?

Mr. WALSH. Not at all.

Mr. CUMMINS. Why do I say it, then?

Mr. WALSH. Why, the Senator says it simply so that the pelicy may be changed, so that the plans may be changed. That is not interfering with the operations, or making a statement in order to interfere with the operations. Making a statement in order to interfere with the operations would be giving information to the enemy, or giving information to the forces that would lead them into disaster. That is the thing that is to be done.

Mr. CUMMINS. That is not possible.

Mr. WALSH. What the Senator would like to do, under those circumstances, is not to raise disaffection among the troops. His purpose is to raise disaffection among the people with the men who are directing the troops.

Mr. CUMMINS. Well, I would not at all think myself in error, even though I sought to create disaffection among the troops, if I was declaring a truth. If I could bring about an immediate change by the promulgation of a truth, I would feel that I ought to do it. Why is it that the Senator from Montana is not satisfied when we say a man can not even tell the truth if it will interfere with the success of our military forces?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, suppose that Lloyd George had known about some fatal weakness in the English forces in the unfortunate and disastrous Gallipoli Peninsula campaign, and he had told about that weakness. Does the Senator desire to leave him at liberty to do so? Why, Mr. President, that was not the way that the revolution was accomplished, either in England or in France. No one had accused Lloyd George of seeking to create disaffection and dissension among the troops In the field. He criticized, and so did Lord Northcliffe, very severely indeed, the general conduct of that campaign and the wisdom of carrying it on at all; but neither of them could be accused, in anything that he said in connection with the matter, either of a desire to create disaffection among the troops in the field or of a desire to interfere with the military operations.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I did not mention any speech of Lloyd George's. I said that the campaign supported by the London Times would have been a crime, because that great paper did, in the most emphatic way, interfere or attempt to interfere with the military operations at the Dardanelles. Lord Churchill—I do not know whether that is his title or not, but the former First Lord of the Admiralty-made a speech in the House of Commons with the express purpose of preventing certain military operations and securing the withdrawal of the troops from eastern Europe.

The Senator from Montana is in error, at least I believe he is in error, when he says that such a statement will not in a be held to be statements with the intent to interfere with the operation of our Army and Navy. I think they must be held to be statements made with such intent. ever unfortunately fall into war free speech should be preserved as completely as is consistent with the public interest. When we have forbidden all men to tell the truth if it is told with intent to interfere with the success of our armed forces, I think we have gone as far as we should in commanding silence.

The next clause in the paragraph relates to false statements. I do not care how severe the penalty be made with regard to them, but the first part of the paragraph, the one to which my amendment is directed, is limited to statements that are true.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa if an amendment would be satisfactory to him inserting after the word "dissaffection" the following words: "In the Navy or Army of the United States"? That I think is the idea which the Senator from Montana [Mr. Walsh] really has in mind. The disaffection which he wishes to discourage is in the ranks of the fighting forces, and evidently disaffection there is most undesirable in any stage of a war.

Mr. CUMMINS. I ask the Senator from Maryland this question: Suppose you saw a condition which you thought ought to be remedied and rose to describe it and did describe it. Suppose you knew, after you had described it, it would have a tendency to cause disaffection among the troops. Does the Senator from Maryland think, if he honestly believed that was the only way in which the reform could be brought about, he ought to remain silent or be a criminal because he tells the truth?

Mr. LEE of Maryland. I am inclined to think that the acts which excite disaffection in fighting troops have to be of a very radical, serious, and ugly nature. I do not believe that mere parliamentary discussion or agitation of a political nature in the papers is apt to make troops on the firing line disaffected There is where the line should be drawn. The word "disaffection" as it appears here would cover disaffection at home; it would cover all forms of criticism of the military administration, whereas it should be limited to disaffection among troops. I do not believe that any speech that any man could make in Congress would affect men on the fighting line in a great war or create any serious disaffection, because those men are in such a position physically that they have got to fight to live, as a rule, under modern conditions. The word "disaffection," therefore, clearly should be made to apply to the fighting force, and not to prevent any political discussion in a free parliament or a free Congress

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I would be very willing to accept the modification which has just been proposed by the Senator from Maryland. I had some experience with a part of the troops that were lately sent to the border. We were not in a state of war, but suppose we had been in a state of war with Mexico. There were things done there which I thought were wrong, injustices practiced upon certain of the troops. I made such inquiry as I could, and I was not slow to denounce the practices which I thought to be wrong. I hope the statements I made in regard to them were true, but I could have been convicted, assuming that one means the thing which naturally flows from his act or word. I could have been convicted of an intent to cause disaffection among these troops. not believe that the Senate proposes to take that right away from either myself or any citizens of the United States. But that is not so vital a part of my amendment as the effort to eliminate the words "interfere with," because I think that every attempt to change a military situation must be construed as an interference with the military operations, and if one has that intent he becomes amenable or subject to this law.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Will the Senator yield to me? Mr. CUMMINS. I yield the floor.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I desire to ask unanimous consent-

Mr. OVERMAN. I object to anything being done right now until we get through with the bill.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Will the Senator first listen to what I have to say with regard to it?

Mr. ROBINSON. Let the Senator from Nevada state his

Mr. OVERMAN. Very well, Mr. NEWLANDS. I think it will be reasonable. Mr. NEWLANDS. I think it will be reasonable. I ask unanimous consent that Order of Business 406, being House bill 308, entitled "An act to amend the act to regulate commerce, as amended, and for other purposes," be considered to-morrow night at 8 o'clock, and that the Senate take a recess to-morrow afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening for that Mr. FALL. Will not the roll have to be called to get a quorum here for that purpose?

Mr. ROBINSON. No; not for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the only time when the roll has to be called for a quorum is when unanimous consent is asked to fix a time for a vote on a bill or a joint resolution.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will state that it is a matter of great The Interstate Commerce Commission is, as we all urgency. know, overloaded. Its duties have been very largely increased by reason of legislation regarding valuation, and so forth, and it is of the highest importance that the membership should be increased from seven to nine and that it should be permitted to divide itself into divisions, each division to have the same jurisdiction as the commission itself.

Mr. OVERMAN. Why can not the Senator make that request to-morrow and let us go on with the bill that is before the Senate?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Perhaps there may be some opposition to it.

Mr. FALL. There certainly will be opposition at this time, when we are considering another bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator. Mr. OVERMAN. I call for the regular order. Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent to make a brief

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. OVERMAN. I yield for that purpose.
Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the Committee on Interstate Commerce had a meeting yesterday and determined that the necessity for passing the bill which the Senator from Nevada has in mind increasing the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission and authorizing it to form divisions or sections is indisputable. The commission is so crowded with its work that it will break down unless this relief is afforded, and, in fact, the whole system of governmental regulation of interstate commerce may break down.

By way of illustration, the number of formal complaints pending February 1, 1917, was 1,221, the number of suspension cases on the same date was 157, making 1,378 proceedings of investigation involving the reasonableness and propriety of rates.

Mr. President, that is just one class of work before the commission and it does not involve the greatest amount of work.

The second important task before the commission is the valuation of the physical properties of the railroads of the United States. Heretofore and until recently this work has proceeded largely through the agents of the commission, but the work has now reached a stage that requires the personal attention of the commission. If this work is to be successfully and fairly done, the commission must be afforded some relief.

Another class of work which the commission is now charged with is that growing out of the Panama Canal act, and still a fourth class is that arising under the Clayton Antitrust Act. The car-shortage question is at present one requiring a great deal of work upon the part of the commission; and while, of course, it is hoped that this work is temporary, it is at present exacting a great deal of labor.

The Cummins amendment passed during the last session of Congress is just now beginning to impose a large amount of work upon the commission. Thus there are seven different phases or classes of work devolving on the commission that I have in mind and that I am mentioning from memory. One member of the commission has broken down physically. Mr. Clark, who is one of the most valuable members of the commission, has broken down from overwork. At one time recently four members of the commission were in such physical condition that they were unable to work.

Mr. President, Congress is constantly loading the commission with work. We are passing frequently resolutions involving investigations, and we have imposed upon the commission a large amount of very arduous work in addition to that required by the general law.

I submit it is unfair for Congress to refuse to make some provision that will enable that body to perform the increasing duties we are constantly imposing upon it.

The bill should not require any great length of time on the part of the Senate. If the Senate wants to break down the commission and destroy its usefulness, it can accomplish that end by refusing the reasonable request of the Senator from Nevada. I, as a Senator, would not want to take that responsibility. I believe that Senators, in the exercise of the power of objection, which is now the power, under the conditions we are legislating, to prevent legislation, should agree to this request out of a sensible regard to the public interest,

If the Interstate Commerce Commission is to perform its very important functions which we have defined and imposed upon it by law, then, in good conscience, give it the opportunity of doing so.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from North Carolina for his courtesy in allowing this matter to in-tervene. I realize how anxious he is to get through with his bill. I, too, attended the meeting of the committee yesterday to which the Senator from Arkansas has referred, and I hope that no one on this side of the Chamber will object to giving us a chance to see if we can not pass the bill by devoting to-morrow night to it. Let us see if we can not pass it. It is a measure of the very utmost importance. I entirely agree with the chairman of the committee and the Senator from Arkansas that the work we have heaped upon that commission will break it down without this relief, and if we are to adjourn for nine months tremendously important subjects will be before the commission which can not be attended to at all.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, if I may say just a word, while there are some differences of opinion among the members of the committee as to what the provisions of the bill should be, there is no difference, I dare say, at all among the members of the committee as to the necessity of some legislation increasing the membership of the commission. I feel that we would be almost guilty of a crime if we should adjourn this session without granting some relief. I hope there will be no objection to an order made such as the Senator from Nevada has requested.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I recognize the importance of this legislation and I am as anxious as the Senator from Nevada, the Senator from Arkansas, and other Senators on the committee to have action upon the commission bill. bership of the commission ought to be increased; but, Mr. President, I gave notice that to-morrow morning I would move to take up the revenue bill, and I dislike to agree to any arrangement just at this time which would displace that bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator allow me?
Mr. SIMMONS. Just pardon me one moment. I shall be anxious after starting with the consideration of that bill to proceed with it without interruption. It is probable if the Senator will let his suggestion go over until to-morrow I may see my way clear some time during the day—to-morrow—after the bill is taken up, to consent to having to-morrow night devoted to it, but I would not like to do that now. If that is not satisfactory, I will make the suggestion that this evening instead of a s we take an adjournment and give the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce the benefit of the morning hour to-morrow, and I think the nearly two hours he would have would afford him ample opportunity to pass the bill. Then at the expiration of the morning hour, after he has finished his bill, if he has not finished it before that time, I will move to take up the revenue bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I was going to ask the Senator from North Carolina and the Senator from Nevada why we could not have an evening session to-night?

Mr. SIMMONS. My colleague [Mr. Overman] desires to go on and finish the bill which is the unfinished business to-night.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That I did not know.

Mr. SIMMONS. I hope that arrangement will be satisfactory to the Senator from Nevada, and if it meets with the approval of my colleague, who is in charge of the pending bill, we will have a morning hour to-morrow during which time the commission bill can be considered.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not know how long it is going to take to finish the bill that is now before the Senate, but we have gotten so far with the bill that I shall insist on going on with it until we pass it. I hope to finish it to-night.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Does the Senator object to an adjournment until to-morrow so that we will have a morning hour tomorrow within which to consider the commission bill, as the Senator's colleague suggests?

Mr. OVERMAN. If this bill is finished.
Mr. NEWLANDS. Suppose it is not finished?
Mr. OVERMAN. Then I shall desire to proceed with it until

Mr. WADSWORTH. In all humility, Mr. President, and with no desire to seem impertinent, would it not be possible for gentlemen who are responsible for the conduct of legislation in the Senate to discuss these matters and come to an agreement as to what bill is going to come up next in such a way as not to interrupt the business of the Senate we are now engaged in? If the discussion proceeds much further I shall be forced to insist on the regular order.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the Senator from New York has made a very apt suggestion.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Senators on this side are as anxious as are the Democratic Senators that the business of the Senate shall be finished by March 4, but we are confronted with a situation that Senators on the Democratic side do not seem to have any program to bring about that state of affairs.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I will state, if the Senator will allow me, that it is impossible to have such an arrangement as the Senator speaks of, for when a person has arranged the matter so as to take up one measure some one else jumps in and interferes with it.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Arkansas? Mr. OVERMAN. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mr. ROBINSON. The suggestion of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] would be satisfactory to me and to some of the rest of us who are interested in the railroad legislation, but if the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Overman] in charge of the bill now under consideration, objects, I ask if he would object to unanimous consent to make the bill which the Senator from Nevada [Mr. Newlands] has in charge a special order for Thursday night of this week?

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not object.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not object.
Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest to the chairman of the committee to submit that request.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Well, I will submit that request.
Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President—

Mr. OVERMAN. I think we will get through with this bill

Mr. SIMMONS. I suggest to the Senator that he try out the suggestion and dispose of the matter in the morning during the morning hour.

Mr. NEWLANDS. If that is agreeable to the Senator's col-

Mr. NEWLANDS. If the is agreeable to the league, I shall not object.

Mr. OVERMAN. It is agreeable to me.

Mr. NEWLANDS. If we do not succeed, then we will consider the suggestion for a night session.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understood the Senator from North Carolina to object to that.

Mr. OVERMAN. No; I do not object to that.

Mr. CUMMINS. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. Has there been any agreement of any kind made? Mr. ROBINSON. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada was understood by the Chair to have withdrawn his request for unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill named by him. Mr. NEWLANDS. I will bring it up to-morrow during the morning hour.

OFFENSES AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 8148) to define and punish espionage.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, is the unfinished business now be-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole. The amendment of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] is pending.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, as I understand, the amendment of the Senator from Iowa is pending, and I desire to address myself merely for a moment to that.

I think the Senator is correct in his assumption that the power which is proposed to be vested here—that is, the power to punish certain acts-has never before been provided. He is correct in that, but there has been an occasion, Mr. President, in the history of this country when this power was needed just exactly as the power provided for in this bill is now needed, and that power was used. It was possibly usurped-it was the power to deal with a man who disseminated reports causing not dissatisfaction but disaffection in the armed forces of the United States. That man was a citizen of Ohio. His name was Vallandigham, and Abraham Lincoln usurped the power to put him beyond the confines of the United States, because he did not have the power vested in him by Congress to punish him as he should have been punished.

That is exactly what is aimed at in this section of the bill. It is not a question of anyone simply criticizing, as in the instance mentioned, through the newspapers published in Great Britain with reference to a criticism of the Dardanelles campaign, which might cause dissatisfaction with the methods being pursued by those in command of the British Army, but it is aimed at such practices as that of Vallandigham and the copperheads-those, and no others-that they may not cause not dissatisfaction but disaffection.

As Abraham Lincoln said-I shall not undertake to quote his exact words, but in effect—the man who spreads reports tending to prevent enlistments in the armed forces of the United States when this country is facing a crisis and its existence is at stake is a traitor to the country. While there was no law that could punish him, the law of national necessity arose, and he used it, and sent Vallandigham beyond the confines of the United States.

Now, it is a question as to whether you want that power usurped-because it will be usurped in time of war if you do not place the power in some official-and the country saved, or whether you prefer that the Executive may be allowed to proceed in an orderly and constitutional and legal manner.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I must say one word in reply to the rather extraordinary position taken by the Senator from New Mexico. Either he does not know his history or I do not Vallandigham was sent beyond the limits of the Territory within the northern jurisdiction not because he had made a statement or a series of statements but because he was making false statements with regard to the conditions of the country, and especially with regard to the conditions of the war. Such statements ought to be punished, and there ought to be power to deal severely with one who issues false statements. That condition, however, is covered by the last paragraph of the bill, to which I have not sought to make any amendment what-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa.

The Secretary. In section 3, on page 6, line 5, it is proposed The Secretary. In section 5, on page 6, the 5, it is proposed to strike out the words "cause disaffection in or to," and to strike out of line 6 the words "operations or."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to offer to section 6, on page 32, if it is now in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 32, line 6, it is proposed to strike out the word "or" and to insert the words "and concurrent jurisdiction with the district courts of the United States of offenses under this chapter committed."

Mr. OVERMAN. I think that is a very proper amendment, and that there is no objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa.

The Secretary. On page 7, line 7, after the word "hereof," it is proposed to insert the following words: "in which anything for the use of the Army or Navy is being prepared or constructed."

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I have very often referred to the section to which this amendment is directed. It is the section which is referred to in the first paragraph of the bill. Its effect is to give the President the power to designate any place other than those set forth in the paragraph to which an approach or upon which an entry is forbidden.

I attempt to limit this power by the words I have proposed in the amendment I have sent to the desk. I, of course, know that they will not be accepted; but I simply enter my protest against giving the President the power to forbid the people of this country from all its parts. I assume that he could under this power exclude the hundred million people of the United States from every part of the country, if it can be asserted that all parts of the country are connected in some remote way with the national defense. I submit the amendment simply as the expression of my position with regard to the law.
Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I have not been able to appre-clate quite accurately the effect of the amendment tendered by the Senator from Iowa; but I am convinced-and I address myself to the Senator from North Carolina-that there should be, and I think must be, some limitation upon this power. That it ought not be granted in this sweeping language, I think will be apparent to anyone who reflects upon the language of the bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. This matter has been considered by the committee and reported out, and I do not see why we should limit the power of the President. I am willing to trust the President of the United States, no matter who is elected to that office, as to what works he may designate and as to what things he may designate. I think the President of this country is a man who can be trusted, I do not care whether he is a Republican or a Democrat, and I think Woodrow Wilson in this emergency certainly can be trusted.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, there is no question about that at all; but we are making a law for all time, not one that is operative merely in time of war, or in time of threatened war, or in time of public danger.

Mr. OVERMAN. I have heard that stated upon this floor so often that I am tired of it. It has been stated a number of times by the Senator from Iowa. Some years ago the Congress of the United States passed 23 statutes, known as the reconstruction laws that went into "innocuous desuetude." No one was ever indicted under them, and no one called attention to the violation of those statutes. When it is necessary for something of this kind to be done, if we leave the matter to the President in time of peace and in time of war, he is not going to exercise it in time of peace; but he will exercise it in time of war, in time of great emergency; and the President ought to have that power, in my judgment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I was not really prepared to hear the Senator from North Carolina refer, as a model to be imitated at this time, to the acts passed during the reconstruction period for the purpose of carrying out a policy which those acts represented.

The trouble about this provision is, Mr. President, that there is no limitation at all. The President of the United States may designate any place whatever within the confines of the United States and say that to go thereon for the purpose of securing information concerning the national defense is a crime.

Mr. OVERMAN. Can the Senator imagine the President of the United States designating a place that ought not to be protected, such as a radio station or a naval station? Can the Senator conceive of the President of the United States desig-nating a place under this paragraph just because he has the power to do so without any regard to the military necessity for the action?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, we have taken pains to make a Constitution which limits the power of the President with respect to all these matters, and up to the present time we have not deemed it wise to repose this power in him.

I do not recall that this particular section had any especial consideration by the Judiciary Committee. I feel justified in saying that in explanation of the attitude I take with respect to it. I believe that some amendment of the section ought to

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment

offered by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, as I have heretofore said to-day. I am very much in favor of enacting such laws as are necessary to make efficient, and to continue efficient, the various military and naval preparations which Congress has authorized; but I confess that I can not understand why at this time it is necessary to adopt section 6 at all. I do not wish to give unnecessary speculative power to the President. It seems to me that in section 1 you have covered all of the emergency grounds that could in reasonableness be anticipated. If, however, we can not strike out section 6, then this unusual power sought to be conferred upon the President certainly ought to be limited to a time of war. I think we make a mistake

Mr. OVERMAN. I will accept such an amendment as that.
Mr. TOWNSEND. Well, then, if that amendment will be a Well, then, if that amendment will be accepted, I will move it first.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, there is an amendment pend-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is an amendment now pending.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Very well; I will wait until that is dis-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. JONES. I ask to have the amendment stated.

Mr. WALSH. Let the amendment be again read. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again state the amendment. The SECRETARY.

The Secretary. On page 7, line 7, after the word "hereof," it is proposed to insert the words "in which anything for the use of the Army or Navy is being prepared or constructed."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Now, Mr. President, after the word "power," in line 6, page 7, I move to insert the words "in time of war," so that it will read, "The President, of the United States shall have power in time of war to designate," and so forth.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. I object to that amendment. I think the amendment of the Senator from Iowa covers the situation. The protection of a place where something is being made for the Government ought not to be limited to time of war.

Mr. CUMMINS. I desire to suggest to the Senator from Maryland that the amendment of the Senator from Michigan does not relate to that part of the section to which my amendment was directed. It relates to an entirely different subject.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. I may be under a misapprehension as to where the amendment of the Senator from Iowa comes in the bill. I ask that it be read again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the amendment last adopted.

The Secretary. On page 7, line 7, after the word "hereof," the following words have been inserted:

In which anything for the use of the Army or Navy is being pre-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Town-

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I hardly think it would be wise to put in there the words "in time of war." There is preparation going on now.

Mr. TOWNSEND. But does not section 1 cover all that the Senator has in mind?

Mr. OVERMAN. I doubt it; and I hope the Senator will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I should like to have the amendment go in and have the committee consider it, because I think when the Senator considers it he will see that we are going at a pretty good pace just now.

Mr. OVERMAN. I agree with the Senator that we are giving a great deal of power to the President; and I think he ought He ought to have that power right now, at a time to have it. like this, although we are not engaged in war. It may be that it might become necessary to commandeer things or designate places that we can not mention now. We are not in the secrets of the department, but they may be taking over certain places in this country that we know not of and that ought to be designated by the President in such an emergency as confronts us at this time. If there were not preparations going on now in connection with these matters, I would agree to the suggestion.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Fall] makes a suggestion which perhaps may make it more satisfactory to the Senator from North Carolina, although it does not, in my judgment, strengthen my original suggestion. I will change it by making the amendment read, "in time of war or military necessity.'

Mr. OVERMAN. "Or threatened war."
Mr. FALL. "Military necessity" would cover it better.

Mr. OVERMAN. With the words "military necessity" added, I do not object to the amendment.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, the Senator is directing his amendment

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the Senator from Michigan wishes to perfect his amendment by adding the words "or in case of military necessity." Without objection, the amendment is so modified. The Senator from

New York is recognized.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from North Carolina if they will inform me as to whether or not the amendment now suggested by the Senator from Michigan will act so as to qualify that portion of the section which commences on line 10 of page 7, which reads:

He shall further have the power, on the aforesaid ground, to designate any matter, thing, or information belonging to the Government, or contained in the records or files of any of the executive departments, or of other Government offices, as information relating to the national

Mr. OVERMAN. Is there any doubt about that? Does the Senator have any doubt about it?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I wanted to be perfectly certain about it. Mr. OVERMAN. I rather think it does not. I think it applies to the whole section. The power which is given to him applies to time of war or military necessity.

Mr. CUMMINS. It applies to that section.

Mr. OVERMAN. I mean, it applies to the matter that the Senator read.

Mr. CUMMINS. It applies just to that paragraph.
Mr. OVERMAN. It applies to that paragraph down to the semicolon

Mr. WADSWORTH. Do I understand the Senator from North Carolina to say that the amendment suggested by the Senator from Michigan applies only to the first paragraph of

Mr. OVERMAN. Down to the end of paragraph 6, it looks to me, without reading it. I have not time to read it. It goes down to the semicolon, anyway.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It ought to apply to all of section 6. That is my intention.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is what I want it to do.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I want it to apply to the whole of section If it does not do it, then I should like to have it.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, in my judgment it does apply to both paragraphs, the entire section; but if there is any doubt about it, it ought to be made to do so.

Mr. OVERMAN. The second paragraph is, "he shall further

Mr. O'PIRAIA. The second paragraph is, he shall further have the power, on the aforesaid ground"; that is, in time of military necessity. I think it would relate back; but if there is any question about it, then I think it ought to be remedied to read in that way.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think, after reading it, the words "on the aforesaid ground" probably would relate back to the first part

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the Senator also be so kind as to explain the proviso at the end of the section? I do not quite understand that proviso:

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to limit the definition of such information.

Mr. OVERMAN. I can not explain it, except what it says—that "nothing herein contained shall limit the definition of such information" as the President shall prescribe.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan would seek to place a limit upon the definition;

then the proviso says that nothing herein contained shall limit it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Well, I am willing to let it go into the bill, and work it out in conference, and see if we can not make all of that in accordance with the terms of the bill.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me-

Mr. WADSWORTH. I shall be very glad to yield.

Mr. FALL. I think the proviso is intended to cover this proposition: That nothing in this section allowing the President to designate other places than those specifically designated in the act itself, of which section 6 is a part, shall be deemed to limit, within the meaning of this chapter, the definition of such information—that is, the information with reference to other places and other things-to such designated matter, thing, or information. In other words, while it is very awkwardly worded, I think that in giving this additional power to the President to designate other things and other places it was not intended that this additional power should be construed as limiting the things which the additional power is spread over to the same class of things that were specifically designated in the bill itself. I think that is the purpose of it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I imagine that very likely the Senator from Iowa will agree that the limitation provided by his amendment is scarcely necessary in the bill in view of the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan; and the Senator from Michigan will probably recognize that if his amendment is adopted there would seem to be no occasion for the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa, because if the exercise of this power is restricted exclusively to times of war I do not think that it should be limited, or that the intention of the Senator from Michigan was that it should be limited to those conditions suggested in the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa.

By way of illustration, we have been informed that foundations were laid at various places in Europe upon which to mount heavy guns when the occasion should arise. Suppose that it was deemed advisable, as a part of the military defense, to establish such foundations in various portions of the country. The President might be extremely desirous, and it would be quite necessary from the military point of view, that the work should be carried on in perfect secrecy. Such a place as that would scarcely fall within the limitations suggested by the amendment of the Senator from Iowa; but certainly if we were in the midst of war the President ought to be permitted to designate as a prohibited place a place of that character.

I think that the two amendments ought not to go concurrently. We ought to adopt the one and reject the other.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, if the amendment is adopted it will better the bill, but the latter part of the section is sub-stantially as objectionable to me with the amendment added as before. The suggestion that the amendment would apply to the first part of the section is, I think, unfounded. That could hardly be so, and we would have the first part of the section limited as it has been by the amendment which has been adopted to it. The latter part of the section, if the present amendation is the section of the section of the section in the present amendation. ment is adopted, is confined to times of war or military necessity. That does not confine it greatly, if at all, for whenever the President thinks there is a military necessity then there would be one. There is no appeal, no review of his discretion in that regard, and there ought not to be. So the amendment that has been proposed is of no value whatever, as far as I am concerned, and I intend to move to strike out the entire section, beginning with the word "he," in line 10, when I have an opportunity to offer the amendment.

In order that we may understand what it really does in voting on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan, I beg to suggest that it gives to the President, or attempts to give to the President—of course, it is unconstitutional; it is absurd, in my opinion, to attempt to confer any such power upon the President, but we are trying to do it—"the power, on the aforesaid ground"—that is, on the ground that it would be prejudicial to the national defense—"to designate any matter, thing, dicial to the national defense— to designate any matter, thing, or information belonging to the Government or contained in the records or files of any of the executive departments or of other Government offices as information relating to the national defense, to which no person—other than officers and employees of the United States duly authorized—shall be lawfully entitled within the meaning of this chapter."

There is but one interpretation which can be put upon that, and that is that we are attempting to say to the President that without respect to the character of the thing, matter, or information, no matter how far it is removed from the national defense, nevertheless the President can designate it as relating to the national defense, as information touching the public defense. Under that authority he could come to the office of the Secretary of the Senate and put the seal upon every page of the records of this body. He could go to the office of the collector of customs in the city of New York and put under lock and key, or subject, at least, to all the regulations of the national defense, everything contained in the record of entries and discharges of importations.

I should like to know why we want to give the President any power of that sort. It is better, of course, to give it to him only in time of war. It would be better if we should give it to him only for 50 years. It would be better if we should give it to him only for 25 years. It would be better if we should give it to him only for 2 years, and far better if we did not give it to him at all.

I am not opposing the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan, because while I think the addition of the words "military necessity" robs it of nearly all its effectiveness, yet it does at least look in the right direction.

Now, a word has been said with regard to the proviso. means just one thing, and can not mean any other thing; namely, that fearing that there is some limitation in the previous part of this section-although I confess I fail to observe the limitation-in order to be sure that there is no limitation, the proviso is inserted. It reminds me a good deal of a lawyer friend I had who lived in Worcester, Mass. He was a very careful man, and in drawing up all instruments of conveyance he exercised the greatest diligence to see that no flaw could be found in any of the instruments, so he always began his conveyances in this way:

I hereby convey all the interest I have in and to certain property. I further convey all the interest I think I have in and to the said property, and I hereby convey all the interest that any person else may think I have in and to the property.

This provise is just in that spirit. My friend from North Carolina believed that there might possibly be some things, some matter, some information in the United States which the President could not lock up under the previous part of the paragraph and therefore he inserts the proviso:

Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be deemed to limit the definition of such information within the meaning of this chapter to such designated matter, thing, or information.

With that clause added to the section nothing whatsoever could escape, on the earth, above the earth, or under the earth, and I compliment whoever drafted the section for the comprehensiveness of his views and the thoroughness of his purpose. He intended to rob the people of this country of all the stray privileges they might have enjoyed with respect to speech and publication, and he has done it most successfully.

I have anticipated what I intended to say upon my motion strike it all out. It is utterly unnecessary. We have already to strike it all out. It is utterly unnecessary. legislated against everything that the imagination can conceive in the bill, and there is no use of saying to the President that he can declare white to be black, or that he can transform a communication with regard to the crops into a matter relating to the national defense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. CUMMINS. I will simply say to the Senator from North Carolina that I intend to have a roll call on my amendment, if I am able to secure it.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator's amendment was adopted.

Does he mean the motion to strike out?

Mr. CUMMINS. Yes. Mr. OVERMAN. To

To strike out the whole section?

Mr. CUMMINS. No; to strike out that part of the section beginning with the word "he," in line 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan, on page 7, line 6, after the word "power," to insert the words "in time of war or in case of military necessity."

Mr. LEE of Maryland. I think the amendment of the Senater from Michigan is objectionable in one sense because it covers any place, for instance, where a battleship is being constructed in time of peace.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The law covers navy yards now.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Most of them are made in private

Mr. TOWNSEND. "Any other place" is the language of section 1

Mr. LEE of Maryland. That is true.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the following amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be read.

The Secretary. On page 7, line 10, strike out all after the word "defense," the semicolon, and the remainder of the paragraph, down to and including the word "information," in

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. I have already given the Senate my views about the latter part of the section. I do not care to repeat them. As far as I am concerned, the discussion is over upon the amendment. I ask for the yeas and nays upon it.

Mr. OVERMAN. All I have to say is that after accepting the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan, making from Delaware [Mr. Saulsbury]; it apply to a time of war, a clear case of military necessity. I hope this amendment will be voted down.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa demands the yeas and nays on agreeing to the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CURTIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK]. He is absent, and I withhold my vote.

Mr. CURTIS (when Mr. Gallinger's name was called). was requested to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. He is paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. JAMES (when his name was called). I transfer the general pair I have with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Weeks] to the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. Culberson] and vote "nay."

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] and vote

Mr. SMITH of Maryland (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Dir-LINGHAM] to the Senator from California [Mr. PHELAN] and vote "nay.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). In the absence of my pair I withhold my vote.

Mr. VARDAMAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. Brady], and I withhold my vote.

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Lippitt]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] on account of illness

Mr. JONES. The junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Swanson] is necessarily absent from the Chamber, not feeling well. I have agreed to pair with him for the rest of the day, therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. OVERMAN (after having voted in the negative). that my pair did not vote. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. THOMAS. I desire to be counted for the purpose of a

Mr. STONE (after having voted in the negative). fer my pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] and let my vote stand. Mr. MYERS. Has the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Mc-

LEAN] voted?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with that Senator. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. FALL (after having voted in the negative). I have a pair with the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Синдол] I have a but as I understand he would vote as I have already voted I will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. WALSH. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Lippitt] to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Husting] and vote "nay."

I wish to state that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr.

CHILTON] is absent on account of serious illness in his family.

Mr. MYERS. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLean] to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Johnson] and vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS. Has the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr.

PENROSEl voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not. Mr. WILLIAMS. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Peneose] to the Senator from Florida [Mr. Bryan] and vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH of Georgia (after having voted in the negative).

voted, although I have a pair with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge]. I desire to state that in leaving the Chamber he authorized me to yote.

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Catron] with the Senator

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Colt] with the Senator

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood]; and The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Oliver ] with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN].

The yeas and nays resulted-yeas 11, nays 35, as follows:

And John the	d majo recuired	2 com mai medio o	09 660 20220 1102
	YEA	S—11.
Borah Brandegee Cummins	Gronna Hitchcock Kenyon	Lee, Md. Martine, N. J. Page	Smith, Mich. Townsend
	NAY	S-35.
Ashurst Bankhead Broussard Fall Fletcher Hollis Hughes James Johnson, Me.	Kern Kirby Lea, Tenn. Martin, Va. Myers Newlands Overman Pittman Poindexter	Ransdell Reed Robinson Shafroth Sheppard Sherman Simmons Smith, Ga. Smith, Md.	Smith, S. C. Sterling Stone Thompson Tillman Wadsworth Walsh Williams
	NOT VO	TING-50.
Beckham Brady Bryan Catron Chamberlain Chilton Clapp Clark Colt Culberson Curtis	Fernald Gallinger Goff Gore Harding Hardwick Husting Johnson, S. Dak. Jones La Follette Lane	Lodge McCumber McLean Nelson Norris O'Gorman Oliver Owen Penrose Phelan Pomerene Saulsbury	Smith, Ariz. Smoot Sutherland Swanson Thomas Underwood Vardaman Warren Watson Weeks Works

Shields Lippitt The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair counts as present and not voting Senators Thomas, Curtis, Catron, Vardaman, and Jones and declares that the amendment is rejected. The parliamentary situation as the Chair understands is that the bill before the Senate is Senate bill 8148, which has been reported from the Judiciary Committee with an amendment by the Senator from North Carolina to substitute certain chapters for the amendment offered by the committee. The question is on the substitution as amended.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the following amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be read.

After line 14, on page 24, at the end of sec-The SECRETARY. tion 8, add the following proviso:

Provided, That without the further authority of Congress such armed forces will not be used beyond the territorial limits of the United States to commit an act of war against a nation with which the United States is then at peace.

Mr. WALSH. I inquire of the Senator from Iowa whether if his amendment should be adopted declaring that the President should not by virtue of this section commit an act of war against a foreign nation beyond the territorial limits of the United States it would not by implication confer upon him the right to commit an act of war against a foreign nation within the territorial limits of the United States?

Mr. CUMMINS. Not by implication; but I would a great deal rather he would commit an act of war within the territorial limits than beyond. I think he is not nearly so apt to commit an act of war within the United States as without the United States, simply because it is more difficult to commit an act of war with the Army or the Navy within our own territory than it is to do the same thing beyond our territory. own territory I assume that the civil authorities will ordinarily be sufficient to enforce the law. Beyond our territory the civil authorities are powerless and could not accomplish anything.

As I said the other day, Mr. President, I have some objections—although they would be unavailing here—to giving the President power to declare war. I have not a particle of doubt if there were attached to the bill a provision that the President should have the power to declare war, nothwithstanding the constitutional inhibition, it would pass by almost a unanimous vote; such is the influence of the hysteria which I think is now filling the minds of the people.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President—
Mr. CUMMINS. Just a moment. I can not yield just now. This authority is, within certain limits, the equivalent of authorizing the President to declare war, for it is authorizing him to do a thing which, being an act of war, must necessarily bring on war.

I gave this instance the other day: Suppose we had declared an embargo upon arms and munitions as against Canada. That has nothing to do with neutrality. This bill can not be termed a bill to enforce our neutrality or preserve our neutrality. It is a bill to enforce a policy of embargo. Assume that we had laid an embargo on arms and munitions and forbidden their exportation to Canada. Notwithstanding that, a carload of arms and munitions succeeds in passing over the border, and we know it to be in Montreal or in Quebec or in Toronto. The bill says to the President of the United States he can take the Army and lead it across into the Dominion of Canada and retake the carload of arms which he may find there. It not only gives him authority to do it, but its direct implication is that he ought to do it.

Again, we have an embargo now-an authorized embargoupon arms and munitions to be exported into Mexico. The President has the authority to raise or lower the embargo, I think, whenever he sees fit. Suppose that a carload of arms consigned to Carranza had gotten across the border, was nearing Chihuahua, destined to Carranza, contrary to the proclamation of the President. The bill gives the President the power to lead our Army into Mexico for the purpose of retaking that car of arms or munitions. Suppose that instead of passing over the border between our country and Mexico a ship sails away with arms and munitions that are contrary to the embargo and she is lying in the port of Vera Cruz; it gives the President the right to take our Navy and capture the ship in the port of Vera Cruz.

Suppose we had an embargo upon the exportation of arms and munitions applicable to Great Britain; if a ship containing arms and munitions be duly cleared from our ports is found finally in the port of Liverpool, it gives the President authority to take our Navy and retake the vessel in that port.

I am putting cases which may not happen; I do not know; it depends on the courage of the President; it depends on whether or not he wants to fight; and, I suppose, would depend, with any President, largely upon the strength of the nation against which our manifestation of force was directed. I suppose we could do that thing with impunity in some port of Nicaragua or Honduras or Colombia or Panama; and we do it all the time substantially, but we do not do it with regard to any great nation.

The Senator from Montana, in discussing this matter the other day, said very frankly that he did not want the President to do any of these things, and I think he challenged me at the time to find in the proposed law the warrant for my statement. I will try to do that now. Section 1 of chapter 9 provides:

Section 1. Whenever, under any authority vested in him by law, the President of the United States by proclamation, or otherwise, shall forbid the shipment or exportation of arms or munitions of war from the United States to any other country, or whenever there shall be good cause to believe that any arms or munitions of war are being, or are intended to be employed or exported in connection with a military expedition or enterprise forbidden by section 13 of the act approved March 4, 1909, entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," the several collectors, navie officers, surveyors and inspectors of customs, the marshals and deputy marshals of the United States, and every other person duly authorized for the purpose by the President may seize and detain any arms or munitions of war about to be so exported or employed—

If the words "or employed" were not in the section, I would be of the opinion that our power to seize did not continue after the act of exportation is complete; but inasmuch as we have said we may seize any arms or munitions exported con-trary to the terms of the embargo that are to be employed in any foreign country, I take it for granted that, so far as the terms of the proposed statute are concerned, they extend to the forbidden arms and munitions in every country in the world—that is, in every country in the world to which the embargo applies—and that we can, if we desire so to do, reach out and take them, not only within our own territory, but in the territory of other countries as well.

Personally, I am opposed to giving the President the power to use the Navy in capturing a vessel on the high seas if it be an act of war to do it. I think we ought not to so far invade our exclusive authority to declare war as to give any officer the right in advance, by a general statute, to use our Navy in the capture of a vessel of a friendly nation, if to capture it would constitute an act of war.

For these reasons, Mr. President, I have offered the amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to have the idea of the Senator from Iowa about that matter. Is it the idea of the Senator from Iowa that, if a vessel of a friendly power leaves a port in this country in violation of our law and if she is overhauled on the high seas by a vessel of our Navy and brought back, that that constitutes an act of war?

Mr. CUMMINS. I am not prepared to answer the question with all the breadth that the Senator has put into it, but if it is not an act of war, then my amendment does not forbid it. I think that very much would depend upon the circumstances under which the vessel left our harbor. If we had exercised our authority over it, had inspected it, and had given it clear-ance, and the boat had therefore lawfully left our waters, that because we might desire to reconsider our suggestion and we were to send a naval vessel after it, capture it, and bring it back—I am rather inclined to think it would be an act of war.

Mr. WALSH. It might be a cause for war, but it certainly would not be an act of war.

Mr. CUMMINS. Then, of course, my amendment does not apply to it; and the Senator from Montana can not object to the amendment on that ground, because I limit the exception to those uses of our armed forces which are acts of war against a nation with which we are then at peace.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, perhaps I ought not to invade the right of the chairman of the committee with respect to this matter; and I addressed myself to an amendment of this character a day or two ago; but I now object to the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa, and for this reason: The language used in this bill is ancient; it is found in an act running away back to the year 1818 and in another act to which I called the attention of the Senate a few days ago, which dates away back to 1838, and was framed to meet much the same conditions as those cited as a possibility by the Senator from Iowa.

I object to the language now which says that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to entitle the President to do an act of war beyond the territorial waters of the United States. That, it seems to me, almost carries the necessary implication that he may commit an act of war within the territorial waters of the United States. I do not want to invest the President of the United States with the power to precipitate a condition of war even within the territorial waters of the United States, for I conceive that that is a power which the Constitution has reposed in Congress, and we can not, and we ought not, to repose it in the President of the United States.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I do not desire to leave the amendment open to that implication; nor do I think that it would be; but, in order to satisfy any doubt upon that point, I ask that there be inserted in the amendment the words within or without the territorial limits of the United States."

Mr. WALSH. The language carries the implication necessarily. It reads:

That without the further authority of Congress such armed forces shall not be used beyond the territorial limits of the United States to commit an act of war against a nation with which the United States

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment of the Senator from Iowa as he now modifies it.

The Secretary. On page 24, at the end of section 8, after the word "chapter," it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That without the further authority of Congress such armed forces shall not be used within or without the territorial limits of the United States to commit an act of war against a nation with which the United States is then at peace.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, from a somewhat hasty consideration of the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa, it appears to me that his amendment under certain circumstances would very seriously handicap and cripple the power, not of the President particularly, but of the United States, in enforcing its own statutes; and yet I have some sympathy with the contention made by the Senator from Iowa that under the language of the bill as it now stands, there is ap-parently no hindrance placed upon the President in the use of the Army and the Navy of the United States in performing, we will say, an act of violence in the harbor of a friendly country. I desire to suggest to the Senator from Iowa, and also for the consideration of the Senator from Montana, that perhaps the objection raised by the Senator from Iowa and the fears which some of us may have in connection with the arbitrary use of power by the Executive would be met or done away with, as the case may be, if the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa should be changed in some respects, and in this respect particularly, so as to provide that the Army and the Navy shall not be used by the President within the territorial limits of a friendly power.

Mr. CUMMINS. That would accomplish a part of my purpose, of course.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I would say to the Senator from New York that, in my estimation, it is entirely unnecessary to put such a provision as that in the bill, because it occurs to me that by no stretch of the rules of construction could it be deemed that such power was given to the President. Of course, if we followed any kind of a vessel within the territorial waters of the power to which it is attached, or of any other friendly power, and seized it by violence there, we would commit an act of war. It is impossible to conceive that we would pass a statute of that kind, and this bill could not receive a construction of that nature.

Moreover, Mr. President, that would be war, as a matter of course; and a statute extending power of that kind to the President would be beyond the Constitution; and perfectly plain rules require that statutes be construed so that they shall be constitutional rather than unconstitutional.

In 1837 or 1838, when a great many people in this country talked about invading Canada, a law was passed authorizing the confiscation in this country of arms and ammunition that were intended for transport across the border, and the President was given the power to use the Army and the Navy to prevent the exportation of such arms and to seize them wherever they were found; but no one feared that that was intended to give the President the power to invade Canada; indeed, the very purpose of the act was to prevent anybody in this country from invading Canada. It was deemed that this language met all the necessities of the case as it is, and I do not think that the Senator from New York need have any apprehension upon that point at all.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, perhaps the worst that could be said about my suggestion is that it is unnecessary, according to the opinion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. Walshl, for which I have a great deal of respect; yet the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Cummins] seems to think that this language would, by inference at least, give the President the right to use the Army and the Navy in any way he saw fit and anywhere he saw fit in order to carry out the provisions of the neutrality law of this country. I think if we search our history with a little diligence we will find instances where the President on more than one occasion has used the Army and the Navy to enforce either laws or policies in such a way as certainly to invade the neutral rights of nations with which we were at peace. It is not an unknown procedure; and it is one which I have regarded somewhat with disapproval.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, it must be remembered that this is not a neutrality statute. The chapter we are now con-sidering has nothing to do with neutrality. It is, as I have often said, designed to enforce a policy which we may by legis-lation adopt, namely, the policy that the exportation of arms to a particular country shall be forbidden. It is only then that the President has the power to issue a proclamation which constitutes an embargo. The language used in section 8 is exactly the same as used in the old statutes of 1818 and 1838; but the thing for which the President may use the armed forces is entirely different, as I recall the statute quoted by the Senator from Montana on Saturday. At any rate, even if we once did give the President that power, I would be unwilling to give it to him again, or to any President under existing circumstances.

I may be unduly tenacious about the matter, but I have seen the power of the President abused; I have seen our Army and Navy used for unlawful purposes ever since I came into public life. I have seen it used constantly in such a way that had the poor victims of its use been able to resent the affront we would have been in constant war for the last 10 years and, I think, for a greater length of time.

I should like to begin to draw away that power and to intimate to the Executive Department that our forces ought not to be used under those circumstances. We are about to create an Army much more effective than we have ever had before; we are in the act of creating the largest navy in the world; we are about to do that; and I think we ought to be reasonably conservative with respect to the use of that immense weapon, which we have placed in the hands, and which the Constitution places in the hands, of the President of the United States.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, when this country was unfortunate enough to be faced with war with Spain we had no law under which the President could prevent shipments of material or munitions of war or articles that might be used in war, although they might be employed by Spain against the United States. The Congress of the United States on April 22, 1898, had to meet that condition. There were foodstuffs, there were coal shipments particularly, as well as other shipments, which were leaving our harbors and going to the benefit of the country with which we were on the verge of war and with which on that very day, April 22, if I remember correctly, we did go to war by a declaration of war. We were not able to protect ourselves in that instance. That is an illustration of the cases that might be covered, whether intended to be covered or not, by section 1 of the chapter of the bill now under consideration. that time the joint resolution passed by Congress was as fol-

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is hereby authorized, in his discretion, and with such limitations and exceptions as shall seem to him expedient, to prohibit the export of coal or other material used in war from any seaport of the United States until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress.

Now we will suppose that he did issue his proclamation and did prohibit such shipments, but that such shipments were nevertheless carried under the British flag, although they were intended to be landed on the coast of Cuba or elsewhere, where they might fall into the hands of the country with which we were at war. They might go for the benefit of U boats, for instance, in some Cuban harbor, and we might be at war with that country, yet, because we were not at war with Cuba, we would not be allowed under the limitation now attempted to be fixed in the bill, to pursue with the naval forces those shipments which were really to be used against us; or if so, we would not be allowed to encroach upon Cuban sovereignty within her waters, or we would not be allowed to attack that ship if we could overcome it, because it happened to be flying the flag of some neutral country with which we were at peace.

This is the effect, as it strikes me, of just exactly such amendments as are proposed here. Now, sir, under our form of Government it is a fact that the President of the United States can commit such acts as may possibly precipitate a war on this country, and may therefore force upon Congress the necessity of going to war or of a declaration of war. That is the fault of our Government; and you can not remedy the constitutional faults, you can not remedy the weaknesses of a republican, representative system of government, by legislating from time to time in a piecemeal fashion of this kind. As it stands now, without any amendments, the act is intended to provide, and will provide, the President with authority which has been used now for five years, without any authority being vested in him by direct act of Congress, to prohibit the exportation of arms and munitions of war to Mexico, a country with which we are at peace. President Taft ordered 20,000 of the military forces of the United States to be stretched along the border between the United States and Mexico to arrest, without a complaint, citizens of the United States pursuing their peaceful avocations, upon the theory that they might intend or might be able to violate the proclamation against the exportation of arms or munitions of war to a contiguous country with which the United States was at peace, under the act of March 14, 1912. Now, the forces of the United States have been used for that purpose without any authority. As it stands, the section is intended to give to the President the authority which he lacked but which This administration has followed the example of President Taft and has kept those forces there, and they have been utilized in direct contravention, as I understand it, of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States guaranteeing the citizens in time of peace against illegal search and seizure. Nevertheless, it is one of the necessities of preserving peace and carrying out our American policy here on this hemisphere. We have done it. We have been obliged to do similar things heretofore. Just as in the case of Vallandigham, we have been forced to do things by usurpation of power because some man here, forsooth, was afraid to vest in the President of the United States the legal authority to do those things which are absolutely necessary to preserve the peace and save the Nation when its very life is at stake.

This I regard as one of those acts or investments of power necessary to enable us to keep the peace. This country, so long as it undertakes to maintain its position as a neutral, owes a duty to itself and owes a duty to the belligerent nations of the world. It owes an affirmative duty to each of the belligerent nations. That duty is to see that one of them does not receive military assistance by any act of the Government of the United States; that no military expedition is recruited upon our shores for the purpose of aiding Great Britain upon the one hand, or Germany upon the other, to come down to a concrete illustration. That illegal armed expedition may be either by the outfitting of a naval vessel, by the shipping of arms and munitions in a vessel which of itself is not of a warlike character, or it might be by the outfitting of a land expedition, or by allowing shipments to be sent into Canada or elsewhere illegally, against the proclamation of the President of the United States, to be used by soldiers or people enlisted under contract to go into Canada and avail themselves of those arms and become incorporated into the Canadian Army. Would not that be in absolute violation of the attitude of neutrality? Because neutrality is an attitude. It is not a law, nor is it a duty. The United States, at any time that it pleases, can declare that it is no longer a neutral country, or it can by its acts show that it is no longer a neutral country; and when it does it takes the responsibility of such declaration or of such act upon itself, and that responsi-bility generally is being faced by the armed forces of the other

So long as we undertake to maintain neutrality, however, we owe a duty; and in the event that under the circumstances mentioned by the Senator from Iowa we did not with our military forces pursue that expedition across into Canada, while it might be treated by Great Britain as an act of war if we did, it would certainly be treated by Germany as an act of war if we did not pursue them.

It is sometimes difficult to maintain neutrality. We have found it exceedingly so. We have been criticised by every nation in the world and have become, possibly, in the eyes of those nations, enemies because we have attempted, under the direction of the President of the United States, to maintain neutrality between the two. If we propose to maintain that attitude, we have then assumed a duty; and if we do not carry it out, even at the expense of facing another nation with arms in our hands—if we do not carry it out at any cost, even at the cost of committing an act of war—then we give the nation with whom that nation is at war just cause for a declaration of war against us.

You can not assume all the benefits of neutrality, you can not pay off four billions and a half of your indebtedness to the foreign nations of the world, you can not become the richest nation on the face of the globe to-day, you can not reap all these benefits of neutrality, without being called upon to face the consequences of an unneutral act. To my mind, sir, in the event it becomes necessary for the President of the United States to preserve neutrality by committing an act of war, that power should be absolutely vested in him. Just as I pointed out a day or two ago when this matter was up, other Presidents of the United States have often been called upon, in enforcing our own laws, in compliance with our constitutional duty to our own citizens, to commit acts of war against a foreign country which were not in themselves causes of war, even although we went to the extent of taking the lives of foreign citizens upon foreign soil. But in this case, while we still leave the President the power to bombard Vera Cruz for the purpose of requiring reparation for an insult to the flag, or to blow Greytown into the harbor because of wrongs suffered by American citizens, reparation for which was not granted, we propose to shear him of the power to use the land and naval forces of the United States to preserve the neutrality of this country and to keep it out of war!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Cummins].

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the substitute offered by the Senator from North Carolina, as amended.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I do not intend to offer further amendments. There are two or three that I think ought to be offered, probably; but the disposition of the Senate is perfectly well known, and I do not desire to prolong the matter by offering them. Those I have offered present my view of what the statute should be, and I have offered them mainly because I did not want to be hereafter accused of participation in a measure which I think invades and overthrows the fundamental rights of American citizens.

There are many of these chapters for which I would giadly vote, which command my approval. I think that may be said of the greater number of the chapters which compose the substitute offered by the Senator from North Carolina, and if I had an opportunity to vote for them separated from the first chapter I would have no hesitation in doing so. But I regard the first chapter of the substitute as so destructive of everything that the American people have hitherto held dear and necessary to the security of free institutions that is is impossible for me to vote for the substitute with that chapter in it.

I say so much because I want the Record to contain my explanation of the vote that I shall cast. If I can secure it, I intend to have a roll call upon the bill, and I shall not further prolong the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the substitute offered by the Senator from North Carolina, as amended.

The substitute as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the committee amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator from Iowa that we probably can not get a quorum to-night. I do not know. Would there be any objection to granting unanimous consent to have a roll call——

Mr. FLETCHER. Let us finish the bill to-night. We can et a quorum.

Mr. OVERMAN. I was trying to get an arrangement with the Senator—

Mr. FLETCHER. If you can not get a quorum now, you will not get it at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is in the Senate and still open to amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed the question is, Shall the bill be engrossed and read a third time?

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and to be read a third

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read three times, the question is, Shall it pass?

Mr. CUMMINS. On that I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JONES (when his name was called). In the absence of the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Swanson] for the reason stated on the former vote I withhold my vote.

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] to the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] and vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH of Georgia (when his name was called). Again announcing my pair with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] and the further fact that he authorized me in his absence to vote upon this measure, I vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH of Maryland (when his name was called). ing the same transfer as on the last vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina (when his name was called) I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Martin] and vote "yea."

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). In the absence of my pair I withhold my vote. I wish to be counted for a quorum.

Mr. VARDAMAN (when his name was called). I have pair with the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. Brady]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Lippirt] to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Husting] and vote "yea."

I wish to announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Chilton] has been called from the Chamber by reason of illness in his family.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Penrose] to the Senator from Florida [Mr. Bryan] and vote "yea."

Mr. VARDAMAN I wish to announce the senior senior of the senior from Florida [Mr. Bryan] and vote "yea."

Mr. VARDAMAN. I wish to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] on account of illness

Mr. WADSWORTH. I was requested to announce that the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger] is unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. MYERS. Has the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Mc-

LEAN1 voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with that Senator, which I transfer to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Lea], and I vote "yea."

Mr. OVERMAN (after having voted in the affirmative). I desire to announce my pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] and the transfer of that pair to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS]. I will let my vote stand.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I desire to transfer my pair with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Brany] to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Kern] and vote "nay."

WADSWORTH. I have been requested to announce the following pairs

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BECKHAM]

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Govr] with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN];

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD];

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Catron] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen];

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. Curtis] with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK];

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Weeks] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. James];

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN];
The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Penrose] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]; and

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Gronna] with the Senator from Maine [Mr. Johnson]. Mr. REED. I ask that the bell be again rung and that the absentees be called before the vote is announced. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the vote will have to be announced first.

Mr. REED. Then no quorum will appear.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. When the roll is to be called for a quorum the bell will be rung.

Mr. REED. I do not think I made myself understood, or else there is some rule I do not know. We are now engaged in taking a vote. Of course, if any Senator here desired he could demand the immediate announcement of the vote, but, in the absence of that, I see no reason why we could not have the roll of absentees called. If we could do that by unanimous consent, it might save wasting two or three hours with this bill: that is all.

Mr. JONES. Let the vote be announced.
Mr. SHAFROTH. I ask that the vote be verified.

Mr. REED. If the vote is announced, of course it will not show a quorum.

The Secretary recapitulated the vote.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask to be recorded as present.

The yeas and nays resulted-yeas 27, nays 5, as follows:

	YEA	S-27.
Ashurst Bankhead Fall Fletcher Hitchcock Hollis Hughes	Johnson, S. Dak. Kirby Martine, N. J. Myers Nelson Newlands Overman	Ransdell Reed Rooinson Shafroth Sheppard Simmons Smith, Ga.	Smith, Md. Smith, S. C. Thompson Wadsworth Walsh Williams
	NA	YS-5.
Cummins Kenyon	La Follette	Lee, Md.	Vardaman
lew tion parties	NOT VO	TING-64.
Beckham Borah Brady Brandegee Broussard Bryan Catron Chamberlain Chilton Clapp Clark Colt Culberson	Fernald Gallinger Goff Gore Gromna Harding Hardwick Husting James Johnson, Me. Jones Kern Lane	Lodge McCumber McLean Martin, Va. Norris O'Gorman Oliver Owen Page Penrose Phelan Pittman Poindexter	Shields Smith, Ariz. Smith, Mich. Smoot Sterling Stone Sutherland Swanson Thomas Tillman Townsend Underwood Warren
Curtis Dillingham	Lea, Tenn. Lewis	Pomerene Saulsbury	Watson Weeks
du Pont	Lippitt'	Sherman	Works

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the final passage of the bill the yeas are 27 and the nays are 5. No quorum has voted.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask that the absentees be called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the

Mr. CUMMINS. I rise to a point of order. On the call that was had a quorum was not developed. It seems to me that the roll ought to be called of the absentees and allow those who come in to vote upon the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Opportunity was given for every Senator to vote who addressed the Chair, and the rule requires that when the absence of a quorum is developed the roll shall be called.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Jones	Ransdell	Stone
Bankhead	Kenyon	Reed	Thomas
Cummins	Kirby	Robinson	Thompson
Fall	Lee, Md.	Shafroth	Vardaman
Fletcher	Martine, N. J.	Sheppard	Wadsworth
Hitchcock	Myers	Simmons	Walsh
Hollis	Nelson	Smith, Ga.
Hughes	Newlands	Smith, Md.
Johnson, S. Dak.	Overman	Smith, S. C.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is not present. The Secretary will call the roll of absentees.

The Secretary called the names of absent Senators and Mr. WILLIAMS answered to his name when called.

Mr. BROUSSARD entered the Chamber and answered to his

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-five Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present.

Mr. REED. I move that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant at Arms will carry out the order of the Senate.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I wish to announce that the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] is confined to his home by

Mr. REED. I desire to state that the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] is confined to his room by illness, and has been for some weeks. I make this announcement so that there may be a full understanding not only of his absence to-day but for many days past.

Mr. FALL. If the announcement has not been made, I desire now to make the announcement that my pair, the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CHILTON], has been called home by illness in his family, and for that reason he is not present.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I know that no business is in order. I think we ought to procure the attendance of absent Senators and we ought to proceed with the business of the Senate. It will be very near impossible to get through with the business necessary to be transacted at this session unless we have night sessions, and we might as well understand it and begin to-night. I am very much interested particularly in the river and harbor bill, and I hope to call up that measure at the very first opportunity.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I make the point of order that no business is in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained. No business is in order.

Mr. WALSH. If it is in order, I desire to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is absent from the Senate on account of illness

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Announcements of that kind are in order.

Mr. KENYON (at 7 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m). I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate adjourn. The question is on that motion.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President—
Mr. KENYON. I will withdraw the motion if the Senator from North Carolina objects.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am communicating now with my colleague [Mr. Overman] in reference to this matter, and I ask the Senator to withhold his motion.

Mr. KENYON. I withdraw the motion, but I shall renew it in a little while.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey (at 7 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.). Mr. President, it seems to me it is quite evident that we shall not be able to get a quorum, and it is rather foolish for us to sit here longer to-night, after all we have done during the day

Mr. SIMMONS. Will not the Senator withhold his motion adjourn until I can hear from the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Overman], who has charge of this measare? He will be here in a few moments. I think it is an act of courtesy that is due him.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I should like to show all reasonable deference to the Senator in charge of the bill, but he doubtless has gone away and is having his dinner, and in the meantime we are staying here without ours.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am sure that the Senator will be in the Chamber in a few moments. He is on his way here now.\

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Very well, I will bide my peace for awhile.

Mr. CURTIS and Mr. LEA of Tennessee entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I move that when the Senate adjourns it adjourn to meet at half past 10 o'clock tomorrow morning

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina moves that when the Senate adjourns it adjourn to meet at half past 10 o'clock to-merrow merning. These in favor of the motion will say "aye"; contrary-minded, "no." The "ayes" have it, and the motion is agreed to.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Jersey that the Senate adjourn.
The motion was agreed to; and (at 7 o'clock and 35 minutes

p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 20, 1917, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 19, 1917.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and Everliving God, our Heavenly Father, let Thy spirit come mightly upon us, we beseech Thee, to quicken our minds and enlarge our scope of vision, to strengthen our faith and inspire larger hope and nobler aspirations; that we may make for righteousness in all the conditions of life, doing justly, loving mercy, walking humbly with Thee, our God and our Father. In His name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, February 17, was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Massachusetts rise?

Mr. WALSH. To ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting a letter from my predecessor in Congress, setting forth certain resolutions adopted by his home town on Cape Cod.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The following is the letter referred to:

YARMOUTHPORT, MASS., February 16, 1917.

YARMOUTHPORT, MASS., February 16, 1917.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Congressman: I beg to advise you that at the annual town meeting of Yarmouth, held on February 13, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we, citizens of the town of Yarmouth, Mass., in town meeting assembled, indorse the action of the President of the United States of America in severing diplomatic relations with Germany.

"Resolved, That we, loyal citizens of the old town of Yarmouth, pledge to our President our undivided support in any course necessary to protect our flag and our citizens and maintain the rights of our country."

to protect our mag and to country."

Former Congressman Thomas C. Thacher, chairman of committee; William N. Stetson. representative in Massachusetts House of Representatives; and T. W. Swift.

Faithfully, yours,

THOMAS C. THACHER.

. JOURNAL OF SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 18.

The record of the Journal of Sunday, February 18, 1917, was read and approved.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker—
The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Iowa rise?

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on next Thursday, Washington's birthday, after the reading of the Journal and the reading of Washington's Farewell Address by the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. Neely] I be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner] asks unanimous consent that on next Thursday after the reading of Washington's Farewell Address he be permitted to address the House not exceeding 30 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERLEY. Reserving the right to object, it is not pleasant to object to this sort of a request. We have reached a point in the time of this session where we want to finish the work of Congress, and we will have to refrain from even taking 30 minutes on any day in the discussion of matters not relating to the business of Congress.

Mr. MANN. This is on the subject of Washington, not extraneous matter.

Mr. SHERLEY. I shall not object to this case to-day, with the understanding that it is just an address touching Washington's life. I do not want to open up a lot of discussion that may serve to waste a good deal of time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner]? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the extension of my remarks in the Record by printing a number of telegrams, letters, and resolutions that I have received relative to the pending international situation.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BAILEY] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Providence Journal entitled "Mr. Moore on the press."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD as indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The following is the editorial referred to:

MR. MOORE ON THE PRESS.

Representative J. Hampton Moore, of the third Pennsylvania district, a seasoned self-advertiser, has taken occasion twice within the last few days on the floor of the House to attack the press of the last few days on the floor of the House to attack the press of the United States.

On Tuesday he quoted a series of charges by Representative Callaway, of Texas, which were, in substance, that 25 prominent American newspapers have been paid by influential interests to advocate preparedness, and vehemently declared: "I want no dictation from Lloyd George, any more than from the Kaiser. I want no dictation from Lloyd Northcliffe, the head of the great newspaper fraternity of Great Britain and certain alliances in the United States, any more than from and effectively characterizes this outburst of the Pennsylvania Congressman.

Von Hindenburg." A correspondent elsewhere on this page vigorously and effectively characterizes this outburst of the Pennsylvania Con-

Two days later, on Thursday, Mr. Moore was at it again. According to a dispatch from Washington, he "asserted that the press of the country was deliberately coloring the news from Europe so as to inflame the American people." And he added:

"I repeat the challenge to the majority of the House to introduce a resolution to prove whether or not the newspapers are actually subsidized, because it is due to what there is of honest journalism in the United States that the real facts be known with regard to this monstrous proposition to the taxpayers of this land and those whose blood must be let if we are to be driven into this fierce controversy across the sea."

In spite of Mr. Moore's violent talk, the American people will not believe that the press of the United States is subsidized to advocate preparedness or purchased to shout for war. Self-restraint and a sober sense of their responsibilities are conspicuous qualities of the great body of American newspapers. Mr. Moore makes a characteristic fling at the profession when he commends "what there is of honest journalism in this country is the overwhelming mass of American journalism. We have cheap and irresponsible papers in America, as every country has them, but they are so few as to be noticeable exceptions to a general and wholesome condition.

It is unfortunate that the Representative from the third Pennsylso few as to be noticeable exceptions to a general and wholesome condition.

It is unfortunate that the Representative from the third Pennsylvania district is not always as restrained and discreet in his public utterances as the representative, the unpurchasable, newspapers of the United States habitually are.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the problems of war and the possibilities of peace.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on the problems of war and the possibilities of peace. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 19937) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Smoot as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with-out amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 19239. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Pearl River, Miss., and the fourth ward of the parish of Washington, La., to construct a bridge across Pearl River be-tween Pearl River County, Miss., and Washington Parish, La.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 205) authorizing the removal of the statue of Admiral Dupont in Dupont Circle in the city of Washington, D. C., and the erection of a memorial to Admiral Dupont in place thereof.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow of the death of the Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, late a Senator from the State of Arkansas.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the business of the Senate be now suspended to enable his associates to pay proper tribute to his high character and distinguished public services.

Resolved. That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On February 17, 1917:

H. R. 455. An act to define the rights and privileges of the trustees of municipally owned interstate railways and construing the act to regulate commerce with reference thereto:

H. R. 11288. An act for the relief of S. S. Yoder; H. R. 8669. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the lease of certain land in Stanley County, S. Dak., for a buffalo pasture;

H. R. 17055. An act providing when patents shall issue to the purchaser or heirs on certain lands in the State of Oregon;

S. 5082. An act adding certain lands to the Missoula National Forest, Mont.;

S. 5632. An act for the relief of Aquila Nebeker; and

S. 6595. An act to reimburse William Blair for losses and damages sustained by him by the negligent dipping of his cattle by the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture.

On February 19, 1917: H. R. 10697. An act for the relief of S. Spencer Carr;

H. R. 14074. An act granting the consent of Congress to the village of Fox Lake, in the county of Lake, State of Illinois, to construct a bridge across both arms of the Fox River where it connects Pistakee Lake and Nippersink Lake, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in the county of Lake, State of Illinois:

H. R. 17602. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county commissioners of Polk County, Minn., and Grand Forks County, N. Dak., to construct a bridge across Red River of the North on the boundary line between said States

H. R. 18550. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Montgomery, in the State of Tennessee, to construct a bridge across the Cumberland River;

H. R. 18551. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Montgomery, in the State of Tennessee, to construct a bridge across the Cumberland River;

H. R. 18725. An act granting the consent of Congress to Kratka Township, Pennington County, Minn., to construct a bridge across Red Lake River; and

H. R. 20574. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county commissioners of Decatur County, Ga., to reconstruct a bridge across the Flint River at Bainbridge, Ga.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania rise?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution directing the appointment of a special committee to inquire into the charges contained in the statement made by the Hon. OSCAR CALLAWAY, a Member of Congress from Texas, and for other purposes.

Mr. GARNER. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is too late to discuss the question raised by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Garner].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas did not raise any question.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman objected. The SPEAKER. He objected flatly.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. He objected to unanimous consent. That is all right. The resolution affects the honor of the House, and the gentleman objected. That is the status.

The SPEAKER. What did the gentleman say?
Mr. MOORE of Pernsylvania. I asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution which affects the honor of the House, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GARNER], I understand, objected.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas objected to the equest of the gentleman made a while ago.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I shall press that resolution for a day or two, but meanwhile I rise to a question

The SPEAKER. Is it a question of personal privilege, or the privilege of the House, or the highest privilege, or what?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. A question of privilege affecting the dignity and integrity of the proceedings of the House. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Also affecting the rights, reputation, and conduct of Members of Congress individually in their representative capacity only.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And in support of that question, in order to save time, I read from an editorial in the Washington Post of Saturday, February 17, which, amongst other things, said:

Mr. J. HAMPTON MOORE, Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, has attracted notoriety by a speech which he recently delivered in the House, in which he mingled pacifism and detraction, and repeated baseless charges against the integrity of the newspapers of the country.

Passing that, I read further:

Mr. Moore has declared that he will demand an investigation of the charge that newspapers are subsidized. He has become sponsor for this charge. Let him press it. Let him name the newspapers that are bought by British or German gold—

And so forth.

Mr. GARNER. May I interrupt the gentleman? Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman may.

Mr. GARNER. I want to suggest to the Chair and to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that if he is now directing his remarks to the integrity of the proceedings of the House, that can only come in the form of a resolution to correct the Record and the Journal of the House. Whatever a newspaper may state can not affect the proceedings of this House.

The SPEAKER. That is true, but the gentleman also says it is a question of personal privilege.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is a question of privilege, and under Rule IX it affects the rights, reputation, and conduct of Members, individually, in their representative capacity.

I read the first editorial in order that the situation may be cleared up by the second one. In the Washington Post of this morning, February 19, is an editorial headed "Bogus Patriot-

The exhibition now being made in Congress by self-appointed guardians of American patriotism is anything but creditable to their good sense or good Americanism. They charge that the newspapers are trying to drive the country into war. They assert that hundreds of letters are pouring in demanding that the country shall remain at peace. Thereupon they read a lecture on the horrors of war and the dessings of peace and roundly denounce those who insist that the Government shall prepare itself, so far as possible, for the defense of its rights by war.

I will cut a little of it out for the purpose of coming to the

No reputable newspaper in the United States has demanded war. The assertion that there is a cabal of newspapers bent upon forcing the Government into war is the feeblest counsel of cowardice that has yet been emitted. The press reflects public sentiment, by and large, and there can not be any question of the fact that the people will go to war rather than surrender fundamental rights.

I will pass that for a moment. I read further:

Twin pass that for a moment. I read further:

The people unquestionably expect that Congress and the Executive will take all proper precautions and not be caught napping in the event of war.

The cheapest sort of demagogy is that which flatters the people and tries to make them believe that conspiracies are on foot which can only be thwarted by their brave and vigilant Representatives, the aforesaid demagogues.

Now, have I proceeded far enough to make this a question of privilege affecting the dignity of the House?

The SPEAKER. You have not. [Laughter.]
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I continue further?
The SPEAKER. The Chair will explain to the gentleman that if it is a matter affecting the dignity of the House he ought to introduce a resolution. If it is a matter of personal privilege he is rising to, that is not necessary. Now, that matter that the gentleman has read may be unpleasant and all that sort of thing, but there is no resolution pending. But it does not say a word about the gentleman, so far as I can hear.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It does speak about demagogues in the House, however. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. I know. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And if any of the gentlemen put the boot on their foot they may wear it.

The SPEAKER. But the thing that the gentleman overlooks is that if he is raising a question of privilege affecting the dig-nity of the House he has to introduce a resolution. If it is a matter of personal privilege he does not have to introduce a resolution. But you have to have some substantial foundation for it. Now, if the gentleman has anything reflecting on him individually, the Chair will entertain it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will undertake to answer as to personal privilege. In the Washington Star of yesterday, Sunday, February 18, appears a speech attributed to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot], in which this statement is made, the quotations being put on the gentleman from Wisconsin:

If I understand the views expressed by gentlemen-

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore] and some

If this shall come to pass-

That is to say, if this war shall come to pass-

"If our honor as a Nation is at stake," says the gentleman from Wisconsin, applying it to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore] and attributing motives to him-

That is a direct violation of the belief and of the motives of the gentleman from Pennsylvania and it is a reflection on his personal and his Representative honor. The gentleman from Wisconsin proceeds:

If this is to be the attitude of Congress and the American people, then the days of this Republic are numbered.

That is a very serious charge in connection with the motives of a Member of this House—

We will no longer be a nation, for any people too cowardly to fight for their liberty upon the sea, if need be, will be too cowardly to fight for their liberty upon the land.

I not only resent that statement as attributed to me and as imputing to me motives which I do not entertain, but I insist that that statement having gone broadcast, I am entitled to speak on it as a matter of personal privilege. I am neither too cowardly to fight, nor am I too cowardly to vote, as I have voted, for all proper measures of preparedness in this country, and—

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that the gentleman has not stated a matter of privilege, and is out of Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvauia. I contend that this language constitutes a breach of personal privilege, and I demand the right to speak upon it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Shekley] makes the point of order that there is no personal privilege involved in the language uttered. I wish the gentleman would read it over again—that part of it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. "If I understand the views expressed by" the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore] and some others "if this shall come to pass"—that is to say, the destruction of American rights and things of that kind—"if this shall come to pass, we must do nothing." That is not may position Mr. Speaker.

my position, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that what the gentleman is quoting is the language of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot], delivered upon the floor, and that it can not be turned into a question of personal privilege simply because it is subsequently printed in a newspaper. The gentleman had his remedy, if there was need of one, at the time the man had his remedy, if there was need of one, at the time the gentleman from Wisconsin spoke, when he could have made the point that the gentleman was not in order and had the words taken down, and the House could then have passed upon it. But now to say that the reproduction of a speech made by a Member on the floor by a newspaper brings it into a question of personal privilege carries that doctrine further than I have ever known it to be seriously urged before.

The SPEAKER. Now the Chair will ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question: Does the fact that a Member neglects to have words taken down and acted on then and there prevent him from subsequently rising to a question of privilege about a statement made on the floor of the House?

Mr. SHERLEY. No; if the language of the Representative is such as to raise a question of privilege, the Member has a right to make a motion in connection with it, to move that it be stricken from the permanent RECORD, or to take any such action as that, but it can not be made the basis of an excuse for a speech on the subject matter. It must be accompanied by some formal proposal for the action of the House.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, may I add a

Mr. GARNER. May I suggest to the Speaker that it occurs to me that the speech of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] as it appears in the Record is the best authority on this matter? The Chair can determine from that whether there this matter? The Chair can determine from that whether there is anything in it that is calculated to give the gentleman from Pennsylvania the right to address the House on a matter of personal privilege. A mere conglomeration of reports in the Star about what was said on the floor of the House is not, it occurs to me, the best evidence as to whether it presents a question of privilege. The Record itself is the best evidence as to the right of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The SPEAKER. There is no question but that the Record is the best evidence.

is the best evidence.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I refer, if the Speaker pleases, to that portion of the speech of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] which is woven around the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore] and others, in which it

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman will suspend, the Speaker will read the RECORD and see what it does say. Here is what the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] said-

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, before the Speaker rules, will he not listen to me for a moment?

The SPEAKER. I will. I want to read this so that the gentleman can predicate his action upon the official record.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am making the point of privilege on the strength of the publication in the Evening Star. The SPEAKER. Yes; but suppose the Evening Star misquoted the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then the gentleman from Wisconsin is entitled to explain, as I am entitled to explain.

The SPEAKER. Well, we want to get it straightened out.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] did not attribute these sentiments to me, then that is for him to state on the floor.

The SPEAKER. Here is what the gentleman from Wisconsin said, and the general rule of construction is that a man means what he says:

Mr. Chairman, for once we seem to find the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. London] in absolute accord, for, as I gather from their arguments, they take the position that if Congress shall be called upon to take any action in this present international crisis that, because the executive branch of this Government has failed to maintain our rights against England with reference to property rights, we should refuse to vote to maintain our rights against Germany involving human life.

Now, if the gentleman wants to get rid of that declaration of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] his proper mode is to move to strike it out.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely untrue, so far as it relates to me. Only an hour or so before the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] spoke I had made a speech in which I said, following the speech of the gentleman from Nebraska—and this is the utterance of Mr. Moore of Pennsylvania, not as interpreted by the gentleman from Wisconsin but as a bireal of male bore or this decrease. consin but as he himself spoke here on this floor:

I, too, insist that we should assert American rights upon the high seas, and especially in our dealings with neutral countries. I have supported measures in this House—every one of them, I believe—to prepare this country to assert its rights upon the high seas, but I want the rights of the United States upon the high seas asserted against every nation that interferes or tramples upon those rights.

Now, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] came in subsequently. I did not hear him make the statement, or it would have been challenged at once. The gentleman came in subsequently, changing his attitude from his vote on the McLemore resolution, when he voted against the President—
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania stated to the Chair that he wanted to argue this question of order.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Very well, Mr. Speaker, I do want to

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman is not doing it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] having made this false statement of the motives of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the gentleman from Pennsylvania has a right to reply and give his reasons.

The SPEAKER. A reply is one thing and a question of privilege is another.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I insist under the rules that if a gentleman of this House is misrepresented in a newspaper, he has a right, if it affects his integrity as a Representative, to come upon this floor and as a matter of personal privilege, explain his position.

The SPEAKER. The rule is this: A newspaper can tell all sorts of things about a person, but if the charge is as to his conduct as a Member of the House, that makes it a question of privilege.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania be allowed to proceed for 10

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania be allowed to proceed for 10 minutes. Is there objection? pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker-

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman from Wisconsin does not appear to be present. I object.

Several Members. Too late.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that comes too late.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to say a word about the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed for not exceeding 10 minutes

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman from Wisconsin is present. I will not object.

The SPEAKER. The objection came too late, anyhow.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Now, Mr. Speaker, I sent to the Clerk's desk a little while ago, for the second time, a resolution which proposes an investigation of certain charges made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Callaway] as to the influences controlling certain newspapers of the country that have been advocating a foreign war.

Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman just got unanimous consent to address the House not exceeding 10 minutes on the theory that he desired to address the House on a question of personal privilege on a speech of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I refuse to yield further. The gentleman is only consuming the 10 minutes that

The Washington Post is one of the newspapers that has challenged Members of Congress in the last two or three days to investigate the Callaway charges. The charges have been made that certain large interests have influenced newspapers in this country to proclaim a war against Germany, and that they have been urging the President to come to Congress for a declaration of war. I suggested that there should be an investigation, because there has been a sudden change on the part of some of these great newspapers in regard to war conditions, which has given color to the charge that these certain influences are trying to drive the United States into a war that the majority of the people of this country do not want.

Witness this editorial in the Washington Post of 1916, a little over a year ago. This is the same paper that is to-day driving the country into war with Germany. Tuesday, January 4, 1916, it says:

GREAT BRITAIN'S ACTION A DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST OUR COMMERCE.

In order that the readers of the Post may know how utterly unjust, illegal, and inconsistent Great Britain and her allies are in selzing vessels laden with noncontraband cargoes bound to either belligerent or neutral countries we quote from the official notes of the British foreign office as to the British postition upon cases of precisely the same character of those in which the British foreign office to-day takes diametrically the opposite position of that which it held in former cases. During the Boer War, when Lord Salisbury was asked to state the position of the British Government regarding shipments of foodstuffs, he said:

"Foodstuffs with a hostile destination can be considered contraband of war only if they are supplies for the enemies' forces. It is not sufficient that they are capable of being so used; it must be shown that this was in fact their destination at the time of the selzure."

Yet in 1914, through the infamous and inhumane order of council of Angust 20, even such foodstuffs were made contraband of war and were made subject to selzure by British vessels if consigned to any person in Germany, and even if moving to Germany through a neutral port. GREAT BRITAIN'S ACTION A DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST OUR COMMERCE.

person in Germany, and even if moving to Germany through a neutral port.

The case in 1904, when Russia, a belligerent then, seized a cargo of flour and railway material consigned to private concerns in Japan, the opposing belligerent, brought out the positions of the United States and Great Britain upon that seizure in the clearest possible light, and is so conclusive that it leaves Great Britain not a particle of defense for its present unjust and tyrannical actions.

Lord Lansdowne then wrote to Mr. Choate, who at that time was ambassador to Great Britain: "The test appeared to be whether there are circumstances relating to any particular cargo to show that it is destined for military and naval use."

Let our readers note well that this cargo of flour and railway material was consigned to private concerns in a belligerent country, Japan, yet Lord Lansdowne stated that the test must be to show that it was destined for military and naval use.

The British Order in Council smashes that Lansdowne test which he set forth so clearly to Ambassador Choate. But let our readers follow Lord Lansdowne further in this same case: "His Majesty's Government further pointed out that the decision of the prize court of the captor in such matters, in order to be binding on neutral states, must be in accordance with the recognized rules and principles of international law and procedure."

In other words, the British Government refused to recognize any decision of a prize court that did not conform to the test as laid down and abide by the principle involved.

To-day the British Government cancels that test, wipes out international law and procedure, and declares that "Orders in Council" be supreme.

During this same Russo-Japanese war Theodore Roosevelt was Presi-

To-day the British Government cancels that test, wipes out international law and procedure, and declares that "Orders in Council" be supreme.

During this same Russo-Japanese war Theodore Roosevelt was President of the United States, John Hay was Secretary of State, and Joseph Choate was ambassador to Great Britain, and there is nothing upon the record to show that there was any difference of opinion of these officials as to the rights of neutrals to sell foodstuffs to belligerents, and surely not to neutrals.

This is what John Hay said to Russia upon that point, and it may be taken as granted that Theodore Roosevelt, as President, approved the note:

"When war exists between powerful states it is vital to the legitimate maritime commerce of neutral states that there shall be no relaxation of the rule, no deviation from the criterion for determining what constitutes contraband of war lawfully subject to belligerent capture, namely, warlike nature, use, and destination. Articles which, like arms and ammunition, are by their nature of self-evident use are contraband of war if destined to enemy territory; but articles like coal, cotton, and provisions, though if ordinarily capable of warlike use, are not subject to capture and confiscation unless shown by evidence to be actually destined for the military or naval forces of a belligerent."

If the principle which appears to have been declared by the Vladivostok prize court, and which has not so far been disavowed or explained by His Imperial Majesty's Government, is acquiesced in, it means, if carried into full execution, the complete destruction of all neutral commerce with the noncombatant population of Japan; it obviates the necessity of blockades; it renders meaningless the principles of the declaration of Paris set forth in the imperial order of February last that a blockade in order to be obligatory must be effective; it obliterates all distinction between commerce in contraband and noncontraband goods, and is in effect a declaration of war against commerce

What would have been the words of those men if Russia had seized hundreds of vessels and cargoes bound to neutral ports? Does any American think they would have filed protest and protest and protest without any redress to our shippers?

Does not John Hay speak the truth when he declared that Russia's action in seizing the cargo of foodstuffs bound to Japan, a belligerent, was "in fact a declaration of war against commerce of every description between the people of a neutral and those of a belligerent state "? Then what is it when Great Britain and France seize neutral vessels laden with foodstuffs bound from neutral states to neutral states? Is the United States and its President to be treated as Greece and is King is being treated? Is this country ready to be treated as an African or Asiatic dependency by the allies?

"He that would be free himself must strike the blow" applies to nations as well as individuals.

Why the chapper since Japany 4 1916? This investigation

Why the change since January 4, 1916? This investigation committee might find out.
Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I do not. On January 5, 1916, the same Washington Post that now wants war with Germany, under the heading of "Starvation of civilians—A most barbarous form of warfare," in the first column of the editorial page, carried an intensely vigorous anti-British editorial, in which, amongst other things, it said:

Whatever sympathy was won by Great Britain and France through their somewhat awkward attempts to pose as champions of neutrality in the case of Belgium has been lost by their conduct in Greece, their disregard of Chile's neutrality, their "unjust, illegal, and indefensible" practices under the "orders in council" against our neutral country and the neutral and peaceful countries of Holland and Scandinavia.

Why this startling change on the part of the editor of the Post within one brief year? On Friday, January 7, 1916, on the first column of the editorial page, under the caption "It is a question of American rights," the same Washington Post, in another editorial, which I can not read in full, but speaking of the markets of the world, which we are supposed to be free to enter, says:

They are not open to our customers, our legal, anxious, neutral customers, in any of the peaceful nations named, and those countries are blocked and limited in their purchases from this country by reason of British diplomatic work, backed by British navalism, and the Senator from Massachusetts should not have neglected to place this important fact before the Senate and the American people.

Mr. GARDNER. Now, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No. Why this change in the course of one year? On January 10, 1916, in the second column of the editorial page, the Post, under heavy headlines, demands full freedom of the seas to our nationals and our commerce, and states, somewhere here down at the bottom of it, this:

There may be some blue-light Federalists still in the United States, men as blindly loyal to British traditions as the old Jacobites who a century after the revolution of 1688 were filling up their cups and drinking toasts to "the King across the water," but they can not prevent the people of the United States from forcing Great Britain back to its proper position under international law.

The people of the United States handled both Federalists and the British Government with greatest success in 1812, and they can do it again.

Now that negotiations with Germany have almost reached a successful conclusion, President Wilson's task is much simplified, and he can give his undivided attention to bringing the allies to a sense of their proper respect for international law and the rights of this Retheir proper respect public and its people.

Mr. Speaker, why this change? Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No; I can not.

Mr. GARDNER. Does not the gentleman know that John R.

McLean is dead?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. On January 12, 1916, this same Washington Post, that now, with some of the other great newspapers, wants war with Germany, in the first-column editorial, entitled "A world trade monopoly England's avowed object," had this to say:

object," had this to say:

The United States has been marvelously patient in the face of grievous injury to its peaceful commerce by the power that happens to have control of the seas. It would not be so patient if the temporary injuries and stoppages were made permanent. It will never take its orders from London. An attempt to dominate American trade in that fashion would necessarily result in war.

A monopoly of trade! So that is the ambition of the British; that is the noble motive that inspires this war; that is the animus against Germany; that is the splendid cause for which "Great Britain is fighting America's battles!"

There is no danger, from present prospects, that Great Britain will so crush her enemies as to be able to rob them of their trade; but if there were danger of it, there would be added reason for the United States to arm itself for battle, for its turn would come next.

Oh. you Americans who think about running into this

Oh, you Americans who think about running into this European war, consider what the Post said January 12, 1916. Why the change?

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No. Mr. GARDNER. Do you not know that John R. McLean is

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, The SPEAKER January 18, 1916, when it was afraid of Great Britain and the New Jersey rise?

Post was apparently telling the truth under the heading of Great Britain's attempt to dominate the high seas," it said:

We find it difficult to believe that the great democratic people of the New World will allow their influence to be used to disarm the democratic peoples of the Old World in their struggle for liberty against military dominations—says the Westminister Gazette, of London.

How about the struggle of the democracies of the New World against naval dominations?

The world is dominated not so much by German militarism as by British navalism.

The United States does not propose to be dominated by either.

Do you get that, my friend from Massachusetts? [Laughter.]
Mr. GARDNER. Does the gentleman yield? Does he not know that John R. McLean is dead?
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Oh, Mr. Speaker, what is the use of going on further with this? There are numerous such editorials as of 1916. Have I shown enough to prove the change of attitude in one brief year on the part of one great newspaper of the United States? Does it not suggest that there Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No.
Mr. GARDNER. Does the gentleman not know that John R.
McLegn is dead?

McLean is dead?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Here is an editorial from one of the great newspapers that wants the truth told. Here is an editorial entitled, "They Dare Not Investigate." Let me quote from the Chicago Tribunte of February 16, 1917, only a day or two ago:

THEY DARE NOT INVESTIGATE.

There is one worthy measure before Congress which has even less chance of passing than a proper Army bill. It is a resolution to investigate the ownership of newspapers to find out if any of them have been acquired in the interest of foreign Governments to sway public opinion for the benefit of those Governments against the interests of the United States.

Nothing is more probable than that this should be so. Newspapers are property and can be bought and sold. Buying the editorial service of a newspaper and buying the newspaper itself are two very different things. Men who would scorn to take money for editorial expression would not hesitate to sell their properties. Few, indeed, are the newspaper properties which would not be sold at a sufficient price, and unlimited are the funds to buy them, and unlimited the needs of all the warring nations for friendly publicity in the United States. Hence it is more than likely that there are newspapers in the United States which now belong to allen Governments and are being conducted in their behalf.

Congress will not investigate, however. Congressmen, smarting under merited criticism, will charge newspapers, both singly and collectively, with treasonable motives, but the majority party of Congress will not investigate the ownership of newspapers for the same reason it objected to the investigation of the "leak" of the President's message—namely, for fear that it will find something.

For years there has been on the staute books a law requiring the publishing of the actual ownership of newspapers, and for an equally long time the administration has failed to enforce this law. An investigation of the ownership of newspapers might not only bring to light some interesting concealed ownerships but might prove also that the administration permitted the evasion of the law in return for political support. There will be no investigation.

Mr. Speaker, to-morrow and on the day after I shall renew my request for the passage of this resolution to investigate the story of the gentleman from Texas. [Applause.]
The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for one minute in which to reply.

Mr. KITCHIN: Mr. Speaker, I want to notify the House that I am going to call for the regular order immediately after that one minute.

Mr. HENSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent for one minute and the gentleman from Missouri objects.

Mr. GARDNER. Does the gentleman from Missouri really object?

mr. HENSLEY. Yes.
Mr. GARDNER. Does he think it fair—
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri objects, and that is the end of it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

CALENDAR FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

The SPEAKER. This is unanimous-consent day, and the Clerk will call the first bill.

FORT PECK INDIAN RESERVATION.

The first business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 5612) providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of lands within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.

Mr. HAMILL rose.

For what purpose does the gentleman from The SPEAKER.

Mr. HAMILL. To ask for the present consideration of Senate joint resolution 201, which has passed the Senate, a similar resolution having been unanimously reported to the House from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. HAMILL. Does the gentleman object?
Mr. GORDON. I do object. [Cries of "Regular order!"]
The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill which the Clerk will report?

The Clerk will report the first bill.

The first business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 5612) providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of land within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to ob-

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. The gentleman from Montana will explain-

Mr. STAFFORD. Last unanimous-consent day I asked that this bill be passed over, because as it is now phrased any en-tryman upon the Fort Peck Indian Reservation upon the payment of one-fifth of the original purchase price would be privileged to have all the subsequent installments deferred for eight years upon merely payment of interest at 5 per cent. I do not consider that a private owner would permit his land to be used for eight years upon the mere payment of interest at the rate of 5 per cent on the purchase price, and then at the termination of that time allow perhaps the entryman, after he may have exhausted all the virtue of the soil, to deliver up the land. I do not see how any person can subscribe to a principle as enunciated in this bill. It is merely putting a premium upon the exploitation of the public domain, particularly upon the lands of the Indians. I would like to have some explanation from the Committee on the Public Lands, who seek to safeguard their interests, how they could report any such bill as this, which would grant the privilege of deferring the payments, save the initial one, until eight years afterwards by merely paying an annual interest of 5 per cent on the deferred installments.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin it seems to me he misconstrues the purpose of the bill. It is very fully explained in the Secretary of the Interior's

Mr. STAFFORD. I not only read the Secretary's letter once, but I have read it twice, so I would be certain I did not misconstrue it, and I will go further by saying the committee does not follow the recommendations of the Secretary of the Interior, who only recommends an extension for seven years, whereas the committee recommends eight years. Now, will the gentleman explain that feature?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I will yield to the gentleman from Montana, in whose district this is.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, this bill comes from the Senate. The original provision provided for deferred payments on one-half of the installments. It was at the instance of the Secrehair of the instalments. It was at the instance of the Secre-tary of the Interior that the proposition of deferred payments on one-half was stricken out. Why he made the recommendation I do not know. Personally I think that clause should remain in the bill. The Public Lands Committee of the House should not be taken to task because they did not follow the recom-mendation of the Secretary, perhaps because the recommendation of the Secretary was made to the Senate and the Senate put in eight years and the Public Lands Committee doubtless followed the recommendation of the bill as it passed through the Senate. Perhaps it would meet the objection of the gentleman from Wisconsin if we would resubstitute the proposition and allow the deferred payments of one-half of the annual amount, and if so I would offer an amendment to line 1, page 2, after the word "pay" add the words "one-half of any", which would make it read "may obtain extensions of time within which to pay one-half of any installments of purchase

Mr. STAFFORD. Personally I do not think it is good business policy to extend the additional installments of the purchase money of our public lands, especially in such a way as is embodied in this bill.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. I will yield. Mr. FERRIS. As the gentleman from Wisconsin knows, I have come here many times asking similar relief for the citizens of my State, and if the gentleman will let me make a statement that would, I think, appeal to him. It usually works out this way. A piece of Indian land is opened for disposition; if it were public land they would pay nothing for it, but as it is Indian land they are compelled first to bid for it by com- Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest this: That when proof is petitive bids, or they enter their bids pursuant to an appraised price fixed by the Government. This is what happens. The people who buy these lands can only buy tracts of 160 acres. The homesteaders are necessarily and uniformly poor, and the first thing they have to do is to build a fence, build a little shack to live in, and plow and wrestle with the wild sod land until it becomes productive. Now, these payments fall due. It is just impossible to make payments, and they have to have a little encouragement from the Government by giving them extensions of time to make the payments. It does the Indian no injustice because the settler pays 5 per cent interest, and that is all that he ought to pay. This bill ought to pass. These settlers need the relief. It does no one any harm.

Mr. STAFFORD. Is the gentleman defending the principle of this bill by permitting the entryman to be privileged to defer all payments for eight years after the initial payment by paying merely 5 per cent interest a year?

Mr. FERRIS. It may be better in some instances to make them pay one-fifth, but what happens in nearly every case is this: The settler finds that he must mortgage his land, and he can not mortgage it until he makes final proof. If he owes a thousand dollars on his homestead, he goes and probably borrows $1,200, $1,000 to go to make his payment and the $200 to have a little surplus to run another year. Then he has to wrestle and run along for the next year. But if he makes these payments promptly when due and keeps up his homestead as he has to do it results in taking the land away from the first homesteader and letting the succeeding homesteader get it.

Mr. STAFFORD. But I can not subscribe to any principle as embodied in this bill as will permit any person entering upon the public domain and pay one-fifth of the purchase price, and live on the land for eight years by paying 5 per cent on the deferred installments. I am seeking not to put a premium upon these entrymen in abandoning their homesteads after utilizing the land for eight years. The gentleman can not conceive of an instance of any private owner granting such liberal provisions as are embodied in this bill, paying one-fifth of the purchase price, and then allowing him to have an option for eight years when paying only 5 per cent on the balance of the payment.

Mr. FERRIS. Wait a minute. I can give the gentleman a number of instances.

Mr. EAGLE. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas demands the regular order. The regular order is, Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. If the regular order is demanded, I object.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman withhold it for a moment? Mr. EAGLE. I will gladly withhold it at the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. FERRIS. One of the things I think the gentleman from Wisconsin has overlooked is that no title is given until payment is made. This renders it perfectly safe to the Indians, to the Government, and everybody. They need it.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield just a moment?

This should be borne in mind: These entrymen shall actually reside on the land for seven months in the year, and they may make a three-year proof upon the land. Now, I will ask the gentleman how long, under the present homestead law, can they hold this land after making entry and establishing their residence? I do not imagine they can hold the land for eight years

Mr. FERRIS. They probably could not. Mr. NORTON. They must make proof

Mr. NORTON. They must make proof for eight years.
Mr. STAFFORD. They could, under this law, hold the land until the end of the eight years' period. I am objecting only to the idea of allowing a person to go upon these lands and paying one-fifth of the purchase price, and then permitting the balance of deferred payments to continue over a period of eight

Mr. FERRIS. I do not insist on that. I have no doubt the gentlemen from Montana [Mr. Evans and Mr. Stout] will accept an amendment if the gentleman will offer it. All over the United States the building associations exact but a small payment

Mr. STAFFORD. The building and loan associations are not the Government. There is no precedent like this ever heretofore established-that is, as broad as this.

Mr. FERRIS. It has been-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman accept this?
Mr. STAFFORD. If the gentleman will insist on it in conference.

Mr. FERRIS. If the gentleman insists on it, we, of course, will do our best to hold it.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

made upon these homesteads the entire amount should be paid at the time of proof, whether it is final proof or commutation

Mr. STAFFORD. Read the letter of the Secretary of the Interior and you will see that he may still do that under the terms of this bill.

Mr. NORTON. What is the objection of the gentleman if the proof is made when the payments are made?

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not think it is good business policy to allow a stranger to enter upon another person's land and utilize it for nine years upon paying merely one-fifth of the purchase price, and have the other installments deferred until nine years upon paying 5 per cent.

Mr. NORTON. Under the suggestion I make, the entryman could not hold the land for more than five years, because he is required under the present homestead law to submit proof within five years

Mr. STAFFORD. Under the explanation of the Secretary of the Interior he will be privileged, if this becomes a law, to hold until the end of eight years.

Mr. FERRIS. I am telling the gentleman what the law is.

Mr. NORTON. The Secretary suggests that the payment might be extended at the time the proof was submitted. I suggest that the bill be so changed that all the payments are made when the proof is submitted. It now provides in case of commutation proof all the payments shall be made.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman from Wisconsin is objecting to that?

Mr. NORTON. The gentleman would not object if all the payments are made when the proof is made?

Mr. STAFFORD. I say make it mandatory.

Mr. NORTON. That is not what the gentlemen want. They want it deferred until eight years.

Mr. FERRIS. We will accept the amendment if the gentle-men insist upon it. Some relief is needed, and we must get something through.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, do not all the gentlemen think that the interest payment on extensions ought to be made annually?

Mr. FERRIS. I do. We can so amend it when it is considered.

Mr. MANN. This does not provide that. In line 12, on page would the gentlemen interested be willing to strike out, at the end of the line, the words "at or" and insert the word "annually" in place of them, so it would read that "interest payments must hereafter be made annually "

Mr. FERRIS. The committee would be very glad to accept that.

Mr. MANN. So that it would read, "the interest payments shall be made annually."

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. MANN, I do not make this as any condition. I was going to move to strike out section 2.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, with the understanding that the gentleman is going to offer an amendment, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears none. The Clerk will re-

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, this bill is on the Union Calendar. I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

Mr. GARDNER. I object.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will not insist. If we get into the Committee of the Whole on this bill, we will have all afternoon in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. GARDNER. I will not object if I am allowed five minutes to answer the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore].
Mr. FERRIS. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gardner] may have five minutes

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Massachusetts may have five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. And then let the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, does not the gentleman from Massachusetts think the gentleman from Penn-sylvania [Mr. Moore] should be on the floor when he makes his

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman may object or not. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object, but only to have Mr. Moore on the floor. Mr. FERRIS. Only to get him in? Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. GARDNER. I am not going to attack Mr. Moore.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request that this bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. GARDNER. I must object. I must have a chance to debate, and the only way I can get it is by going into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman from Massachusetts withhold a moment?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that pending this request-

Coupled with it-Mr. MANN.

The SPEAKER. Coupled with the request is the request that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] be allowed five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Reserving the right to object, I wanted to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts if he intended to say anything in regard to Mr. Moore whereby he ought to be present?

Mr. GARDNER. I have never in my life in this House alluded to a man without having him present, with the single exception of Mr. Hopkins of Kentucky some years ago, when I was forced to do it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to this bill being considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole on the condition that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gardner] shall have five minutes now?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore]. But it ought to be amended so as to allow both sides of this newspaper question to be investigated.

I hold in my hand an editorial from the Milwaukee Journal of February 14, 1917, a few days ago. It is headed "Their danger increases." This is a very serious charge made by the Milwaukee Journal. I read:

waukee Journal. I read:

The Sheboygan Herald and other pro-German organs can not understand that most American newspapers are American. It is not surprising, therefore, that these organs of Germany talk of American newspapers "bought up by the allies" and by Wall Street and the munition makers, or that they charge that these influences sway the course of officers of the United States Government.

This makes it pertinent to point to the fact that the only known cases of corruption of the American press in connection with the world war involves publications established or reestablished since the war began. These publications have invariably espoused the cause of Germany against that of the United States and have received German money for doing so. Moreover, the only American correspondents who are known to have been corrupted with foreign money, in return for "coloring their reports," succumbed to offers of German money. The number of American journalists known to have been bribed in this way is small. The number of those tempted with German money is larger. These are facts. The Journal gives its assurance that they can be depended upon. It has in its possession photographic copies of checks and other evidence to establish these facts. It may publish some of this evidence in the near future.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if you are going to have an investigation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if you are going to have an investigation, you must draw that resolution in such a way as to investigate both sides. I understand the gentleman from Pennsylvania agrees to that.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. He thoroughly agrees to that. Mr. GARDNER. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to put this whole editorial from the Milwaukee Journal in the

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks as indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARDNER. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gardner], that if there is foreign interference with American newspapers by any country it should be included in the investigation; if the Germans are buying up American newspapers or controlling American newspaper sentiment, that is just as reprehensible as if the English were doing it.

Mr. GARDNER. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Following is the entire editorial referred to:

[From the Milwaukee Journal, Feb. 14, 1917.]

THEIR DANGER INCREASES.

The Sheboygan Herald and other pro-German organs can not understand that most American newspapers are American. It is not surprising, therefore, that these organs of Germany talk of American newspapers "bought up by the allies" and by Wall Street and the munition makers, or that they charge that these influences sway the course of officers of the United States Government.

This makes it pertinent to point to the fact that the only known cases of corruption of the American press in connection with the world war involve publications established or reestablished since the war began. These publications have invariably espoused the cause of Germany against that of the United States and have received German money for doing so. Moreover, the only American correspondents who are known to have been corrupted with foreign money, in return for "coloring their reports," succumbed to offers of German money. The number of American journalists known to have been bribed in this way is small. The number of those tempted with German money is larger. These are facts. The Journal gives its assurance that they can be depended upon. It has in its possession photographic copies of checks and other evidence that establish these facts. It may publish some of this evidence in the near future.

Those newspapers, propagandists, and allen organizations which, parading under the guise of Americanism, have been serving Germany by fostering disloyalty among citizens of this country, may soon find themselves in what would be, to say the least, a very embarrassing situation. Their words and plots and acts constitute a record that damns them, and they may safely take it for granted that their record is not only officially known but officially preserved. Should Germany force the United States into war, it will be found that our Government, which has been most patient with trouble makers at home, can use the power of a strong arm swiftly and surely. For what is now only disloyalty would in a state of war at once become sedition and treason. Those whose words and deeds have placed themselves in the black record already made up would be subject to summary arrest and punis

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any person who has made or shall make homestead entry under the act approved May 30, 1908 (35 Stats., p. 558), entitled "An act for the survey and allotment of lands now embraced within the limits of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana," etc., may obtain extensions of time within which to pay installments of purchase money, which have become due and are unpaid or which will hereafter become due by paying to the register and receiver of the land office for the district in which the lands are situated interest in advance on the amounts due and for the period of the desired extension at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, and any payment so extended may at its maturity be again extended in like manner: Provided, That payment of interest on installments now due must be made in order to secure the extension; interest payments must hereafter be made at or before the maturity of the payments to be extended, and no payment will be postponed for more than eight years from the date of entry nor will any extension be made for less than one year: Provided further, That if commutation proof is submitted all the unpaid payments must be made at that time.

SEC. 2. That in case any entryman falls to make the payments, or any of them, when due, unless the same be extended, or to make any extended payment at or before its maturity, unless it is again extended, all rights in and to the land covered by his entry shall cease and any payments therefore made shall be forfeited and the entry canceled.

SEC. 3. That moneys paid as interest, provided for herein, shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the Fort Peck Indians, the same as moneys realized from the sale of the lands.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Mann: Page 1, line 8, after the word "Montana," strike out the words "and so forth" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "and the sale and disposal of all the surplus lands after allotment."

Mr. MANN. That is simply to conform to the proper title.

Mr. FERRIS. The committee accepts that, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. I offer a further amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Mann: Page 2, line 11, after the word "made," strike out the words "at or" and insert the word "annually." The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, at the proper time I want to strike out section 2

Mr. FERRIS. I think the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] has an amendment to section 1.

Mr. STAFFORD. I move to amend, on page 2, in line 1, by inserting after the word "pay" the words "one-half of any."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 2, in line 1, by inserting after the word "pay" the ords "one-half of any."

The amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out section 2. Mr. FERRIS. I have no objection to that.

Mr. MANN. Section 2 provides for the forfeiture of all the payments which the entryman has made if he fails to make some payment. In other words, if the entryman should pay all the payments except the last one and then should die, leaving a widow and children, and they were unable, either because of estate matters or something else, to make the final payment, all of the payments would be forfeited. I do not believe the Government ought to forfeit payments unless it is done deliberately, knowing what the facts are.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from Illinois is entirely right about it, because this is what would happen. If a case of that kind should arise the parties interested would come to Congress and ask the passage of a special bill for their relief, and everyone would be willing to pass it. This will obviate the necessity of that.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] to strike out section 2.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

STOREHOUSE AT BENICIA ARSENAL, CAL.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 762) providing for the construction and equipment of a storehouse at Benicia Arsenal, State of California.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin objects.
The bill is stricken from the calendar.

Mr. RAKER. I ask unanimous consent that it retain its place on the calendar and be passed over to-day.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks to pass this bill over without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, how many times has the bill been on the calendar?

Mr. RAKER. I do not know. This is the first time I have asked that it remain on the calendar.

Mr. MANN. I shall have to object. I think a bill that has been on the calendar once, that is objected to now, if it stays on the calendar at all, ought to go to the foot of the calendar and not stop at the top of the calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

SETTLERS ON UNSURVEYED RAILROAD LANDS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 1792) for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cox). Is there objection? Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, since this bill was under consideration the gentlemen interested have furnished a more elaborate report, which gives a better understanding of the real purpose of the bill. I wish to inquire whether the Northern Pacific Railway Co. have not some rights in these lands which would be the basis of a claim in the Court of Claims against the Government in case this bill is passed? As I understand this bill, it privileges homesteaders who have entered upon odd-numbered sections of land-grant lands of the Northern Pacific Railway Co. to obtain patents to those lands, and it grants, in turn, to the Northern Pacific Railway Co. the right to accept lieu lands. My objection is not only to the fact that I do not wish to have the Government incur an obligation, so far as the Northern Pacific Railway Co. is concerned, but I also want to know whether the lieu lands that might be obtained would not be of greater value than the land which the company surrenders? There is nothing in this bill which says they shall be of approximately the same value, which is the language generally used when lieu lands are accepted.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], who is very familiar with this, as is also the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Johnson]?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Speaker, this is simply an amendment to a law that is already on the statute book covering the same kind of cases. When that law was passed it ran down to a certain date, and it was supposed that all those lands would be surveyed soon after that time; but it has run on now for many years, and the lands have not been surveyed. A great many settlers have gone on the land, and they are simply asking for the relief that other settlers have had who have gone on lands under the same conditions in the past.

Mr. STAFFORD. What are the rights of the Northern Pacific Railway Co. to these unsurveyed lands? Here you purpose to take away the rights of the original grantee, the Northern Pacific Railway Co., without their consent or approval, upon condition that they will be privileged to accept other lands.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Their rights are just the same as they were when the other law was passed which they have been acting under, and this simply amends that act by extending

Mr. STAFFORD. Is not the gentleman in error on that?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not think I am.
Mr. STAFFORD. Did not the other law merely give to those who had entered upon the unsurveyed lands the right to retain them in case the Northern Pacific Railway Co. approved of the transaction and took the lieu lands in exchange?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It all hinges on the decision in the Violette case. The suggestion of amendatory legislation was made to correct what was believed to be a failure in the original act to provide adequate protection for the settler, subsequent to January 1, 1898, on unsurveyed lands, a condition emphasized in the decision in the case of the Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. Violette (36 L. D., 182), reaffirmed in the case of Arthur Gilfeather October 29, 1914.

Mr. STAFFORD. Is it not a fact that the Northern Pacific Railway Co. have given notice to the department that they intend to press a claim in the Court of Claims if this law is passed and their rights are attempted to be crippled in this matter?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The department of the Interior suggests the legislation. Here are unsurveyed lands, which are out of taxation and subject, as other lands are, to lieu land scrip. This proposed legislation is for the protection of 34 settlers, all that can be found who so settled on lands in the railroad grant, thinking that they had the same rights as all others under the passage of the act to which my colleague [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] refers, but without rights, since the decision in the Violette land case.

Mr. STAFFORD. I have no objection, so far as the provision relating to the settlers is concerned, provided it does not involve the Government. This action is to be taken, as far as I have seen, and I have read everything submitted to me in the matter, without the approval of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co.

tive

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It gives the settlers an equity in the matter.

Mr. MANN. Does not the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. have the right to relinquish these lands and take new lands? Mr. STAFFORD. Yes; but it must be done on their initia-

Mr. MANN. They can take the same lieu lands in one case as they could in the other; they do not get any rights against the Government.

Mr. STAFFORD. No; not if they do it voluntarily, because they are estopped from making any claim against the Government.

Mr. MANN. They would not have any claim against the Government if they took the lieu lands.
Mr. STAFFORD. No; not if they took the lieu lands.
Mr. MANN. And if they do not take them they will never get anything

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Northern Pacific Railroad Co. has had every opportunity to have these lands surveyed since 1884.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, yes; but we have not been in a position to survey all the lands of the United States.

Mr. MANN. They would not have any claim against the Government anyway Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The title is in the Government.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The title has not passed. Mr. STAFFORD. The title has not passed. The right

The right has been granted to them under the original land grant.

Mr. MANN. There are many cases where under the original land grant they took lieu lands and do take them; if they do not take them they do not get anything.

Mr. DILL. When the other bill was passed they did not have any claim against the United States.

Mr. STAFFORD. No; but the land department has construed that law that it did not extend to the settlers any rights except with the approval of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. That was the decision in the Violette case.

Mr. Speaker, upon the statement made by the gentleman from Illinois I hardly think I will press my objection further if the gentleman agrees to insert after the word "lands," in line 5, the words "of approximately equal value."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will not object to that; I do not think it means anything.

Mr. STAFFORD. I think it does mean something from the way that the public domain has been raided under these lieu

Mr. FERRIS. I have no objection to that.

Mr. STAFFORD. Then, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objec-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

An act (S. 1792) for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands. An act (8. 1792) for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands. Be it enacted, etc., That where, prior to July 1, 1913, the whole or any part of an odd-numbered section within the primary limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railway Co., within the State of Washington, to which the right of the grantee or its lawful successor is claimed to have attached by definite location, has been settled upon in good faith while unsurveyed, by any qualified settler, the same shall be subject to all the provisions of the act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., pp. 620-622), relating to lands in said primary limits so settled upon prior to January 1, 1898, and said act is hereby amended accordingly: Provided, That upon the relinquishment by said railway company of any of the lands so settled upon the selection of any lieu lands by said company shall be confined to the State of Washington.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend by inserting, after the word "lands," line 5, page 2, the words "of approximately equal value."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 2, line 5, by inserting, after the word "lands," the words of approximately equal value."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Johnson of Washington, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table. DISPOSITION OF LAND IN PORT ANGELES, WASH.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 5900, an act providing for the disposal of certain land in block 69 in the city of Port Angeles, State of Washington.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be stricken from the calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 5788) to create two additional associate justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, two additional associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia; that said additional associates justices shall have the same power, authority, and jurisdiction as now or hereafter may be exercised by any of the associate justices of the said supreme court and shall be entitled to receive the same salary, payable in the same manner.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Webb, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTORS AT TAMPA, FLA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 17605) to amend the first and seventh paragraphs of section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of April 9, 1900.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, what will this board of local inspectors cost the Government?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I can not say; but 1 am safe in saying that the amount saved in the passage of the bill will be considerable. My recollection is that there are two inspectors, and they are paid $1,500 or $2,000 a year.

Mr. STAFFORD. Sixteen hundred dollars, I believe, under

Mr. MANN. The statute does not fix any salary except at this particular place, does it?

Mr. STAFFORD. At this particular place it would be $1,600.

Mr. MANN. Are there two or three inspectors?

Mr. STAFFORD. Two.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute and consider the bill S. 8079, a similar bill.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. WILSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire of my colleague if this changes the headquarters from Apalachicola of the present local in-

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I will say that it does not change the headquarters of the inspection district of which Apalachicola is the headquarters, and was not intended to do so.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to considering this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I now ask unanimous con-sent that Senate bill 8079 be considered in lieu of this, which bill is on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to consider Senate bill 8079, of like tenor, in place of the House bill. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Let us have the Senate bill reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first and seventh paragraphs of section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of April 9, 1906, be amended by inserting after the words "Jacksonville, Fla.," in each paragraph, the words "Tampa, Fla."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question in on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The House bill was laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Sparkman, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

FORT PECK INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we just passed Senate bill 5612, providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of lands within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont., and we struck out section 2. As this is a Senate bill the Clerk would not have authority to renumber the sections. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the third reading and passage of the bill be vacated, and that an amendment be agreed to to strike out the numeral "3" after the word "Sec." and inserting the number "2" in lieu thereof, and then that the bill be considered as read a third time and passed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to vacate the proceedings on the bill S. 5612, back to the amending stage. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend, in line 24, page 2, by striking out after the word "Sec." the numeral "3" and inserting in lieu thereof the numeral "2."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill as amended.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FOOD PRODUCTS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was H. Res. 389, directing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate and report to the House of Representatives the facts relating to the production, marketing, and distribution of food products in the United States, together with any violations of the antitrust laws in connection therewith, and recommendations for greater economy and efficiency in the marketing of food products and the punishment and prevention of contention in the princes thereof of extortion in the prices thereof.
The SPEAKER, Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I think this has been taken care of.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this is covered by an order which the President has made upon the Federal Trade Commission, but it does not seem to me that that militates against the passage of this resolution. It is rather an argument

Mr. MANN.

Mr. MANN. It seems to me to be the other way. Mr. BORLAND. If the President agrees that the investigation ought to be made, it seems to me that the House can well . agree to it, too.

Mr. MANN. I do not see any reason for duplicating the work.

Mr. BORLAND. That is not duplicating.

Mr. MANN. The President has already directed that the investigation be made.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman permit me to ask unanimous consent that the resolution remain on the calendar?

Mr. MANN. Let it go to the foot of the calendar. Mr. BORLAND. Does the gentleman object—

Mr. AUSTIN. I do not object to the bill going to the foot of the calendar.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the bill will go to the foot of the calendar.

Mr. BORLAND. I am afraid that that means that it will not be reached this session.

There was no objection.

FISH-CULTURAL STATION, KLAMATH RIVER, CAL.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11245) to authorize the establishment of an auxiliary or field fish-cultural station on the Klamath River, in the State of California.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. MANN. I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill will be stricken from the calendar.

ADDITIONAL DISTRICT JUDGE FOR TEXAS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 5450) to amend section 108, chapter 5, of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary, approved March 3, 1911."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill must be considered in connection with another bill upon the Unanimous Consent Calendar providing for a new division of the northern judicial district of Texas, H. R. 19299. It is surprising that the Attorney General, though he comes from the State of Texas, virtually makes an adverse report upon the bill providing for either an additional judge to relieve the conditions in the western district or to create a new dis-

Certainly he does not make a favorable report as to these proposals. As to the bill that provides for a new division, he does make an adverse report upon it, for he says in his letter to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate:

It does not occur to me that new courts at any one of these three points are especially needed. As distances go in Texas, Lubbock, Wichita Falls, and Brownwood are fairly close to other points whose terms of court have already been established.

It was my idea that there was an equal need of relief in the northern district of Texas as in the western district of Texas. I can not agree with the proponents of this bill, who have favored me with a large amount of data of the conditions prevailing there, that the conditions in the western district are so exceptional. While there has been a large increase of criminal cases and bankruptcy cases, which we all know as far as bankruptcy cases are concerned do not require the attention of the court, as far as civil cases are concerned there has only been an increase of 20 in new suits introduced some 8 or 10 years ago, but I think the report shows a rather exceptional condition prevailing so far as the trial of persons in El Paso is concerned, a distance of 700 miles from Austin, I believe, and from Dallas.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Has the gentleman also taken into consideration that there is more business at El Paso than at any other point?

Mr. STAFFORD. That is a small section, largely criminal suits arising out of conditions on the border, merely ephemeral, and will pass away ultimately.

Mr. GARNER. If the gentleman will permit, let me say I agree with the gentleman from Wisconsin that the northern district does need relief. The truth of the business is that Judge Maxey and Judge Meeks both have endangered their lives, if not put themselves on the very verge of invalidism, on account of the amount of work they have had to do in the last six or eight years in those two districts. Now, I agree with the gentleman that the northern district should have relief, just as the western district; and I would like to see this bill amended so that, if possible, the northern district would have the same relief as the western district.

Mr. STAFFORD. I had intended to frame an amendment so as to provide that this additional judge could be used in the northern district as well, but on referring to the Judicial Code I find that there is an express provision which enables the circuit justice to assign a district judge of any district to work in another district where his services are needed. I am withdrawing my opposition to this bill largely with the idea that if it is passed this additional judge will not merely look after the little work that arises in El Paso, because the Attorney General says that there is not enough work there to engage the attention of a judge, but that the circuit justice there will assign this new judge to the relief of the judge of the western district and also of the northern district. Sooner or later, when the population increases down there, there will be need for the creation of a new district.

Mr. GARNER. May I say to the gentleman, the attorneys interested in this matter have already looked after that matter by preparing a statement to the presiding judge of the circuit court as to the conditions of these various courts that this judge may be assigned to the place where there is greatest need on account of the work.

Mr. STAFFORD. As the gentleman knows, the showing made from the report of the Attorney General that the conditions in the northern district are almost identical as the western in regard to work

Mr. GARNER. Undoubtedly.
Mr. STAFFORD. Undoubtedly the judge may be assigned to the relief of conditions in both districts. Mr. Speaker, I with-draw the reservation of objection and ask unanimous consent, or some one may ask unanimous consent, that the substitute be read in lieu of the House bill.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the substitute be read in lieu of the House bill and that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. First, is there objection to the consideration of this bill at all? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. Now, the gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GARNER. And that the substitute be read in lieu of the original bill.

The SPEAKER. And that the substitute be considered in lieu of the House bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint an additional judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Texas, who shall possess the same powers, perform the same duties, and receive the same compensation and allowance as the present judge of said district, and whose official place of residence shall be maintained at El Paso until otherwise provided by law.

The substitute was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for an additional judge in the State of Texas."

On motion of Mr. Garner, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY CO.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 16922) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and convey to the Great Northern Railway Co. certain lands in the State of Montana for division terminal yards and other railway purposes, and for other pur-

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The hair hears none. This bill is on the Union Calendar. Chair hears none.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. EVANS. I ask that the bill S. 7796 be taken from the Speaker's table and substituted for this bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent to take the Senate bill of similar tenor from the Speaker's table and consider that in lieu of the House bill.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, is the Senate bill ist the same?

I understand it is verbatim.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. MANN. Mr. EVANS. Including the amendment to section 4?

I can not say positively. I had that assurance from the Secretary. My bill was introduced first.

Mr. MANN. I will not object to the consideration, but I want to hear whether it is the same bill or not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Garner). The Clerk will port the Senate bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 7796) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and convey to the Great Northern Railway Co. certain lands in the State of Montana for division terminal yards and other railway purposes, and for other purposes.

convey to the Great Northern Railway Co. certain lands in the State of Montana for division terminal yards and other railway purposes, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be appraised all those parts of section 32 and 33, township 31 north, range 32 east, and of section 5, township 30 north, range 32 east, Montana meridian, State of Montana, described as follows:

Beginning at the point of intersection of the present right of way of the Great Northern Railway with the east line of the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of said section 33, which point is 75 feet northerly at right angles from the center line of said Great Northern Railway as the same is now constructed across said section 33; thence westerly to a point on the west line of said dearter quarter section 300 feet northerly at right angles from said center line; thence southwesterly parallel with said center line to an intersection with the east and west quarter quarter section line in the southwest quarter of said section 33; thence westerly along said quarter quarter section line to the west line of said section 32; thence westerly along the east and west quarter quarter section line in the south half of said section 32 to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of said section 32; thence southerly along the west line of said quarter quarter section to the north line of section 5, township 30 north, range 32 east; thence westerly along said north line to the northwest corner of said section 5; thence southerly along said west line to the present northerly right-of-way line is 75 feet northerly at right angles from the center line of said railway with the east line of the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of said section 32, said point being 75 feet distant southerly at right angles from said center line; thence northeasterly parallel with said center line to the place of beginning, the southwest quar

isc, 921 feet north of the southwest corner, a distance of 10,422 feet; thence on a curve to the left, with a radius of 11,459.2 feet, a distance of 500 feet; thence southwesterly, tangent to said curve, 511.4 feet to the west line of said section 5 at a point 825.5 feet south of the northwest corner.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, further authorized and directed to cause to be appraised all those parts of sections 14 and 15, township 27 north, range 47 east. Montana meridian, in the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, State of Montana, described as follows:

Beginning at the point of intersection of the present right-of-way line of the Great Northern Railway with the east line of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of said section 14, which point is 75 feet distant northerly at right angles from the center line of said Great Northern Railway as the same is now constructed over said section; thence westerly in a straight line to a point on the west line of said quarter quarter section which is 275 feet distant northerly at right angles from said center line; thence southwesterly parallel with said center line to an intersection with the south line of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of said section 14; thence westerly along said south line to the west line of said section 14; thence westerly along the east and west quarter quarter section line in the northhalf of said section 15, to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter thalf of said section 15, to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter quarter section line in the northhalf of said section 15, to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter quarter section line in the northhalf of said section 15, to the northwest line of said variety at right angles from the care in the section 15 thence south section 15, thence south and the said center line of said railway as the same is now constructed; thence northeasterly parallel with said center line t project. The conveyances for the lands described above in sections 1 and 2 shall reserve to the United States and its successors in interest right of way for cauals or ditches heretofore or hereafter constructed thereon, and the railway company shall construct at its own expense any crossings of said canals or ditches which may be necessary for its purposes, and such crossings shall be built and maintained in such a manner as not to interfere with the operations of said canals or ditches by the United States or its successors in interest, and such conveyances shall be subject to any prior valid rights of way.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

By unanimous consent the corresponding House bill (H. R. 16922) was ordered to lie on the table.

MOUNT M'KINLEY NATIONAL PARK.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 5716) to establish the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to the general purpose of the bill, but I think there should be some amendment.

Mr. McCLINTIC. At the suggestion of one of the Members I have prepared an amendment which will limit the amount to be appropriated in any one year, and fixing it so that no money shall be appropriated except by a direct legislative act.

Mr. STAFFORD. On the amount? Mr. McCLINTIC. It is the same as It is the same amendment that is included in the other park bills. This amendment was taken from the Rocky Mountain Park bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Where does the gentleman propose to in-

Mr. McCLINTIC. I will say this suggestion was made by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot], and this amendment was submitted to him. It reads:

Provided, That no appropriation for the maintenance of said park in excess of $10,000 annually shall be made unless the sum shall be first expressly authorized by law.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does that include the funds that will arise from the rental of the privileges and the like in the park, which under the provisions of this bill are to be utilized for the maintenance of the park?

Mr. McCLINTIC. I understand that all funds derived from the park are to be paid into the Treasury.

Mr. STAFFORD. Not under the wording of this bill. That is one of the amendments I propose to offer. I want to know whether it would meet the approval of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I do not think there would be any objection to that.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the last sentence of section 7, instead of having the funds derived from leases or other privileges to be utilized for the continuous use of the pork, to have them turned into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I am sure that will be satisfactory.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I did not hear the colloquy between the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] and the gentleman in charge of the bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Mc-

CLINTIC] stated he proposed to offer an amendment so that not more than $10,000 should be utilized.

Mr. MONDELL. I heard that, but with regard to the provisions relative to the provisions in lines 11 and 13, page 4.

Mr. STAFFORD. My idea was to offer an amendment so as to have all those proceeds turned into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

Mr. MONDELL. Would it not be a better amendment to strike out that part of the paragraph?

Mr. STAFFORD. What provision would be made, then, as to the proceeds from leases and other sources of revenues?

Mr. MONDELL. Then the proceeds would flow into the Treasury

Mr. McCLINTIC. Will that be satisfactory to you?

Mr. STAFFORD. Entirely satisfactory

Now, another thing: Does not the gentleman think, so far as the privileges of prospectors and hunters in the park are con-

the privileges of prospectors and futners in the park are con-cerned, that those privileges should be under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe?

Mr. McCLINTIC. I might answer that by saying that this matter was thoroughly considered by the Secretary of the Interior and also the Department of Agriculture. In the House bill originally some reference was made to that particular provision, but afterwards the Secretary of the Interior withdrew his recommendation along that line and allowed the Senate bill to go through with his full recommendation and approval.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does not the gentleman think, regardless of the attitude of the Secretary of the Interior in that par-ticular, that we should vest in the Secretary of the Interior certain powers to restrain prospectors and miners in the amount of game that they are privileged to kill? Those privileges ought to be under the regulation of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. McCLINTIC. The Secretary of the Interior thought that under the provisions of this act that the provision was sufficiently safeguarded, and he would have sufficient jurisdiction to take care of game in the Territory. But I would like to ask the Delegate from Alaska in regard to that.

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not find any such jurisdiction. I do not think there would be anything wrong in inserting "under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe." We are providing an organic act for this park and occasion may arise when the Secretary of the Interior may think it necessary to proscribe the shooting of game ad libitum by prospectors there.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. MONDELL. Reserving the right to object—
Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman from Oklahoma just suggested he would like to have the opinion of the Delegate from Alaska as to the suggestion made that the privileges of the miners and prospectors so far as hunting without limitation and for their actual necessities is concerned, should be restricted under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Yes; I do not think that ought to be in there.

Mr. STAFFORD. The restriction should not be in?
Mr. WICKERSHAM. I do not think that amendment should be made. I understand there is a general park law which gives him that right without putting it in here.

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not recall any such provision as would extend that.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. We thrashed that out in the committee several times. There are good reasons why it should not be

Mr. STAFFORD. There is one other matter that I wish to call attention to, and then I will subside, so far as this bill is concerned. There is awkward phraseology found in section 5that the said park shall be under the executive control of the Secretary of the Interior, and it shall be the duty of said executive authority." Why not say just "he"?

Mr. McCLINTIC. This is the language of the Senate bill as it passed that body.

Mr. STAFFORD. That does not give it more right to be exempt from criticism than if it were a House bill.

Mr. McCLINTIC. If the phraseology is wrong it ought to be corrected.

Mr. STAFFORD. I would like to inquire of the gentleman as to his opinion. It seems to me to be awkward. It says: "It shall be the duty of the said executive authority." Why not say "he"? It refers, I am sure, to the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I am sure there will be no objection to any amendment that will perfect the section.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention to section 4, at the bottom of page 3, which provides that the mineral land laws of the United States are hereby extended to lands included in the park. I understand the situation is this, that the mineral laws that apply to Alaska—and they are somewhat different from the general land laws—now apply to lands in the park. What is desired, as I understand, is that nothing in this bill shall modify or change that situation. Now, my information is that there is some question as to what we might do if we enacted into law the language of the bill, because the mineral laws of the United States, some of them, do not apply to any part of Alaska.

I thought the gentleman would not have any objection, possibly, to striking out that language and inserting something like this: "Nothing in this act shall in any way modify or affect the mineral laws now applicable to the lands in said park." That leaves them as they are.

Mr. McCLINTIC. We would be very glad to accept that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, the gentleman said he would offer an amendment providing that not more than $5,000 a year could be appropriated for the support of this park. I want to say I propose to antagonize such an amendment, if it comes upon the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wish to say that that amendment has been adopted in all the park bills recently passed. Unless we shall have an understanding that that amendment will be agreed to, I shall be compelled to object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. LENROOT. What does the gentleman from Oklahoma say in regard to that matter?

Mr. McCLINTIC. I agree that the amendment shall be presented, and we will support the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in Committee of

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 5716) to establish the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (8, 5716) to establish the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska.

Be it enacted, etc., That the tract of land in the Territory of Alaska particularly described by and included within the metes and bounds, to wit: Beginning at a point as shown on Plate III, reconnoissance map of the Mount McKinley region, Alaska, prepared in the Geological Survey, edition of 1911, said point being at the summit of a hill between two forks of the headwaters of the Toklar River, approximate latitude 63° 47′, longitude 150° 20′; thence south 66° 20′ west 10 miles; thence south 68° west 60 miles; thence in a southeasterly direction approximately 28 miles to the summit of Mount Russell; thence in a northeasterly direction approximately 89 miles to a point 25 miles due south of a point due east of the point of beginning; thence due north 25 miles to said point; thence due west 28 miles to the point of beginning, is hereby reserved and withdrawd Sim and call tract is dedicated and set apart as a public park for the benefit and enjoyment of the people, under the name of the Mount McKinley National Park.

Sec. 2. That nothing herein contained shall affect any valid existing claim, location, or entry under the land laws of the United States, whether for homestead, mineral, right of way, or any other purposes whatsoever, or shall affect the rights of any such claimant, locator, or entryman to the full use and enjoyment of his land.

Sec. 3. That whenever consistent with the primary purposes of the park the act of February 15, 1901, applicable to the location of rights of way in certain national parks and national forests for irrigation and other purposes, shall be and remain applicable to the lands included within the park.

Sec. 5. That the said park shall be under the executive control of the Secretary of the Interior, and it shall be the duty of the said executive authority, as soon as practicable, to make and publish such rules and regulations not inconsistent with the laws of the

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McClintic: Page 4, line 14, after the word "park," insert the words "Provided, That no appropriation for the maintenance of said park in excess of $10,000 annually shall be made unless the same shall have been expressly authorized by law."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman desire recognition on the amendment?

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker-

Mr. MANN. I suggest that the gentleman from Oklahoma, who did not take the floor until the Chair put the question, can not go on now. However, I am willing to yield to him.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Oklahoma was on his feet.

Mr. McCLINTIC. I did not yield the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I desire to state that in offering this amendment we are only following a precedent that has been established in the creation of all the late parks. I believe in the bill creating the Rocky Mountain Park and many others; they include this provision, which limits the amount to be expended in one year; and that being the case and having agreed with the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] that this amendment should be offered, I believe that the same should be adopted, as it will be in keeping with the policy that has already been established by the House. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I very much doubt the propriety of putting this limitation into these park bills. I can appreciate, however, the fact that probably more national parks will be created, since it is easy to put this proposition into the bills, than would be created if this sort of a proposition did not go into the bill.

We passed the Rocky Mountain National Park bill a few years ago. Well, you can not do anything with the Rocky Mountain National Park with $10,000 a year. Now we propose to create the Mount McKinley National Park, where Mount McKinley is. I believe Mount McKinley is the highest mountain on the North American Continent. The Alaskan Railroad will run not a great distance from it when it is completed, and that will not be very long, and everybody who goes to Alaska visiting will probably go to this national park, which has the most imposing scenery that can be found on the western continent outside of the Andes Mountains, and from my reading I believe it is more imposing than anything in the Andes Mountains.

Mount McKinley is said to be the most imposing mountain in the world. Because the ascent to the top is not gradual, by foothills, the distance of the mountain up in the air from the surrounding country is greater, I believe, than that of any other mountain in the world. Necessarily a good many people will go there. I am told there are great herds of caribou there and considerable herds of mountain sheep and some other wild animals. Necessarily if the park is set aside and anything is done with it, there must be some trails constructed and some guards or watchmen there. I doubt very much whether in the course of a year or two $10,000 will be enough. Of course, I would rather pass the bill, even with the provision that there shall be no money spent, just so the park is set aside, than not to have it set aside at all. Though for the life of me, since I first read Dr. Cook's Ascent of Mount McKinley--which he never made, but a book which is probably the most graphic description of that territory that can be found anywhere-I have doubted whether anybody else could make any use of any of the icebergs or the other mountainous country included in this bill.

I do not believe it is desirable to make such limitations a fixed habit.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the expenditure of any large sums of money on new national parks in the present condition of the Federal Treasury; but I am in favor of the creation at this time of national parks containing great scenic beauty or natural curiosities. I believe that if you strike out this limitation there will not be many more park bills re-ported from the Public Lands Committee; but they ought to be reported, not with the idea of immediate use, but to set them aside so that they will not go into private ownership, and that later on they may be developed. We now have, I believe, some 14 national parks. The bills creating the latest two have contained the limitation that is now proposed by this amendment. In the very nature of things the amount that Congress will annually appropriate for the development of parks is limited. If you strike out all limitation, and we appropriate half a million dollars a year to be divided among 14 or 16 national parks, it will amount to nothing so far as actual utility is concerned, and that money should be confined to four or five national parks until they are developed, and begin to gain some revenue such as we are now getting from the Yellowstone, and such as we are now getting from the Yosemite; but they should not be scattered through all the parks of this country. At the same time we ought to preserve them now for future generations, before a portion of them may get into private ownership. Therefore I am very much in favor of this amendment. It ought to be adopted, and so far as Alaska is concerned, by the time the Alaskan Railway is completed, by the time that tourist travel shall go there in any large numbers, will be time enough for Congress to remove the limitation that ought to be adopted by this amendment.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, I think generally there ought to be limitations of this kind upon these park bills. a member of the Committee on the Public Lands, I always favor these limitations with respect to expenditures on the parks of this country, generally, but I do think such a limitation in this bill is a mistake, not because the lack of it will tend in any way to destroy the great beauties of that park, but it will tend to leave open to spoliation the herds of wild game which are now within its boundaries. There is good reason for some stringent measures to be taken at this time for the protection of the game in the park. It embraces the highlands around Mount McKinley. All of it is above timber line, and all is substantially within the region of constant snow. Great glaciers are embraced within its boundaries. But the great game animals in that region resort to this park and to the high valleys around it for protection, especially in the summer time. Thousands of caribou, many moose, and herds of sheep and other wild animals are found there. The Government railroad is now being constructed along the east line of the park. Thousands of people are going in there soon, and too many will carry a gun Thousands of and be looking constantly for game; and if something is not done pretty soon for the protection of this game, it will all be killed off. So, I say again, I think now is the time to make a good appropriation for the protection of the game in the park. The great scenic beauties of the park do not need an appropriation for their protection, but the game there does need it, and needs it now.

Mr. LENROOT. Does not the gentleman think an appropriation of $10,000 a year for the protection of game in one single park is a fairly liberal appropriation?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. It may be sufficient. I am only stating the facts. The park itself is very large, and it is approached by the game upon all sides, so that considerable money will have to be spent in protecting the game if you want it protected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GARNER). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma

[Mr. McCLINTIC].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MONDELL. I move to strike out section 4 and to insert the language which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wyoming offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. MONDELL: Page 3, strike out all of section 4 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 4. Nothing in this act shall in any way modify or affect the mineral-land laws now applicable to lands in the said park."

Mr. McCLINTIC. I accept the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out in section 7 all after the word "park," down to the end of the paragraph, excepting the proviso just adopted by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. STAFFORD: Page 4, line 10, following the word "park," strike out the following language:

"The proceeds of leases and other revenues that may be derived from any source connected with said park shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in the administration, maintenance, and improvement of the park."

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I think those words ought to go out.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF MINE OWNERS IN FEDERAL SERVICE.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 18826) to relieve the owners of mining claims who have been mustered into the service of the United States as officers or enlisted men of the Organized Militia or National Guard from performing assessment work during the term of such service.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether he is quite certain that the bill as it now reads would not relieve indefinitely the officers and men of the National Guard from the necessity of doing assessment work on mining claims?

Mr. HAYDEN, I do not think so. The men are mustered into the service of the United States and mustered out again just as some of the National Guard of the District of Columbia have been within the past few days.

Mr. MONDELL. On a hurried reading of the bill I do not see anything providing that it shall only apply to the time they are enlisted. It applies after they have been mustered into the service of the United States. If that point in an amendment was made limiting it-

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will permit me, the same question arose in my mind, and it may be that it is a valid objection. However, on page 2, line 2, it reads:

So that no mining claim or any part thereof owned by such person which has been regularly located and recorded shall be subject to forfeiture for nonperformance of the annual assessments until six months after such owner is mustered out of the service or until six months after his death in the service.

reached the conclusion that that was a limitation.

Mr. MONDELL. It is a limitation, and yet it is rather an indefinite one, when you take into consideration the fact that this question of relief from the necessity of doing assessment work is likely to be taken into the courts.

Mr. MANN. I have not doubt what the court would determine about it, but what the department would do about it I am not so certain.

Mr. MONDELL. If the gentleman is quite sure that a court would construe that language to the effect that the relief was only during the service I will make no objection.

Mr. HAYDEN. It is only intended as such.
Mr. MONDELL. It is evident, however, that the relief is not only during the service but for a period subsequent-

Mr. HAYDEN. For six months.

Mr. MONDELL. That is perhaps all right.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of section 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which require that on each mining claim located after the 10th day of May, 1872, and until patent has been issued therefor, not less than $100 worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year shall not apply to claims or parts of claims owned by officers or enlisted men of the Organized Militia or the National Guard who have been mustered into the service of the United States, so that no mining claim, or any part thereof, owned by such person which has been regularly located and recorded shall be subject to forfeiture for nonperformance of the annual assessments until six months after such owner is mustered out of the service or until six months after his death in the service: Provided, That the claimant of any mining location, in order to obtain the benefits of this act, shall file, or cause to be filed, in the office where the location notice or certificate is recorded, within 90 days from and after the passage and approval of this act, a notice of his muster into the service of the United States, and of his desire to hold said mining claim under this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

NEW DIVISION OF THE NORTHERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19299) to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for terms of court at Wichita Falls, Tex., and for a clerk of said court, and for other purposes

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider the Senate bill S. 7644, a similar bill to the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to consider a similar Senate bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, the Senate bill does not contain the amendment that the committee offered to the House bill.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Texas where did I get the impression that there was a Federal building at Wichita Falls?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. There is none and never has been one at Wichita Falls.

Mr. STAFFORD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Texas whether he intends to offer the committee amendment in the House bill to the Senate bill if the Senate bill is considered?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The bills are identical, except that the amendment was offered to the House bill that Wichita Falls should furnish a room to hold the court.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman from Texas offer that amendment to the Senate bill?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read Senate bill 7644, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the counties of Archer, Baylor, Clay, Cottle, Foard, Montague, King, Knox, Wiehlta, Wilbarger, and Young shall constitute a division of the northern judicial district of Texas.

SEC. 2. That terms of the district court of the United States for the said northern district of Texas shall be held twice each year at the city of Wichita Ealis, in Wichita County, on the fourth Monday in March and the third Monday in November. The clerk of the court for the northern district of Texas shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Wichita Falls, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the Senate bill, on page 2, line 4, after the word "court," by adding thereto the following:

"Provided, That suitable accommodations for holding court at Wichita Falls shall be provided by the county or municipal authorities without expense to the United States."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Stephens of Texas, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The bill H. R. 19299 was laid on the table.

TRANSFER OF LAND AT FOREST GROVE, OREG., TO THE UNITED STATES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill H. R. 13166, authorizing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to transfer fractional block 6, of Naylor's addition, Forest Grove, Oreg., to the Department of Agriculture, for the use of the Bureau of Entomology.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire of the author of the bill what is the need of this school site being transferred to the Bureau of Entomology? There is no report here from the Agricultural Department.

Mr, HAWLEY. There were some statements about it in the apers submitted favorable to the action proposed in the bill. The situation is this: The land was transferred to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to be located at Forest Grove, many years ago, but the school was removed to Chemawa, near Salem, and the lands have been unused by the school for a long time. They continued out of such use probably 25 years. The Bureau of Entomology in the Department of Agriculture has an experiment station located there, which has charge of all the experiments connected with the ravages of pests and insects affecting forage and other crops in the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. STAFFORD. The station is at present in existence at this place?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes; and they are using these lands for that

Mr. STAFFORD. I wish to know whether it was the establishment of a new station?

Mr. HAWLEY. No; it has been there established three or four years

Mr. STAFFORD. And it is to continue a work already in progress

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. What is the value of this land?
Mr. HAWLEY. I have no idea. It is not a valuable tract; it is a small tract, less than an acre, I think.

Mr. MANN. What would the Bureau of Entomology do with

Mr. HAWLEY. They plant clover and other crops on the land that are affected by pests, and they make experiments and study the life history of the pests, and instead of having to go out to the fields where the pests are infesting the crops they can make these studies on this tract.

We will have to pay for this land, will we not? Mr. HAWLEY. No. It was given to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in the Department of the Interior.

Mr. MANN. It Mr. HAWLEY. It was deeded to him as a trustee, was it not? Y. Yes; as I recall.

Mr. MANN. Will we not have to pay for the land?

Mr. HAWLEY. No.

Mr. MANN. Plainly we will, unless the gentleman has more information than is contained in the report:

* * The land involved at Forest Grove was purchased with funds contributed by persons interested in the Indians' welfare and deeded to the "Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the time being, as trustee for the Forest Grove Indian Training School, and to his successors in office." As the land at Forest Grove is not in use, the Indian school now being located at Salem, and as Congress makes gratuity appropriations for the support of the school at the latter place, I see no objection to the enactment. * *

But if the gentleman stays in Congress for two years more he will be offering a bill to send the claim of these Indians to the Court of Claims to find out what this land is worth, so as to reimburse them.

Mr. HAWLEY. The gentleman from Oregon would introduce no such bill, because the land was donated by public-spirited no such bill, because the land was donated by public-spirited citizens for the benefit of the Indian school, and when the Indian school was removed gratuity appropriations were made and are now being made for the purpose of supporting the school. The people who donated the land told me they would like to have it now used for this station.

Mr. MANN. Let me give the gentleman one instance, and then I will not say anything more. Not long ago we referred a matter to the Court of Claims, and the Court of Claims found that we owed the Cherokee or some other tribe of Indians $1,000,000 and more as of 1838—everybody dead and gone who knew anything about it—upon which we are paying 5 per cent interest since 1838, and some day we will pay for this land and 5 per cent interest.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think not. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.
Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.. That the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized and directed to transfer all right, title, and interest in fractional block 6 of Naylor's addition to the city of Forest Grove, in Oregon, to the Secretary of Agriculture, for the use of the Bureau of Entomology.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 7, strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the words "United States of America."

Page 2, line 1, after the word "Entomology," insert the words "Department of Agriculture."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill authorizing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to transfer fractional block 6 of Naylor's addition, Forest Grove, Oreg., to the United States of America, for the use of the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture."

On motion of Mr. HAWLEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FITZGERALD, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 20967) making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying report (No. 1508), ordered printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming reserves all points of order on the bill.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS IN WYOMING.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4282) to permit the State of Wyoming to relinquish to the United States lands heretofore selected and select other lands from the public domain in lieu thereof.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.
Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman object to allowing the bill to remain on the Unanimous Consent Calendar? Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has the right to put

Mr. MONDELL. I hope that the gentleman will not object to its remaining on the calendar. It is a very important piece of legislation, and I hope I may persuade him that it ought to pass.

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman any request to make? Mr. MANN. The gentleman can place it upon the calendar.

Mr. MONDELL. It will go to the foot of the calendar.
Mr. MANN. I think it ought to go to the foot of the calendar. I think we will be able to run through the calendar before the end of the session.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

AIDS TO NAVIGATION.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19067) to authorize aids to navigation and for other works in the Lighthouse Service, and for other pur-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COX. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman willing to reserve that objection?

I will reserve it for a moment, but I am going to Mr. COX. object to it.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to state this is the department's bill authorizing such aids to navigation as appear to be necessary to the service. They are not appropriations, but merely authorizations, a very important bill, and should pass in my judgment and in the judgment of the committee. The department is very anxious it should be considered, and I do not think the gentleman ought to object to it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. COX. I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 5783) to provide for the establishment of a national employment bureau in the Department of Labor.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE FOR MONTANA.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 789) providing for an additional judge for the district of Montana.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. - Is there objection? Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER. The bill is stricken from the calendar,

Mr. EVANS, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Illinois reserve his objection and let the bill remain on the calendar? Mr. MANN. The gentleman can put it on the calendar, where it will go in the proper place. I will say, frankly, I think we ought some way at some time to go clear through the Unanimous Consent Calendar. Nearly every time when one of the old bills is considered on the calendar and objection is made, the gentleman in charge of it wants to have the objection reserved and to make a speech on it. The gentleman can put his bill on the calendar again: he is not denied that right.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, I desired to reserve the right to object to this bill for the purpose of getting some information. Mr. MANN. I think we ought to go on to the next bill, so I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

DESERT-LAND ENTRIES.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 1068) relating to desert-land entries. The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none,

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the right to make a desert-land entry shall not be denied to any applicant therefor who has already made an enlarged-homestead entry of 320 acres: Provided, That said applicant is a duly qualified entryman and the whole area to be acquired as an enlarged-homestead entry and under the provisions of this act does not exceed 480 acres.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

SAFETY OF EMPLOYEES AND TRAVELERS UPON RAILROADS.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15950) to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911.

The Clerk read the title of the bill The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I object. The SPEAKER. The bill is stricken from the calendar.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY, RHODE ISLAND.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 10110) to increase the salary of the United States district attorney for the district of Rhode Island.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the salary of the United States district attorney for the district of Rhode Island shall be at the rate of $5,000 a year.

The committee amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out, in line 5, the figures "$5,000" and insert in lieu thereof $3,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL RESOURCES OF THE PUBLIC DOMAIN.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was H. Res. 418, authorizing certain members of the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives to make investigations relative to national resources of the public domain.

The Clerk read the title of the House resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object

Mr. MANN. I want to ask a question. Did the gentleman ascertain whether a simple resolution of this sort would have any effect or not?

Mr. FERRIS. I did take it up with the Committee on Accounts after talking to the gentleman from Illinois, and they said there were two precedents where it was held to be sufficient; one of them was the half-and-half investigation and one other that-

Mr. MANN. That this House can by resolution provide for expenditure of the contingent fund after the final adjournment of Congress?

Mr. FERRIS. I remember the suggestion of the gentleman-

Mr. MANN. Or was the other in vacation?

Mr. FERRIS. The other was in vacation, just as this is. Mr. MANN. That is between sessions; that is quite a different

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, no; it carried on over to the succeeding Congress. It is an identical case with this.

Mr. MANN. After the final adjournment of Congress?

Mr. FERRIS. After Congress had adjourned. suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois. I followed his suggestion and consulted the chairman of the Accounts Committee. I feel sure the resolution will accomplish it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I object.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman from Wisconsin reserve the right to object for a moment?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. No; I think I will object. The SPEAKER. The bill is stricken from the calendar.

BADGE OF UNITED DAUGHTERS OF CONFEDERACY OF VIRGINIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19771) to permanently renew patent No. 24917.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BORLAND. Reserving the right to object, can we have the bill reported? The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a certain design patent issued by the United States Patent Office of date November 28, 1895, being patent No. 24917, is renewed and extended for a period of 14 years from and after the passage of this act, with all the rights and privileges pertaining to the same as of the original patent, being generally known as the badge of the United Daughters of the Confederacy of Virginia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. tion is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to renew patent No. 24917."

PURCHASE OF EMBASSY, ETC., BUILDINGS ABROAD.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19122) to amend the act of Congress of February 17, 1911, entitled "An act providing for the purchase or erection, within certain limits of cost, of embassy, legation, and consular buildings abroad.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. I object.
Mr. ROGERS. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. I reserve it.
Mr. ROGERS. This bill was reported unanimously from the Committee on Foreign Affairs after full hearings. It is an exceedingly opportune moment to pass the bill at the present time because of the fact that the American dollar is worth very much more in making purchases abroad of embassies and lega-tions than it would be after the war. The State Department is particularly anxious to have an embassy purchased at Petrograd. There is said to be a discount of 40 per cent on the ruble, so that our money would go almost half again as far as it would in normal financial times.

Mr. MANN. If that is the case we would purchase now practically for $150,000 what would cost in times past $220,000? Mr. ROGERS. The proposition now is to pay $450,000 for a building that would cost about $650,000 in peace times.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman is not considering the condition of the Treasury at the present moment.

Mr. ROGERS. The gentleman understands that this measure involves the expenditure of not an additional dollar beyond that contemplated under the Lowden Act.

Mr. STAFFORD. I understand that we leave the exemption of $150,000

Mr. ROGERS. The Lowden Act limited the expenditures to $150,000 in any one city. The effect of that has been that we have been unable to purchase any embassies or legations in the great capitals of Europe, where we needed them the most.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman said this would not affect the intent of the Lowden Act. I drew the Lowden Act myself. would say it would very materially affect the intent of it.

Mr. ROGERS. I did not say it would not affect the intent of it. I said it would not necessarily involve the United States in any additional financial outlay.

Mr. MANN. It would involve the United States in a great deal more money in the course of years. I am not undertaking to say whether we ought to have it or not. The Lowden Act was the result of years of agitation. It was, of course, a com-promise. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Longworth], before Mr. Lowden was here, had the same proposition pending before the House. The Lowden Act was a compromise. The gentleman's amendment now proposes to lift the lid off entirely, with absolutely no limitation as to the amount the Government may pay at any one place.

Mr. ROGERS. Within the $500,000.

Mr. MANN. Not at all within the $500,000 limit. If you spent only $500,000 in one year, you might take 10 years in paying for the place, and the gentleman's bill now would make in order a provision to pay $2,000,000 for a building at Petro-

Mr. ROGERS. Would the gentleman be willing to tolerate a modification of the language?

Mr. Mann. I am only calling the attention of the gentleman to what would be done. I have not raised any objection myself.

Mr. LONGWORTH. May I have the attention of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford]? Would the gentleman object to the bill if an amendment should be offered to restore the present limit of $150,000 in any one place except in places where the population is in excess of 1,000,000?

Mr. STAFFORD. I thought of putting a limit there of $150,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let me ask the gentleman a question. What is the purpose of this bill? To permit the purchase of an embassy at Petrograd?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Not directly.
Mr. FITZGERALD. I think that is the real purpose of it. They tried to put it in the diplomatic bill, and could not, because it was not authorized by law. Then they tried to put it in the deficiency bill, and now they try to put it on this bill.

Mr. LONGWORTH. If the gentleman will pardon me, this would have nothing to do—

Mr. FITZGERALD. The only place now in the world where that price would prevail is at Petrograd, where they are proposing $485,000.

Mr. LONGWORTH, The gentleman recognizes, of course, that under the Lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the $150,000 that under the lowden bill if we do not raise the lowden bill if we do not raise the low limit we will never have an embassy building in Petrograd, Berlin, Vienna, or Paris.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Why not?
Mr. LONGWORTH. Because it is utterly impossible for us to get suitable land in those cities for that purpose.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is nonsense. You can get it in

New York for that.

Mr. LONGWORTH. While I do not particularly recommend that this building should be at Petrograd or at any one capital, it is impossible under the present law ever to have suitable embassies in the large capitals. And when I say suitable embassies, I do not mean the buildings to be used only for the embassies, but for the chancellories as well.

That is where the actual business of the American Government will be carried on, instead of at some office down a by-street as it is in most cases now.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman from Ohio or the gentleman from Massachusetts give me this information? Has a building been selected at St. Petersburg? I use the term "St. Peters-

Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes.

Mr. MANN. How many rooms has it in it? Mr. LONGWORTH. A very large number.

Mr. MANN. How many? Mr. LONGWORTH. I think there are 70.

Mr. MANN. Seventy or one hundred? Mr. LONGWORTH. As I remember the correspondence, which, by the way, was confidential, I think there were 70.

Mr. MANN. I do not know where I got the information; it may have soaked into me somewhere, and I may not have got-ten the right impression, as in that other case, but my impression is that they have picked out a building with 100 rooms in it.

Mr. ROGERS. When the committee selected the limit or classification named there was no question of any particular city that would be benefited by this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. FOSTER. I object, Mr. Speaker.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

ENTRY ON RECLAMATION WITHDRAWALS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 17085) to permit homestead and desert-land entry on lands withdrawn for reclamation purposes.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object.
The SPEAKER, The gentleman from Wisconsin objects. The bill will be stricken from the calendar.

Mr. SINNOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes. I will be glad to accommodate the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withholds his objection. Mr. SINNOTT. Mr. Speaker, in the various Western States there are now withdrawn from all forms of entry over 11,000,000 acres of land including some privately owned land. This land is lying idle at the present time and is not used by anybody. bill will permit this land to be entered subject to the right of the Government to take over the land whenever it is needed for reclamation purposes. It will put into immediate use 11,000,000 acres. In the State of Oregon alone there are something like 1,900,000 acres withdrawn from entry and withdrawn from use.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SINNOTT. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. Admitting the full force of what the gentleman says, does he doubt, if some one would go on the land under the terms of this act and afterwards the Government should want the land, and that man has improvements on it, we would be asked to pay for those improvements?

Mr. SINNOTT. No. The man specifically enters the land, with the understanding that he is not to be compensated.

Mr. MANN. If a man enters homestead land to-day, the Government makes no guarantee to him, and yet we have a number of bills on the Private Calendar now to pay money to men who located lands that they afterwards bought.

Mr. SINNOTT. He makes the entry without specific agreement.

Mr. MANN. He does that when he goes on the homestead, too.

Mr. SINNOTT. He specifically waives any claim there.
Mr. MANN. It would not make any difference what he waives. He might die. Whether he did or not, there would be a claim made here inevitably. I think something ought to be done, but I do not really believe that this is the way to do it

Mr. SINNOTT. If he would apply to Congress for reimbursement hereafter, his damages would amount to very little. It would be only a right of way for a ditch or something like that.

Mr. MANN. Suppose he had a building on the land and the land was afterwards overflowed and the building ruined or destroyed?

Mr. SINNOTT. He would get nothing. Mr. MANN. It would be unconscionable on the part of the Government to permit him to go ahead and construct a farmhouse and a barn and other buildings and then take it away without paying him for them.

Mr. SINNOTT. He does that at his own hazard. It would be better to do that than to have 11,000,000 acres lying idle and useless

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the way to remedy this sort of thing is to get the department to restore these lands that are not needed and are not used for reclamation purposes. We in the other public-land States have difficulties similar to those encountered by the gentleman from Oregon. I have a number of cases now pending before the department of that kind. If the gentleman will labor long enough and industriously enough with the department, I think he can get them to restore those lands that can be clearly shown will not be used for reclamation purposes, and if that condition can not be shown the lands would not be entered, because, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] has well said, we should not allow settlers to go upon lands, even by waiving all of their rights, if the lands are eventually to be desired and taken over by the Government for its purposes

Mr. SINNOTT. We have labored long and industriously to get these lands restored. Some of these lands will ultimately be irrigrated, but from the report of the Secretary of the Interior it is apparent that there will be no money available probably in the next 15 or 20 years to get these lands irrigated. In the meantime the land should be tilled and cultivated.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SINNOTT. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. Does not the gentleman recollect that one of the objections that the department has always made to the original reclamation law was that it permitted this very thing? It permitted homestead entries upon lands that were to be withdrawn for reclamation,

That has been one of the greatest difficulties encountered in carrying out that act. People would rush upon the land that the department was not prepared to irrigate, and although they were there, knowing that there was no plan to irrigate the land, there would be a constant moral claim that the Government should do something for them. And then again, as the gentleman knows, when the lands are finally irrigated some man may have a homestead or a desert-land claim that is entirely too large for him to irrigate, and he is placed in the position of a speculator or else he is withholding his land from the use which is contemplated under an irrigation project.

Mr. SINNOTT. Under the old law they had the right to make entries as a matter of right. Under this bill they make entry only in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. The bill is intended to relieve a situation which has caused much embarrassment in the department according to the Secretary's report on this bill.

Mr. BORLAND. If these lands are finally irrigated, some man with 160 acres as a homestead will have more land there than can possibly be cultivated, and he will be in a position where he can not respond to either the construction or other

Mr. SINNOTT. He will have to conform to the farm unit established by the Secretary.

Mr. BORLAND. You are asking him to do something that he has no right to do, and you are giving him a 160-acre homestead. These lands should be left in a position where they can be restored to entry.

Mr. SINNOTT. I can not agree to that. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

RECLAMATION OF CERTAIN LANDS IN OREGON.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20362) providing for the extension of time for the reclamation of certain lands in the State of Oregon under the Carey Act.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BORLAND. Reserving the right to object, I should like to have the bill reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read,
The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to have the gentleman explain the merits of this proposition.

Mr. SINNOTT. The company which has contracted to reclaim these lands has been unable to reclaim them within the allotted time.

Mr. BORLAND. That is 15 years, is it not? Mr. SINNOTT. Yes. The time will expire on list No. 6 next February, and on the other list two years after that. The company claims to have expended $1,500,000 up to the present time in the reclamation of these lands,

Mr. BORLAND. How has that money been expended? What has been done with the $1,500,000?

Mr. SINNOTT. It has been expended on a dam on the Des Chutes River and on a number of canals, as is shown in the report. There are at the present time on this project 1,500 settlers and 730 farms. The appraisal of the farms last year, 1916, was $2,502,000.

Mr. BORLAND. What has been the obstacle to their completing their improvements within the 15 years?

Mr. SINNOTT. They have had both financial and physical difficulties-financial difficulties in securing the money and physical difficulties in the character of the country they have had to run through. They are irrigating in a volcanic country.

Mr. MANN. Is it not also true that they have gone ahead as fast as they could get settlers? Mr. SINNOTT. . The report of the State land board shows

Mr. MANN. Have they not always had more land than they have had settlers coming in?

Mr. BORLAND. They all have that condition, but here is what I would like to ask the gentleman: What is the prospect of their being able to attain ultimate success? The gentleman says they are irrigating in a volcanic country, where there are physical difficulties. Are they going to be able to bring the project to success?

Mr. SINNOTT. They have remedied a number of these difficulties, and they expect to achieve success within the 10-year extension period. This is similar to the ordinary Government reclamation project. They had to extend the time on those Government projects for 20 years, and they have met some of the same difficulties.

Mr. BORLAND. If they have expended their money in good faith, I am inclined to think they ought to be given a chance.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman will find one of the main reasons for asking the extension is that they have not been able to certify that they have the required number of settlers on some of this land, as the law requires.

Mr. BORLAND. If they have expended their money in good faith and have a reasonable prospect of success in the future, I think they ought to have a chance.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.
Mr. SINNOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the corresponding Senate bill (S. 8044) be substituted for consideration in place of this bill.

Mr. FERRIS. And that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SINNOTT. And that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon asks unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole, and that the Senate bill (S. 8044) be substituted for the House bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate bill.
The Clerk read the bill (S. 8044) providing for the extension of time for the reclamation of certain lands in the State of Oregon under the Carey Act, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, within his discretion, to extend for a period of not exceeding 10 years the time of segregation in the Oregon Carey Act segregation lists Nos. 6 and 19, the two areas comprising 140,714 acres, in the aggregate, approximately 86,000 acres of which are irrigable, same being situated in Crook County, Oreg.: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized to grant to the State of Oregon a similar extension of 10 years for the reclamation of said lands in addition to the time allotted under existing rules, regulations, contracts, and laws.

The bill was ordered to a third reading and was accordingly.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Sinnott, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

By unanimous consent the corresponding House bill (H. R. 20362) was laid on the table.

ALCOHOLIC-LIQUOR ADVERTISING.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 18986) to exclude alcoholic-liquor advertising from the United States mails.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection? Mr. HULBERT. I object.

The gentleman from New York will realize Mr. RANDALL. that the whole agony is coming up to-morrow anyway. Why not have part of it to-day? To-morrow the House will be asked to concur in a similar amendment to the Post Office appropriation bill, including the Reed amendment. Will the gentleman withdraw his objection?

Mr. HULBERT. No; I must press the objection. I do not think it is a matter to be disposed of by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? Mr. HULBERT. I object.

LANDS IN GLACIER NATIONAL PARK.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 778) to authorize an exchange of lands with owners of private holdings within the Glacier National Park.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection? Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The bill will be stricken from the calendar.

SURPLUS COAL LANDS IN INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 40) to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. MONDELL. I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming objects. The bill will be stricken from the calendar.

PROOF OF WIDOWHOOD IN PENSION CLAIMS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20353) concerning proof of widowhood in claims for pension.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin objects. The bill will be stricken from the calendar.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, would it be in order now to move to suspend the rules and pass this bill?

The SPEAKER. It would not. The Clerk will report the next bill.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT PITTSTON, PA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 18894) to amend the public-building act approved March 4, 1913, authorizing the acquisition of a suitable site for a public building at Pittston, Pa.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. CASEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.. That the provision of the public-building act approved March 4, 1913 (37 Stat., p. 876), which authorizes the acquisition of a suitable site, etc., at Pittston, Pa., be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to add the following proviso, namely:

"Provided. That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, accept a title which reserves or excepts all ores or minerals on the lands with the right of mining the same."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Casey, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

HOMESTEAD ENTRY ON WATER-POWER SITES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 7632) to provide for a homestead entry on water-power sites.

Is there objection? The SPEAKER.

Mr. MANN. I object.

CLAIM OF CHEROKEES FOR INTEREST.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 6444) providing for the payment of certain items of interest on the judgment of the Court of Claims of May 18, 1905, in favor of the Cherokees, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. MANN. I will at the request of the gentleman.
Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, the Court of Claims in 1905 rendered a judgment in favor of the Cherokee Nation in which there were four items. Subsequently, in 1910, the large items of this money was paid. The Indians have claimed ever since that there was an error in the calculation of interest allowed by the court as paid to them. I introduced a bill—H. R. 6444—making an appropriation for it. It was referred to the Commaking an appropriation for it. It was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and it referred it to the Secretary of the Interior for report. The Secretary of the Interior referred it to the comptroller, who admitted that there was an error. In the meantime the House Committee on Indian Affairs has reported back H. R. 6444 in two sections. Section 1 makes the appropriation for interest on two items. The next section referred the whole matter to the Court of Claims. In the means appropriation for interest on two items. The next section referred the whole matter to the Court of Claims. In the meantime the Senate passed a bill practically the same, except a slight amendment in four or five words, as section 2. The bill that passed the Senate is now here on the Speaker's table. It was my purpose, if this bill was considered, to ask that the Senate bill be substituted.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, some years ago a bill was passed authorizing the Cherokee Tribe of Indians to file suit in the Court of Claims. I think it was a slimpsy claim, but the Court of Claims did not agree with me. They found the Government of Claims did not agree with me. They found the Government of the United States, among other items, owed these Indians the sum of $1,111,284.70 and interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent from June 12, 1838, to date of payment. The interest figured to date amounts to nearly five times what the principal amounted to. A pretty slimpsy claim to begin with.

Mr. HASTINGS. But the Supreme Court of the United States affirmed the decision of the Court of Claims.

Mr. MANN. Oh, yes; but that means that the Indian attorneys were brighter than those for the Government, and so forth. Now, having obtained 5 per cent interest on this old stale claim since 1838 they want a little more interest on some other claims on technical grounds. They had no legal claim at first. They would not be willing to go back and open up the whole suit to say whether they were entitled to any interest or anything on their claim at all.

Mr. HASTINGS. I am willing the gentleman should frame an amendment to open up the whole suit, and if he will put it on this bill I will be glad to accept it. I claim that it is a meritorious claim.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman can get an agreement with the Senate that we have legal authority to set aside the judgment and put that in the bill, we can pass it so quickly that it will make his head swim.

Mr. HASTINGS. Oh, we would not go back and set aside the old judgment. I mean to say that we would be glad to look into the merits of this claim.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

OLLALA SLOUGH, LINCOLN COUNTY, OREG.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 1697) to declare Ollala Slough, Lincoln County, Oreg., nonnavigable.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAKER. I reserve the right to object. Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I am wondering how the majority of us know whether that is navigable or nonnavigable.

Mr. HAWLEY. Offala Slough is a small branch of the Yaquina River, emptying into the river about 12 or 14 miles from the ocean. It is navigable at its mouth. I have forgotten how wide it is, but for some 2 miles there is some navigation which is not involved in this bill, but above that it is only the lower reach of a small mountain stream. This bill proposes to build a dike at the upper end of the 2-mile portion to reclaim the land, which is salt land and of little value.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes. Mr. GARRETT. Has the portion which the gentleman desires to affect been under improvement by the Federal Govern-

Mr. HAWLEY. It never has, The Ollala Slough has never been under improvement by the Federal Government.

Mr. GARRETT. Why does the necessity exist for having the Government declare a negative? Navigability is not a It is a matter of fact. matter of law.

Mr. HAWLEY. If the gentleman will yield, in a number of instances coming under my observation the department holds that water which can be used to float saw logs on or run a canoe upon and which has been so used is navigable, and that it can not be closed without consent of Congress

May I ask the gentleman, for my own in-Mr. GARRETT. formation, does the idea of the navigability grow out of the fact that these were all once Government lands? Is there anything of that sort involved in it?

Mr. HAWLEY. I think not.
Mr. GARRETT. This has been a somewhat interesting question to me.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GARRETT. In a moment. Drainage propositions have arisen in the section which I have the honor to represent, and there have been some appeals to me at times to undertake to secure the passage of measures declaring certain streams not I have taken the position that the question of navigability of a stream is a matter of fact rather than a matter of law. There have been parts of certain streams under improvement by the Federal Government, but all we had to do there was to go to the War Department, submit our plans, and secure the permission. I will say that the improvement had been abandoned.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will permit, I think we have a case in our State where private parties spent a large sum of money upon the improvement of Des Plaines River, upon the theory that it was nonnavigable; then, when it became an important matter in connection with the drainage canal, the Government instituted a suit to declare that it was navigable. course it is a question of fact. The suit was instituted, and that is what everybody wants to avoid—making an improvement where a suit may afterwards be instituted to set it aside.

Mr. GARRETT. I am not going to object to the bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. Along the same line the gentleman was speaking upon a moment ago—about four years ago authority was given by a permit of the War Department to construct a dike across the slough, with a gate through which boats could pass. This was located near the mouth of the slough. That dike was constructed and the gate was put in, but objection was made, and it was ordered that the gate be taken out. The people who put in the money lost all of it. They are now going back farther up the slough where it will never be used for any navigation whatever, to enable 14 farmers to reclaim their lands—some 250 acres—that are now worth only a few dollars an acre, but which when redeemed will be worth up to $500 an acre for dairy purposes—the richest kind of land.

Mr. GARRETT. I am not objecting to the bill, but it does seem to me a very peculiar thing that a Government should have to declare a negative, in order to reach the thing which the gentleman desires, because, as I have said, the navigability of a stream is not a question of law but is a question of fact.

Mr. MANN. This is navigable by rowboat.

Mr. HAWLEY. At high tide.

Mr. GARRETT. If I may be permitted to express this opinion, the mere declaration here that it is nonnavigable, while it will be very persuasive in the future, would not pre vent a future Congress from reiterating that it was a navi-

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman from Oregon a question. Ollala Slough has a very familiar sound to me. I am sure it has been here before. Have we not passed a bill relating to this Ollala Slough at some time?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes; the one to which I referred a moment

Mr. MANN. The gentleman did not refer to any bill. understood him to refer to a permit of the War Department.

Mr. HAWLEY. Then there was an act passed following the permit from the War Department.

Mr. MANN. I thought we had given a permit at some time to construct a dam.

Mr. HAWLEY. Farther down; and that proved impracticable, and now they are going back up beyond any possibility of navigation.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. How much land is there involved in this?

Mr. HAWLEY. There will be about 250 acres reclaimed. What is the depth of the water above the point Mr. RAKER.

where the gentleman asks to have it declared nonnavigable? Mr. HAWLEY. Where the dike is to be located, at high water there will be about 4 feet, but when the tide is out there will be very little, with what fresh water there is coming down. Mr. RAKER. The 250 acres now belong to the Government of the United States?

Mr. HAWLEY. They do not. They belong to private citizens, every acre of it. They own the whole thing; it is in their deeds. There is not a foot of land that the Government has any shadow of claim to at all.

Mr. RAKER. I do not quite get the point of the gentleman if it is all private land. I do not see how you can figure on the question of its being nonnavigable.

Mr. HAWLEY. They wish to shut the tide out; that is all.

The tide runs over this land, and they want to shut it out. Mr. RAKER. Does not the Government have control over the land where the tide ebbs and flows?

Mr. HAWLEY. Only in the channel for navigation purposes. This slough was never meandered and the deeds call for every foot of the land. There is no question, and the War Department raises no question about it being privately owned land. They would have given the permit, but such a permit could be revoked after the dike was constructed and the farmers sub-This is to enable the people to build a dike that jected to loss. will stay there.

Mr. RAKER. I still do not get the gentleman's point of view-of its being privately owned land. Where does the gentleman get the idea the Government has no control over it?

Mr. HAWLEY. It does have control of it now for the purpose of maintaining the navigability of the stream. This bill proposes to cut off three-quarters of a mile at the upper end of the slough where there is no navigation.

Mr. RAKER. As a matter of fact, does not the tide ebb and flow over this land?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes. Mr. RAKER. Does not the Government have absolute control over land where the tide ebbs and flows over it?

Mr. HAWLEY. It has control over the navigable portion of the stream.

Mr. RAKER. They are navigating on this farm; that is all

Mr. BENNET. Is not the exact situation that the War Department wants to be put in a position where, in relation to dikes, they will not have to give a dam? [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HAWLEY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

TEMPORARY VACANCIES IN LAND OFFICE.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19781) relating to the temporary filling of vacancies occurring in the offices of register and receiver of district land offices.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER. Is there objection? Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming objects.
Mr. HAYDEN. Will the gentleman reserve his right to

Mr. MONDELL. I will.

Mr. HAYDEN. I want to say the Senate has passed the Senate bill 7767, an identical bill which I want to substitute for the House bill. If consent can be given, I shall move to amend the Senate bill in accordance with the report of the House Committee on the Public Lands.

Mr. MONDELL, Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman that certain folks have for years been trying to secure legislation un-der which settlers on the public domain from the time they first make their filing until their patents are finally denied years afterwards shall never have the opportunity to appear before anyone except a clerk in the classified service of the Government, who in many cases has little sympathy for them, knows very little about the conditions under which they make and hold their entries, and is about the last man in the world who ought to be allowed without review to settle their cases. As the law now stands, registers and receivers are drawn from the body of the people in the country where public lands are entered. of the people in the country where public lands are entered. They are supposed to know, and generally they do know, about the lands and laws they administer. They are in sympathy with the men who, amid the hardships of the frontier, are trying to transform the wilderness into homes and make it fit to live upon. So far as I am concerned I shall never consent, I shall do all I can to prevent substituting for these judges, taken from the standard free the stand the people and familiar with the situation, a clerk sent from the Land Office here, who may be entirely without qualifications to be a judge of the bona fides and good intentions of homestead settlers.

Mr. HAYDEN. If the gentleman will pardon me, the committee amendment provides he shall be an employee of the local land office. He will only be a temporary officer pending the appointment of a register and receiver.

Mr. MONDELL. Under the bill they can take a civil-service clerk from the Land Office, from the department here, who never saw an acre of public land, send him out to a local land office to-day, and to-morrow make him register or receiver. The gentleman says it is temporary. It might be, but on the other hand there is nothing to prevent these assignments becoming permanent. In fact, under this bill as the terms of the present registers and receivers expire clerks might be assigned to their duties permanently. In fact, under this bill in due time civil-service clerks might take and keep all the positions now held by regis-I am against it.
Is there objection? ters and receivers.

The SPEAKER. Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I object.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN DESERT-LAND ENTRYMEN.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 18825) to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915, and for prior years, and for other purposes."

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. TIMBERLAKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Chair hears none.

Mr. TIMBERLAKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment be read in lieu of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the committee amendment be read in lieu of the bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause, down to and including line 11, on page —, and insert the following:

"That the provisions of the last three paragraphs of section 5 of the act of March 4, 1915, 'An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915, and for prior years, and for other purposes,' be, and the same are hereby, extended and made applicable to any lawful pending desert-land entry made prior to March 4, 1915: Provided, That in cases where such entries have been assigned prior to the date of the act, the assignees shall, if otherwise qualified, be entitled to the benefit hereof."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Timberlake, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PROBATION SYSTEM IN THE UNITED STATES COURTS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20414) for the establishment of a probation system in the United States courts, except in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 20414) for the establishment of a probation system in the United States courts except in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted, etc., That the courts of the United States having original jurisdiction of criminal actions, except in the District of Columbia, shall have power in any case, except those involving treason, murder, rape, arson, kidnapping, or a second conviction of a felony, after conviction or after a plea of guilty of a felony or misdemeanor and after the imposition of a sentence thereon but before commitment, to place the defendant upon probation, provided that it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court that the ends of justice and the best interests of the public as well as of the defendants would be subserved thereby, and may suspend the execution of the sentence for such time and upon such terms as may be deemed best. The probationer shall be provided by the clerk of the court with a written statement of the terms and conditions of his probation at the time when he is placed thereon. He shall observe the rules prescribed for his conduct by the court and report as directed. No person shall be put on probation except with his or her consent.

SEC. 2. That upon the expiration of the term fixed for such probation, the court may thereupon discharge the probationer from further supervision, or may extend the probation, as shall seem advisable. At any time during the probationary term the court may modify the terms and conditions of the order of probation, or may terminate such probation, when in the opinion of the court the ends of justice shall require, and when the probation is so terminated the court shall enter an order discharging the probationer from serving the imposed penalty; or the court may revoke the order of probation and cause the rearrest of the probationer and impose a sentence and require him to serve the sentence or pay the fine originally imposed, or both, as the case may be, and the time of probation shall not be taken into account to diminish the time for which he was originally sentenced.

SEC. 3. That the provisions of this act shall also apply to cases where a judge or judges of courts of the United States of original jurisdiction have heretofore, after a plea or verdict of guilty, suspended the imposition or execution of sentence.

Also the following committee amendment was read:

Also the following committee amendment was read:

Page 2, line 21, strike out the words "and impose a sentence."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HAYDEN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the subject of this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Ben-NET] makes the same request. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.
Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. Speaker, I make a similar request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas makes a similar request. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Speaker, I make the request to insert in the Record at this time a letter written by the secretary of the National Probation Association in connection with the bill that was just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The following is the letter referred to:

NATIONAL PROBATION ASSOCIATION, Albany, N. Y., February 14, 1917.

NATIONAL PROBATION ASSOCIATION, Albany, N. Y., February 14, 1917.

Hon. Isaac Siegel, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Congressman: I am pleased to learn that the House will probably take up the probation bill for passage on Monday, February 19. I would say regarding the present bill (H. R. 20414) that while it does not accomplish all that we believe the bill should accomplish, especially in not providing for the appointment of salaries to probation officers, still it is better than nothing and will greatly relieve the present deplorable and impossible situation in the Federal courts, on account of which it is now absolutely impossible for the United States district court judges to suspend sentence or use probation in any case. We hope very much that this bill will pass the House as speedly as possible. I hope to hear any day that Senate bill No. 1092, reported out by Senator Walsh, has passed the Senate. We then trust that in conference committee a bill may be agreed upon satisfactory to all parties.

Under separate cover I am sending you about 25 copies of the inclosed circular, which contains the very latest statistics that I have been able to secure regarding the criminal work of the United States district courts, and also two illustrative cases showing the need of probation which occurred in this State, together with arguments for the proposition. I also send you copy of the House hearing, the Senate hearing, and my letter to Senator Owen containing the original brief on the subject. I hope these will be of some assistance to you. The many thousands of persons who are interested in the extension of the advantages of the probation system throughout the country will be grateful to you for your active efforts in behalf of this much-needed reform.

reform.

Yours, very truly, CHARLES L. CHUTE, Secretary.

ADDITIONAL JURISDICTION OF COURT OF CLAIMS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 16212) to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims

The SPEAKER. Is there objection.

Mr. REAVIS. I object.

HALIBUT FISHERIES IN PACIFIC OCEAN.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4586) to protect and conserve the halibut fisheries of the Pacific Ocean, to establish closed seasons in halibut fishing in certain waters thereof, and to restrict the landing of halibut in the United States of America and the Territory of Alaska during the closed seasons established. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, who has charge of this bill, which comes from the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries? I just wanted to ask the question. I notice in section 6 it says:

That this act shall take effect as soon as possible after the enactment of concurrent or essentially similar regulations by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, either by act of Parliament, order in council, or other proper means.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

AMENDMENT TO FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 17646) to amend section 6 of an act to define and fix the standard of value, to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the public debt, and for other purposes, approved March 14, 1900, as amended by the act of March 4, 1907, by the act of March 2, 1911, and by the act of June 12, 1916.

The SPEAKER Lie there obtacked

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, does the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Wingo] have charge of the bill?
Mr. WINGO. I do.
Mr. MANN. The only change in the law is the law concerning the issue of certificates?

Mr. WINGO. That is the sole object.
Mr. MANN. There is no intention to amend the section

Mr. WINGO. Oh, no. The only change made in the law is covered by the proviso on page 3 of the bill, lines 4 to 10, inclusive. By this change the issuance of certificates in $100,000 denomination is permitted. These will be used for clearance purposes. That is the only change there is in the law.

Mr. BORLAND. Reserving the right to object, is there any purpose to amend this bill by changing the method of collecting the tax under the reserve-bank law?

Mr. WINGO. It has nothing to do with that. The only change is that it permits gold certificates to be issued in large denominations, to be used for exchange purposes and clearances. Under the law now they are limited to the size as to gold and silver certificates, and if this act is passed they can issue gold certificates of the denomination of $100,000, and they can use those certificates in settlement of any balances in clearing.

Mr. BORLAND. I take it from what the gentleman says that an amendment providing a collection charge on checks would not be germane? Mr. WINGO. No.

Mr. LINDBERGH. And, on page 2, after the words "And provided further," is that provision similar to the old law?

Mr. WINGO. The only change we make in section 6 of the old law is to be found on page 3. The sole change is to permit the state of the old law is to be found on page 3. The sole change is to permit the state of the old law is the sole could on page 3. mit the $100,000 certificates, which can not be done now under the law.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 17646) to amend section 6 of an act to define and fix the standard of value, to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the public debt, and for other purposes, approved March 14. 1900, as amended by the act of March 4, 1907, by the act of March 2, 1911, and by the act of June 12, 1916.

4, 1907, by the act of March 14, 1900, as amended by the act of March 4, 1907, by the act of March 2, 1911, and by the act of June 12, 1916.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of an act to define and fix the standard of value, to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the public debt, and for other purposes, approved March 14, 1900, as amended by the act of March 4, 1907, by act of March 2, 1911, and by act of June 12, 1916, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to receive deposits of gold coin with the Treasurer or any assistant treasurer of the United States in sums of not less than $20, and to issue gold certificates therefor in denominations of not less than $10, and the coin so deposited shall be retained in the Treasury and held for the payment of such certificates on demand, and used for no other purpose. Such certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and all public dues, and when so received may be reissued, and when held by any national banking association may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve: Provided, That whenever and so long as the gold coin and bullion held in the reserve fund in the Treasury for the redemption of United States notes and Treasury notes shall fall and remain below $100,000,000 the authority to issue certificates as herein provided shall be suspended: And provided further, That whenever and so long as the aggregate amount of United States notes and sliver certificates in the general fund of the Treasury shall exceed $60,000,000 the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, suspend the issue of the certificates herein provided for: And provided further, That of the amount of such outstanding certificates one-fourth at least shall be in denominations of $50 or less: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, issue such certificates in denominations of $10,000, payable to order: And provided further, That if requested by the Federal Reserve Board, or by any Federal reserve bank or Federal reserve agent, the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, issue such certificates in denominations of $100,000, payable to order, and such latter certificates shall not be subject to limitations as to suspension of issue prescribed by this section: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, receive, with the assistant treasurer in New York and the assistant treasurer in San Francisco, deposits of foreign gold coin at their bullion value in amounts of not less than $1,000 in value and issue gold certificates therefor of the description herein authorized: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, receive, with the Treasurer or any assistant treasurer of the United States, deposits of gold bullion bearing the stamp of the coinage mints of the United States or the assay office in New York, certifying their weight, fineness, and value, in amounts of not less than $1,000 in value, and issue gold certificates therefor of the description herein authorized. But the amount of gold bullion and foreign coin so held shall not at any time exceed two-thirds of the total amount of gold certificates at such time outstanding. And section 5193 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby repealed."

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Ar-

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Wingo] yield for a question?

Mr. Wingo. Yes; I yield.
Mr. BENNET. I notice from a reading of the bill that in connection with the issuance of the $100,000 certificates there is a provision that it shall not be subject to the suspension What does that mean?

Mr. WINGO. Here is the proviso:

Provided, That whenever and so long as the gold coin and bullion held in the reserve fund in the Treasury for the redemption of United States notes and Treasury notes shall fall and remain below $100,000,000 the authority to issue certificates as herein provided shall be sus-

The provision that we are putting into the law is for the issuance of gold certificates in denominations of $100,000. same reason that may exist for the suspension of a certificate provided for in the first part of the section which I quoted would not exist as to the issuance of gold certificates.

Mr. BENNET. Because they would not have a general circulation?

Mr. WINGO. Yes; because they would not have a general circulation as a matter of actual use. It would not be necessary to suspend the issuance of the $100,000 gold certificates in order to protect the gold in the reserve trust fund. Does the gentleman understand?

Mr. BENNET. I can not say that I do, but I will take the gentleman's word for it.

Mr. WINGO. Under the law quoted when the amount of gold reserve trust funds falls below a certain sum, then you suspend the issuance of the certificates provided for in the first part of the section. But I think the gentleman will agree with me that the maintenance of these funds will not be impaired by the issuance of $100,000 gold certificates, as provided by Mr. BENNET. These $100,000 gold certificates can only be issued, then, when a man takes what is called "new gold"?

Mr. MANN. It is in payment for gold

Mr. MANN. It is in payment for gold.

Mr. BENNET. I see.

Mr. WINGO. These large gold certificates would be preferable to the gold in effecting clearances. Mr. BENNET. It is

It really protects the actual gold?

Mr. WINGO. Yes.
Mr. MANN. We stamp the gold for nothing.

Mr. WINGO. I think the actual working of it will be to keep more gold in the funds referred to.

Mr. BENNET. I think the gentleman is right. In the large centers where these will be used-New York, Chicago, Kansas City, or any other place where gentlemen are proud of their city—it will be a convenience.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman has a correct conception of the bill. It is really to have, for convenience, large denominations of gold certificates in settling clearances, instead of having bills of small denominations or the actual gold.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next bill.

SURPLUS COAL LANDS IN INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago I objected to Senate bill No. 40, Calendar No. 447. I did it purely through inadvertence. I ask that the question of the objection be again submitted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois states that he objected to Calendar No. 447 inadvertently and desires to with-draw his objection. The Clerk will report it by title. The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 40) to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. MONDELL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet with the intention of reserving the right to object when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] objected.
At that time, from a rather hurried reading of the bill, I was At that time, from a rather hurried reading of the bill, I was inclined to think that its provisions were rather dangerously broad, but after giving the matter further consideration and reading the bill pretty carefully I think the bill is carefully drawn, and I shall therefore not object.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire whether, if this bill becomes a law, it would grant the right to make entry to those who have already exercised their homostand rights?

exercised their homestead rights?

Mr. MONDELL. It does not change the status.

Mr. MANN. It would not have any effect on that person.

The SPEAKER. Who has charge of this bill?

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN]. Mr. MONDELL. I think it is very apparent, Mr. Speaker, that the bill will not in anywise affect the provisions of the homestead law as applied to the reservations in question. That is, whatever the provisions were under which the homestead law was made applicable to Indian lands those laws would remain as they are now-without change.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. Speaker, the bill simply applies to coal lands in Indian reservations and gives the same opportunity to acquire such lands as the law now provides for entering similar lands on the public domain. It authorizes the entry of lands classified as coal lands, with a reservation to the United States of the coal thereunder and the right to prospect and mine the same.

Mr. STAFFORD. It would not deprive anybody heretofore possessed of the privilege from exercising that right?

Mr. HOWELL. No. It simply extends the surface rights of entry to Indian coal lands.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Utah will allow me, I wish he would not use the words "surface rights" in connection with the rights here involved. There are rights" in connection with the rights here involved. There are good reasons why we should not use that term in this connection and thus get confused. We have recently passed the 640-acre homestead law, granting surface rights only. But this is much more than a surface right; it is a limited right, a fee title, in which is reserved the body of this one mineral. It is a modified patent, a limited right. It is very different from the ordinary surface right. It is a much better title.

Mr. HOWELL. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Mondell] and I have exactly the same understanding of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FERRIS. This bill is on the Union Calendar. Mr. HOWELL. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Utah asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in any Indian reservation heretofore or hereafter opened to settlement and entry pursuant to a classification of the surplus lands therein as mineral and nonmineral, such surplus lands not otherwise reserved or disposed of, which have been or may be withdrawn or classified as coal lands or are valuable for coal deposits, shall be subject to the same disposition as is or may be prescribed by law for the nonmineral lands in such reservation whenever proper application shall be made with a view of obtaining title to such lands, with a reservation to the United States of the coal deposits therein and of the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same: Provided, That such surplus lands, prior to any disposition hereunder, shall be examined, separated into classes the same as are the nonmineral lands in such reservations, and appraised as to their value, exclusive of the coal deposits therein, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior for that purpose, SEC. 2. That any applicant for such lands shall state in his application that the same is made in accordance with and subject to the provisions and reservations of this act, and upon submission of satisfactory proof of full compliance with the provisions of law under which application or entry is made and of this act shall be entitled to a patent to the lands applied for and entered by him, which patent shall contain a reservation to the United States of all the coal deposits in the lands so patented, together with the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same.

SEC. 3. That if the coal-land laws have been or shall be extended over lands applied for, entered, or patented hereunder the coal deposits therein shall be subject to disposal by the United States in accordance with the provisions of the coal-land laws in force at the time of such disposal. Any person qualified to acquire coal deposits or the right to mine and remove the coal under the laws of th or patented under this act for the purpose of prospecting for coal thereon. If such coal deposits are then subject to disposition, upon the approval by the Secretary of the Interior of a bond or undertaking to be filed with him as security for the payment of all damages to the crops and improvements on such lands by reason of such prospecting. Any person who has acquired from the United States the coal deposits in any such lands, or the right to mine or remove the same, may reenter and occupy so much of the surface thereof as may be required for all purposes reasonably incident to the mining and removal of the coal therefrom, and mine and remove the coal, upon payment of the damages caused thereby to the owner thereof, or upon giving a good and sufficient bond or undertaking in an action instituted in any competent court to ascertain and fix said damages: Provided, That the owner under such limited patent shall have the right to mine coal for personal use upon the land for domestic purposes at any time prior to the disposal by the United States of the coal deposits: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held to deny or abridge the right to present and have prompt consideration of applications made under the applicable land laws of the United States for any such surplus lands which have been or may be classified as coal lands with a view of disproving such classification and securing a patent without reservation.

SEC. 4. That the net proceeds derived from the sale and entry of such surplus lands in conformity with the provisions of this act shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the same fund under the same conditions and limitations as are or may be prescribed by law for the disposition of the proceeds arising from the disposal of other surplus lands in such Indian reservation.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 4, line 10, insert:

Provided, That the provisions of this act shall not apply to the lands of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians in Oklahoma.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Hayden, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

WORLD'S PURITY FEDERATION.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 334) authorizing the President to appoint delegates to attend the Tenth International Congress of the World's Purity Federation, to be held in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, November 8 to 14, 1917.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and respectfully requested to appoint delegates to attend and represent the United States at the Tenth International Congress of the World's Purity Federation, to be held in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, November 8 to 14, 1917: Provided, That no appropriation shall be granted at any time for expenses of delegates or for other expenses incurred in connection with said concress

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend by striking out the words "and respectfully requested" in line 4.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 1, line 4, by striking out the words "and respectfully requested."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

REESTABLISHMENT OF POST OFFICES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20687) to amend the postal laws. The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the bill reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General shall have authority, in his discretion, to reestablish as a post office of the second or third class any post-office station which has been heretofore or may hereafter be established by reason of the discontinuance of such post office; and appropriations made for the maintenance of post offices of the second and third class are hereby made available for the necessary expense of conducting such reestablished post office of the second or third class. The salary of the postmaster at such office shall be based on the gross receipts of the station for the previous calendar year. year.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think some explanation should be made of this bill. I find in the report no mention whatever whether this bill has the approval of the Postmaster General or whether it has ever been submitted to the Post Office Department for its consideration.

Mr. RANDALL. I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin that the bill was submitted to the Post Office Department, and the language of it was drawn by the officials of the depart-

The department already has the power to discontinue post offices, even in a city of 10,000 people, but it has no power to reestablish them. This gives to the Post Office Department the power to reestablish post offices above the fourth class.

Mr. STEENERSON. That is only where the post office is within 5 miles of the principal office.

Mr. BLACK. That is correct.

Mr. STAFFORD. I know of many instances where post offices in suburbs having municipal government have been discontinued and substations established in connection with the main office in the large city to which the suboffices are tribu-I do not think it would be good business policy to grant authority to the Postmaster General to reestablish the old system of separate offices rather than to continue the present

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I have a large number of postal stations in my district, established when post offices were discontinued, when the territory was annexed to the city of Chicago. This bill would permit the reestablishment of all those stations as post offices. People might want that done. I do not know. It would be an extravagance, and I am not going to put myself in a position where I may be asked to favor such a proposition, if I can help it.

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. MANN. Yes. Mr. RANDALL. If the Postmaster General should conclude that he had made a mistake in the exercise of his power to discontinue a post office, does not the gentleman think he ought to have the power to correct that mistake?

Mr. MANN. No; I do not think he can make a mistake in discontinuing a post office and establishing a substation in its To reestablish such post offices would simply call upon the Government to pay the salaries of these postmasters for doing nothing. I have been all through it.

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman object to having this bill amended so as to apply to specific offices in California, which are not in the vicinity of Chicago?

Mr. MANN. I do not know that I would object as to some other place, if the circumstances were stated, but I decidedly object to having it apply to my district. Therefore I object.

Mr. RANDALL. Let me say to the gentleman that I will offer that kind of an amendment, if he will permit the bill to be considered.

Mr. MANN. Oh, well, the gentleman can have it called up later, when he has his bill prepared.

Mr. CANNON. Well, we will have no exceptions. If nobody else objects, I will object to the passage of this bill by unanimous consent.

Mr. MANN. I have objected.
Mr. CANNON. I say, we will have no exceptions.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL, WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19233) to increase the salary of the United States marshal for the western district of Michigan.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAKER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I called attention to this class of bills three weeks ago. I think gentlemen should have these bills referred to the proper committee, or when they are referred to other committees gentlemen ought to ask that they be transferred to the committee properly having jurisdiction.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. This bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

That is not the proper committee to which these bills should be referred. Bills like this should be referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice.
Mr. McLAUGHLIN. This bill has been very fully considered by the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. RAKER. That may be true.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. There is no time in this session to have it rereferred. If it goes to the other committee it will not receive any consideration whatever. I think it might now be considered on its merits.

Mr. RAKER. That may all be true; but with the continued effort to legislate for increases of salary, it seems to me that the bill should be referred to the proper committees. There are 11 committees on expenditures in the executive departments, and these committees have jurisdiction of these matters. The Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads are loaded down with such propositions, and here is one of these bills which has been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, that has no jurisdiction of

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Does the gentleman think this is a good time in the session to call the attention of the House to that practice?

Mr. RAKER. Three weeks ago I called it to the attention of the House, and intended then to object if any more bills of this kind were brought up. I do not like to delay the gentleman in his bill or to hold it back, but it does seem that committees which are organized and instituted by the House for the purpose of considering such bills ought to be given the opportunity to do so. All you have to do is to look at the report of the expenditures of the House to see the money that is expended for the maintenance of the organization of many of these committees, without any work whatever being done by them. The bills ought to go to the committees having jurisdiction of the legislation, so that the big committees would not be burdened with them.

I withdraw the objection at this time. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the salary of the United States marshal for the western district of Michigan shall be at the rate of $4,000 a year.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

STATE OF FLORIDA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 16993) to validate a patent to certain lands heretofore issued to the State of Florida to allow said State to claim certain other lands, and for other purposes. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection. Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute the bill S. 6654.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to substitute a similar bill, Senate 6654. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That as to all lands on Key Biscayne in townships 54 and 55 south range 42 east, in the State of Florida, which were embraced in the military and lighthouse reservations established on said Key Biscayne by Executive orders dated August 28, 1847, and February 10, 1897, but now abandoned and relinquished; that certain patent, dated May 4, 1885, and designated as Tampa patent No. 35, be, and the same is hereby, declared valid and effective to vest the title to the said lands in the State of Florida and any such persons as have, since the Issuance of said patent, acquired the right, title, and interest of the State of Florida in and to the said lands or any portion thereof.

SEC. 2. That as to all lands embraced in said abandoned reservations, which were properly to be classified as swamp and overflowed lands, in accordance with the terms of the swamp and overflowed land act of 1850, the State of Florida shall now have the right to claim said lands as swamp and overflowed land act of 1850, the State of Florida shall now have the same allowed, set apart, and patented as swamp and overflowed lands to the same extent as if the said lighthouse and military reservations had never existed.

SEC. 3. That the descriptions contained in said patent and in the selection list aforesaid shall be construed as having reference to the plat of lands of Key Biscayne in townships 54 and 55 south, range 42 east, prepared in December, 1870, by J. E. Hilgarde, without regard to the acreage named in said patent or said selection list: Provided, That this act shall not be construed as affecting the title to any lands on Key Biscayne embraced within the Mary Anne Davis claim.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Sears a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The House bill H. R. 16993 was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF THE STATE OF KENTUCKY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 2543, an act for the relief of the State of Ken-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the State of Kentucky for reimbursement for expenses incurred by its governor in alding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army for the War with Spain, arising under the act of Congress of July 8, 1898, and the acts amendatory thereto, which has heretofore been filed before the Treasury Department and disallowed because such claim had not been "filed and disallowed" before the passage of the amendatory act of April 27, 1904, shall be reopened, examined, and allowed in accordance with the second section of said act of April 27, 1904, and in accordance with the rulings of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department heretofore made in claims of like character of other States, said allowance not to exceed in amount $1,400.44.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Johnson of Kentucky, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ACTIONS FOR DEATH ON THE HIGH SEAS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 4288, an act relating to the maintenance of actions for death on the high seas and other navigable waters.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, let the bill be reported.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever the death of a person shall be caused by wrongful act, neglect, or default occurring on the high seas beyond a marine league from the shore of any State, or on any navigable waters of the Panama Canal Zone, the District of Columbia, or the Territories or dependencies of the United States, the personal representative of the decedent may maintain a suit for damages in the district courts of the United States, in admiralty, for the exclusive benefit of the decedent's wife, husband, parent, child, or dependent relative against the vessel, person, or corporation which would have been liable if death had not ensued.

Sec. 2. That the recovery in such suit shall be a fair and just compensation for the pecuniary loss sustained by the persons for whose benefit the suit is brought, and shall be apportioned among them by the court in proportion to the loss they may severally have suffered by reason of the death of the person by whose representative the suit is brought.

the court in proportion to the loss they may severally have suffered by reason of the death of the person by whose representative the suit is brought.

Sec. 3. That such suit shall be begun within two years from the date of such wrongful act, neglect, or default, unless during that period there has not been reasonable opportunity for securing jurisdiction of the vessel, person, or corporation sought to be charged; but after the expiration of such period of two years the right of action hereby given shall not be deemed to have lapsed until 90 days after a reasonable opportunity to secure jurisdiction has offered.

Sec. 4. That if a person die as the result of such wrongful act, neglect, or default, as is mentioned in section 1, during the pendency in a court of admiralty of the United States of a suit to recover damages for personal injuries in respect of such act, neglect, or default, the personal representative of the decedent may be substituted as a party and the suit may proceed as a suit under this act for the recovery of the compensation provided in section 2.

Sec. 5. That, in suits under this fact, the fact that the decedent has been guilty of contributory negligence shall not bar recovery, but the court shall take into consideration the degree of negligence attributable to the decedent and reduce the recovery accordingly.

Sec. 6. That the provisions of any State statute giving or regulating rights of action or remedies for death shall not be affected by this act as to causes of action accruling within the territorial limits of any State.

Nor shall this act apply to the Great Lakes or to any waters within the territorial limits of any State.

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker,

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I wish to make some inquiry about this bill. This is a very important bill. What recovery could absolutely be had by the heirs of any person suffering death on the high seas under section 2 of the bill? The wording here says that the recovery shall be a fair and just compensation. That is very indefinite. The court might consider under that that it would not be fair and just compensation to give damages for mental anguish. Under the Lord Campbell Act, which granted the right of the heirs to recover for death, there was a limitation as to the amount. Most of the States have enacted similar statutes.

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. The gentleman's objection is based upon a pecuniary loss. There would be no damages for anguish and suffering in case of death. In case of personal injury that might be said to exist.

Mr. STAFFORD. I suppose this bill arises out of the Titanic

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. I suppose that might have had something to do with starting it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does the gentleman mean that the heirs of those who met death in that catastrophe would have no right to recover except for pecuniary loss?

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. Yes; I do not understand that there is any right in case of death by dependent relatives to recover except for pecuniary loss. In the case of personal injury I can understand how the person injured would be entitled to recover for anguish, pain, and suffering, but not for dependent relatives

Mr. STAFFORD. Take the case of the widow of one who met death in the Titanic disaster; what would be her rights under this bill?

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. Whatever her pecuniary loss was-the loss of the husband upon whom she was dependent for support.

Mr. STAFFORD. And under the Lord Campbell Act what would her rights be?

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. I do not know; I would not undertake to answer the gentleman.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, I object. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado objects, and the Clerk will report the next bill.

COUNTERFEITING THE SEAL OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 17190) to prohibit and punish the fradulent use, application, or counterfeiting of the seal of any executive department or Government commission.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Reserving the right to object, I do not know whether the gentleman from North Carolina is here or not, but I think these bills should not be acted upon at this time, because in the Senate they have an omnibus bill which I understand includes the next three measures on the calendar. Therefore I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts objects.

INJURY TO VESSELS ENGAGED IN FOREIGN COMMERCE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 17189) to prevent and punish willful injury or attempted injury to, or conspirary to injure, any vessel engaged in foreign com-merce, or the cargo or persons on board thereof, by fire, explosives, or otherwise.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

NATIONAL-DEFENSE SECRETS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11706) to amend an act entitled "An act to prevent the disclosure of national-defense secrets," approved March 3, 1911

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of the act entitled "An act to prevent the disclosure of national defense secrets," approved March 3, 1911, be amended so that the said section will read as follows:

"SEC. 3. That offenses against the provisions of this act committed upon the high seas or elsewhere outside of a judicial district shall be cognizable in the district where the offender is found or into which he is first brought; but offenses hereunder committed within the Philippine Islands shall be cognizable in any court of said islands having original jurisdiction of criminal cases, with the same right of appeal as is given in other criminal cases where imprisonment exceeding one year forms a part of the penalty, and offenses hereunder committed within the Canal Zone shall be cognizable in the district court of said zone; and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon such courts for such purpose." purpos

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

ACTION FOR DEATH ON THE HIGH SEAS.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Keating] will withdraw the objection which he made just a moment ago to the consideration of the bill (S. 4288) relating to the maintenance of actions for death on the high seas and other navigable waters, and I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

UNITED STATES DAUGHTERS OF 1812.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20228) to renew patent No. 25909.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a certain design patent issued by the United States Patent Office of date of August 11, 1896, being patent No. 25909, is hereby renewed and extended for a period of 14 years from and after the passage of this act, with all the rights and privileges pertaining to the same as of the original patent, being generally known as the badge of the United States Daughters of 1812.

Abercrombie Adair Adamson Aiken Alexander Allen Almon Ashbrook Austin Ayres Bailey Barnhart Black

Black Blackmon

Booher

Bowers Britt Britten Browne

Burke

Browning Brumbaugh Buchanan, Tex.

Burke
Burnett
Butler
Byrnes, S. C.
Byrns, Tenn.
Caldwell
Campbell
Candler, Miss.
Cannon
Capstick
Carter, Okla.
Cary
Casey
Chandler, N. Y
Chandler, N. Y

Chandler, N. Y. Chiperfield Church Cline

Cline
Coady
Coleman
Collier
Connelly
Conry
Cooper, W. Va.
Copley
Cox
Crago
Cramton
Crisp
Cullop
Curry
Dallinger
Danforth
Darrow
Davis, Minn.
Decker

Decker Dempsey Denison

Dent Dickinson

Dickinson
Dies
Dill
Dillon
Dixon
Doolittle
Doremus
Doughton
Dowell

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

EXPATRIATION OF CITIZENS AND THEIR PROTECTION ABROAD.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20605) to amend an act entitled "An act in reference to the expatriation of citizens and their protection abroad," approved March 2, 1907.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman from Alabama will ask that that bill be passed over without prejudice. I think it requires some further amendment.

Mr. BURNETT. The gentleman has suggested that perhaps there is a defect in the bill and I ask that it be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. MANN. I object. The gentleman can put it upon the Unanimous Consent Calendar again.

Mr. BURNETT. But then would it be reached?

Mr. MANN. I do not know; but it has been reached once, and those who have bills that have not been reached are entitled to preference in being reached.

Mr. BENNET. I object. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York objects.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as fol-

To Mr. Capstick, for four days, on account of illness in his family.

To Mr. Austin, for three days, on account of official business. REPUBLIC COAL CO.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Montana to move to suspend the rules.

Mr. STEENERSON rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Minnesota rise

Mr. STEENERSON. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. Are we not to finish the call of the Unanimous Consent Cal-

The SPEAKER. The Chair has promised to recognize three If there gentlemen this afternoon to move to suspend the rules. is any time after that, we will go back and finish the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

Mr. STEENERSON. But we have just reached the bill in which I am interested.

The SPEAKER. That is true; but we are always reaching somebody's bill Mr. STEENERSON. There are only four or five left on the whole calendar. The SPEAKER. That is true, and if the Chair was sure that the House would stay here he would go on and finish it.

Mr. MANN. We will reach all of the bills some time before the session is concluded.

Mr. STOUT, Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass Senate joint resolution 50, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation, as amended, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to lease, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of and doing business in the State of Montana, the coal deposits in and under the following described lands, situate in Musselshell County, State of Montana, to wit: The northwest quarter of the northeast quarter; the northwest quarter and the north half of the southwest quarter; section 6, township 7 north, range 26 east; the south half of the northwest quarter; the southwest quarter; and the west half of the northwest quarter, section 30, township 8 north, range 26 east; and the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 26, township 8 north, range 25 east: Provided, however, That said lease shall be made subject to the legal or equitable rights, inchoate or vested, of any surface or other entryman on any part of said lands, and subject to the laws now in force governing the sales of coal or other minerals where the surface lands and rights are reserved or have been previously disposed of: Provided, however, That the coal taken from said described lands shall be used only for the uses and purposes of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. and the railway corporations owned and controlled by it, and not for commercial purposes, nor for sale to the public except to such employees of said corporation as may be employed in the actual mining operations conducted on said described lands.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second, and, pending that, I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HILLIARD. Does it not require unanimous consent to have these amendments inserted?

The SPEAKER, No. Mr. HILLIARD, Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HIL-LIARD] demands a second.

Mr. STOUT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary in-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman objects. The gentleman from Montana and the gentleman from Colorado will take their places as tellers. Those in favor of seconding this motion will pass between the tellers and be counted.

The question was taken; and the tellers reported-ayes 79,

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order of no quorum present. The Doorkeeper will lock the doors, the The SPEAKER.

Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of seconding the motion will answer aye, those opposed will answer no.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, did the Speaker count for a quorum?

The SPEAKER. No; the Chair will count. Mr. MANN. I think there is a quorum here.

The SPEAKER (after counting). One hundred and thirtyeight gentlemen are present, not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will lock the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 298, nays 31, answered "present" 4, not voting 100, as follows:

YEAS-298.

Hutchinson Driscoll Phelan Driscoll Drukker Dunn Dyer Edmonds Edwards Ellsworth Powers Pratt Rainey Igoe Johnson, S. Dak. Johnson, Wash. Jones Raker Jones
Kahn
Kelley
Kennedy, Iowa
Kennedy, R. I.
Kettner
Key, Ohio
Kiess, Pa.
Kinkaid
Kitchin
Konop
La Follette
Langley Raker Ramseyer Rauch Rayburn Ricketts Roberts, Nev. Rodenberg Rogers Elston Evans Fairchild Farley Farr Ferris Fess Fields Rouse Rouse Rowe Rowland Rubey Rucker, Ga. Russell, Mo. Russell, Ohio Sanford Fitzgerald Flood Focht Fordney Langley Lazaro Lee Lehlbach Lenroot Lever Lieb Linthicum Foss Foster Freeman Fuller Gallagher Saunders Schall Scott, Mich. Sears Gallivan Gandy Gard Gardner Littlepage Lloyd Lobeck Sherley Siegel Sinnott Lobeck Loud
McAndrews
McArthur
McClintie
McCulloch
McDermott
McFadden
McGlllieuddy
McKellar
McKinley
McLaughlin
McLemore
Madden
Magee Sisson Garland Slavden Garner Garrett Glass Slemp Sloan Smail Smail Smith, Mich.
Smith, Minn.
Smith, N. Y.
Smith, Tex.
Snyder
Sparkman
Stafford
Steagall
Stedman
Steele Lowa Glynn Good Goodwin, Ark. Green, Iowa Greene, Mass. Gregg Griest Griffin Guernsey Hadley Hamill Hamilton, Mich. Magee Mann Mapes Martin Stedman Steele, Iowa Steele, Pa. Steenerson Stephens, Miss. Stephens, Nebr. Stephens, Tex. Sterling Stiness Stout Martin Meeker Miller, Del. Miller, Minn. Mondell Moontague Moon Moore, Pa. Moores, Ind. Hamlin. Hardy Harrison, Va. Hastings Haugen Hawley Hayden Stout Sulloway Hayden Hayes Heaton Heffin Helgesen Helm Helvering Sutherland Sweet Swift Morgan, La. Morgan, Okla. Morrison Moss Mudd. Swift Switzer
Taggart
Tague
Talbott
Taylor, Ark,
Taylor, Colo.
Temple
Tilson
Timberlake
Treadway
Yan Dyke Helvering Mudd.
Henry Murray
Hensley
Hernandez Nichols, S. C.
Holland North
Hood Oakey
Hopwood Oldfield
Houston Oliver
Howell Parker, N. J.
Hull, Tenn.
Humphreys, Miss. Peters Van Dyke Vare Venable Vinson

Walker

Ward Wason Watkins	Wheeler Williams, T. S. Williams, W. E. Williams, Ohio	Wilson, La. Wingo Winslow	Woods, Iowa Young, N. Dak. Young, Tex.
Watson, Va. Webb	Wilson, Fia.	Wise Wood, Ind.
Aswell	Gordon	YS—31. Keating	Shallenberger
Barkley	Gray, Ind.	Kincheloe	Sherwood -
Buchanan, Ill.	Hilliard	King	Sumners
Caraway Carlin	Howard Huddleston	Mays Park	Tavenner Thomas
Crosser	Jacoway	Quin	Thompson
Davis, Tex.	James Johnson Ky	Randall	Tillman
Eagle	Johnson, Ky.	Reilly	THE SECTION OF
		"PRESENT"—4
Bennet	Borland NOT VO	Lindbergh TING— 100.	London
Anderson	Emerson	Kreider	Porter
Anthony	Esch	Lafean Lesher	Pou Price
Bacharach Barchfeld	Estopinal Flynn	Lewis	Ragsdale
Beakes	Frear	Liebel	Reavis
Beales Bell	Gillett Godwin, N. C.	Loft Longworth	Riordan Roberts, Mass.
Benedict	Gould	McCracken	Roberts, Mass. Rucker, Mo.
Bruckner	Graham Gray Ala	McKenzie	Sabath
Burgess Callaway	Gray, Ala. Gray, N. J. Greene, Vt.	Maher Matthews	Scott, Pa. Scully
Cantrill	Greene, Vt.	Miller, Pa.	Sells
Carew Cartor Mass	Hamilton, N. Y. Harrison, Miss.	Mooney Morin	Shackleford Shouse
Carter, Mass. Charles	Harrison, Miss.	Mott	Sims
Clark, Fla.	Haskell	Nelson	Smith, Idaho
Cooper, Ohio Costello	Hicks Hill	Nolan Norton	Snell Stone
Dale, N. Y. Dale, Vt.	Hinds	Oglesby	Tinkham
Dale, Vt.	Hughes Humphrey Was	Olney h O'Shannassy	Towner Volstead
Davenport Dewalt	Humphrey, Was	Padgett Padgett	Watson, Pa.
Dooling	Kearns	Paige, Mass.	Whaley
Dupré Eagan	Keister Kent	Patten Platt	Wilson, Ill. Woodyard
Mr. CALLAY Mr. CANTRI	ss with Mr. Bar vay with Mr. Si LL with Mr. Sni with Mr. Carti	ELL.	setts. of Florida with R with Mr. Coo
	f New York wit
	PORT With Mr. D		L.
	T with Mr. Tow
	g with Mr. FREA
	with Mr. GILLE NAL with Mr. G
	with Mr. GRAY		THE BEACH
Mr. GRAY O	f Alabama with	Mr. GREENE of	Vermont.
Mr. HARRI	son of Mississi	ppi with Mr.	HAMILTON of I
York.
	with Mr. HASKEI
Mr. Transver	es with Mr. Hro	ow of Donnoule	onia
	R with Mr. WATE
Mr. Lewis	with Mr. WATS	REY of Washin
Mr. LEWIS Mr. LIEBEL	with Mr. WATE with Mr. HUMPH with Mr. HUST	REY of Washin
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humps with Mr. Hust with Mr. Kearns	IREY of Washin
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humps with Mr. Hust with Mr. Kearns with Mr. Reav	IREY of Washin ED.
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humps with Mr. Hust rith Mr. Kearns, it with Mr. Reav by with Mr. Kre with Mr. Lafe	HREY of Washin ED, IS. IDER, AN,	gton.
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humps with Mr. Hust rith Mr. Kearns, it with Mr. Reav by with Mr. Kre with Mr. Lafe	HREY of Washin ED, IS. IDER, AN,	gton.
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Hump with Mr. Hust with Mr. Kearns, with Mr. Reav with Mr. Kre with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr. Twith Mr. Will	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. IDER. AN. r. Longworth. Son of Illinois.	gton.
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Hump with Mr. Hust with Mr. Kearns, with Mr. Reav with Mr. Kre with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr. Twith Mr. Will	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. IDER. AN. r. Longworth. Son of Illinois.	gton.
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Mahes Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget Mr. Patte: Mr. Pou w	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Hust rith Mr. Kearns. with Mr. Reav y with Mr. Kre with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr tr with Mr. Wil n with Mr. McI th Mr. Roberts	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. IDER. AN. IT. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. CENZIE.	gton,
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Mahes Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget Mr. Pattet Mr. Pou w Mr. Price	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Humpi rith Mr. Kearns, with Mr. Reav with Mr. Kee with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr rt with Mr. Wil n with Mr. McI tith Mr. Roberts with Mr. Sells,	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. HDER. AN. r. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. CENZIE. Of Massachusei	gton,
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget Mr. Patter Mr. Pou w Mr. Price Mr. Ragsd	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Hust rith Mr. Kearns, with Mr. Reav with Mr. Lafe with Mr. Lafe unessy with M rr with Mr. Wil n with Mr. McI th Mr. Roberts with Mr. Roberts with Mr. Sells, ale with Mr. M	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. HDER. AN. T. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. CENZIE. Of Massachuset	gton,
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Maher Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget Mr. Patter Mr. Pou w Mr. Price Mr. Ragsd Mr. Reard	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Hump with Mr. Hump with Mr. Kearns, with Mr. Reav with Mr. Kre with Mr. Lape unessy with M r with Mr. Mol r with Mr. Mol ith Mr. Roberts with Mr. Sells, ALE with Mr. Mol on with Mr. Mol	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. HDER. AN. AN. IS. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. CENZIE. OF Massachuset GOONEY.	gton,
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Mahee Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. Padget Mr. Pattes Mr. Pou w Mr. Paice Mr. Ragsd Mr. Raerd Mr. Rucke	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Kearns. with Mr. Reav with Mr. Kee with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr. Twith Mr. With with Mr. Moe with Mr. Roberts with Mr. Sells. Ale with Mr. Moi cr of Missouri w	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. HDER. AN. IT. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. KENZIE. OF MASSACHUSE! OONEY. HN. ith Mr. Mort.	gton,
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Mahee Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget Mr. Pattee Mr. Pou w Mr. Price Mr. Ragsd Mr. Raero Mr. Raero Mr. Rucke Mr. Sabati	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Humpi vith Mr. Kearns. with Mr. Kearns. with Mr. Kee with Mr. Lafe with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr. Wil n with Mr. Wil n with Mr. Mol ith Mr. Roberts with Mr. Sells. Ale with Mr. Mol or of Missouri we with Mr. Nel	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. IDER. AN. IR. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. (EPEZIE. OF Massachuset (OONEY. RIN. ith Mr. Mort.	gton,
Mr. Lewis Mr. Liebel Mr. Loft w Mr. Mahes Mr. Oglese Mr. Olney Mr. O'Sha Mr. Padget Mr. Pattet Mr. Pou w Mr. Price Mr. Ragsd Mr. Reard Mr. Rucke Mr. Sabati Mr. Scull	with Mr. Wats with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Humpi with Mr. Kearns. with Mr. Reav with Mr. Kee with Mr. Lafe unessy with Mr. Twith Mr. With with Mr. Moe with Mr. Roberts with Mr. Sells. Ale with Mr. Moi cr of Missouri w	HREY OF Washin ED.  IS. HDER. AN. T. LONGWORTH. SON OF Illinois. CENZIE. Of Massachuset OONEY. HIN. HIN. MOTT. SON. AN.	gton,

Mr. Shouse with Mr. Norton. Mr. Sims with Mr. Parge of Massachusetts. Mr. Stone with Mr. Platt.

Mr. WHALEY with Mr. WOODYARD.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors. The gentleman from Montana [Mr. Stout] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. STOUT. Mr. Speaker, it will not require any very great explanation to fully acquaint Members of the House with the purposes of this resolution. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. has a line running through Montana. It has to have coal in order to operate its trains. It is reaching that point where it will soon have no coal, and this bill offers them, on the part of the Government, a lease of 640 acres of coal land at a price to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. HILLIARD. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. STOUT. I will.

Mr. HILLIARD. The gentleman has yielded to me for a Wait a minute. I yielded for a question.

Mr. STOUT. Wait a minute. I yielded Mr. HILLIARD. You said you yielded. Mr. STOUT. I yielded for a question. Mr. HILLIARD. This is all I want to say-

Mr. STOUT. You can have some time in a moment. Mr. HILLIARD. I will ask the gentleman a question: At the close of this debate, will you join me in asking that there shall be a yea-and-nay vote?

Mr. STOUT. I do not care whether there is a yea-and-nay vote or not. I am not going to join you in asking anything.

Mr. HILLIARD. All right.

Mr. STOUT. This matter has been quite thoroughly discussed. The Secretary of the Interior has given due consideration to it. The Senate considered it fully and exhaustively. The Public Lands Committee of this House gave it their usual careful and painstaking consideration, and reported it out with practical unanimity. So I can see no possible objection to it.

Mr. RAKER, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. STOUT. Yes, Mr. RAKER. The original resolution provided for 14,500

Mr. STOUT. No; 1,440 acres. Mr. RAKER. The resolution now before the House as amended includes 640 acres?

Mr. STOUT. Yes.

Mr. RAKER. And instead of a sale of the land, the resolution now provides for a lease, at a price to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior under that lease?

Mr. STOUT. Exactly; yes. As the resolution originally came before this body it provided for 1,440 acres.

Mr. SCOTT of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT of Michigan. I would like to ask the gentleman if there is any limitation on the lease that is to be granted by the Secretary of the Interior? Can he grant a lease for 50 years, or 1 year, or 10 years?

Mr. STOUT. He can grant any sort of lease that he desires. This coal is lying there undeveloped. With 1,300 miles of railroad to be supplied, you can imagine how long a 5-foot vein, even of good coal, would last on 640 acres of land. The committee amended this bill in some particulars, providing for a lease instead of a sale of the land to the railroad company, and there was read into the joint resolution to-day a further amendment, which reduces the acreage, as has been suggested by the gentleman from California [Mr. Raker], from 1,440 acres to 640 acres. That was done so as to obviate any possible objection. At the present time four individuals under the present coal laws can go out there—even if this bill should not pass or before it should be passed—at this moment and file upon those 640 acres of coal land and pay the Government's price and become the owners of it in that manner. It has been lying there all these years. It has been lying there beside the railroad tracks for eight years, and despite that fact it has not been considered of sufficient value by any private citizens from there or elsewhere to warrant them in filing upon it; and that comes from this fact: This land is undoubtedly of great value to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Rallroad Co. It is of no value to anyone else, for the reason that it is coal of a comparatively low grade. I burn it in my own furnace, and I know what it is. It is fit only for steaming purposes. For a private individual to attempt to go in there and develop that field it would, according to the figures of competent engineers, cost $300,000. But the railroad company has dug out a section right up to this location. It has put from $600,000 to $800,000 worth of machinery into its shafts and tunnels, and it is all ready to proceed. All it needs to do is to go and dig out the coal.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Has the gentleman any information as to the price to be paid by the railroads under this lease? Mr. STOUT. That is in the hands of the Secretary of the

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And does the Secretary of the Interior fix the price that the employees of the company shall pay

Mr. STOUT. That may be incorporated in the lease, but there is nothing on that in this resolution. The railroad company is not permitted to sell this coal to anybody except its own employees. It will not enter into competition at all. It is taking this coal solely and wholly for steaming purposes.

As I pointed out here on a previous occasion, the other railroad companies had opportunities to acquire coal lands, and they got all they could; but when this particular company went through the West the coal lands were all gone, or such restrictions had been placed around the coal that they could not get it.

I think the enactment of this joint resolution will serve a distinct public purpose. I may say that we have been undergoing a coal famine out there recently. My people have been suffering severely, and by permitting the railroad to open up this little tract it will permit the other independent mines to supply the public trade.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time. [Applause.] The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana reserves the rest of his time. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HILLIARD] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Mays].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Utah is recognized for

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. STOUT] stated that this joint resolution had received very deliberate consideration in the Committee on the Public Lands and had been passed practically by a unanimous vote. are that this bill was considered in the Committee on the Public Lands for about 30 minutes, and a subcommittee was appointed, consisting of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. STOUT], the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER], and myself, to further consider the merits of the proposition.

We went into this matter at some length, and when it came to the question of reporting upon this bill two of the subcommittee were opposed to it, and one, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Stour], favored it. I think perhaps it is wise that we should give a few of the reasons why we were opposed to it. gentleman quoted the Secretary of the Interior as being in favor of this bill. The Secretary of the Interior made a report on this bill, and in view of the fact that we were just passing through the House a general law providing that a railroad company might for its own uses lease 2,560 acres of land, he favored a leasing proposition on this bill, but not a selling proposition. The Senate, however, passed this bill to sell 2,000 acres of land to the Milwaukee Railroad Co., the Republic Coal Co. being a subsidiary of the Milwaukee Railroad-to sell it outright-giving them exclusive control, of course, over that

We oppose this bill because there is no precedent for it in all the history of legislation. When the subcommittee were considering it I addressed a letter to the Secretary of the Interior, trying to find some reason why he favored it, and I asked him to report to us, as a subcommittee, the reason why he favored it. I asked him to give the formalities necessary for anybody to secure coal lands under the laws of the United I asked him if in all the laws there was any precedent for such legislation. I asked him if it was not a special privilege conferred upon a railroad corporation. I asked him how much land a citizen could acquire under the law. I asked him how much land an association of citizens could acquire and under what circumstances. He replied to these questions, first, that a citizen could acquire 160 acres of coal land by making required application and payment and by exhausting his right to acquire; that an association of citizens could acquire 320 acres of coal land, provided each member of the association was qualified to make entry upon coal lands; that an association of citizens, provided they had already expended the sum of $5,000 upon a coal mine, could acquire not to exceed 640 acres of coal lands. He said there had been no precedent for this legislation in all the history of legislation, but he thought in view of the fact that the Congress had just passed a leasing bill providing that 2,560 acres might be acquired under a lease this legislation might be justified.

The Milwaukee Railroad Co. is owned by the Standard Oil Co. It comes in here pretending that it is facing a great emergency; that it has no coal with which to run its rallroad. The Milwaukee Railroad Co. has just as much coal as anybody else in the market, and if anybody who has no coal should come in here and ask for a coal mine, you would not be prepared to grant such a special privilege. We have sugar factories in the West that are out of coal. We have cement factories out there that are out of coal. We have whole communities out of coal. They are not now coming here and asking that you pass a special bill granting special legislation to them that will grant to them the right of having a coal mine. You will recall that a few weeks ago several municipalities came in here asking that a small tract of coal land be granted them at the market price. Grand Junction, Colo., suffering as it was by the monopoly that these same railroad companies have exercised for 20 years out there by virtue of the fact that they own the coal of that country, came in here asking that that municipality be granted the right to purchase a small subdivision of coal land to furnish coal to the people of that municipality, that they might be relieved of this monopoly. That was objected to by gentlemen on the other side. The Mr. LENROOT. In any of those cases did it provide that they should pay for the land?

Mr. MAYS. That they should pay the market price for the coal. Mr. LENROOT. I think the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. MAYS. No.

Mr. LENROOT. I think it was a pure donation in each case. Mr. MAYS. The gentleman from Wisconsin can ask the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] about that. tleman from Wyoming asked that the little town of Kaycee, Wyo., be granted the right to purchase 40 acres of coal at the market price, in order that the people of that town might have a coal mine for the relief of that municipality. We have had some experience in the West on account of these coal railroad companies owning coal lands there. I have no confidence in the amendment which the gentleman proposes to offer. I know when that bill goes back to the Senate-I feel sure the amendwill be stricken out. I have all assurances of that, and that a pure and simple sale will be carried through by this bill when it goes back to the Senate. I could get no assurance from the conferees of the Public Lands Committee that they would hold tenaciously to this leasing proposition that only 640 acres would be granted instead of 2,000, as the bill first provided. This bill has been before this House since the first session of the Sixtythird Congress. It never has had a favorable consideration. They have had a persistent lobby. The president of the company has been here lobbying with Congressmen. The attorneys of the railroad company have camped on their trail and urged that the bill be passed, and I do not believe that we have had before us in the history of my little time in Congress such a dangerous proposition as is this. because of the fact that it establishes a precedent. We have in our State one railroad company that has owned and controlled 95 per cent of the coal business of that State, and if we should pass such legislation as this I know that that railroad company would be here asking that coal lands adjoining be granted to them by special legislation. Why should a railroad company be granted a right that an association of citizens can not obtain? If you want to form yourselves into a coal company, into an association of citizens, under what circumstances would you get coal land? Not by special legislation but by the general laws, as the Secretary of the Interior has set out in his instructions to us. I am satisfied that the Secretary of the Interior would never approve of this bill providing for the sale of the land as it will undoubtedly come back to us from conference. I believe that we ought to defeat this legislation. The railroad companies will be in here urging similar legislation if we pass this bill. In the history of the Congress, the Secretary of the Interior says, no such bill was ever passed. Why should you pass it now? I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BENNET].

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, my reasons for not being for this bill are almost diametrically opposite to those of the gentleman who last spoke. I can not claim an extensive knowledge of legislation, but, so far as my research goes, this is the first time that the Congress of the United States has attempted to take away from a man who either bought or paid for a thing or a man who got it under law the right to dispose of it as such property is usually disposed of. It seems to me that this is an extremely bad precedent and along the same lines as some heretofore passed by this Congress of attempting to limit the rights of a man to do what he pleases with the property that he has. If the railroad company is entitled to lease or buy coal land, it ought to have the right to dispose of the product. We introduced a new element into legislation. Listen to this, if this is the language that is now in the bill:

Provided, however, That the coal taken from said described lands shall be used only for the uses and purposes of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. and the railway corporations owned and controlled by it, and not for commercial purposes, nor for sale to the public except to such employees of said corporation as may be employed in the actual mining operations conducted on said described lands.

Mr. MONDELL. Has the gentleman from New York forgotten that that was the intelligent action that the House took in connection with the general leasing law—the same sort of provision?

Mr. BENNET. The gentleman from New York has neither forgotten nor remembered it. He did not know it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Has the gentleman knowledge that it is in harmony with the commodity clause in the interstate-com-

Mr. BENNET. I stated that this Congress had passed some bad legislation, and I thought this was in line with it. As a result of that sort of legislation, they are to-day taking the steamboats from the Great Lakes in the gentleman's territory.

Mr. STAFFORD. That is not ascribable to the commodity clause of the interstate-commerce act.

Mr. BENNET. During all this Congress I have been protesting against bills that interfered with the rights of people in attempting to demonstrate that there is at least one Jeffersonian Democrat left in the House of Representatives, and I am he. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Not for long.

Mr. BENNET. Only until the 4th of March, as the gentleman from Illinois suggests.

Mr. CALDWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENNET. Yes.

Mr. CALDWELL. Does the gentleman think that a railroad would have authority under its charter to mine coal for general sale to the public?

I do not know what the charter of the rail-Mr. BENNET. road is, but I do know that the precedent is a bad one-that we shall by statute provide that a man who buys something can not exercise the ordinary right that the other citizens of the United States have in relation to property of the same kind.

Mr. CALDWELL. The gentleman does not catch my point. If we authorize the making of a law that would permit the lease, then the lease would fail because the railroad would have no authority to enter into that kind of lease.

Mr. BENNET. I do not know about that. Mr. STOUT. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. Lenroot. Mr. Lenroot. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of this bill, and I believe it fully safeguards the public interests in every way. It is exactly in line with the general leasing bill that has been passed by this House. In that bill an individual was permitted to lease 2.560 acres. A railroad was permitted to make a lease, providing the coal was used solely for the purpose of the railroad, and an additional lease was authorized by that bill for every 200 miles of road.

Mr. MAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the gentleman.
Mr. MAYS. I want to ask if that bil' became a law?

Mr. LENROOT. No; but the House has expressed itself to the fullest extent it was able to do so.

Mr. MAYS. That was a general law, if the gentleman remembers?

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman has referred to some municipal bills. He has referred to the Grand Junction bill and to the Kaycee bill. which was objected to to-day, and has sought to have the House believe—and I do not question the gentleman's good faith—that we were discriminating in favor of a railroad company. I want to say to the gentleman that in the case of the Grand Junction bill the price provided was the minimum price of $1.25 an acre, and did not provide for an appraised price at all, and the gentleman from Colorado will correct me if I am wrong. In the case of the Kaycee bill, I hold it in my hand, and it provides that in the case of lease there should be no royalty or charge whatever. So far as discrimination is concerned, the discrimination has not been in favor of the railroad company, but has been in favor of the municipality, as it ought to be. With reference to this matter the railroad is limited in the use of this coal to its own purposes. My friend from New York [Mr. Bennet] objects to that. I wonder if my friend from New York thinks that a railroad has a right to engage in any kind of private business?

Mr. BENNET. Does the gentleman ask me a question?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes. Mr. BENNET. If it is authorized by its charter. If we grant

It rights, it ought to be permitted to exercise those rights.

Mr. LENROOT. I will say in reply to the gentleman, that if any railroad corporation engaged in interstate commerce has the right to engage in every kind of private business, it is the duty of the Congress of the United States to prevent it so far as it is possible, and it is entirely in harmony with good public policy to limit the use of this railroad company to this coal for its own uses and its own purposes.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman

Mr. LENROOT. The situation is that the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern Railroads are competitors of this Milwaukee road, a transcontinental line. The Northern Pacific has thousands of acres of coal lands which it secured by land grant. The Great Northern Railroad has a large quantity of coal. road that had no land granted whatever simply seeks to get the right to either purchase or lease 640 acres of coal land at the highest price, asking no favors from this Government and pay to the Government what it is worth, in order that it may get coal to run its own engines.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Nebraska?

Mr. LENROOT.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Speaker, the bill provides, as read it, that it shall be leased to the Republic Coal Co. and not to the railroad company.

Mr. LENROOT. That is correct. The Republic Coal Co. is subsidiary company of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, and all of the stock of the coal company is held by the Milwaukee road as it appeared before our committee.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. The gentleman is aware that that is the way all railroad companies handle coal which they sell to other people.

Mr. LENROOT. Oh, the gentleman will notice that there is a prohibition in this bill against the coal company using it for any other purpose than to supply the railroad company.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. The bill provides that the coal shall be sold to no other company than the railroad company?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. And without that prohibition in the bill the subsidiary company could sell to others.

Mr. LENROOT. The proviso absolutely prevents it. The provision is that the coal shall be used only for the uses and provision is that the coar shart be used only for the uses and purposes of the Milwaukee road.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. STOUT. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Ferris].

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, this bill in a word authorizes the Republic Coal Co. to lease 640 acres of land to mine coal upon that land for their own use and no other. It provides that they must pay what the Government says it is worth. Third, under existing law any citizen or individual can buy coal and pay for it according to the price fixed by the same department that will fix this price. The whole objection to this bill results from the fact the name of a railroad is in it. The Government of the United States, as well as anybody else, ought to use a little sense about legislating, and it is not proper, because there is a provision in here that a railroad is to buy or lease some of this coal for its own use to burn in its own engines, not to enter into commerce in any way, to be scared to death and vote against it. The bill ought to have passed by unanimous consent and ought to have passed long ago by unanimous consent, but the gentle-man from Utah [Mr. Mays] has objected to it, which of course was within his right, and he opposes it now, which is within his right, and also the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HILLIARD]. but I insist anyone who sits down and reads this bill and the report will conclude there is no valid objection to it. The railways herein can not enter into commerce or competition under this bill. They merely desire to buy for their own use. They agree to pay all for it that the Interior Department says it is worth.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I can not; I have only three minutes. Mr. FERRIS. I can not; I have only three minutes. The Interior Department reports it favorably. The Geological Survey reports it favorably. Anyone who will go into it carefully will approve it. It is simply the word railroad that gives some people hysteria. This railway is nothing to me one way or the other, but the passage of this bill is but common justice. They ask no favors. They propose to pay full value for all they get. We passed a bill through this House, H. R. 406, the so-called conservation bill sutherizing mining companies and individuals. conservation bill, authorizing mining companies and individuals to lease 2,560 acres of coal land where this only provides for the leasing of 640 acres of land. That bill passed by this House twice by unanimous consent after careful consideration. What earthly objection can there be to allowing a railroad company to buy or lease coal for their own use, paying full value therefor? The Government has 53,000,000 acres of coal. The railroad has not a coal mine in 1,500 miles of this place. The next coal land suitable for a supply is found way down in Iowa. They need the able for a supply is found way down in lowa. They need the coal, and they are willing to pay what the Government says it is worth. The opposition to this bill is simply a tempest in a teapot. There really is no foundation for the opposition. They only ask to take 640 acres, and I would like to know what valid objection there can be to this bill? The railway asks no quarter. They merely ask to do a necessary thing and agree to pay full value for it. What more could they do? What more does any thoughtful person want them to do? I yield back my time if I have any. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman yields back one minute. Mr. STOUT. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman to use the remainder of his time.

Mr. HILLIARD. I yield to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Mays]; how much time does he wish?

Mr. MAYS. Mr. Speaker, I only want half a minute to say the gentleman from Wisconsin tried to make the impression here that I had misconstrued the provisions of a certain measure. I have just talked with the father of the bill providing that we grant land to Grand Junction, Colo., and he told me my recollection was right; that they offered to pay the minimum price fixed by the Secretary of the Interior for the coal lands sought to be purchased by the town of Grand Junction.

Mr. LENROOT. Did not the gentleman state to the House the appraised price in his original statement?

Mr. MAYS. I may have said appraised price, but there is some-times a minimum appraised price and a maximum— Mr. LENROOT. I read from the other bill where there was no royalty whatever.

Mr. MAYS. That is a very small difference.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to detain the House long. I want to confess now it was I who called you here. I wanted you to hear the discussion of this bill. If you want to give the railroad company this special privilege, I shall not complain if you do it; but I want you to know what the bill is and do it with full knowledge, and if at the end of the debate you shall conclude that you want to do this I am going to ask that there be a yea-and-nay vote, and I sincerely hope that you will bely rea to get that help me to get that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Ferris] seems to think that he possesses the last word of wisdom about this bill. He says it ought never to have been objected to; that it ought not now to be objected to. Well, why not? If I had introduced a bill when I came here to give the gentleman from Oklahoma a chance to lease land on terms that you gentlemen could not Jease it under the general law, the committee would have laughed at me and you would have laughed at me, and I would have been placed in the newspapers, if I had been a man of any consequence, as a joke. Yet the gentleman from Okla-home, with all his powers as a great leader of this House, feigns surprise that there is any opposition to the measure and would frown it down.

The distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot]. who recently has become a great militarist [laughter], labors under the impression that this coal company, because it may not sell to other people, is going to render a great service. Why, the gentleman from Oklahoma and several of these other gentlemen on the Public Lands Committee put in their entire time through all the hot summer last year in trying to develop the West, to the end that the people out there right have a chance; and yet they come in here now and advocate that this coal company shall not be permitted to sell coal to the people out there, although they may be freezing, as the distinguished gentleman from Montana tells us here in this presence. Why should they not sell coal? Why should they not be required to do it? Some gentleman says there is no limit to it. It may be 50 years. For purposes of the railroad that is a sale and nothing else.

Mr. Speaker, it may be fine to be generous with public property, as gentlemen seem to believe, but I venture the word of warning that a different rule obtains in this country now. It is no longer the practice to yield valuable properties to railroad companies under special acts. Uncle Sam is more careful with his heritage. He wants to preserve it. He wants the people to have a chance. It is safe as well as just to take the people's side. They can not have a lobby, as do the great interests, and that it the many recent that their care of his larger than the state of the state that is the more reason that their cause should be championed by somebody on this floor.

Mr. SWITZER. Does the gentleman believe that the railroad company really needs this coal to operate its line out there?

Mr. HILLIARD. I think the railroad needs this coal just as John D. Rockefeller needs everything in the world he does not now have, and for no better reason. [Applause.] railroad company, if it has not coal, can buy it from the coal companies out there like other people buy it, and give those other coal companies a chance to make a little money. course, Mr. Speaker, they would like to get the coal cheaper than you and I could buy it, but they ought to go into the market and patronize some other coal companies and give some other soulless corporation a chance to make a dollar.

Mr. SWITZER. Does not the gentleman believe that the cheaper the railroad company can get the coal the cheaper the Interstate Commerce Commission will make the rates? [Laugh-

Mr. HILLIARD. The laughter that goes over the Chamber answers the gentleman. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Colorado has expired.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] is recognized for four minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I have no interest in the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, which does not run through my district, but I have some admiration for the road, because it has been built in competition with the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, out to the Pacific coast, and is the only rail-

Northern Pacine, out to the Pacine coast, and is the only railroad in the country, so far as I know, which is attempting to conserve the natural resources by running trains over the mountains by electric power. [Applause.]

Now, what does it ask? It asks that the Republic Coal Co., which it owns, shall have the right to continue to mine coal. The Republic Coal Co. has a plant now costing $1,000,000. Coal which they owned is exhausted. All the other coal there is owned either by the Government or the Northern Pacific Paulyand Railroad.

The Government owns the even-numbered sections and the Northern Pacific owns the odd-numbered sections. The Northern Pacific and the Milwaukee are in competition with each other. The Milwaukee road ought not to be compelled to buy its coal The Milwaukee road ought not to be compelled to buy its coal from the Northern Pacific Railroad, and the only other place that it can buy its coal from is from the Government of the United States. It is willing to pay a fair price for it. It is to the interest of the country that the railroads have coal with which to operate their trains. This company can not carry on its business without coal. When it pays the full price to the Government, why should not we give it the right to burn the coal in its locomotives? What objection is there to it? No objection has been offered. They can not run without the coal. They have got to buy it from the Government or else they have got to buy it from the Northern Pacific Railroad, or they have got to go a long distance away and buy coal and carry it to this section of the road, greatly interfering with transportation and greatly increasing the cost. And the cost eventually is paid by the public. We ought to give them the right to mine this coal, paying for it what it is worth.

The objection of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Benner]

The objection of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bennet] is not valid. The grant runs to the Republic Coal Co. While it is a subsidiary of the Milwaukee road, we do not want to give to the Republic Coal Co. the right to mine coal to sell to anybody else. If the grant ran directly to the railroad company the present law would cover it, but it runs indirectly to the railroad company, and hence the amendment providing that they can not sell the coal in the market. We do not propose to give the railroad company the right to mine coal, transport it, and sell it in competition with people who have to pay for the transportation of coal. [Applause.] Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the rules be suspended and this paper that has been read at the Clerk's desk, including the amendments, be agreed to? The question was taken.

The SPEAKER. In the judgment of the Chair, two-thirds having voted in the affirmative

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado demands a division. Those in favor of suspending the rules and passing the Senate joint resolution with the amendments read in will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] hundred and fifty-two gentlemen have risen in the affirmative. Those opposed will rise and stand until they are counted. [After Thirty-nine gentlemen have risen in the negative. On this vote the ayes are 152 and the noes are 39.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado makes the point of no quorum.

The Chair will count.

Mr. HILLIARD. I submit that the Speaker has just counted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows, but the Chair will have to count over again. A whole lot of people do not get up on either side. [After counting.] Two hundred and sixteen gentlemen are present—not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of suspending the rules and passing the Senate joint resolution with amendments read in will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 234, nays 52, answered "present" 3, not voting 144, as follows:

monered pre	sent " 3, not votii	—234.
bercrombie	Evans	Langley	Rouse
dair	Farr	Lee	Rowe
damson	Ferris	Lehlbach	Rowland
iken	Fess	Lenroot	Rubey
lexander		Lieb	Ruscoll Mo
llen	Flood	Lindbergh	Russell, Mo. Russell, Ohio
Almon		Linthicum	Sanford
shbrook	Fordney	Littlepage	Saunders
swell	Foss	Littlepage
Black	Foster	Lloyd Lobeck	Schall
	Freeman		Sherley
Blackmon		Longworth	Siegel
Borland	Fuller	McAndrews	Sisson
Bowers	Gallivan	McArthur	Sloan
Britt	Gandy	McClintic	Smith, Minn.
Britten	Gard	McCulloch	Smith, N. Y.
Browning	Garland	McDermott	Smith, Tex.
3rumbaugh_	Garner	McFadden	Stafford
Buchanan, Tex.	Garrett	McGillicuddy	Steagall
Burke	Glass	McLaughlin	Stedman
Burnett	Glynn	McLemore	Steele, Iowa
Butler	Good	Madden	Steele, Pa.
Byrnes, S. C.	Gray, Ala.	Magee	Steenerson
	Green, Iowa	Mann	Stephens, Miss.
Candler, Miss.	Gregg	Mapes	Stephens, Miss. Stephens, Nebr
Cannon	Griest	Martin	Stephens, Tex.
Capstick	Griffin	Meeker	Sterling
Capstick Cary	Guernsey	Miller, Del.	Stiness
asev	Hadley	Miller Minn.	Stout
Casey Coady	Hamilton, Mich.	Miller, Minn. Miller, Pa.	Sulloway
Coleman	Hamlin	Mondell	Sweet
Collier	Hastings	Moon	Swift
Cooper, W. Va.	Hangen	Moore, Pa.	Switzer
Cooper, Wis.	Hawley	Moores, Ind.	Taylor, Colo.
or Tor	Hayden	Morgan, Okla.	Temple
Cox Cramton Crisp		Morrison	Thomas
Telen	Hayes Heaton	Mass	Tilson
Curry	Heaton Heffin	Mudd	Timberlake
Dollingen	Holosop	Murray
Danfanth		Neely	Van Dyke
Danierth	Henn		Vare
Darrow	Henry	Nelson	Vinson
Davis, Minn.	Hensiey	Nicholls, S. C.	Volstead
	Honand	Michels, Mich.	Walker
Dempsey	Hollingsworth Hood Houston Howard	North	Walsh
Denison	Hood	Norton	Wason
Dent	Houston	Oakey	Watkins
Dies	Howard	Oldfield	Watson, Va.
Dill	Humphreys, Miss.	Oliver	Wheeler
	Hutchinson	Parker, N. J.	Williams, T. S.
	Igoe	Parker, N. Y.	Williams, T. S. Williams, W. E Williams, Ohio
Doughton	Johnson, S. Dak.	Phelan	Williams, Ohio
Driscoll	Johnson, Wash.	Platt	Wilson, La.
Dunn	Johnson, Wash. Kennedy, Iowa	Pratt	Wingo
Jupré	Kennedy, R. I.	Rainey	Winslow
Dyer	Kettner	Rauch	Wood, Ind.
Eagle	Kiess, Pa.	Rayburn	Woods, Iowa
Edmonds	Kinkaid	Ricketts	Young, N. Dak
Edwards	Kitchin	Roberts, Nev.	Young, Tex.
Elston	Konop	Rodenberg
Esch	La Follette	Rogers

	NAYS—52.
Ayres Bailey Barkley Buchanan, III. Caldwell Caraway Carlin Church Connelly Conry Crosser Dowell	Farley Gallagher Goodwin, Ark, Gordon Gray, Ind. Hardy Harrison, Va. Helvering Hilliard Hopwood Huddleston Jacoway	Johnson, Ky Keating Kincheloe King London McCracken Mays Montague Park Powers Quin Raker
Ellsworth	James	Ramseyer

ANSWERED "PRESENT "-3.

Carter, Okla. Chandler, N. Y. Charles	TING—144.  Doremus  Drukker  Eagan
Chandler, N. Y. Charles	Drukker
Clark, Fla. Cline Cooper, Ohio Copley Costello Crago Cullop Dale, N. Y.	Emerson Estopinal Fairchild Fitzgerald Flynn Frear Gardner Gillett Godwin, N. C.
Davenport Davis, Tex.	Graham . Gray, N. J.
Dewalt Dickinson Dooling	Greene, Mass. Greene, Vt. Hamili Hamilton, N. Y.
	Chiperfield Clark, Fla. Cline Cooper, Ohio Copley Costello Crago Cullop Dale, N. Y. Dale, Vt. Davenport Davis, Tex. Dewalt Dickinson Harrison Miss.

Hart
Haskell
Hernandez
Hicks
Hill
Hinds
Howell
Hughes
Hull, Jowa
Hull, Tenn.
Humphrey, Wash.
Husted
Jones
Kahn
Kearns Keister
Kelley Kelley

Randall

Reilly Scott, Mich. Shallenberger Sherwood Smith, Mich. Sumners

Tague
Tavenner
Taylor, Ark.
Thompson
Tillman
Wise

Key, Ohio	Morin	Riordan	Snell
Kreider	Mott	Roberts, Mass.	Snyder
Lafean	Nolan	Rucker, Ga.	Sparkman
Lazaro	Oglesby	Rucker, Mo.	Stone
Lesher	Olney	Sabath	Sutherland
Lever	O'Shaunessy	Scott, Pa.	Taggart
Lewis	Overmyer	Scully	Talbott
Liebel	Padgett	Sears	Tinkham
Loft	Page, N. C.	Sells	Towner
Loud	Paige, Mass.	Shackleford	Treadway
McKellar	Patten	Shouse	Ward
McKenzie	Peters	Sims	Watson, Pa.
McKinley	Porter	Sinnott	Webb
Maher	Pou	Slayden	Whaley
Matthews	Price	Slemp	Wilson, Fla.
Mooney	Ragsdale	Small	Wilson, III.
Morgan, La.	Reavis	Smith, Idaho	Woodyard

So (two-thirds voting in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed. The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Bell with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.

Mr. Clark of Florida with Mr. Gillett.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY with Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. STONE with Mr. AUSTIN.

Mr. Sabath with Mr. Anthony. Mr. Aswell with Mr. Ward. Mr. Shouse with Mr. Charles. Mr. Barnhart with Mr. Beales. Mr. BOOHER with Mr. BROWNE. Mr. CULLOP with Mr. CAMPBELL

Mr. Davis of Texas with Mr. Chandler of New York. Mr. Dickinson with Mr. Chiperfield. Mr. Doolittle with Mr. Copley. Mr. Doremus with Mr. Crago.

Mr. FITZGERALD with Mr. DRUKKER. Mr. HAMILL with Mr. EMERSON.

Mr. Hull of Tennessee with Mr. Fairchild.

Mr. Jones with Mr. Greene of Massachusetts.

Mr. Jones with Mr. Greene of Massachus Mr. Key of Ohio with Mr. Hernandez. Mr. Lazaro with Mr. Hinds. Mr. Lever with Mr. Howell. Mr. McKellar with Mr. Hull of Iowa. Mr. Morgan of Louisiana with Mr. Kahn. Mr. Overmyer with Mr. Keister.

Mr. Overmyer with Mr. Keister.
Mr. Page of North Carolina with Mr. Kelley.
Mr. Rucker of Georgia with Mr. Treadway.
Mr. Wilson of Florida with Mr. Sutherland.
Mr. Sears with Mr. McKinley.
Mr. Slayden with Mr. Mathews.
Mr. Small with Mr. Peters.
Mr. Sparkman with Mr. Porter.
Mr. Treggarm with Mr. Synyrote.

Mr. Sparkman with Mr. Porter,
Mr. Taggart with Mr. Sinnott.
Mr. Talbott with Mr. Bennet.
Mr. Webb with Mr. Snyder.
Mr. Bennet. Mr. Speaker, I find I am paired with the gentleman from Maryland, Mr. Talbott. Therefore I withdraw my vote, and vote "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will block the doors.

Two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, unlock the doors. the rules are suspended and the bill, with the amendments read into it, is passed.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. TILSON. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by printing in the Record an address delivered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bennet] on Lincoln's birthday before the Young Men's Republican Club of New Haven, Conn. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURRAY. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the farm-land registration system.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on vocational training.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on vocational education.

Is there objection? There was no objection.

DANISH WEST INDIES.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 20755) to carry out the provisions of the treaty of August 4, 1916, for the purchase of the Danish West Indian Islands, and for other purposes, with the amendments recommended by the Committee on Foreign Affairs read into the

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 20755) and the committee amendments read into it. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

tee amendments read into it. The Clerk will report the bill. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all military, civil, and judicial powers necessary to govern the West Indian Islands acquired from Denmark shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct until Congress shall provide for the government of said islands.

Sc. 2. That on and after the passage of this act there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles coming into the United States or its possessions, from the West Indian Islands ceded to the United States by Denmark, the rates of duty and internal-revenue taxes which are required to be levied, collected, and paid upon like articles imported from foreign countries: Provided, That all articles, the growth or product of, or manufactured in such islands from materials the growth or product of such islands or of the United States, or of both, or which do not contain foreign materials to the value of more than 20 per cent of their total value, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from such islands shall hereafter be admitted free of duty.

Sec. 3. That until Congress shall otherwise provide, all laws now imposing taxes in the West Indian Islands acquired from Denmark, including the customs laws and regulations, shall, in so far as compatible with the changed sovereignty, continue in effect, except that articles the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States shall be admitted therein free of duty: Provided further, That upon exportation of sugar to foreign countries or the shipment thereof to the United States or any of its possessions there shall be levied, collected, and paid thereon an export duty of $8 per ton of 2,000 pounds in lieu of any export tax now required by law.

Sec. 4. That the duties and taxes collected in pursuance of this act shall not be covered into the general fund of the Treasury of the United States,

United States, but shall be paid into the treasury of the said islands, to be used and expended for the government and benefit of said islands.

Sec. 5. That the sum of $25,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid in the city of Washington to the diplomatic representative or other agent of His Majesty the King of Denmark duly authorized to receive said money, in full consideration of the cession of the Danish West Indian Islands to the United States made by the convention between the United States of America and His Majesty the King of Denmark entered into August 4, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 17th day of January, 1917.

Sec. 6. That the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated for the purpose of carrying this act into effect, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and to be applied under the direction of the President of the United States.

Sec. 7. That this act, with the exception of section 5, shall be inforce and effect and become operative immediately upon the payment by the United States of said sum of $25,000,000. The fact and date of such payment shall thereupon be made public by a proclamation issued by the President, and published in the said Danish West Indian Islands and in the United States. Section 5 shall become immediately effective and the appropriation thereby provided for shall be immediately available.

Amend the title so as to read:

"A bill to provide a temporary government for the West Indian Islands acquired by the United States from Denmark by the convention entered into between said countries on the 4th day of August, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 7th day of September, 1916, and for other purposes."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? Mr. FORDNEY. I demand a second.

Mr. FLOOD. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan demands a second, and the gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objecwas no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Flood] is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] to 20 minutes.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, this bill provides a government for the West Indian Islands acquired by the United States from Denmark by treaty entered into between said countries on the 4th day of August, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 7th day of September, 1916; provides for raising revenue to support the government of the islands; and makes an appropriation to pay Denmark the amount agreed upon by the treaty.

These islands consist of three larger islands and a number of smaller islands. The larger ones are St. Thomas, St. John, and St. Croix. Their population is about 33,000. St. Thomas has an extraordinary fine harbor, which is deemed a very desirable acquisition.

The trade of the islands is largely with the United States and amounts to over a million and a quarter dollars. It has long been the opinion of Americans that we should own these islands. The first negotiations looking to the acquisition of them was begun by Mr. Seward in 1866, during the administration of Mr. Lincoln. At that time there were a number of offers and counteroffers, and finally our Secretary of State offered $7,500,000 for the islands of St. John and St. Thomas. question of the sale was submitted to the people of the two islands and they voted overwhelmingly in favor of it. Rigsdag of Denmark promptly ratified the treaty and the King signed it. It was not acted upon by our Senate for several years and was then rejected.

Another treaty was entered into in 1902 for the purchase of all three of the islands and the adjacent islands and rocks, the consideration being $5,000,000. This was ratified by the United States Senate, but was rejected by one of the houses of the Danish Rigsdag.

The present treaty has been ratified by both countries.

The advantages of securing the islands are well stated by Secretary Lansing:

This convention is responsive to the conviction of both Governments, as well as of the people of the islands, that the Danish West Indies should belong to the United States. This conviction, as is well known, has been manifested in earlier treaties for the transfer of these islands to the United States. Without entering upon any extended historical review of the negotiations of these earlier treaties, it may be pointed out that the first negotiations for the purchase of the islands were initiated by Secretary Seward during the administration of President Lincoln and before the close of the Civil War, culminating in the convention signed at Copenhagen October 24, 1867, during the administration of President Johnson, for the cession of the islands of St. Thomas and St. John. It is the opinion of students of the subject that this convention was brought about through the conviction of the United States, gained by its naval operations during the Civil War, of the need of a naval coaling supply and repair station in the Caribbean Sea in order that the United States might be placed on a footing with other great powers owning Islands in those waters. This conviction no doubt, was strengthened by the fact that the United States emerged from that war as a maritime power to whom a good harbor and depot in the West Indies had become a matter of so great importance, if not of necessity, that the United States could not wish to see the Danish West Indies fall into the hands of another power.

Although the plebiscite in St. Thomas and St. John held under the treaty was promptly approved by the Danish Rigsdag and ratified and signed by the King, and although the period for ratification was extended from time to time to April 14, 1870, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations took no action until March 24, 1870, when Senator Summer reported it adversely and the Senate acquiesced in that opinion.

Prior to the Spanish War overtures were again made for the cession signed by the King, and although the period for ratification was extended from time to time to April 14, 1870, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations took no action until March 24, 1870, when Senator Summer reported it adversely and the Senate acquiesced in that opinion.

Prior to the Spanish War overtures were again made for the cession of the islands—this time initiated by the Danish Government. During the Spanish War the question of the purchase of the islands was further agitated. Concurrently with the discussion of the Isthmian Canal and the protection of the islands obtained from Spain, a second treaty for the purchase of the Danish West Indies was signed at Washington, January 24, 1902. In reporting this treaty favorably to the Senate, Senator Cullom, of the Committee on Foreign Relations, stated: "These Islands, together with Porto Rico, are of great importance in a strategic way, whether the strategy be military or commercial St. Thomas is the natural point of call for all European trade bound to the West Indies, Central America, or northern South America. These islands, together with Porto Rico, form the northeastern corner of the Caribbean Sea, and are of great importance in connection with the American isthmus, where a canal will be constructed between the Atlantic and Pacific. They are of first importance in connection with our control of the Windward Passage."

The treaty was approved by the United States Senate February 17, 1902, but failed of ratification by a tie vote in the upper house of the Danish Rigsdag.

All of the reasons upon which the two prior treaties were based, whether strategic, economic, or political, are of more force to-day than in previous years. There can be no question as to the value of St. Thomas Harbor as a naval port, with its circular configuration, ample roadsteads, protection from prevailing winds and seas, and facilities for fortifications. Moreover, the advantages of the possession of an aval base off the entrance of the Panama Canal and near the island of Port R

It is apparent that the Danish Government desires to dispose of the islands, and certainly it is very important to this country, and particularly at the present time, that no other Government be allowed to acquire them.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. Yes.

Mr. CALDWELL. On page 3, paragraph 3, there is a provision for an export tax of $8 a ton on sugar. Can the gentleman tell the House something about the conditions under which that is to be levied?

Mr. FLOOD. I will. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that the jurisdiction of the provisions of this bill referring to import and export duties properly belonged to the Ways and Means Committee, but the general subject of the bill belongs to the Foreign Affairs Committee; so the whole matter was referred to that committee, which has reported the revenue provisions as well as the others. In view of the fact that it is necessary to get this bill through promptly the Ways and Means Committee decided not to raise any question as to jurisdiction, but to let the bill go through as reported, without having it considered as a precedent for the future,

The Ways and Means Committee considered the provisions of sections 2, 3, and 4 of the bill, and the Foreign Affairs Committee accepted the amendments suggested by the Ways and Means Committee.

To return to the question of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Caldwell], the imports into these islands are largely from this country, and they produce a revenue of about $100,000 a year. To make up for the loss of that revenue when we have free trade with the islands we have authorized the imposition of an export duty of $8 a ton on sugar. At $8 a ton the 15,000 tons exported will make up the revenue that they lose in import

Mr. CALDWELL. There is a constitutional provision that prevents the levying of an export duty in the United States, is there

Mr. FLOOD. This is not a part of the United States yet.

Mr. CALDWELL. It will be as soon as we take possession of Mr. FLOOD. No. It will be a possession.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. FLOOD. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Does the bill propose to form any sort of government for those islands?

Mr. FLOOD. A temporary government only.
Mr. FESS. While the temporary government is in operation, will it be under the Executive department of the United States? Mr. FLOOD. Absolutely under the Executive department. The islands will be in the possession of this Government and under the Executive department.

Mr. FESS. Will it come under the jurisdiction of the insular committee at any time?

Mr. FLOOD. Not unless the rules are changed. Under the rules of the House the jurisdiction of the insular committee is confined to the possessions that were acquired by the treaty of 1898.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. When the bill was before the Ways and Means Committee it provided in the first paragraph that the provision of section 1591 of the Revised Statutes of 1878 should not apply to these islands. That provision of the Revised Statutes is that the Constitution and laws of the United States so far as applicable shall apply to all of our

Mr. FLOOD. That was in the bill as originally introduced. When the bill was reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs it was not left in it, and when it went to the Committee on Ways and Means it was not in it. Whether it was in it or not made no difference, because the section the gentleman refers to applies to organized Territories of the United States, and these islands do not constitute organized Territories.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. As the bill was read from the desk as amended, that provision in relation to the Constitution and laws being applicable is not provided for.

Mr. FLOOD. No; the provision in the bill as originally introduced excluded the section the gentleman mentioned. The bill as amended by the Committee on Foreign Affairs does not take any notice of that because the committee concluded that it was unnecessary. That statute would not apply to these islands because they do not constitute an organized Territory of the United States.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. But the President is to have control regardless of that statute until Congress shall provide otherwise.

Mr. FLOOD. Exactly.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is the amendment with respect to the articles of growth and products of the island—the tariff provision-the same as it came from the Ways and Means Committee?

Mr. FLOOD. Absolutely. It was not changed at all.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No change by the Foreign ffairs Committee after it came back?

Mr. FLOOD. None whatever.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is the same provision that was made in the Philippine bill?

Mr. FLOOD. That is my understanding, and I was so informed by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And in the previous tariff

Mr. FLOOD . Yes. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Sloan].

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Speaker, Hamlet, the Prince of Denmark, complained of the "overripeness" of the State of Denmark. If he were living now he would make no complaint about lack of thrift on the part of his State, because they are selling three little islands of 138 square miles to the Yankees for $25,000,000. Talk about the high cost of living, it does not keep pace with the high cost of land.

This land was quoted some time ago at $5,000,000; offered to us later at $7,500,000. They turn it over to us at the rate of $285 an acre. For the blacks living there we are paying $825 for each human soul. We are paying for it $24,999,976 more than we paid for Manhattan Island; $24,920,000 more than was paid for the State of Pennsylvania by William Penn; $15,000,000 more than the Gadsden Purchase, with its 45,000 square miles; $10,000,000 more than we paid for the Louisiana Purchase, containing 820,000 square miles; $4,900,000 more than we paid for 1,700 islands in the Philippine group, containing 122,000 square miles; more by $2,800,000 than we paid for the Louisiana and Alaska Purchases combined. We paid less for one-third of the area of the United States and all her possessions than we pay for these three little sanctified islands.

Mr. HULBERT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SLOAN. Yes.

Mr. HULBERT. Is not our title to the Danish Islands more permanent than our title to the Philippines, for which we paid $20,000,000?

Mr. SLOAN. I do not know; the fact that we are appropriating out of a Treasury where there is nothing may strengthen our title. Then, too, you know our title to the Philippines is waxing stronger since the party in power repudiated its pledge made at Baltimore in 1912 to grant independence to the Philippines.

Mr. MURRAY. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SLOAN. Yes.
Mr. MURRAY. Does not the gentleman think that Japan would give $25,000,000 for one of our ports?

Mr. SLOAN. Oh, I think they would for the port of New York or a port in Oklahoma. [Laughter.]

Mr. MURRAY. We would not take that for one of our oil

Mr. FESS. We once had the islands offered us for seven and a half million dollars.

Mr. SLOAN. Five million dollars first,

Mr. FESS. No; seven and a half million. Why did not we buy them?

Mr. SLOAN. I do not know; I suppose they wanted to wait until they found the Treasury in such a condition as we find it now; because it is much easier to buy when you are not limited by what you have. The limit of what you have not is so broad that you can appropriate from it with a great deal more ease. [Laughter.]

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a moment in order to answer the gentleman?

Mr. SLOAN. I shall be delighted to, because I know the gentleman can do it so much better than I.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Oh, no; but I desire to state that it is persistently rumored that the reason the Senate of the United States declined to ratify the treaty by which we proposed to buy these islands in 1867 was that shortly thereafter a very large hurricane visited that section doing a great deal of damage, and that the Yankees began to feel that the dollars they were expending-these seven and a half million dollarswere perhaps too much money to buy a hurricane-ridden section. I want to be frank to say that we are all agreed, I think, at least those of us who have historically examined the subject, that that is one of the blots upon the history of the United States. Either we should not have tried to enter into that treaty at all or when we did enter into it we should have stood by it.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to remark in the brief time that I have that we refused to buy it at a hurricane time. That is, we refused to buy it on wind, then, but we are buying it strictly on wind now.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SLOAN. Yes.
Mr. FESS. My impression is that it was not the Senate of the United States that refused to ratify that treaty. Am I mistaken about that?

Mr. FLOOD. The gentleman is mistaken about that. The Senate of the United States refused to ratify that treaty.

Mr. FESS. Then it was our fault. Mr. FLOOD. They wanted the two smaller islands.

Mr. SLOAN. Moreover, we are paying $15,000,000 more for these islands than we paid for the Panama Canal Zone, not including, of course, the railroad and the French interests. This zone is the greatest maritime and commercial strategic point in the world.

These little islands will cost nearly 30 per cent of all the lands purchased by the United States in all our history.

An inquiry might at this time be submitted: If little Denmark can make diplomatic and financial game of us, as I have set forth, what would there be left of us should we sit in a settling game at a table where all the nations of Europe would participate with the United States as the one big, generous, guileless, full-pursed participant?

It is suggested that the strategic value of these islands is great. Not for the present war period, because it will take years to fortify them. If we fortify them in accordance with their purchase price, and then fortify to the same degree our other strategic positions, and then build up a Navy to correspond therewith, it will entail an expenditure in the next 10 years of over $25,000,000,000. And while we may appropriate lavishly from a deficit, debts can not be discharged therefrom. [Applause.]
Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask a question, and I am depending upon my recollection. Have there been two treaties made with Denmark for acquiring these islands prior to this?

Mr. FLOOD. I shall be glad to answer the question. There was one treaty in 1867, which provided for the payment of seven million and a half dollars for St. John and St. Thomas. That treaty was rejected by the United States Senate in 1870 or 1871. Another treaty, negotiated in 1902, provided for the payment of $5,000,000 for all three of the islands, and that was rejected by the Rigsdag of Denmark.
Mr. CANNON. By one vote,
Mr. FLOOD. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. That was my recollection, that the last treaty that was made prior to this one we were to pay $5,000,000, but finally, as the gentleman stated, it was turned down by Denmark; and if I recollect right, the statement was made in the newspapers that this was done after consideration by one vote in their parliamentary body. Now comes this treaty for $25,-The President negotiates treaties and the Senate ratifies them in the event they are ratified. The House has the power to refuse the money. My recollection is-and I hope I shall be corrected if it is wrong-that we once entered into a treaty with Mexico away back in the seventies, and if I recollect right-I have not examined it lately-the Senate ratified the treaty and the House defeated it by refusing to appropriate

The House has always the power to refuse to ratify a treaty that requires an appropriation, and if this appropriation should fail, of course, so far as the United States is concerned, it would not be ratified. Talk about jurisdiction! This proposition is exceptional, coming near the close of the session. This is a deficiency appropriation; that is, it is one to be appropriated for the current year. The Committee on Appropriations, by one of its subcommittees, had a hearing upon it the other day, considering it in connection with the deficiency appropriation bill, which bill is to carry $100,000,000 in round figures for the current year. I supposed that bill would pass and that the House would have an opportunity to discuss it, not under suspension of the rules but to discuss it as general appropriation bills are discussed-in general debate and then under the five-minute rule. I apprehend that this bill will pass, notwithstanding it contains the revenue measure as well as the appropriation provision for $25,000,000. It is a very serious question in my mind whether it is not $25,000,000 thrown away. Can any gentleman tell me whether we are to fortify St. Thomas?

Mr. FLOOD, Yes.

Mr. CANNON. Some gentleman says "Yes"; and I have asked a dozen men, and they have said "No."
Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield.
Mr. CANNON. Yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. How about its being owned by some other country that might fortify it? What is the value of Heligoland now to Germany, that England sold?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, what is the matter with the harbors that Great Britain has in the West Indies, the French West Indies, with great harbors in Haiti. There are harbors and there are different ports there. We flap our wings and and there are different ports there. We flap our wings and crow and say under the Monroe doctrine that nobody shall get a holding in this country, at least no Government on the Continent, and yet how much protection does that give us if we were to have a falling out with France or have a falling out with Great Britain? Germany has not any foothold—perhaps she ought not to have it. We assert the Monroe doctrine—assert it with force. Japan has not any hold, yet there are har-bors on the Pacific coast and—

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. CANNON. Can the gentleman yield me two minutes more?

Mr. FORDNEY. I yield two minutes more to the gentleman. Mr. CANNON. Any of these countries can get harbors in North America or South America or in the West Indies if they are strong enough to take them. I doubt very seriously, with all the harbors we have to fortify, whether this would be forti-fied or not, and if Germany could take St. Thomas by force, if that is the great bugbear in front of us, could not she take Cape Haytien by force, could not she take the harbors of Haiti? Are we going to fortify all the harbors? I believe there are none in Nicaragua, but we have possessions now, under the Monroe doctrine, in Santo Domingo and Haiti both. Twenty-five million dollars gone-extravagant price to pay-but I guess you are liable to pass it, you know. [Applause.]
Mr. FORDNEY. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cooper].

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I am glad indeed to have the gentleman from Michigan recognize me for two minutes on a bill that is reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, [Laughter.] With some of the things the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] has said I might agree. Perhaps it is an extravagant price and yet I think this bill ought to pass and pass to-day. As to the jurisdiction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the matter of this appropriation, I call the attention of the House to the language of Rule XI:

All proposed legislation shall be referred to the committees named in the preceding rule as follows, namely: Subjects relating to the rela-tions of the United States with foreign nations, including appropria-tions therefor, to the Committee on Foreign Affairs,

This bill is to carry out the provisions of a treaty with a foreign nation, the recommendation of which appropriately comes from the Committee on Foreign Affairs. And I conclude by saying what I said at first, that I think the bill ought to pass and pass now.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the price may seem a little high; it is high compared with the amounts that have been agreed upon tentatively heretofore. But after all we pay much higher prices for things now than we did when we bought Louisiana and the West, more than we did when we bought Alaska from Russia. I am not disposed to criticize the administration for the price that it names. Doubtless they did the best they could. A previous offer had been rejected by Denmark. I think we ought to take every opportunity that can come to us to own these little islands among the West Indies. [Applause.] And I think that we ought to own the Danish West India Islands. Whether we will fortify the harbor at St. Thomas I do not know, probably not at once, but certainly we will eventually. Now, this bill comes up under a motion to suspend the rules. I would prefer if we had the time that there should be longer debate upon the bill, but we are in the closing hours of the session. It is necessary to pass this bill at this session or we will undoubtedly have an extra session and pass it then. It is necessary to pay the money within the 90 days which is provided. If we are to obtain the islands and if we obtain the islands, it is essential that we pass some kind of legislation giving the President the power to have a government on those islands.

The committee has followed the precedent set in the Louisiana Purchase and in Panama Canal Zone, practically, by authorizing the President to conduct the Government until Congress otherwise provides. In the Panama Canal Zone matter we passed a bill giving the President power to carry on the government there until the end of the next session of Congress. The next session of Congress came and went, but made no provision for further government. However, President Roosevelt, with some criticism teveled against him by gentlemen on the Democratic side, did the only thing he could do. He kept up the government which Congress had inaugurated there, and without that there would have been chaos in the Panama Canal Zone. Unless we provide here, or unless the President executes the power which the Constitution does not really give him, we would have chaos in these islands if we paid the money without providing what the President may do. And I am in favor of taking the islands, of governing them, and in the end giving the people there as much local self-government as possible, remembering all the time that the interests of the great United States are somewhat at stake. We ought to dominate the West India Islands. [Applause and ries of "Vote!" "Vote!" Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Mondell].

Mr. Speaker, out of the depths of a bottom-Mr. MONDELL. less and abysmal deficit we are to pay $25,000,000 for a bunch of West India Islands that, in my opinion, we do not need, and that will never be of any use or value to us. It may be true we should start out on this sort of real estate speculation down yonder in the Caribbean Sea and thereabouts, but, if we do, at least we should not place the price quite so high when we begin our experiments in buying questionable territory.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MONDELL. I yield.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. I understood the gentleman to say a moment ago that we do not, in his opinion, need these Danish West Indies?

Mr. MONDELL. That is what I said.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Does the gentleman rea-

Mr. MONDELL. I can not yield for a speech. Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island (continuing). Republican platform of 1896 contained this language:

And by the purchase of the Danish Islands we should secure a proper and much-needed naval station in the West Indies.

Mr. MONDELL. And about that time we turned down a proposition to purchase these same islands for $7,500,000.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. I do not think the gentleman is correct about that. It was in 1870 we turned that proposition down.

Mr. MONDELL. We are now proposing to pay $25,000,000 for them—$300 an acre; $800 an inhabitant. Since that time we have acquired a naval station in the West Indies, at Guantanamo, an infinitely better naval station than we can have at the diminutive harbor of St. Thomas. Of course, we could fortify all of the harbors of all the islands of the West Indies that we saw fit to fortify, and burden the future for it, as we will in this case by an issue of bonds. If we continue at the present rate, we may at some time do so. But, in my opinion, this purchase of the islands at a fancy price is simply a waste of public money. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill with the amendments read into it.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill as amended was

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request with reference to printing a speech of Mr. Barnes, of Albany, at the Lincoln Day dinner,

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by printing a memorial to the Congress on the passage of the bill H. R. 18721.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled joint resolutions of the following titles:

S. J. Res. 157. Joint resolution giving authority to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make special regulations for the occasion of the reunion of the Confederate Veterans' Association, to be held in the District of Columbia in the year 1917, and for other purposes incident to said encampment; and

S. J. Res. 205. Joint resolution authorizing the removal of the statue of Admiral Dupont in Dupont Circle, in the city of Washington, D. C., and the erection of a memorial to Admiral Dupont in place thereof.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 9288. An act providing for the refund of certain duties illegally levied and collected on acetate of lime;

H. R. 11474. An act authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to permit the construction of a public highway through the fish-cultural station in Unicoi County, Tenn.; H. R. 17710. An act authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Tallapoosa River, separating the counties of Montgomery and Elmore, in the State of Alabama, at a point somewhere between Judkin Ferry and Hughes Ferry;

H. R. 18529. An act granting the consent of Congress to the police jury of Rapides Parish, La., to construct a bridge across

Red River at or near Boyce, La.;

H. R. 12463. An act for the relief of Meredith G. Corlett, a citizen and resident of Williamson County, Tenn.; and

H. R. 12541. An act authorizing insurance companies and fraternal beneficiary societies to file bills of interpleader.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, the bill (H. R. 6814) to exclude intoxicating liquors from national parks and national forest reserves is, by error, on the Union Calendar. I ask that it be transferred to the House Calendar.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I object at this late hour.

The gentleman can make his motion to-morrow.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may extend my remarks in the RECORD on the Danish West Indies bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on the Danish West Indies bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 59 minutes p. m.) the House, under its previous order, adjourned until Tuesday, February 20, 1917, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication of the Secretary of the Navy, submitting additional and supplemental estimates of deficiencies in appropriations required by the Navy Department for the fiscal year 1917 (H. Doc. No. 2070); was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as

Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 5768) for the relief of Frank Carpenter, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1507), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. PETERS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 20436) for the relief of Alfred B. Andrews, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1509), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS. Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials

were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LEVER: A bill (H. R. 20963) to amend Part C, known as the United States warehouse act, of an act of Congress entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved August 11, 1916; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. TIMBERLAKE: A bill (H. R. 20964) authorizing the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to deliver to the board of county commissioners, Logan County, Colo., four condemned bronze or brass cannon or fieldpieces, with their carriages and a suitable outfit of cannon balls; to the Committee on Military

By Mr. CARY: A bill (H. R. 20965) to establish a National Commission of Aeronautics, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 20966) to establish a branch Federal land bank at Wichita Falls, in northwest Texas: to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: A bill (H. R. 20967) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes; to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

By Mr. RAKER: A bill (H. R. 20968) to include certain lands in the counties of Modoc and Siskiyou, Cal., in the Modoc National Forest, Cal., and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. FARR: A bill (H. R. 20969) to amend the public building act approved March 4, 1913, authorizing the acquisition of a suitable site for a public building at Olyphant, Pa.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HASTINGS: A bill (H. R. 20970) providing for an additional judge for the eastern district of Oklahoma; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BLACKMON: A bill (H. R. 20971) to make further provision for the organization of native troops in the Philippine Islands; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. AYRES: A bill (H. R. 20972) to authorize the placing on a roll in the War Department, designated as "The Civil War Volunteer officers' retired list," the name of Morton A. Pratt, first lieutenant Company A, Third Illinois Cavalry of the United States in the Civil War; to the Committee on Military

Also, a bill (H. R. 20973) granting an increase of pension to Morton A. Pratt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BOOHER: A bill (H. R. 20974) granting an increase of pension to Nathan L. Nims; to the Committee on Invalid Pen-

By Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota: A bill (H. R. 20975) for the relief of William E. Jones, Faribault, Minn.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DILL: A bill (H. R. 20976) granting an increase of pension to George Bannar; to the Committee on Invalid Pen-

Also, a bill (H. R. 20977) granting a pension to John G. Miller; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20978) granting a pension to W. A. Davis; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ESCH: A bill (H. R. 20979) granting an increase of pension to Henry D. Potter; to the Committee on Invalid Pen-

By Mr. GOULD: A bill (H. R. 20980) granting an increase of pension to Cyrenus F. Horton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MILLER of Delaware: A bill (H. R. 20981) authorizing the owners of square 710, District of Columbia, to construct, maintain, and operate an elevated railway siding track; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. NEELY: A bill (H. R. 20982) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Hine; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20983) granting an increase of pension to Jerry A. Fitzgerald; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20984) granting an increase of pension to Beckwith A. McNemar; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20985) granting an increase of pension to Fannie R. Wells; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20986) granting an increase of pension to George Keck: to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20987) granting an increase of pension to John W. Oldfield; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20988) granting an increase of pension to Walter Griffith; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20989) granting a pension to Thurman L. Anglemyer; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SWEET: A bill (H. R. 2090) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth C. Van Gundy; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions Also, a bill (H. R. 20991) granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Breyfogel; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20992) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie S. Williams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TALBOTT: A bill (H. R. 20993) to correct the milirecord of Capt. John H. Holbrook; to the Committee on

Also, a bill (H. R. 20994) to correct the military record of Louis Smith Kelly; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: A bill (H. R. 20995) granting an increase of pension to Frances E. C. Horton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Resolution (H. Res. 514) providing for the consideration of H. R. 6915; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. MILLER of Delaware: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. to grant citizenship to Harry Kety; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial of the Legislature of the State of North Dakota, favoring the construction of a wagon bridge across the Missouri River; to the Committee on

By Mr. MURRAY: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma, expressing confidence in the action of President Woodrow Wilson, toward a world-wide Monroe doctrine, and his support of a league of nations to preserve the peace of the world; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of New York, favoring an appropriation of $1,395,275 for the transfer to the Federal Government of the quarantine establishment of the port of New York; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New York, favoring the passage of H. R. 20080; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Colorado, favoring the establishment of tactical division of the United States Army at Fort Logan, Colo.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial of National Grange, Furniss, Pa., protesting against Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), memorial of Farmers' National Congress of the United States, protesting against the Underwood elec-margarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), memorial adopted by the National Board of Directors of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America, opposing the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and

By Mr. BROWNING: Petitions of sundry citizens of the State of New Jersey, favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CAREW: Petition of the Commercial Exchange of Philadelphia, Pa., approving the act of the President of the United States in severing relations with Germany; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts: Petition of E. W. and F. B. Dean and M. C. Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., relative to program of President in his speech of January 22, 1917; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CARY: Petition of O. L. Hollister, president of the Federal Malleable Co., of West Allis, Wis., urging passage of House bill 17350; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of South Side Mill Work Co.; Pioneer Brotherhood, No. 2, National Association of Letter Carriers; and the Linde Air Products Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring House bill 17806, relative to salaries of post-office employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of F. G. Findley, president of Wisconsin Paste Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring prohibitory legislation; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CHARLES: Petition of the Trades Assembly, Schenectady, N. Y., for a referendum before any declaration of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. COOPER of Ohio: Memorial of Board of Trade, Warren, Ohio, indorsing Senate bill 7909; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. DALE of New York: Petition of Juvenile Aid Society of Philadelphia, favoring House bill 92, to establish a probation system in the United States courts; to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of Corrugated Bar Co., Buffalo, N. Y., protesting against the Federal tax on excess profits; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Fort Orange Paper Co., New York City, opposing a portion of House bill 20573, to provide for increased revenue; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Farmers' National Congress of the United States, protesting against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways, and Means. Also, memorial of citizens of the city of Minneapolis, against being drawn into war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. By Mr. DYER: Petitions of owners of Western River steam vessels, of St. Louis, Mo., relative to salaries of clerks and inspectors of United States Steamboat-Inspection Service; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. EAGAN: Petition of Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, against Federal encroachment on State revenue sources; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of New York Navy Yard Painters' Association, protesting against an increase of but 8 cents per diem in their salary; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of New Jersey Press Association, against passage of the Owen corrupt-practices bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of Chamber of Commerce of New York State, favoring any taxation necessary to provide for the protection of American lives and vessels and other American property throughout the world; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial adopted by the antiwar mass meeting under the auspices of the Socialist-Labor Party, New York City, protesting against forcing this country into war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Navy Yard Retirement Association, New York, favoring House bill 5757; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of Wisconsin State Federation of Labor, against the United States in war with any nation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of American citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., against United States in war with any nation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. By Mr. FOSS: Memorial of citizens of Wilmette, Ill., relative to moral environment of the soldier in military preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs. By Mr. FULLER: Petitions of citizens of Rockford, Ill., against any participation in the European war and urging a referendum vote before any declaration of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, betition of H. A. Bent, Oglesby, Ill., for prohibitory bills; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial adopted at a mass meeting of 3,500 citizens of Minneapolis, in favor of this country remaining at peace and opposing any participation in the European war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of German-American Commerce (Inc.), concerning protection of American interests at sea; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Petition of citizens of New York City, relative to food embargo; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of letter carriers of the United States, favoring a retirement law and increase in salary; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., and of Boston, Mass., against this country in war with any nation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of E. B. Whitingham, of Boston, Mass., urging adoption of proposal of Massachusetts branch of the League to Enforce Peace by the United States; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Springfield Board of Trade, opposed to divorcement of the Sound steamship lines from the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad system; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Farmers' National Congress of United States, against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas: Papers to accompany House bill 20913, granting a pension to Charles L. Thornton; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petition of Chamber of German-American Commerce (Inc.), New York City, relative to protecting American cargoes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of food-embargo committee, New York City, relative to embargo on foodstuffs; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of a mass meeting of citizens of Minneapolis, against war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH: Memorial of William O. Foster and 125 others and Elwood Thomasson and 125 other citizens of central eastern Ohio, against compulsory military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KETTNER: Petition of Miss Elizabeth Chapman and 6 others, of Redlands; Mrs. Isla Noyes, East San Diego; Henry Weihe, San Diego; Mrs. Kate A. Mitchell, secretary San Antone Valley Improvement Association, Victorville; Mrs. Annee W. Jay, San Diego; and Mrs. Z. Weihe, San Diego, all in the State of California, favoring passage of House bill 19295; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of T. J. C. Kelly, Santa Fe, Needles, Cal.; O. W. Phipps, Santa Fe, Needles, Cal.; E. A. Vahey, secretary-treasurer, A. M. Seymour, D. I. Carter, B. W. Cruikshank, J. W. Stagg, Ben S. Williams, C. A. Anderson, E. D. Metzger, Charles A. Lewis, C. L. Barrows, chairman conductors' committee, and William Duncan, all of the Order of Railway Conductors of America, No. 392, San Bernardino, Cal., protesting against passage of House bill 19730; to the Committee on the Judiciary

Also, petition of Mrs. James R. Stevenson, California Federation of Women's Clubs, Imperial; David Starr Jordan, Leland Stanford Junior University, Stanford, University; and Mrs. Anna M. W. Connell, San Diego, all in the State of California, favoring House bill 20080; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of W. S. Conger, president of the Evening Index, San Bernardino, Cal., protesting against passage of House bill 18986 and Senate bill 4429, mail-exclusion bills; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of David B. Todd, Escondido, and D. C. Collier, San Diego, both in the State of California, protesting against postal rates on second-mail matter according to zone system; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of C. C. Redwine and 26 other clerks and carriers, of Riverside, Cal., favoring increase of pay for postal clerks and carriers; to the Committee on the Post Office and

Also, petition of Clarence Harden, secretary Bar Association of San Diego, San Diego, Cal., favoring Smith bill for increase in salaries of judges of district courts of United States and circuit courts of appeal of United States; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of F. V. Owen, secretary Arrowhead Trails Association, Redlands, Cal., favoring construction and maintenance of a system of national highways, to be built and maintained by the National Government; to the Committee on Roads.

By Mr. MORIN: Petition of H. S. Gerstein, I. A. Mazer, L. Fuss, and A. Epstain, committee of the Social Science Club of the University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa., protesting against any attempt to foist compulsory military service upon the Nation, and demanding that a national referendum be taken before any war is declared; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. OAKEY: Petition of sundry citizens of Hartford, Conn., against being drawn into war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. TEMPLE: Petition of citizens of Beaver, Pa., favor-

By Mr. VARE: Memorial of Equal Franchise Society, of Philadelphia, Pa., favoring suffrage amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: Petition of farmers of the State of Minnesota, relative to advance in the price of sisal fiber; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WICKERSHAM: Petition of citizens of Ketchikan, Alaska, praying for the passage of Alaska halibut amendment to the House revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

Tuesday, February 20, 1917.

The Senate met at 10.30 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we lift our hearts in humble, fervent prayer that we may have the Divine light upon our pathway this day. In the journey to which we at this time commit ourselves may we have the accompanying inspiration and light of the Divine presence. We have found that when we have exhausted all the resources of our human life still there are unsolved problems There are questions pertaining to the eternal and before us. the changeless and the absolute that must be solved only by the inspiration that Thou canst give to Thy servants who commit themselves to Thy will. Do Thou look upon us this morning and endue us with heavenly wisdom, that we may discharge the duties of this day in Thy sight and accomplish all Thy perfect will in us. For Christ's sake. Amen.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I was going to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not think that can be done when I am raising another question of order.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Very well; I do not care to insist on it. Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the Chair will look at page 4014 of the RECORD, at the bottom of the second column, it appears that last night the Presiding Officer announced that "35 Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present." Thereupon, on the first column of the next page, it appears that Mr. REED moved "that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators. The motion was agreed to."

A little further down Mr. Fletcher said:

Mr. President, I know that no business is in order. I think we ought to procure the attendance of absent Senators, and we ought to proceed with the business of the Senate.

Whereupon Mr. Kenyon said:

Mr. President, I make the point of order that no business is in order. The Presiding Officer. The point of order is sustained. No business is in order.

Mr. Kenyon (at 7 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.). I move that the Senate adjourn.

Later on:

Mr. KENYON. I withdraw the motion, but I shall renew it in a little .

Mr. Overman. I move that when the Senate adjourns it adjourn to meet at half past 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Chair will bear in mind there was no quorum present. The standing order of the Senate is that the Senate shall adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock. No other hour could be fixed for meeting in the absence of a quorum. Nothing was in order except to procure a quorum or to adjourn. I make the point of order that the Senate can not come in session until 11 o'clock.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator is right. I agree to it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Thereupon the Senate (at 10 o'clock and 35 minutes a. m.) dissolved to reassemble at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the

following prayer:
We thank Thee, Almighty God, that Thou dost continually stir up within us an aspiration after the highest and the best. Thou hast taught us in Thy Word what is the chief good, and that we are to attain it by doing justly, loving mercy, and by walking humbly with God. We pray that the path of this day may contain within itself the effort on the part of each one of us to attain unto this highest good, that we in our outward lives may do justly, that in our inward spirit we may love mercy, and that in our upward life we may walk humbly with God. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll. The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Beckham	Husting	Newlands	Sterling
Borah	Johnson, Me.	Norris	Stone
Brady	Johnson, S. Dak.	Overman	Thomas
Brandegee	Jones	Page	Thompson
Bryan	Kenyon	Pittman	Townsend
Catron	Kern	Poindexter	Underwood
Chamberlain	La Follette	Pomerene	Vardaman
Colt	Lane	Ransdell	Wadsworth
Cummins	Lea. Tenn.	Robinson	Walsh
Curtis	Lee, Md.	Shafroth	Warren
Fernald	Lodge	Sheppard	Watson
Fletcher	McCumber	Sherman	Weeks
Gronna	McLean	Simmons	Williams
Hardwick	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Md.	Works
Hollis	Nelson	Smoot

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger]. He is paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] on account

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the absence of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] on account of illness. This announcement may stand for the day.

No Drive of New Jersey. I rise to announce the ab-Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I rise to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] and the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], both on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. LEA of Tennessee. I have been requested to announce that the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. James] is detained on official business.

Mr. WALSH. I have been requested to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is detained from the Senate on account of illness.

Mr. OVERMAN. I desire to announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. Culberson], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Reed], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM] are absent on official business of the Senate.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. SUTHERLAND].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-nine Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The Secretary will read the proceedings of the preceding session.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. Brandegee and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives by E. T. Taylor, jr., one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

S. 1068. An act relating to desert-land entries;

S. 1697. An act to declare Ollala Slough in Lincoln County, Oreg., nonnavigable;

. 2543. An act for the relief of the State of Kentucky;

S. 6654. An act to validate a patent to certain lands heretofore issued to the State of Florida; to allow the said State to claim certain other lands, and for other purposes; S. 7796. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and convey to the Great Northern Railway Co. certain lands in the State of Montana for division terminal yards and other railway purposes, and for other purposes; S. 8044. An act providing for the extension of time for the reclamation of certain lands in the State of Oregon under the

Carey Act; and

S. 8079. An act to amend the first and seventh paragraphs of section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended by the act of April 9, 1906.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 40) to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1792) for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the passed the northern judicial bill (8. 7644) to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for terms of court at Wichita Falls, Tex., and for a clerk for said court, and for other purposes, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 5450) to amend section 108, chapter 5, of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (8, 5612) providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of lands within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont., with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 5716) to establish the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the The message also announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House further insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 3331) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters," approved June 21, 1906, as amended by the act approved June 23, 1910, and to provide for the improvement and development of waterways for the uses of interstate and foreign commerce, disagreed to by the Senate, agrees to the further con-ference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Adamson, Mr. Sims, and Mr. EscH managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 5788. An act to create two additional associate justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 10110. An act to increase the salary of the United States district attorney for the district of Rhode Island;
H. R. 11706. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to prevent the disclosure of national-defense secrets," approved March

3, 1911; H. R. 18166: An act authorizing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to transfer fractional block 6, of Naylor's addition, Forest Grove, Oreg., to the United States of America, for the use of the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture; H. R. 17646. An act to amend section 6 of an act to define and fix the standard of value, to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the of money issued or comed by the Cinted States, to return the public debt, and for other purposes, approved March 14, 1900, as amended by the act of March 4, 1907, by the act of March 2, 1911, and by the act of June 12, 1916;

H. R. 18825. An act to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915 and for prior years, and for other purposes"

H. R. 18826. An act to relieve the owners of mining claims who have been mustered into the service of the United States as officers or enlisted men of the Organized Militia or National Guard from performing assessment work during the term of such service;

H. R. 18894. An act to amend the public-building act approved March 4, 1913, authorizing the acquisition of a suitable site for a public building at Pittston, Pa.;

H. R. 19233. An act to increase the salary of the United States marshal for the western district of Michigan;

H. R. 19771. An act to renew patent No. 24917; H. R. 20228. An act to renew patent No. 25909;

H. R. 20414. An act for the establishment of a probation system in the United States courts, except in the District of Colum-

H. R. 20755. An act to provide a temporary government for the West Indian Islands acquired by the United States from Denmark by the convention entered into between said countries on the 4th day of August, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 7th day of September, 1916, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 334. Joint resolution authorizing the President to appoint delegates to attend the Tenth International Congress of the World's Purity Federation, to be held in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, November 8 to 14, 1917.

PRISON-MADE GOODS.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a further report relative to the extent to which prisoners, paupers, or detained persons are utilized in the production and manufacture of articles sold in the commerce of various countries, which was referred to the Committee on Printing and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has received a communication from the speaker of the House of Delegates of Porto Rico, which will be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico.

The communication is as follows:

[Cablegram.]

SAN JUAN, P. R., February 17, 1917.

To the President of the United States, United States Senate, House of Representatives, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department, Washington:

FAIRS, WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington:
Consistent with repeated previous petitions, house of delegates today unanimously passed resolution praying Congress to transfer to Supreme Court of Porto Rico jurisdiction of Federal court or to restrict the same in accordance with original section 42 of House bill 9533, to authorize proceedings in said court both in Spanish and English, and to insert section 35, Foraker Act, without part relative to Federal court instead of section 44. Full text of resolution by mail.

Jose de Direct, Speaker.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 308) to amend the act to regulate commerce as amended, and for other purpose

Mr. LODGE. I object at this stage until the routine business concluded.

Mr. NEWLANDS. That the act proposing to enlarge the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission be taken

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the regular order. I think we ought to be allowed to dispose of our routine business

Mr. NEWLANDS. It seems to me the Senator might well

Iet me conclude my remarks before making the objection.
Mr. LODGE. It is because I want to save time; that is all.
Mr. NEWLANDS. Yes; but there is an orderly and courteous way of proceeding.

Mr. LODGE. I present resolutions adopted at a town meeting of citizens of Yarmouth, Mass., in support of the President's action in severing relations with Germany. I ask that the resolutions be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

YARMOUTHPORT, MASS., February 16, 1917.

YARMOUTHPORT, MASS., February 16, 1917.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator: I beg to advise you that at the annual town meeting of Yarmouth held on February 13 the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:
"Resolved, That we, citizens of the town of Yarmouth, Mass., in town meeting assembled, indorse the action of the President of the United States of America in severing diplomatic relations with Germany.
"Resolved, That we, loyal citizens of the old town of Yarmouth, pledge to our President our undivided support in any course necessary to protect our flag and our citizens and maintain the rights of our country"

Thomas C. Thacher.

THOMAS C. THACHER,
Former Congressman, Chairman of Committee.
WILLIAM M. STETSON,
Representative in Massachusetts House of Representatives.
T. W. SWIFT.

With my best wishes, Faithfully, yours,

Mr. LODGE. I present resolutions adopted at a meeting of the electrical, civil, and mechanical engineers of New Eng-land, held in Boston, Mass., pledging their support to the Gov-ernment in the maintenance of American rights. I ask that the resolutions may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WENTWORTH INSTITUTE, Boston, February 14, 1917.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I am instructed to transmit to you the following resolutions which were passed at a professional gathering of 453 engineers from all parts of New England without a dissenting vote:

"In view of the grave crisis which our country is now facing and in recognition of the stand recently taken by the President of the United States for the protection of American rights and American lives on the sca—

"Be it resolved. That we, the members of the convention of New England electricai, civil, and mechanical engineers, held jointly in Boston Wednesday, February 7, 1917, first do pledge ourselves to the support of the President and Congress in the hope that our rights may be obtained by peaceful means; and second, that we pledge ourselves likewise to the utmost of our powers and our service, in case our country is forced into war, as the only means of maintaining all our rights, freedom, and safety the world over.

"Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the President at the White House in Washington and to every Senator and Representative from New England."

Yours, very respectfully,

ARTHUR L. WILLISTON,
Chairman of the Boston Section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of the Board of Trade of Springfield, Mass., praying for an amendment to the Panama Canal act to permit the continued operation of steamships by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. McCUMBER presented petitions of sundry citizens of Hebron and Fordville, in the State of North Dakota, praying that the question of war be submitted to a referendum of the people, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the Commercial Club of Larimore, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for a system of national highways, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WARREN. I present a petition in the form of a memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming. It happens to bear no signatures, but the letter which accompanied it vouches for it. relates to a matter concerning which I introduced a bill a short time ago. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The memorial was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Senate enrolled joint memorial 2.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Wyoming (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

memorialized as follows:

Whereas there are large areas of lands in Wyoming which are suitable for and susceptible to irrigation, there being also a sufficient water supply, if carefully conserved and economically used, to properly reclaim this entire area, and since it is of the highest public advantage, both to the Nation and State, to reclaim and colonize these potentially fertile lands as rapidly as possible; and

Whereas to-day in Wyoming we have hundreds of thousands of acres of unoccupied lands which are commanded by completed irrigation systems, and since failure to successfully settle these lands has emphasized the necessity of considering the great human problem involved; and

and
Whereas a study of this problem has led to the following conclusions:

(a) That we can not bring successful settlement to these lands under our present system and policies.

(b) That in settling these lands we must look chiefly to the men of small means, who must depend mainly on frugality and industry, and that such settlers working unaided and alone can not hope to succeed.

succeed.

(c) That since there is no enacted legislation, either Federal or State, which will aid the new settler in the arduous, costly task of transforming raw, sagebrush land into an irrigated farm, there is urgent need of immediate and appropriate legislation both by Congress and our State legislature.

(d) That the plan of State-aided settlement must include a permanent, revolving fund, to be invested, under capable and careful control, in the first essential improvements of raw land and in loans to qualified settlers for such improvements, necessary materials and equipment, the money so invested to be repaid by the settlers, with a low rate of interest, on the long-time amortized plan. In addition, there should be oversight and direction in irrigation and cultivation and help in cooperative purchase of implements and live stock, in order to prevent costly mistakes and promote the spirit of agricultural cooperation and of community rather than individual action.

(e) That Wyoming at this time has no source of revenue from which the necessary fund for this work can be derived: Now, therefore, be it

*Resolved*, That the Congress of the United States be earnestly urged which the necessary that to the United States be earnestly urged fore, be it

Resolved. That the Congress of the United States be earnestly urged to take early and favorable action which will provide a permanent fund to be held in trust by the State of Wyoming and invested in State-aided settlement of our irrigable lands; and that as a means of providing this fund we suggest the advantages and necessity of setting aside 2,000,000 acres of public lands, to be selected, appraised, and sold by a beard consisting of Federal and State authorities, the proceeds to be invested by the State in loans to qualified settlers on irrigable lands and to have as security a first lien on the lands and improvements; and that the fund so provided and used shall, together with accrued interest, be returned to the Federal Government after it has served its purpose in this great work; and be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial be sent to each of the Members of the congressional delegation from the State in Congress, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the request that they employ their best efforts to secure favorable action from Congress along the lines indicated.

Mr. KIRBY. I present a memorial adopted by the Legisla-

Mr. KIRBY. I present a memorial adopted by the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the memorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the senate and house of representatives of the State of Arkansas in legislature assembled, being the forty-first regular session, most respectfully petition as follows: That—

Whereas the importance of prompt and accurate record of births, deaths, and communicable diseases is now recognized by all civilized countries as of direct benefit to the Nation; and

Whereas the reporting of these births, deaths, and communicable diseases is now required by Federal and State laws, and it being for the general welfare of the public, your memorialists believe that this expenses, in so far as postage is involved, should be borne by the the general weather expenses, in so far as postage is involved, should be expenses, in so far as postage is involved, should be public; and hereas the education of the people by means of printed matter pertaining to the preservation of health is conducive to the general public welfare: Therefore

Congress of the United States to authorize the

We petition the Congress of the United States to authorize the franking of all reports of births, deaths, and communicable diseases to the proper officer, and all printed matter of an educational character issued by the State Board of Health to the people of the State in which such matter is issued.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN presented a petition of sundry citizens of Joseph, Oreg., praying that the United States remain at peace, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Rela-

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Whiteson, Oreg., remonstrating against the United States becoming en-gaged in the European war, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WADSWORTH presented petitions of sundry citizens of New York, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WEEKS presented petitions of sundry citizens of Massachusetts, praying for national prohibition, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of the St. Paul (Minn.) Association, praying for the passage of the so-called Webb bill relating to the export trade, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Morris, Minn., approving the course of the President in the handling of international affairs, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HUSTING. I present a petition from E. B. Wolcott Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Wisconsin, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the petition was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

printed in the Record, as follows:

E. B. Wolcott Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Wisconsin, in this solemn hour of America's peril, recalls with pride the prompt, uncompromising support tendered the President of the United States and the National Government by the State of Wisconsin in the black days of the Civil War. The splendid patriotism exhibited, and the glorious record made by the State in that great conflict, constitute its proudest history.

Our fighting days are over and we love peace, but when the honor of America and the lives and rights of our people are assailed by foreign foes and domestic traitors our national existence demands the unqualified and unfaltering loyalty of all citizens. We stand for one country and one flag.

Mr. WATSON presented a memorial of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, of Terre Haute, Ind., remonstrating against the United States becoming engaged in the European war, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. PHELAN presented a petition of the Master Painters and Decorators' Association of the State of California, praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for the standardization of paints, oils, and turpentine, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey presented a petition of sundry citizens of Salem, N. J., praying for the enactment of legislation to found the Government on Christianity, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

OIL-LEASING BILL.

Mr. WORKS. It is quite evident now that the oil-leasing bill will not be reached for consideration during the present session. There is a very general misunderstanding of the facts relating to some of the provisions of the bill. I have here a statement by ex-Gov. Thorne, of Kentucky, in the form of a letter to the chairman of the Naval Committee, intended to correct some of the mistaken statements which have gone out. It is very brief, and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 25, 1917.

Washington, D. C., January 25, 1917.

Senator Benjamin R. Tillman.

Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs, United States Senate.

Dear Sir: In order to prevent, so far as possible, a gross injustice from being done, and perhaps an irreparable wrong from being committed by a misstatement of facts upon a vital question, I beg to call your attention to the following with the hope that such steps as you and your committee may deem advisable may be taken in the premises.

It appears at page 71 of the printed record of "Hearing before the Committee on Naval Affairs, United States Senate, Sixty-fourth Congress, second session, on the so-called relief provisions of the leasing bill relative to the California Naval Petroleum Reserve." said hearings having been held before your committee January 17, 1917, that in response to an inquiry from Senator Pittman, Mr. Justice, of the Department of Justice, made the following statement:

"Senator PITTMAN. Do you approve the decision in the Obispo case?
"Mr. JUSTICE I certainly do. I invite your attention to the fact that the commissioner, who found the same as the judge, found that these locators—that these McCutcheons were fraudulent locators and claimants, and also found they had not diligently worked on that section. He found the facts as to diligence as I have stated.

"Now, then I invite your attention to the two decisions reported in the Federal Reporter by Judge Bledsoe, two opinions, one on a motion for injunction and one on final hearing. He discusses the facts most elaborately, and then, if you would be better satisfied with the Land Commissioner, his decision is full, and the Assistant Secretary sat with him and approved his findings."

It will be noted that the Obispo Co. was claiming under and through the McCutcheons, referred to by Mr. Justice, when he says:

"I invite your attention to the fact that the commissioner, who found the same as the judge, found that these locators—that these McCutcheons were fraudulent locators and claimants."

There were two decisions by the Interior Department on this question, first, July 28, 1914, and the second, April 21, 1915.

In the opinion of Commissioner Taliman, when sitting with the Assistant Secretary, as referred to by Mr. Justice, the following language is used:

"July 28, 1914, your office recommended that the charges be dismissed."

assistant is used:
"July 28, 1914, your office recommended that the charges be dismissed, that the said amended application for patent be accepted and filed, and that patent to the land be issued." (44 Land Decisions, 423.)
A little further on in the same opinion the following language is

A little further on in the same opinion the following language is used:

"It must be and is therefore held that this case does not fall within the protection accorded by the proviso to the aforesaid act of June 25, 1910, as amended.

"The material facts with reference to the several so-called locations have been fully set forth, but a review thereof and the expression of any conclusion therefrom are deemed unnecessary, as the original and amended applications must be rejected for the reasons above stated." (44 Land Decisions, 437.)

Thus it is seen that the two decisions rendered by the Interior Department the first recommended that patent be issued and the second denied the application not on the ground of fraud but because the case did not fall within the protection accorded by the act of June 25, 1910, as amended, which related to the diligent prosecution of the work at the time of withdrawal.

A more glaring misstatement of fact by Mr. Justice appears from an examination of the decisions of the judges to which he refers. There have been three decisions by Julges of Federal district courts—one by Judge Dooling and two by Judge Bledsoe. The decision by Judge Dooling and the first decision by Judge Bledsoe were preliminary hearings on the question of an application by Mr. Justice for receivership. The last decision by Judge Bledsoe was on the merits of the case.

In his preliminary opinion, rendered July 12, 1915 (224 Fed. Ren.

case. In his preliminary opinion, rendered July 12, 1915 (234 Fed. Rep., 702). Judge Bledsoe used the following language:

"The facts involved in the McCutcheon case are very succinctly stated by Judge Dooling in his opinion filed at the time of the dealar of the motion for a receivership, reported in Two hundred and seventeenth Federal Reporter, at page 650, and it is unnecessary therefore to reiterate them here or to refer to them save merely for purposes of explaining my ruling herein. It is apparent from Judge Dooling's decision that request was made of him for the appointment of a receiver upon two grounds: First, the alleged fraud on the part of the locations of the lands in question in the making of the location which was sought to be made the basis for the partnt, and, second, because of the nondiscovery of oil upon the premises previous to the promulgation of the withdrawal order of 1909. Judge Dooling refused to grant the application upon either of the grounds urged."

urged."

It will be noted that the application refused by Judge Dooling was the application for the appointment of a receiver.

"With respect to the other question involved and considered by Judge Dooling, to wit, that of fraud, I am constrained to agree with him that at this time and in the advance of a trial upon the merits, that issue is not so free from doubt as to justify this court upon that ground in taking the property of the defendants out of their possession and giving it over into the hands of an officer of the court."

In his final decision on the merits of the case, Judge Bledsoe used the following language:

In his final decision on the merits of the case, Judge Bledsoe used the following language:

"A determination of the basic and controlling features of this case, then, depends upon an answer to the two questions: Was the Lone Star location valid and devoid of fraudulent intent? If so, did its beneficiarles actually, through the efforts of themselves or their agents, effect a 'discovery' of oil or gas thereon prior to September 27, 1909?

"With respect to the first question I can come to no conclusion other than that it should receive an afilirmative answer." (Manuscript decision, pp. 9 and 10.)

"It may be that there was the fraudulent intent that an individual, or what is more colorable, that the 'McCutcheen Bros.' should be the sole and real beneficiary of the Lone Star location, but there is no proof that this was the fact and no circumstances adduced from which the court could rationally and in the exercise of the reasonable discretion confided to it deduce the inference that such fraudulent intent in fact existed." (Manuscript decision, p. 10.)

"In substance, the parties directly interested, the McCutcheons, were at all times relying upon and proceeding from an entirely valid and bona fide transaction and muniment of title, to wit, the Lone Star location of 1900. Their rights, therefore, and the rights of those deriving title from them, will have to be measured under the assumption that at all times within the domain of this controversy they had made and were relying upon a bona fide location of the mining ground in dispute." (Manuscript decision, p. 12.)

Thus it is seen that in the decision of Judge Doeling on the preliminary hearing for the appointment of a receiver he point-blank decided that the McCutcheons were not guilty of frand in the location, and that this decision was referred to and sustained by Judge Bledsoe in the preliminary hearing of the case before him for the appointment of a receiver, and, in the final decision of the case by Judge Bledsoe upon its merits, he held that the McCutcheons and those holding under them had to be considered upon "the assumption that at all times within the domain of this controversy they had made and were relying upon a bona fide location of the mining ground in dispute."

Respectfully,

WM. P. Thorne.

WM. P. THORNE.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WADSWORTH, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 2743. An act for the relief of the widow of Joseph C.

Akin (Rept. No. 1078); and H. R. 16116. An act for the relief of Adelaide L. Gibbs, widow of Robert M. Gibbs (Rept. No. 1077)

Mr. BRYAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 3253. An act for the relief of Hudson Bros., of Norfolk, Va. (Rept. No. 1081); H. R. 11661. An act for the relief of Catherine Burns, widow of Patrick Burns (Rept. No. 1080); H. R. 14754. An act for the relief of Charles M. Way (Rept.

No. 1079)

H. R. 15109. An act for the relief of Catherine A. Fex (Rept. No. 1098); and

H. R. 13754. An act for the relief of Charles A. Carey (Rept.

No. 1099)

Mr. MYERS, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon: S. 7989. A bill for the relief of Horace P. Hulett (Rept. No.

1084); and

S. 7990. A bill for the relief of R. S. Van Tassell (Rept. No. 1083).

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 8250) to establish the Grand Canyon National Park, in the State of Arizona, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1082) thereon.

Mr. LANE, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 6014) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw from the Treasury a certain sum of the permanent fund of the Chippewas of Minnesota, now on deposit therein, to their credit, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1088) thereon.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon: S. 7841. A bill for the relief of the heirs of Harry Davenport, deceased (Rept. No. 1093); and

H. R. 10869. An act to authorize the payment of certain amounts for damages sustained by prairie fire on the Rosebud Indian Reservation in South Dakota (Rept. No. 1092).

Mr. WADSWORTH, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 5999) for the relief of Watson B. Dickerman, administrator of the estate of Charles Backman, deceased, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1094) thereon.

Mr. GRONNA, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 7602) for the relief of Mary C. Mayers, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No.

1097) thereon.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 3529) to refund to John B. Keating customs tax erroneously and illegally collected, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1095) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 3777) for the relief of W. H. Presleigh, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1096) thereon.

AMERICAN NATIONAL RED CROSS.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 14426) to amend section 6 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American National Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. It is recommended by the Secretary of War. It simply changes the date of the fiscal year of the American National Red Cross Association so as to make it correspond with the fiscal year of the Government, that the reports of the association may be submitted to Congress with the other Government reports.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I should like to have the report of the House committee printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[House of Representatives, Report No. 589, 64th Cong., 1st sess.] AMERICAN NATIONAL RED CROSS.

April 24, 1916, committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Webb, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following report, to accompany H. R. 14426:

The Committee on the Judiciary, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 14426) to amend section 6 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American National Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905, report the same back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

Section 6 of the existing law reads as follows:

"Sec, 6. That the said American National Red Cross shall on the 1st day of January of each year make and transmit to the Secretary of War a report of its proceedings for the preceding year, including a full, complete, and itemized report of recepts and expenditures of whatever kind, which report shall be duly audited by the War Department, and a copy of said report shall be transmitted to Congress by the War Department."

The bill reported requires the report to be made on the 1st day of July of each year of its proceeding: for the fiscal year ending June 30 next preceding.

The bill as reported was recommended by the Secretary of War in his communication to the House on January 25, 1916, in the following language:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 25, 1916.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the draft of a bill to amend section 6 of the act to incorporate the American National Red Cross, approved January 5, 1905 (33 Stat., 599), so as to make the fiscal year of the Red Cross correspond to that of the Government instead of to the calendar year. The proposed amendment would allow the annual report of the proceedings, receipts, and expenditures of the Red Cross to be transmitted to Congress at the beginning of the session instead of later on in the session as under existing law. It is therefore recommended to the favorable consideration of Congress.

Very respectfully,

IANDLEY M. GARRISON, Secretary of War.

The following letter from Hon. Arthur Murray, acting chairman of the American National Red Cross, dated April 10, 1916, fully sets forth the reasons for the proposed legislation:

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS, Washington, D. C., April 10, 1916.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS,
Washington, D. C., April 10, 1916.

Hon. Edwin Y. Webb,
Chairman House Committee on Judiciary, Washington, D. C.
My Dear Mr. Webb: In accordance with your suggestion of to-day, I write to invite your attention to House Document No. 674 (copy inclosed), entitled "To amend section 6 of the act to incorporate the American National Red Cross."

As will be seen from an examination of the document referred to, it is simply a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a recommendation for the favorable consideration of Congress, a "draft of a bill to amend section 6 of the act to incorporate the American National Red Cross, approved January 5, 1905."

As to the object of the proposed amendment under section 6 of the act of January 5, 1905 (copy inclosed), the American National Red Cross is required to transmit to the Secretary of War on the 1st day of January of each year a report of its proceedings for the preceding (calendar) year, which report is required to be audited by the War Department and a copy transmitted to Congress. In actual practice for years past it has been found impossible to submit this required report to the Secretary of War until a month or so after the 1st day of January, and then as a month or more is required by the War Department to audit it, it results that instead of the report being submitted to Congress near the opening of a session, as apparently contemplated by the act, it usually reaches Congress about the end of a session. If section 6 is amended as proposed, it is believed that the required report can be audited by the War Department and a copy transmitted regularly to Congress at the opening instead of the end of a session.

So far as known, there is no objection of any kind to the proposed amendment. Its passage will undoubtedly be of benefit both to the American Ref Cross and to the War Department, and it is believed that it would be desirable for Congress to have the required report submitted for its consideration at the beginning rather ment I am,

ARTHUR MURRAY, Acting Chairman.

ST. FRANCIS RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 18534) to authorize the construction, maintenance, and operation of a bridge across the St. Francis River at or near Parkin, Ark., and I submit a report (No. 1086) thereon. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 18720) permitting the building of a railroad bridge across the Mississippi River at Bemidji, in the State of Minnesota, and I submit a report (No. 1087) thereon. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROCK RIVER BRIDGE

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably with amendments the bill (S. 8227) granting the consent of Congress to the city of Fort Atkinson, in Jefferson County, Wis., for the construction of a bridge across the Rock River, and I submit a report (No. 1085) thereon. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bil. was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 10, before the word "act," to strike out the word "an" and insert the word "the"; after the word "act" to strike out the words "of Congress"; and, on page 2, line 2, to strike out the word "sixteen" and insert the word "six," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the city of Fort Atkinson, in Jefferson County, in the State of Wisconsin, and to its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge, and approaches thereto, across the Rock River in said city at a point suitable to the interests of navigation and at a point where Main Street approaches said river in the County of Jefferson, State of Wisconsin, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY E. DOSKER.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. From the Committee on Immigration I report back favorably without amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 215) to grant citizenship to Henry E. Dosker, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which was read, as follows:

read, as follows:

Whereas Henry E. Dosker, of Louisville, Ky., has constantly been under the jurisdiction of the United States and a resident therein since the age of 18 years; and
Whereas the said Henry E. Dosker, when he became of age, went to the . Federal court at Grand Rapids, Mich., and was informed by the clerk of said court that he had become a citizen of the United States by reason of the naturalization papers taken out by his father; and Whereas the said Henry E. Dosker, since that time, for 41 years, has been exercising the privileges of American citizenship under the impression that no naturalization papers were required to be taken out by him; and
Whereas it now appears that the information given him by the clerk of the Federal court at Grand Rapids, Mich., was incorrect and that he is not a citizen of the United States nor of any other Government: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That Henry E. Dosker be, and he is hereby, uncondi-

Resolved, etc., That Henry E. Dosker be, and he is hereby, unconditionally admitted to the character and privileges of a citizen of the United States.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. From the Committee on Pensions I report back favorably with amendments the bill (H. R. 20827) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, and I submit a report (No. 1091)

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and the amendments of the committee will be stated.

The amendments were:

On page 2, to strike out lines 1, 2, 3, and 4, as follows:

The name of Charles A. Holmes, late of Company H, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 5, to strike out lines 1, 2, and 3, as follows:

The name of Charles A. Vanatta, late of Company M. First Regiment Colorado Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 6, line 4, after the name "John," strike out the initial "P." and insert the initial "F.," so as to read:

The name of John F. Burrow, jr., late of United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

On page 6, line 17, after the name "Daniel," to strike out the initial "F." and insert in lieu thereof the initial "T.," so as

The name of Daniel T. French, late of Fifteenth Battery, United States Field Artillery, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 8, to strike out lines 20, 21, 22, and 23, as follows:

The name of Thomas Whitson, late captain Company L, Fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 8, in line 24, after the word "late," to strike out the words "a member," so as to read:

The name of George R. Weight, late of Company B. Fifth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

On page 11, to strike out lines 5, 6, and 7, as follows:

The name of Harry W. Feldman, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per

On page 11, in line 19, after the name "Smith," to insert the word "late," so as to read:

The name of Frank A. Smith, late of detachment of Engineers, United States Military Academy, United States Army, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 12, to strike out lines 4, 5, and 6, as follows:

The name of Orin Marshall, late of Company A, First Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On Page 13, in line 4, before the word "Marine," to insert the words "United States," so as to read:

The name of Marie G. Harding, widow of Arthur E. Harding, late captain. United States Marine Corps, United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

On page 13, strike out lines 17, 18, and 19, as follows:

The name of Louis S. Harris, late of Battery A, Third Regiment United States Artillery, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 13, to strike out lines 20, 21, and 22, as follows: The name of Richard Thrash, late of Troop A, Second Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 15, to strike out lines 8, 9, 10, and 11, as follows: The name of Fred Angelo, late of Troop C, Thirteenth Regiment United States Cavalry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

On page 15, to strike out lines 19, 20, 21, and 22, as follows: The name of Lily D. Murphy, widow of Frank T. Murphy, late of Battery K, Third Regiment United States Artillery, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 15, to strike out lines 23, 24, and 25, as follows: The name of Charles V. Grogan, late of the United States Navy, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 16, to strike out lines 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, as follows:

The name of Robert J. Clement, dependent father of Ira C. Clement, late of Company G, First Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

On page 17, to strike out lines 8, 9, 10, and 11, as follows:

The name of George W. Paul, late of Company D, Second Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

On page 17, to strike out lines 12, 13, and 14, as follows:

The name of Frank L. Schaarman, alias Frank L. Sherman, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

On page 17, to strike out lines 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19, as follows: The name of George Parliament, late of Company C. Second Regiment Louisiana Volunteer Infantry, and Company G. Thirty-ninth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

On page 18, to strike out lines 14, 15, and 16, as follows: The name of Otto H. Staron, late of the United States Navy, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and request a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, the conferees on the part of the Senate to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Smoor conferees on the part of the Senate. Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. From the Committee on Pensions granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors. I ask unanimous con-sent for the present consideration of the bill.

I submit a report (No. 1089) accompanied by a bill (S. 8295)

There being no objection, the Senate as in Committee of the Whole proceeded to consider the bill.

It proposes to place on the pension rolls the following-named persons at the rate Lerein specified:

Eliza J. Sparrow
Sarah J. Wheatley
Harriet C. Squire
Lillian A. Loomis
Lillian A. Loomis Helena E. Clark
Flora L. Cum aings
Julia E. Booth
Alice P. B. Kenvon
Howena M Caikins Julia E, Booth Mary A. Birge Alice P, B. Kenyon Mary A. Hughes Ruth A. Ingraham Mary B. Johnson Benjamin F, Clark Kate M, King
Mary B. Johnson
Benjamin F. Clark
Kate M. King Jacob S. Fritz Samuel P. Shaffer Millie M. Ball
Samuel P. Shaffer
Uriah Ruch
Uriah Ruch Abraham T. Casey
Alfred Quackenbush
Jennie M. Chapman
James K. ClearElla M. Dailey
Charles Cain
Isaac J. C. Guy
George Hinds
Annie Humphreys
James E. Sipes
Clar M. Dalley Charles Cain Saac J. C. Guy Arthur Ward George Hinds Annie Humphreys Oyer B. McConnell Iames E. Sipes Mary E. Button Ada Roberts Addaide E. Thomas
Adelaide F. Thomas
Ada Roberts Adelaide F. Thomas Elden B. Maddocks Henry C. Sargent William D. Collins Eugene H. Otis Daniel Killigan Jeorge W. Smith Albania D. Thornburgh Jeorge H. Wilkins Jeorge H. Fernald Mariaa Robinson
William D. Collins
Eugene H. Otis
leorge W. Smith
Albania D. Thornburgh
George H. Wilkins
Marian Robinson
Marcellus Hoben
James H. Hines
Cimothy Stone
George H. Fernald Mariaa Robinson William A Millard Marcellus Hoben James H. Hines Cimothy Stone John W. Hall Asa T. Worcester Hram Haynes
Iram Haynes
Train Haynes Frederick Nientzenheizer Fhomas J. Leathers John G. McKay.  Henry E. Flanders John J. Ashline Sdward T. Jackson Mifred T. Rand Javid Russel
Jenry E Flanders
J. Ashline
Odward T. Jackson
David Russel
Alfred T. Rand avid Russel. liram H. Titterington 3enjamin F. Byers Thomas R. Luckhardt oseph Grubb Daniel McNutt
Chomas R. Luckhardt
Joseph Grubb
Mary E. Campbell
Jabez R. Bowen
Janiel McNu <sup>1</sup> t Mary E. Campbell Jabez R. Bowen Jarace M. Copeland Margaret Downey
torace Griggs
Saran M. Law
fary E. Newbury rank S. Shaffer
Illen Manchester Arry E. Newbury.  Mmothy Quinn Frank S. Shaffer Sdward D. Woodmansee Charles A. Mudgett Allian S. Hawkes Oseph McKenney, jr Jariton J. Beaman Ohn S. Raymond Allian S. Hawkes
oseph McKenney, jr
ohn S. Raymond ariton J. Beaman ohn S. Raymond 'heodore B. Magie ames H. Waugh 'rank Goodwin Villiam H. Clark
ames H. Waugh
Yilliam H, Clark  Thomas D, Scott
ddie M. Higgins
Zra F. McIntire
Valter M. Edes
Inomas D. Scott ddie M. Higgins Zra F. McIntire Valter M. Edes Aarcellus E. Hart ames M. Gwinn Vaddy Hoover
Vaddy Hoover ohn F. Anderson Jorr H. Mayne
Dorr H. Mayne
William H. Lasher
Roscoe G. Tibbetts
Catherine Crane Patrick
William H. Lasher Roscoe G. Tibbetts Simon Hasselback Catherine Crane Patrick Isalah W. Deemer Charles Richards

Edward E. Gould	$50
George H. Clark	30
Joseph Artley	24
Jacob M. Westfall	30
May E. McCoy	20
Lucretia Whitt	20
Mary E. A. Winans	20
Oliver W. Davis	30
David E. Dodge	30
Timothy S. Heald	40
Charles Fisk	30
Thomas A. Stevens	40
Stephen B. Packard	40
Michael Sheline	40
Leroy S. Griswold	40
Robert H. M. Dennelly	40
Michael Callahan	30
Henry S. Silsby	40
Dennis W. Riordan	36
John H. Wells	50
Lewis Seymour
Robert Johnston	36
Samuel E. Palmer
Sarah Baker	20
Mollie Thompson	20
Anna Alexander
Robert S. Bowman	36
George W. Moore	50
John S. Adams
Caleb Akers
Harrison White	50
Ella Taylor	24
Francis A. Ricketts	50
Hanry Smith	50
Henry SmithFrancis M. Blankinship	30
Jeremiah Coombs	36
John W. Roberson	40
Minatree Turner	50
George S. Robinson	40
William M. Helvy
Augusta Lambert	12
Elizabeth Roberts	20
Francis E. Derby	40
Pidnets D. Detoy
The bill was reported to the Senate without amendm	ent, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time,

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. From the Committee on Pensions I submit a report (No. 1090), accompanied by a bill (S. 8296) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It proposes to place on the pension rolls the following-named

It proposes to place on the pension rolls the following-nan persons at the rate herein specified:

Louis Hagenbucher.
Percy A. Farrar.
Edward Robinson.
Mattie S. M. Hope.
M. B. Sasser.
Hans C. Neilsen.
Carl J. Nelson.
Robert L. Zell.
Clark E. Messenger.
Edward Harris.
John H. Elder.
Elner Bjarnson.
Meda Mathey.
Leonard Kempenar.
Byron W. Jacks.
Abel H. Hall.
Harry F. Roddy.
William A. Bowens.
Delia B. Lydecker.
Ethel M. Robards.
Arabelle G. Walker.
Lotta K. Boyd.
William E. Puett.
George P. Cross.
George Moir.
Herbert G. Hoots.
Alada Thurston Paddock Mills
Ferdinand Klawitter
Frank Burrow.
John A. West.
Joseph J. Meyers.
Kathrina E. T. Vreeland.
Robert A. Imrie.
William F. Core.
Ernest Wesche, jr.
Mary L. Pritchett.
Elizabeth S. Naylor.
Aurelia H. Gibson.
Emily A. Baldridge Cavender.
Johanna E. Waalkes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, dered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third th persons at the rate herein specified:

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, or-dered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time,

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

A bill (S. 8281) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of Arthur E. Colgate, administrator of the estate of Clinton G. Colgate, deceased; to the Committee on

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 8282) to change the name of the Mukuntuweap National Monument in the State of Utah to Little Zion National Park; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. THOMAS:

A bill (S. 8283) for the relief of Samuel W. Morrison; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CURTIS: A bill (S. 8284) granting a pension to Mary C. Thompson (with accompanying papers);
A bill (S. 8285) granting an increase of pension to James K. P. Wilson (with accompanying papers); and
A bill (S. 8286) granting an increase of pension to William B.

Gray (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HUSTING:

A bill (S. 8287) to establish aids to navigation at Fond du Lac Harbor, Wis.; to the Committee on Commerce. A bill (S. 8288) granting an increase of pension to Emily E.

Fowler; and

A bill (S. 8289) granting an increase of pension to Ferdinand Fetter; to the Committee on Pensions. By Mr. WATSON:

A bill (S. 8290) granting an increase of pension to Maberry M. Lacey, and

A bill (S. 8291) granting an increase of pension to John A. Markley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. UNDERWOOD:

A bill (S. 8292) to authorize sale of certain land in Alabama to the heirs at law of Thomas Tumlin, deceased; to the Committee on Public Lands,

By Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey (for Mr. Chilton): A bill (S. 8293) granting an increase of pension to Mary Ella

Walton; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

A bill (S. 8294) for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service; to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. CURTIS submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,000 for the repair, rebuilding, and completion of the road on the Fort Riley Military Reservation in the State of Kansas, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill (H. R. 20067), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. JONES submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $125,000 for eight or more launches for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, including their equipment, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill (H. R. 20967), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $708,000 for two new vessels for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, including their equipment, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill (H. R. 20967), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

THE REVELUE.

Mr. NORRIS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extension of fortifications, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

MARGARET N. BAUSKETT.

Mr. BRYAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 369), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay from the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate to Margaret N. Bauskett, widow of William T Bauskett, late clerk to the Committee on Claims of the United States Senate, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

REPORT ON MILK STANDARDS.

Mr. WADSWORTH submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 368), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved. That the third report of the Commission on Milk Standards, appointed by the New York milk committee, as printed in volume 32, No. 7, of the Public Health Reports, dated February 16, 1917, be printed as a Senate document, and that 100,000 additional copies be printed for the use of the Senate document room.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. CLAPP. For the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] I submit a conference report on the Indian appropriation bill, which I ask may lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18453) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 13, 14, 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 33, 34, 36, 38, 39, 55, 58, 62, 65, 66, 73, 74, 76, 82, 88, 96, 100, 103, 106, and 112.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 15, 17, 18, 23, 25, 37, 40, 41, 43, 44, 45, 47, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 59, 61, 64, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 75, 77, 78, 79, 81, 83, 86, 89, 91, 94, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 104, 105, 107, 108, and 109, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided further, That $5,000 of the above amount shall be used for an investigation and report on the merits of the claim of the Indians of the Warm Springs Reservation in Oregon to additional land arising from alleged erroneous surveys of the north and west boundaries of their reservation as defined in the treaty concluded June 25, 1855 (12 Stat. L., 963), and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make such survey or resurveys as may be necessary to complete said investigation and report"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided, That automobiles or any other vehicles or conveyances used in introducing, or attempting to introduce, intoxicants into the Indian country, or where the introduction is prohibited by treaty or Federal statute, whether used by the owner thereof or other person, shall be subject to the seizure, libel, and forfeiture provided in section 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States"; and the Senate agree to

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert ; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

sert the following:

"For construction, lease, purchase, repair, and improvement of school and agency buildings, including the purchase of necessary lands and the installation, repair, and improvement of heating, lighting, power, and sewerage and water systems in connection therewith, $400,000: Provided, That of this amount $300 may be expended for the purchase of a perpetual water right and right of way across the lands of private individuals, for the purpose of running a pipe line from a certain spring or springs located near the Sisseton Indian Agency buildings, South Dakota, to said buildings, the purchase of such water right to include sufficient land for the construction of a small cement reservoir near such spring or springs for the purpose of storing the water so acquired: Provided further, That not to exceed $500 of the amount herein appropriated may be used for the acquisition on behalf of the United States, by purchase or otherwise, of land for a site for the Mesquakie Day School, Sac and Fox, Iowa: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allow employees in the Indian Service who are furnished quarters necessary heat and light for such quarters without charge, such heat and light to be paid for out of the fund chargeable with the cost of heating and lighting other buildings at the same place: And provided further, That the amount so expended for agency purposes shall not be included in the maximum amounts for compensation of employees prescribed by section 1, act of August 24, 1912."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided further, That where practicable the transportation and expenses so paid shall be refunded and shall be returned to the appropriation from which paid"; and the Senate agree to the same

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amend-ment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "$475,000, of which sum not less than $75,000 shall be used for the employment of additional field matrons"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of said amendment strike out the figures "$10,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$8,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert ; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in line 1 of said amendment insert "$75,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of said amendment numbered 24 and the following language appearing in lines 10 to 14, inclusive, on page 13 of the bill:

"That from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall have the power to authorize any superintendent, clerk, or other employee in the Indian field service to administer oaths and take acknowledgments in connection with matters pertaining to their official duties."

And the Senate agree to the same. That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 4 of the amendment proposed, after the word "Interior," strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the following: "reimbursable to the United States from any funds now or hereafter placed in the Treasury to the credit of the Navajo Indians in Arizona, to remain a charge and lien upon the lands and funds of said tribe of In-dians until paid"; and the Senate agree to the same. That the House recede from its disagreement to the amend-ment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: " IOWA.

"Sec. 6. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to pay to the enrolled members of the Sac and Fox of the Mississippi Tribe of Indians of the State of Iowa, entitled under existing law to share in the funds of said tribe, or to their lawful heirs, the sum of $10,334.96, together with the interest which has or may hereafter accrue thereon, remaining in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Sac and Fox of the Mississippi Tribe of Indians of the State of Iowa, from the sum of $42,893.25 transferred to the credit of those Indians under the provisions of the act of June 10, 1896, said sum of $10,334.96 to be apportioned per capita among the enrolled members of said tribe.

And the Senate agree to the same. That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 6 of the amendment strike out the following: "for setting out trees, $500;" and in line 7 of the amendment strike out the figures "$75,175" and in lieu thereof insert the figures "$74,675"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Heyes to the amendment of the Senate numbered.

ment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48 and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 4 of the amendment strike out word "on," after the word "bridge," and insert the following: "across the Mississippi River on the"; and the Senate agree to

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of the amendment, after the word "been," strike out the words "omitted erroneously from the rolls," and in lieu thereof insert the following: "heretofore erroneously stricken from the rolls and reinstated prior to the passage of this act"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "Washington," in lines 21 and 22 of the amendment, insert the following: "and other Chippewa Indians visiting said city"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lines 3 and 4 of the amendment strike out the following: "for the purchase of additional land, $41,600; in all, $129,920," and insert the following: "in all, $88,320"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 63, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of the amendment strike out the figures "$52,100" and in lieu thereof insert the figures "$50,430"; and in line 4 of the amendment strike out the figures "$99,100" and in lieu thereof insert "$97,430"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to the enrolled members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes of Indians of Oklahoma entitled under existing law to share in the funds of said tribes, or to their lawful heirs, out of any moneys belonging to said tribes in the United States Treasury or deposited in any bank or held by any official under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, not to exceed $100 per capita, said payment to be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That in cases where such enrolled members, or their heirs, are Indians who by reason of their degree of Indian blood belong to the restricted class, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, withhold such payments and use the same for the benefit of such restricted Indians: Provided further, That the money paid to the enrolled members as provided herein shall be exempt from any lien for attorneys' fees or other debt contracted prior to the passage of this act: Prorided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to use not to exceed $8,000 out of the Chickasaw and Choctaw tribal funds for the expenses and the compensation of all necessary employees for the distribution of the said per capita payments.'

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"That the sum of $5,000, to be immediately available, be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any funds of the Chickasaw Nation, not otherwise appropriated, to reimburse Douglas H. Johnston, Governor of the Chickasaw Nation, for extra expenses incurred in the performance of his duty as chief executive of the Chickasaw Nation and principal chief of the Chickasaw Tribe of Indians during the period covered between the years 1907 and 1912, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to make such payment from the funds of said

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"Hereafter no allotments of land shall be made to members of the Creek Nation: Provided, That upon the approval of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall, in lieu of an allotment, pay out of any funds in the Treasury of the United States, to the credit of the Creek Nation, the sum of $800 each, to Lula Butler, Quenton Garrett, Jack Elton Wilson, and David Bowlegs who have not received an allotment or money in lieu of an allotment: Provided further, That if it shall be found that any of said parties have received a partial allotment the Secretary of the Interior shall pay to such party or parties a sum sufficient to equalize such partial allotment up to the sum of $800."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 7 of the amendment strike out the following: "$40,000; in all, $162,200," and insert $30,000; in all $152,200"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 90, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 12 of the amendment, after the word "prescribe," strike out the period, insert a colon, and add the following: "Provided, That the application of this provision shall not interfere with any rights guaranteed by treaty to any allotted Umatilla Indian or Indians"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 92, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed insert the following:

SEC. 21. For support and education of 365 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Flandreau, S. Dak., and for pay of superintendent, $62,955; for general repairs and improvements, $8,000; for new barn, $3,000; in all, $73,955."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 93, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "in all, $53,750."

On page 40, line 1, of the bill, after the figures "$43,750," insert the following: "of which amount not exceeding $900 may be expended for the purchase of two new busses"; and the Senate agree to the same,

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"For acquiring, constructing, or enlargement and equipment of school buildings on the following reservations: Crow Creek, Pine Ridge, Rosebud, Standing Rock, Yankton, Sisseton, Lower Brule, and Cheyenne River, $300,000, of which sum not to exceed $50,000 shall be used for the construction and equipment of new school buildings at Fort Yates, N. Dak. And it is hereby declared to be the settled policy of the Government to hereafter make no appropriation whatever out of the Treasury of the United States for education of Indian children in any sectarian school."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 110, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"SEC 26. That until the meeting of the Sixty-fifth Congress, those members of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives, not less than five in number, who are Members elect to the Sixty-fifth Congress, are authorized to conduct hearings and investigate the conduct of the Indian Service, at Washington, District of Columbia, and elsewhere, and the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available and remain available until expended, is hereby appropriated for expenses incident thereto. The said committee is hereby authorized and empowered to examine into the conduct and management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and all its branches and agencies, their organization and administration, to examine all books, documents, and papers in the said Bureau of Indian Affairs, its branches or agencies, relating to the administration of the business of said bureau, and shall have and is hereby granted authority to subpœna witnesses, compel their attendance, administer oaths, and to demand any and all books, documents, and papers of whatever nature relating to the affairs of Indians as conducted by said bureau, its branches and agencies. Said committee is hereby authorized to employ such clerical and other assistance, including stenographers, as said committee may deem necessary in the proper prosecution of its work: Provided, That stenographers so employed shall not receive for their services exceeding $1 per printed page."

And the Senate agree to the same. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 111, and agree to the same.

HENRY F. ASHUEST, H. L. MYERS, MOSES E. CLAPP. Managers on the part of the Senate. JNO. H. STEPHENS, C. D. CARTER, P. D. NORTON Managers on the part of the House.

MOUNT M'KINLEY NATIONAL PARK.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHEPPARD in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5716) to establish the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska, which were, on page 2, to strike out lines 23 to 25, inclusive, and insert:

SEC. 4. Nothing in this act shall in any way modify or affect the mineral-land laws now applicable to the lands in the said park.

On page 4, line 8, after "park," to strike out all down to and of page 4, fine 3, after park, to strike out an down to that including "park" in line 12, and insert:

Provided, That no appropriation for the maintenance of said park in excess of $10,000 annually shall be made unless the same shall have first been expressly authorized by law.

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

COURTS IN TEXAS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 7644) to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for terms of court at Wichita Falls, Tex., and for a clerk for said court, and for other purposes, which was, on page 2. line 3, after "court," to insert:

Provided, That suitable accommodations for holding court at Wichita Falls shall be provided by the county or municipal authorities without expense to the United States.

Mr. CULBERSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

DISTRICT JUDGE FOR TEXAS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5450) to amend section 108, chapter 5, of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, which were, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint an additional judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Texas, who shall possess the same powers, perform the same duties, and receive the same compensation and allowance as the present judge of said district, and whose official place of residence shall be maintained at El Paso until otherwise provided by law.

And to amend the title so as to read: "An act to provide for an additional judge in the State of Texas."

Mr. CULBERSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

UNSURVEYED RAILBOAD LANDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1792) for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands, which was, on page 2, line 6, after "lands," to insert "of approximately equal value."

Mr. POINDEXTER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House. The motion was agreed to.

COAL-LAND ENTRIES.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 40) to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations, which was, on page 4, line 7, after "reservation," to insert:

Provided, That the provisions of this act shall not apply to the lands of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians in Oklahoma.

Mr. SMOOT. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

FORT PECK INDIAN RESERVATION.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5612) providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of lands within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont., which were, on page 1, line 8, to strike out "and so forth" and insert "and the sale and disposal of all the surplus lands after allotment"; on page 1, line 9, after "pay," to insert "one-half of any"; on page 2, line 4, to strike out "at or" and insert "annually"; on page 2, to strike out lines 11 to 16, inclusive; and on page 2, line 17, to strike out "SEC. 3." and insert "SEC. 2."

Mr. MYERS. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I should like to know what this bill is

Mr. MYERS. It is Senate bill 5612, introduced by me. proposes to grant a slight extension of time for homesteaders the public domain hereafter?

on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation in Montana to make their payments

Mr. JONES. What is the character of the amendments made by the House?

The principal amendment adopted by the House, Mr. MYERS. and the only one that amounts to anything, is to make the extension on one-half of the payments instead of on all of them, as passed by the Senate, and I am willing to accept that amendment.

Mr. JONES. How much time does the bill give?
Mr. MYERS. As the Senate passed the bill it provided that the time might be extended from five to eight years. That is not disturbed by the House action. The provisions of the bill are confined to the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, solely in the State of Montana. It is a local bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana to concur in the House amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

REPUBLIC COAL CO.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation.

Mr. MYERS. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House and request a conference with the House ments of the House and request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, the conferees on the part of the Senate to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Myers, Mr. Thomas, and Mr. Smoot conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I desire to make an inquiry of the Senator from Montana regarding this joint resolution. Is it the same measure granting certain lands to the Republic Coal Co. that was pending in the Senate a couple of years ago and in regard to which there was some controversy here?

Mr. MYERS. I think this is the joint resolution the Senator has in mind.

Mr. KENYON. When did it pass the Senate?
Mr. MYERS. A month ago, probably.
Mr. SMOOT. It was passed one evening, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. MYERS. When the calendar was called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution was passed on June 3, 1916, the Chair will say to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. KENYON. It was passed during a call of the calendar, presume, for unobjected bills.

Mr. MYERS. It was passed much farther back than I thought, but it passed, as I recall, on a call of the calendar during the daytime. I do not think it was passed at night.

Mr. SMOOT. My recollection is it was passed in the evening.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the Senator if this joint resolution as it is now constructed is different from what it was when the objection was made to it when originally considered in the Senate?

Mr. MYERS. There were so many objections raised and it has been pending so long, in both the Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth Congresses, that I can not answer that question intel-

Mr. KENYON. A number of amendments have been made to the joint resolution?

Mr. MYERS. It was amended in the Senate, and then still further amended in the other House.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator a question. Of course the amendments of the House were read changed the entire resolution. Is not that true?

Mr. MYERS. I would not say that, but the House has changed the joint resolution in a number of material respects.

Mr. JONES. As I understand, the Senate joint resolution provided for the sale of some of the public lands, or the coal under the public lands to this company, and the House has changed that to a leasing system.

Mr. MYERS. That is one of the changes the House has made.

Mr. JONES. That is the important change, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. That is probably the most important change; yes, sir.

Mr. JONES. And if the amendments made by the House shall be concurred in, then it will form a precedent for handling

Mr. MYERS. I presume it would, but the amendments have not been adopted as yet.

I hope the Senate conferees will see that they Mr. JONES.

are not adopted.

Mr. MYERS. I have done all that I could do. I moved that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House, request a conference with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate. That motion was agreed to, and the conferees have been appointed.

Mr. JONES. I know that; but I desired to make to the conferees the suggestion I have made.

Mr. MYERS. So far as I am concerned, I have always favored the sale of the lands, and I am not in favor of the leasing provision.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KENYON. Would a motion at this time to concur in the House amendments be in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would.

Mr. MYERS. I raise the point of order that it would not be in order unless the Senate should reconsider the action that has already been taken. The Senate has taken positive action in the matter.

Mr. KENYON. I move, Mr. President, that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

Mr. MYERS. I raise the point of order that the motion is out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Iowa that he overlooked the fact for the moment that a motion to disagree to the amendments of the House had been made and carried, and that conferees had been appointed. Therefore a motion to reconsider will have to be made before the motion of the Senator from Iowa can be entertained.

Mr. KENYON. It was done in a hurry—I am not criticizing anyone—but it was done as such matters usually are done, without full knowledge on the part of the Senate, I think, as to what was taking place. I move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate disagreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives and appointed conferees.

Mr. MYERS. I should like to say to the Senator from Iowa that I-

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, it is perfectly apparent, from the statements made to me by Senators, that this measure can not be acted upon without long discussion, and I object.

Mr. MYERS. I do not want any action on it except what has already been taken. I am not asking for any.

Mr. KENYON. As the parliamentary situation now stands, the matter, as I understand, goes over with my motion pending to concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that the motion to reconsider is in order.

Mr, SMITH of South Carolina. If the Senator from Iowa will allow me

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Is that motion debatable?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is debatable.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I just wanted to address this observation to the Senator from Iowa: This matter has gone to conference, as I understand. I know nothing about the merits of it. Of course, those who live in that section of the country are more familiar with its merits; but the Senator from Iowa will have his opportunity when the conference report is made in the Senate.

Mr. KENYON. I think not.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Oh, certainly the Senator

Mr. KENYON. My motion is that the House amendments be

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If the conferees bring in a report they will recommend an agreement. Then the Senator from Iowa will have an opportunity to inquire as to the nature of the agreement, and he can object to the conference report and defeat it if he has votes enough.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I want to submit to the Senator from Iowa that if he is anxious to have the Senate concur in the House amendments he ought to insist on his motion to reconsider the vote by which this bill was acted on and conferees were appointed, because if the conferees are appointed and the vote is not reconsidered and they make a report here, no matter what it may be, it will be the conference report that will be before the Senate, and it will not be in order at that time for him to make his motion to concur in the House amendments. If, however, a motiton to reconsider is made and agreed to, then a motion to concur in the House amendments is in order, and if that motiton prevails the bill is passed.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I want to appeal to the Senator from Iowa to let this matter take its usual course. no objection to it. Conferees have been appointed now. They will meet the conferees from the House. There are a number of material amendments in the bill-a number of amendments that are material to the nature of the bill. The conferees from the House will meet the conferees from the Senate. I think possibly in conference there may be some compromise arrived at that will be fairly satisfactory to both House and Senate. If so, then a report will be made to each body, and the Senator from Iowa will have his opportunity to hear the report of the conferees, and if it is not satisfactory to him in any particular he may oppose it and make his fight on it. Why not let the conferees see if they can get anything out of it that is satisfactory, and then, if not satisfactory, make his fight and let the matter take the usual course?

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I think I will follow the suggestion of the Senator from Montana. As this bill was originally presented to the Senate, I was opposed to it, and it seems to me that it was passed without any particular consideration; but the objections I have may have been fully covered by amendments. I am inclined to think the House amendments—

Mr. MYERS. If the Senator will pardon me, I will say that there have been a number of amendments made. If the Senator will pursue the course he kindly indicates he will, he will have ample time to study it. He can study the bill and the amendments and the conference report, and see if he is satisfied in every respect

Mr. KENYON. I will follow the suggestion of the Senator from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to concur in the amendments of the House is withdrawn.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

H. R. 5788. An act to create two additional associate justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 10110. An act to increase the salary of the United States district attorney for the district of Rhode Island;

H. R. 11706. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to prevent the disclosure of national-defense secrets," approved March

H. R. 19233. An act to increase the salary of the United States marshal for the western district of Michigan; and

H. R. 20414. An act for the establishment of a probation system in the United States courts except in the District of Columbia.

The following bill and joint resolution were each read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

H. R. 20755. An act to provide a temporary government for the West Indian Islands acquired by the United States from Denmark by the convention entered into between said countries on the 4th day of August, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 7th day of September, 1916, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 334. Joint resolution authorizing the President to appoint delegates to attend the Tenth International Congress of the World's Purity Federation, to be held in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, November 8 to 14, 1917.

The following bills were each read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Patents:

H. R. 19771. An act to renew patent No. 24917; and
H. R. 20228. An act to renew patent No. 25909.
H. R. 18894. An act to amend the public-building act approved
March 4, 1913, authorizing the acquisition of a suitable site for a public building at Pittston, Pa., was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

H. R. 17646. An act to amend section 6 of an act to define and fx the standard of value, to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the public debt, and for other purposes, approved March 14, 1900, as amended by the act of March 4, 1907, by the act of March 2, 1911, and by the act of June 12, 1916, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

H. R. 13166. An act authorizing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to transfer fractional block 6, of Naylor's addition, Forest Grove, Oreg., to the United States of America, for the use of the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on

H. R. 18825. An act to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915 and for prior years, and for other purposes," was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

H. R. 18826. An act to relieve the owners of mining claims who have been mustered into the service of the United States as officers or enlisted men of the Organized Militia or National Guard from performing assessment work during the term of such service, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

OFFENSES AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there further morning business?

If not, the morning business is closed.

Mr. OVERMAN. I move that the I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 8148.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 8148) to define and punish espionage.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the question is on the passage of the bill, and the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. NORRIS. The question is debatable, is it not?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not. The roll was once called.

Mr. NORRIS. There was no quorum, I understand. The VICE PRESIDENT. That is true, but the roll call has been begun, and it is not debatable.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called).

I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Clapp] to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] and vote "yea."

Mr. UNDERWOOD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. Harding], who is detained at home on account of sickness. He has, however, informed me, through his secretary, that, if he were present, he would vote for the bill, and asked me to announce that fact. As, if he were present, the Senator from Ohio would vote in the same way that I shall vote, I will vote. I vote

'yea."
Mr. VARDAMAN (when the name of Mr. SHIELDS was called). I wish to announce the absence of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] on account of illness.

Mr. WALSH (when Mr. SAULSBURY'S name was called). The Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is absent on account of illness. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Chil-TON] is also absent on account of illness in his family.

Ton] is also absent on account of finess in his family.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BECKHAM. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Du Pont] to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and vote "yea."

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] to the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] and vote "yea."
Mr. COLT (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Saulsbury], but, as I understand, if present, he would vote the same way that I have voted. I shall allow my vote to Mr. FALL. I am paired with the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Chilton]. The Senator from West Virginia, if present, would vote as I intend to vote. I therefore vote.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence and pairs of the following Senators:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger] with the Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN]; and

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Goff] with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

Mr. McCUMBER (after having voted in the affirmative). desire to inquire whether the senior Senator from Colorado

[Mr. Thomas] has voted? The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. McCUMBER. I have a pair with that Senator, but I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Utah [Mr.

SUTHERLAND and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. STERLING (after having voted in the affirmative).

I desire to inquire if the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. STERLING. I have a pair with that Senator, but I understand that if present he would vote the same way as I have voted. I will therefore allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CATRON. Understanding that my pair, the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen], would vote the same way as I shall vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. WEEKS (after having voted in the affirmative). Has the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. James] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. WEEKS. I have a pair with that Senator, and therefore withdraw my vote

Mr. POMERENE. I have been requested to announce the unavoidable absence of the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] and to state that he is paired with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger].

Mr. WEEKS. I am informed that my pair, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. James], if present, would vote as I have voted. I will therefore allow my vote to stand as originally cast

Mr. WILLIAMS. I desire to transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Penrose] to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Smith]. I vote "yea."

Mr. STONE (after having voted in the affirmative). fer my pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Broussard], and I will permit my vote to stand.

The result was announced-yeas 60, nays 10, as follows:

YEAS-60

Ashurst	Hollis	Nelson	Smith, Md.
Beckham	Husting	Newlands	Smith, Mich.
Brady	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Smoot
Brandegee	Johnson, S. Dak.	Page	Sterling
Bryan	Jones	Pittman	Stone
Catron	Kern	Poindexter	Swanson
Chamberlain	Kirby	Pomerene	Thompson
Colt	Lea, Tenn.	Ransdell	Townsend
Culberson	Lippitt	Reed	Underwood
Curtis	Lodge	Robinson	Wadsworth
Dillingham	McCumber	Shafroth	Walsh
Fall	McLean	Sheppard	Warren
Fernald	Martin, Va.	Sherman	Watson
Fletcher	Martine, N. J.	Simmons	Weeks
Hardwick	Myers	Smith, Ga.	Williams
	NAY	S-10.	SALISH SELLING
Borah	Kenyon	Lee, Md.	Works
Cummins	La Follette	Norris
Gronna	Lane	Vardaman
	NOT VO	TING-26.	CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF THE
Bankhead	Goff	O'Gorman	Smith, Ariz.
Broussard	Gore	Oliver	Smith, S. C.
Chilton	Harding	Owen	Sutherland
Clapp	Hitchcock	Penrose	Thomas
Clark	Hughes	Phelan	Tillman
du Pont	James	Saulsbury	Line to the Control of the
Gallinger	Lewis	Shields	COLDER STUDENTS

So the bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. Overman, the title was amended so as to read: "A bill to punish espionage and acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes."

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the 13 bills now upon the calendar which are covered by the bill which has just been passed, from Order of Business 907 to Order of Business 920, both inclusive, with the exception of Order of Business 912, which is the bill just passed, may be taken from the calendar and indefinitely postponed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The titles of the bills indefinitely postponed are as follows:

A bill (S. 6813) to prohibit and punish the willful making of untrue statements under oath to influence the acts or conduct of a foreign Government, or to defeat any measure of the Government of the United States in a dispute or controversy with any foreign nation;

A bill (S. 6816) to prevent and punish the impersonation of officials of foreign Governments duly accredited to the Government of the United States;

A bill (S. 6793) to prevent and punish willful injury or at-tempted injury to, or conspiracy to injure, any vessel engaged in foreign commerce, or the cargo or persons on board thereof, by fire, explosion, or otherwise;

A bill (S. 6795) to authorize the collector of customs, or other officer duly empowered by the President, during time of war between foreign nations, to inspect private vessels within the jurisdiction of the United States for the purpose of detecting any use or attempted use of such vessel in violation of the law of nations or of the treaties or statute law of the United States, and for other purposes

A bill (S. 6797) to regulate and safeguard the issuance of passports, and to prevent and punish the fraudulent obtaining, transfer, use, alteration, or forgery thereof;

A bill (S. 6794) to empower the President to better enforce and maintain the neutrality of the United States;

A bill (S. 6796) to require sworn statements, in addition to the manifests and clearances required by existing law, by masters of all vessels leaving the jurisdiction of the United States, and by all owners and shippers of cargoes thereon, during a war in which the United States are a neutral nation, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 6798) to prohibit and punish the fraudulent use, application, or counterfeiting of the seal of any executive department or Government commission;

A bill (S. 6799) to amend section 13 of the act "To codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," approved March 4, 1909;

A bill (S. 6811) to authorize the seizure, detention, and condemnation of arms and munitions of war in course of exporta-tion or designed to be exported or used in violation of the laws of the United States, together with the vessels or vehicles in which the same are contained;

A bill (S. 6812) to regulate and restrain the conduct and movements of interned soldiers and sailors of belligerent nations, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 6815) to prevent and punish conspiracy to injure or destroy property situated within and belonging to a foreign Government with which the United States are at peace, or of any subdivision or municipality thereof; and
A bill (S. 6819) to provide for the issuance of search warrants and the seizure and detention of property thereunder, and for other purposes.

GOVERNMENT OF PORTO RICO.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I have an arrangement now, I believe, with everybody who has objected with relation to the Porto Rican bill. I think the passage of the bill can now be completed in a few moments. I therefore move that the bill (H. R. 9533) to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes, be considered by the Senate at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado to proceed to the consideration of what is known as the Porto Rican bill.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, was there not at least an informal understanding on yesterday that at the close of the morning business we should take up the interstate commerce

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do not think it will take a moment to complete the consideration of the Porto Rican bill.

Mr. POMERENE. I have heard that statement made repeatedly in connection with that bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That may be; but if Senators will not continue the debate on the bill it may be speedily completed.

Mr. POMERENE. There are some Senators here who have inconvenienced themselves to be present particularly to take up the interstate commerce bill, and I do not feel, in view of the understanding we had yesterday, that the Senator from Colorado is justified in making his request.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I have been trying to get the Porto Rican bill disposed of for months instead of simply on yesterday.

Mr. POMERENE. I realize that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is not a debatable question.

It is easy to vote it up or vote it down. The motion to take up a bill before the expiration of the morning hour is not debatable. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado to proceed to the consideration of the bill named by him.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9533) to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes

Mr. SHAFROTH. I move, as a substitute for section 35, the amendment which I send to the desk, which, I think, meets the approval of all Senators who have objected to that section.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment, in the nature of a substitute, will be stated.

The Secretary. In lieu of section 35 as now found in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

That at the first election held pursuant to this act the qualified electors shall be those having the qualifications of voters under the present law; thereafter voters shall be citizens of the United States, 21 years of age and over, and have such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by the Legislature of Porto Rico: Provided, That no property qualification shall ever be imposed upon or required of any voter.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator having the bill in charge if the amendment has been submitted to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]?

Mr. SHAFROTH. It has, and it meets with his approval. Mr. SMOOT. And he does not intend to offer the amendment that he offered to the bill when it was last under consideration?

Mr. SHAFROTH. No, sir; he does not. Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator whether there remains in the bill the qualification as to the payment of $3 in taxes?

Mr. SHAFROTH. That has been eliminated entirely. Question, Mr. President.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Colorado if he is clearly of the opinion that this amendment would provide woman suffrage in Porto Rico?

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; it is not intended to force woman suffrage. The bill could not possibly get through Congress in the remaining 10 days of this session if it were complicated with that question.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the Legislature of Porto Rico, under this amendment, have power to prescribe qualifications in such a way as to confine the franchise to male voters'

Mr. SHAFROTH. It can prescribe whatever additional qualifications it may see fit, under the restrictions imposed by this provision. The only qualification required under this provision as it now stands is citizenship and that the voter must be 21 years of age or over. Question, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is—

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator whether he thinks that the Legislature of Porto Rico can deny to some of its citizens the right to vote under this provision?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Well, Mr. President, that is for them to determine. They have that power under this amendment. Mr. JONES. Does the Senator think that under this provision the Legislature of Porto Rico can deny some of its citizens the right to vote on account of their sex?

Mr. SHAFROTH. That will be a qualification that can be determined by act of the legislature in connection with this

Mr. JONES. I desire to understand the purpose of this amendment and the effect of it. It says, does it not-I have only just now heard it read-that all citizens of the United States, having a certain other qualification as to age, shall have the right to vote?

Mr. SHAFROTH. It says that voters shall be of a certain age, and that other qualifications may be prescribed by the Legislature of Porto Rico.

Mr. JONES. Yes; but the legislature can not deprive citizens because of their sex of the right to vote, can it?

Mr. SHAFROTH. The legislature may prescribe that a person shall live for a certain length of time in Porto Rico; they can require that questions of bonded indebtedness shall be voted upon by taxpayers, and can make other qualifications.

Mr. JONES. But can they say that because of their sex persons shall not have the right to vote?

Mr. SHAFROTH. It seems to me that that is in their power under the authority given.

Mr. JONES. Well, I doubt if it ought to be adopted, then. Mr. SHAFROTH. I appeal to the Senator to let the bill be

Mr. KENYON. Question!

Mr. JONES. We are legislating here for a million and a half of people, and we can not legislate simply by saying, "Oh, let it go through." That is not the way to legislate for human beings. There may be grave doubts about the capacity of the Porto Rican women to exercise the franchise. There is doubt as to the capacity of the men. I am satisfied that the Porto Rican women are just as capable as the Porto Rican men. If one is ignorant, so is the other; if one is inexperienced, so is the other; if one can govern, so can the other; if one sex is competent, so is the

Mr. SHAFROTH: The Legislature of Porto Rico will only have the power that is given to every State legislature and that has been given to every legislature under a Territorial form of government, and there has been no abuse of the powers thus

Mr. JONES. I am not so sure about that. I should like to hear the amendment read again.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again read the amendment.

The Secretary. In lieu of section 35 as now found in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

That at the first election held pursuant to this act the qualified electors shall be those having the qualifications of voters under the present law; thereafter voters shall be citizens of the United States, 21 years of age or over, and have such additional qualifications as may be prescribed.

Mr. JONES. I will make no objection to the amendment, Mr. President.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Question!
Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado has not kept his promise. He said that he would finish this bill in three minutes. I move now that the Senate proceed to the consideration of what is known as the flood-control bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. We have reached the point where we can vote right now, if the Senator will just let us do so. Question, Mr. President!

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, one moment. I should like to ask what are the qualifications under the pres-We may be voting for a cat in a bag. [Laughter.] ent law? Mr. SHAFROTH. The qualifications under the present law are citizenship in Porto Rico and 21 years of age. That is all. Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Are there no other qualifications than those?

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; I think not.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, that is very indefinite-"I think not."

Mr. SHAFROTH. That is the law.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I read in a newspaper quite recently an article wherein it was stated that this bill proposes to grant the right of suffrage to the women of Porto Rico. If that is the case, I shall not knowingly vote for the measure, for I am unqualifiedly opposed to woman suffrage. I think it would be a detriment to the Commonwealth, and I believe it would be a misfortune and disaster for the women. If I believed that it would elevate women and enhance the well-being of our Nation, I would advocate it; but the contrary, to my mind, is true.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I will state to the Senator that under the present law women do not vote, and consequently the bill confers no particular privilege upon them except that it gives the Legislature of Porto Rico the right to determine such questions, just as the acts of Congress do which create Territories.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Let me ask whether the pro-hibition provision is included in the bill?

Mr. SHAFROTH. The prohibition provision is something that was settled the last time the bill was under consideration, and a referendum is provided to the people of Porto Rico. Question, Mr. President

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado in the nature of a substitute for section 35 as now in the bill.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I withdraw the motion I made a few moments ago. I see the Senator from Colorado is about ready to jump.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Question, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

The bill was passed. Mr. SHAFROTH. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House on the bill and amendments, and that the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed

Mr. SHAFROTH, Mr. KERN, and Mr. Poindexter conferees on the part of the Senate.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill for the enlargement of the Interstate Commerce Commission, H. R. 308.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is not debatable until o'clock

Mr. VARDAMAN. Is it amendable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not amendable.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I call for the yeas and nays on the motion. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

same transfer as on the last roll call, I vote "yea."

Mr. COLT (when his name was called). Making the pair, the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY], I

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). Making the same transfer as announced on the former roll call, I vote

Mr. STONE (when his name was called). with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] to the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] and vote

Mr. UNDERWOOD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. Harding], who is confined to his home by sickness. I do not know how he would vote on this matter and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LODGE. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH]. Understanding that he would vote as I am about to vote, I vote "yea."

Mr. CATRON. I have been informed that my pair, the junior

Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen], would vote as I would vote. I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] and vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 50, nays 9, as follows: VEAU EO

A LANGE TO SHARE THE PARTY OF T	IEA	5-00.
Ashurst Bankhead Beckham Brady Brandegee Bryan Cafron Chamberlain Curtis Dillingham Fall Fernald Fletcher	Hardwick Hollis Husting James Johnson, S. Dak. Jones Kern Lea, Tenn. Lippitt Lodge McLean Martin, Va. Martine, N. J.	Myers Newlands Page Pittman Poindexter Pomerene Robinson Shafroth Sheppard Sherman Simmons Smith, S. C. Smoot (S—9.	Sterling Stone Swanson Thomas Thompson Townsend Wadsworth Walsh Warren Watson Weeks
Cummins Gronna Kenyon	Kirby La Follette	Lane Nelson	Norris Vardaman
	NOT VO	TING-37.
Borah Broussard Chilton Clapp Clark Colt Culberson du Pont Gallinger Goff	Gore Harding Hitchcock Hughes Johnson, Me. Lee, Md. Lewis McCumber O'Gorman Oliver	Overman Owen Penrose Phelan Ransdell Reed Saulsbury Shields Smith, Ariz. Smith, Ga.	Smith, Md. Smith, Mich. Sutherland Tillman Underwood Williams Works

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 308) to amend the act to regulate commerce, as amended, and for other purposes.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 24 of an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, as amended, be further amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 24. That the Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby enlarged so as to consist of nine members, with terms of seven years, and each shall receive $10,000 compensation annually. The qualifications of the members and the manner of the payment of their salaries shall be as already provided by law. Such enlargement of the commission shall be accomplished through appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of two additional Interstate Commerce Commissioners, one for a term expiring December 31, 1922. The terms of the present commissioners, or of any successor appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the death or resignation of any of the present commissioners, shall expire as heretofore provided by law. Their successors and the successors of the additional commissioners herein provided for shall be appointed for the full term of seven years, except that any person appointed to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the commissioners whom he shall succeed. Not more than five commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party."

Sec. 2. That section 17 of said act, as amended, be further amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 17. That the commission may conduct its proceedings in such manner as will best conduce to the proper dispatch of business and to the ends of justice. The commission shall have an official seal, which shall be judicially noticed. Any member of the commission shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, except as may be otherwise herein provided, but no commissioner shall participate in any hearing or proceeding in which he has any pecuniary interest. The commission may from time to time make or amend such general rules or orders as may be requisite for the order and regulation of proceedings bef order.

"The commission may by order direct that any of its work, business, or functions arising under this act, or under any act amendatory thereof, or supplemental thereto, or under any amendment which may be made to any of said acts, or under any other act or joint resolution which has been or may hereafter be approved, or in respect of any matter which has been or may be referred to the commission by Congress, or by either branch thereof, be assigned or referred to any of said divisions for action thereon, and may by order at any time amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any such direction. All such orders shall take effect forthwith and remain in effect until otherwise ordered by the effect forthwith and remain in effect until otherwise ordered by the commission.

"In conformity with and subject to the order or orders of the commission in the premises, each division so constituted shall have power and authority by a majority thereof to hear and determine, order, certify, report, or otherwise act as to any of said work, business, or functions so assigned or referred to it for action by the commission, and in respect thereof the division shall have all the jurisdiction and powers now or then conferred by law upon the commission, and be subject to the same duties and obligations. Any order, decision, or report made or other action taken by any of said divisions in respect of any matters so assigned or referred to it shall have the same force and effect, and may be made, evidenced, and enforced in the same manner, as if made or taken by the commission as a whole. The secretary and seal of the commission shall be the secretary and seal of each division thereof.

"The salary of the secretary of the commission shall be $7,500 per

The salary of the secretary of the commission shall be $7,500 per annum.

"Nothing in this section contained, or done pursuant thereto, shall be deemed to divest the commission of any of its powers."

SEC. 3. So much of section 18 of the act to regulate commerce as fixes the salary of the secretary of the commission is hereby repealed.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I do not want to precede my friend the chairman of the committee if he cares to discuss the bill at this time

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss it at this time. I assume that the necessity of passing the bill is well known to the Senate, and I do not wish to consume time.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I have no doubt that the Interstate Commerce Commission ought to be reorganized. Unquestionably it has more work to do than it can possibly do as it is organized at the present time. I had hoped that the reorganization of the commission would be postponed until the report of the joint committee of the House and Senate, raised to consider this special subject, had come in; but I do not intend to lay a straw in the way of the consideration and the disposition of this bill. I have two or three objections to it which I hope can be removed by proper amendments.

The bill contemplates the addition of two members. We would then have a commission of nine members. I have no objection to a commission of nine members. I think there ought to be commission of 15 members or more. What is proposed here will be very temporary and very inadequate to meet the real situation, and I have no doubt that the joint committee of the two Houses of Congress will ask for a very much larger commission than is here proposed—at least, I hope it will so report-and for a division of that commission so that proceedings for the purpose of securing relief against unreasonable rates and unfair practices may be instituted and carried forward with less inconvenience and less expense than now attend such pro-

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President-

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to the Senator from Ohio. Mr. POMERENE. From the study I have given the

From the study I have given this measure, I am disposed to think that the commission ought to be larger than nine; but the situation is such that I feel that any relief at this time would be of very great value to the country. Why may we not increase the membership of the commission to nine now? And later, if after the joint committee has concluded its deliberations it should conclude to increase the number to 15, that can be done by Congress quite as well. Meanwhile, we will be getting some relief.

There are many questions, such as car shortage and distribution of cars, that are coming before the commission now, and are of the utmost importance to the people of the country. I say nothing of the many other classes of questions which are coming up; but I feel that we could best serve the country by granting this increase at the present time under the terms of this bill

Mr. CUMMINS. What I suggested was purely preliminary, for I do not bottom my objection to the bill before us on any such ground. I was merely expressing my hope, which I have held for some time, that when we did begin the reorganization of the commission it might be one that would give the relief sought. I doubt very much whether the mere increase of the commission by two members will afford any real relief compatible with the sound principles which should control a body of that sort

I point out why I think the bill is inadequate. I quote:

The commission is hereby authorized by its order to divide the members thereof into as many divisions as it may deem necessary, which may be changed from time to time. Such divisions shall be denominated, respectively, division 1, division 2, etc.

It will be observed that the commission may divide itself into nine divisions if it is thought desirable by the commssion to do so. In that event we will have nine commissions composed of one member each. Bearing that in mind, I call the attention of the Senate to the power of each one of these divisions. I quote from page 5 of the bill:

Any order, decision, or report made or other action taken by any of said divisions in respect of any matters so assigned or referred to it shall have the same force and effect, and may be made, evidenced, and enforced in the same manner as if made or taken by the commission as a whole.

Under the law as it is proposed it will be possible, it may be probable-I do not know what the exigencies of the commission may lead it to do-to divide it into nine divisions. The decision of each man, of each division, will be final. It is unreviewable. I mean unreviewable as a matter of right, and whatever power the Interstate Commerce Commission as a whole has had up to this time may be exercised by the single man if the commission is thus divided. It is more likely it will divide itself into divisions of two, leaving one possibly with three. That is the most likely thing; but it is impossible for any of us just at this date to state just how the commission may think it necessary to distribute itself over the work which it has in hand.

Mr. President, I am wholly opposed to any such situation. The Interstate Commerce Commission performs a work more important to the people of this country than any other tribunal which we have constituted, not excepting the Supreme Court of the United States. Its decisions affect more people and they affect them more vitally than the decisions of any other bodymean of administrative or judicial or quasi-judicial characterwhich has been created under our laws. I can not give my assent to the proposal that one commissioner or even two commissioners and in some cases three commissioners shall have the jurisdiction which has heretofore been exercised by the seven commis-

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President-

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the Senator at this point, suppose the commission is divided into three groups or three divisions. Each one has full power, as I understand the bill, to make binding orders. Suppose the division that is in the West has a question before it and the division in the East has exactly the same question and they decide the question in exactly opposite ways. Is there any provision here for any review of that by the commission? Is there anything to bring about uniformity of decisions on important questions through the different di-

Mr. CUMMINS. I am not able to find any such provision. Mr. KENYON. I have been unable to find it, and that is why I asked the question.

Mr. CUMMINS. Whatever uniformity is desirable could only be secured through informal or extra-official action. There is no provision for an appeal from any division to the full commission. There is no review provided for as I read the bill.

It has been said that we ought to increase the commission on account of the great importance of certain phases of the regulation problems it has before it. I agree as to the importance of those phases of the work. Allow me to call your mind for a moment to one aspect of the work the commission is now or will shortly be engaged in doing. The valuation of the railroad property of this country. Are you willing to give to one man or to two men or even to three men the final jurisdiction to declare what the railway valuation shall be? When it is engaged in that work it is engaged in doing something that will affect this country for all time to come, and to me it is intolerable to even suggest that the commission should have the power to delegate that work and to delegate the authority to one, two, or even three men to make a decision upon the work in a matter which involves railway property said to be of the value of more than $20,000,000,000. A very little divergence from the true principle which ought to prevail in any investigation of that character might impose, for all the years to come, tremendous burdens upon the people. When we passed the act which relates to the valuation of common-carrier property we supposed we were going to have the judgment of seven eminent men upon that somewhat new and difficult problem. We are now asked to pass a bill which may remit us to the judgment of one man upon it.

I discussed not long ago the tendencies of at least one man upon this commission, and I do not believe the people of the country would accept it with much toleration if, in the division of the commission, it should happen that those who hold these views should be charged with the work of determining the value of the railway property freed from any influence on the part of their associates. It may be that these things have been in the minds of those who have proposed the bill, but having so great confidence in them I must think that they have not con-

Again, the work of the commission is of a character threefourths of which-

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. President-

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut. Mr. McLEAN. The Senator is a member of the Committee on Interstate Commerce. I should like to ask him if he presented these views to the committee.

Mr. CUMMINS. I did not. I was not present when this bill was reported. I did not know it was to be reported, although I do not charge the least want of good faith. It was perfectly understood that I did not favor the reorganization of the commission at this time. The Senator from Nevada had introduced a bill which is the exact duplicate of this, which was pending before the committee, and at some time, in a perfectly proper way of course, the present bill was taken up and reported just as it passed the House.

Mr. McLEAN. The Senator does not know whether the committee considered the propriety of an amendment allowing an appeal on such an important question as he suggests

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not know, and I intend the Senate shall have an opportunity of considering some amendment of that character. I was about to remark-Mr. WATSON. Mr. President—

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to the Senator from Indiana. Mr. WATSON. The Senator is perhaps more familiar with the Interstate Commerce Commission and its business than any other Senator. Therefore I ask for information. I want to find out what course he has to suggest and what policy he would adopt in reference to relieving the congestion of business before the commission.

Mr. CUMMINS. I believe we ought to have divisional or regional commissioners, either three or five of them, sitting in various parts of the country, who could be approached by those who feel themselves aggrieved, who could take jurisdiction of complaints and hear them and decide them without requiring all the shippers of the country or others who may be dissatisfied with rates or practices to come to Washington and here remain over a long period of time in order to obtain a hearing and a decision. I believe there ought to be in Washington a commission of five or seven members with jurisdiction to hear appeals in certain cases from the divisional or regional commission, but not in all cases. In a general way, I am sure that will give the Senator from Indiana my idea of the reorganization which ought to take place, but we, of course, can not do that on this bill.

I was about to refer to another phase of the work of the commission which is vastly important, namely, those hearings which relate to the reasonableness of rates and to alleged discriminations. One might think that constitutes a large part of the work of the commission. I do not think so. I think there is a great deal of the work of the commission that could be done by one man. It could be done by a board of examiners, which the com-mission already has the authority to create. There are thoumission already has the authority to create. There are thousands of things which are of no great difficulty, such as the application of the safety-appliance laws and other things of that character, and the consideration of claims for reparation where an overcharge has been established but where there must be a computation and evidence heard that would show the amount the railway company ought to restore to the shipper. All these things take a vast amount of time, and I do not wonder that the commission is overwhelmed with work of this kind, a large part of which it ought not to do at all. But when a question involving the reasonableness of a rate comes before the commission it presents an entirely different matter. Then the commission is called upon to decide as between shippers, usually in a very large territory and affecting a very large interest.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lea of Tennessee in the Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield.
Mr. STERLING. I appreciate what the Senator says and the objection that he makes. It seems to me that under the provisions of the bill we shall have an Interstate Commerce Commission of three members instead of nine members, because the three constituting a division may decide the most important cases that ever could come before the commission. It has occurred to me that the orders of a division might be made subject to the approval of the full commission. I should like to call the Senator's attention to an amendment, just as a suggestion. In line 24, page 4, after the word "shall," insert "subject to the "shall," in line 4, on that page, insert "subject to the approval by the commission as aforesaid."

Mr. CUMMINS. I have not reached my proposals for amendment yet.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator may have some language different, but it occurred to me that that might possibly be suggestive, Mr. CUMMINS. The suggestion which instantly arises in my mind is this: At whose suggestion would the approval of the full commission be sought?

Mr. STERLING. The law itself would provide for that.
Mr. CUMMINS. Then would any shipper or any railroad company have the right to demand a hearing by the full commission?

Mr. STERLING. No; I would provide that in any final order or decision the approval of the full commission must be had.

Mr. CUMMINS. Must be had. That is going a little further than I want to go, because that would practically defeat the object of the bill which is to exempt in a large part of the work the necessity of the full commission becoming familiar with the

Mr. STERLING. I did not think that it would possibly defeat the purposes of the bill. There would be a good many cases perhaps in which the approval of the entire commission would be more or less formal. If, however, it were the consideration of a great rate case, then the entire commission would act, perhaps, after more deliberation; but it would be the work of the entire commission in the end. I do not think there would be any practical difficulty.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I would have no objection to the proposal of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Sterling], and it may be that is required. I am sure that something of that kind is required to be added to the bill.

I again refer to the different kinds of work done by the commission. A great deal of it is rather formal, and ought to be done by a few men, possibly by one man; but when you come to the question of rates, no one man or no two men ought to have the authority to decide, especially if the full commission is not to pass upon the question.

I propose to offer this amendment—and unfortunately I have not reduced it to writing, but if the Secretary will take it down, I will propose it. In offering it I suggest that I intend to offer some amendment along the line of the thought of the Senator from South Dakota, or to stand for the one he has proposed, for that I think is essential. I propose to add to line 8 on page 5 the following:

In all proceedings relating to the reasonableness of rates or to alleged discriminations, not less than three members shall sit in the hearing and participate in the decision; and in all hearings relating to the valuation of railway property under the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, by providing for a valuation of the several classes of property of carriers subject thereto, and securing information concerning their stocks, bonds, and other securities," approved March 1, 1913, not less than seven members shall sit in the hearings and participate in the decision.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Is that with reference to the valuation? Mr. CUMMINS. It is.

Mr. WATSON. Does the Senator contemplate that, when three of the commission shall sit as a court to determine the reasonableness of a rate, there shall be the right of appeal to the full commission?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do; that is, I hope that may be so; at least, I want to get a tribunal composed of three to pass on rate questions.

Mr. KIRBY. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. CUMMINS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KIRBY. Does not the Senator from Iowa think that the amendment which he first proposed is already within the provisions and scope of the bill? My experience on the Supreme Court bench of Arkansas, with five members, was that where a majority was required to decide any question it was impracticable to work with less than three men. This whole matter, as I understand, is subject to the order of the commission itself the entire membership. The Senator will observe that, in lines 18 and 19, on page 4, the commission is divided into divisions, and that then each division is subject to the power of the commission. I believe that it is better to leave this in the hands of the commission, because as to all those matters that are of importance, which the Senator is now suggesting, I feel confident the entire commission will sit, and there will be the judgment approval of any final order or decision made or rendered by the of, at least, a majority of the commission on all great questions, full commission"; then, on the following page, change the phraseology, so as to carry out the same idea, after the word rules, I believe it will be better for expediting its business; that the power be not restricted—that is, my experience has caused me to come to that conclusion. I submit it to the Senator in the consideration of the question for whatever weight it may be entitled to.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I suppose the commission would have the power to make no division of less than nine members, and in that way it could retain all the power that it now has; but the language cited by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Kibry] I think hardly bears the construction which he puts upon it. I will read it. It is as follows:

In conformity with and subject to the order or orders of the commission in the premises, each division so constituted shall have power and authority by a majority thereof to hear and determine, order, certify, report, or otherwise act as to any of said work, business, or functions so assigned or referred to it for action by the commission—

That regulates the power of the commission in assigning the work. Then the bill proceeds to say:

And in respect thereto-

That is, the work that has been assigned to it by the commission, whether it is a division of one, two, three, four, five, or no matter what the number may be-the division shall have all the jurisdiction and powers now or then conferred by law upon the commission and be subject to the same duties and obligations. Any order, decision, or report made or other action taken by any of said divisions in respect of any matters so assigned or referred to it shall have the same force and effect and may be made, evidenced, and enforced in the same manner as if made or taken by the commission as a whole.

Those words are entirely inconsistent with the reservation of power upon the part of the full commission respecting the orders of the division.

Mr. President, I have submitted my amendment, and I ask the Secretary to state it as he has taken it down, in order to be sure that it is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa

The SECRETARY. On page 5, after line 8, it is proposed to insert:

In all proceedings relating to the reasonableness of rates or to alleged discriminations not less than three members shall sit in the hearing and participate in the decision; and in all hearings relating to the valuation of railway property under the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof by providing for a valuation of the several classes of property of carriers subject thereto and securing information concerning their stocks, bonds, and other securities," approved March 1, 1913, not less than seven members shall sit in the hearings and participate in the decision.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I have no objection at all to the first amendment which the Senator presents as to a membership of not less than three, but, on the contrary, I quite approve of that. As to the membership of seven in connection with for the fear that that would absorb so large a proportion of the time of the commission as to prevent them from attending to their other duties.

As I understand, the hearings regarding valuation have just commenced. They will be of enormous proportions. I judge, from the issues presented, the protests made, and the briefs filed. What I fear is that if we require that seven of the nine members of the commission shall apply themselves to that subject there will be no time for the commission to attend to its other business. Can not the Senator suggest some method of appeal to the entire commission regarding that matter which would suit his view?

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I do.

Mr. WATSON. Does not the Senator think that in a matter so important as the determining of the reasonableness of a rate or in a matter so important as the subject of valuation there should be the right of appeal to the full commission, or that the full commission, at least, should be asked to pass upon and either approve or disapprove the findings of the lesser number, consisting of three commissioners in this instance?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I have not the slightest doubt that the commission will so arrange its rules and regulations as to keep control of these cases, if it deems it necessary. The Senator will observe on page 4, lines 13, 14, and 15, down to line 17, the provision is made that the commission " may by order at any time amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any such direction. All such orders shall take effect forthwith and remain in effect until otherwise ordered by the commission."
Mr. WATSON. That is quite true; but the Senator will also observe

Mr. NEWLANDS. And I imagine the good judgment of the commission will probably be a better guide for the action of the commission through rules, and so forth, than any hard and fast rule which we might adopt here in the hurry of legislation.

Mr. WATSON. But let me call the attention of the Senator from Nevada to lines 23 and 24, on page 4, which read:

And in respect thereof the division shall have all the jurisdiction and powers now or then conferred by law upon the commission.

That is the clause of which I am making particular complaint.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do not care to interrupt the Senator. I thought he had yielded the floor.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to ask the Senator from Iowa whether he would not be willing to reduce the number from seven to five? In that event I would be disposed to accept the amendment, with the understanding that it will be considered in conference. The Senator will doubtless be one of the con-

Mr. CUMMINS. I hope the Senator from Nevada will not ask me to do that. It is by far the most important work ever put upon the commission; it is infinitely difficult, as well as overwhelmingly important. The Senator from Nevada, I think, has an erroneous idea with regard to the way in which the work is done.

The commission created what is known as a committee on valuation. Judge Prouty resigned from the commission in order to become the head of the committee on valuation. The committee on valuation is the employee of the commission. It takes all the testimony. No member of the commission is present or required to be present at the taking of the testimony. The committee on valuation hears, in the first instance, the arguments of the railways upon the one side or those who may be interested upon the other. The committee on valuation then reports to the commission. It is in the nature of an appeal. It is only a hearing that is required to be had, and I had very great difficulty in bringing myself to suggest that even a less number than the whole commission should pass on matters of valuation.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Well, Mr. President, I recognize the importance of the question the Senator has raised, and I will state that I have no objection to the amendment going in the bill. It will be considered in conference and the Senator will be one of the conferees. I am as anxious as is the Senator, of course, to have this whole commission reorganized in such a way as to properly guard the interests of the public. I accept the amend-

Mr. TOWNSEND obtained the floor.

Mr. KIRBY. Mr. President, I desire to object to that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan has the floor.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I do not want to say anything to delay the action of the Senate on this matter, for I think it is one of the most vital things that has been brought or will be brought before the Senate. I think there is a very serious misunderstanding, however, on the part of some of the Senators in reference to this subject. I can see no reason why the matter of valuation of railroads should be treated differently from any other matter pending before the commission. Personally I regard this valuation subject as the least important thing with which the Interstate Commerce Commission has to deal.

The majority of the commission act upon all matters that come before it, but this proposition of the Senator from Iowa is to make seven members sit in all hearings. I am sure that the conferees in considering it will see the point of it and reject it, and therefore I do not care to occupy the time of the Senate in discussing it.

All of these questions decided by the commission are subject to a practical appeal, in a measure; they are all subject to a rehearing. The present interstate-commerce law provides for a rehearing on all matters, and this bill is but an extension of the existing law. So that any person interested can ask for a re-hearing, and it will be determined by the commission, the entire commission or a majority of them. The question is then finally settled.

We had this up before the committee and held extensive hearings upon it, at which appeared some of the commissioners. Mr. Commissioner Clark was present and explained the whole situation, and I desire to say a word in reference to his testimony on this important subject, as it makes it clear to me, as I think it will do to other Senators:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Lippirr], a member of the committee, in examining Mr. Clark, asked this question:

Mr. Clark, under this bill, the decisions of the subdivisions are final, are they; there is no appeal to the full commission?

Commissioner CLARK. Oh, I do not understand that to be so. I undertook to explain a while ago that in subdividing under that authority of that kind the purpose of the commission would be to delegate to certain subdivisions the handling and disposition of certain particular matters but retaining for the commission all the time the right to bring any matter, either on appeal or by initiative of the commission itself, before the full commission.

Senator Lippitt, Would a dissatisfied individual have the right to appeal from a decision?

Commissioner CLARK. He would have the right to petition for a rehearing and have that considered by the whole commission.

Mr. WATSON. Now, Mr. President— Mr. TOWNSEND. Let me finish this testimony, and then I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. WATSON. Very well.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I continue the quotation:
Senator Lippitt. He would have the right to petition but not the right to make an appeal and have it necessarily granted?
Commissioner CLARK. I think it would be futile to confer upon him the absolute right to have the rehearing before the full commission if he were dissatisfied with the decision of the subdivision in the first instance.

Senator Swith of South Carolina. The full commission would at

If he were dissatished with the decision of the subdivision in the first instance.

Senator Smith of South Carolina. The full commission would at least pass upon whether his appeal had good grounds?

Commissioner Clark. If he filed an appeal for rehearing before the full commission it would be handled in principle just as petitions for rehearing are now handled. They are analyzed in the light of the report of the commission, and if he alleges any error in fact the record is gone over to ascertain whether that allegation is well founded, and then the entire commission determines whether or not a rehearing is justified and ought to be granted. We do grant a good many and we deny a good many. We act on them only after there has been a very careful scrutiny of every allegation in the petition.

Senator Lippitt. Of course the bill says in respect thereof the division shall have all the jurisdiction and powers now conferred upon the commission, so that would give the decision of the subdivision the full effect of a decision by the full commission?

Commissioner Clark. Yes; the real idea underlying that was to authorize a subcommittee to enter an order for the commission.

That is the whole idea of passing this act to amend the present interstate-commerce law

Mr. WATSON. And yet he goes on to say that the right of appeal, or the right of approval, would lie to the entire com-

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes. Mr. WATSON. That is the substance of his testimony all the way through.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. WATSON. Now, of course, they have not hitherto made these divisions of the commission. How does he happen to give testimony of that kind?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Heretofore they have been obliged to rely upon subordinates. It has been an absolute human imrely upon subordinates. It has been an absolute human impossibility for the commission to hear these cases personally. They have had to rely upon their subordinates. Each one of the commission now is delegated to consider certain particular branches of the business; but of course he confers with his associates, and a determination is had by a majority where there is a disputed question. Many matters are governed fully by precedents and general consent is accorded by the whole commission. commission.

Mr. WATSON. I quite fully concur as to the necessity of action, but I was trying to get at this point: He is simply one man stating what might be the custom or might be the practice of the commission—that they might grant the right of appeal from a commission of three to the full body. What is the objection to simply stating that in this bill and making it mandatory that the right of approval shall rest on the final commission, or the right of appeal shall lie to the full commission?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Well, I understand that the chairman of the committee has accepted the amendment. I am not going to make any objection to it, because I think when six members of the two Houses get down together in conference, and go over this matter, they will see the unwisdom of it. They will see that possibly if it is adopted and enforced to the letter it will practically nullify the object which we are seeking to accomplish through the passage of this bill.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, possibly a word is due from me, in view of the rather remarkable statement made by the Senator from Michigan, which is to the effect that my amendment is not only useless but foolish.

I may be wrong, of course, but I have studied this bill with a good deal of care; and I assert that there will be no power on the part of the commission after this bill is passed to review the action of one of the divisions which is authorized in the bill. The commission acts when it assigns to the division the work, or the branch of the work, which it is to do, and it can abrogate that assignment at any time it likes; but after the division acts there is no right of review, and the commission could not order a review, in my opinion.

Of course at the present time there are no divisions of the commission. One man may do the preliminary work, and either division but by the order of the whole commission.

formally or informally his work is brought before the commission, or a majority of the commission, and the order is entered by that majority.

I have not offered the amendment simply to feel the pleasure of offering an amendment.

Mr. KIRBY. Mr. President, I shall object to the acceptance of this amendment, if it is within the province of a Member of the Senate to do that.

I do not know by whom this bill was drawn, but it was evidently well considered. This commission has all the work that it can possibly do, and more. I have read, in a cursory way, the report here. We have recognized the necessity by providing for the appointment of two other men.

The commission is given plenary power by this law to make such rules and regulations as are necessary for expediting its business. I read from page 3:

The commission may from time to time make or amend such general rules or orders as may be requisite for the order and regulation of proceedings before it, or before any division of the commission, including forms of notices and the service thereof, which shall conform, as nearly as may be, to those in use in the courts of the United States.

It has plenary power to make divisions of its members. Reading from line 16:

The commission is hereby authorized by its order to divide the members thereof into as many divisions as it may deem necessary.

The divisions can not be made except by order of the entire commission. The bill further provides that the decision by a division must be by a majority thereof, necessarily meaning that there shall be at least three members. Now:

The commission may by order direct that any of its work, business, or functions arising under this act, or under any act amendatory thereof, be assigned or referred to any of said divisions for action thereon, and may by order at any time amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any such direction.

There is plenary power to make rules. There is plenary power to divide the commission into divisions. Here is plenary power by the full commission to amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any direction given to any division.

Now, lines 18 and 19:

In conformity with and subject to the order or orders of the commission in the premises—

In the premises-what premises? Of this bill? No; in the premises of the matter about which the order made by it giving the direction to the division or dividing the commission into each division so constituted shall have power and authority by a majority thereof to hear and determine, order, certify, report, or otherwise act as to any of said work, business, or functions—

What? How? By order of the commission, and not other-

I do not know how good a lawyer the Senator may be. understand he is a great lawyer; but I say this bill is well drawn, and I say that the power is given here as I have stated. The ordinary, reasonable construction of this language indicates it, and it was evidently drawn by somebody who is familiar with the practice down there and familiar with the needs of this commission.

If you are going to provide that upon any rehearing all of this commission must act, you will fix it so that the commission may never in the world get through its business.

In the supreme court of my State there are five judges, and in nearly every case that is decided by the supereme court there is a motion for a rehearing. Especially is this true if the decision is by a divided court, one or two justices dissenting. Under that amendment, if you provide here that there shall be a rehearing at which all the members shall sit, you will require this commission to spend half its time in going over cases for

The commission is given plenary power to make rules and regulations. It can not be divided into divisions except by order of the entire commission. It has the power to amend, supplement, modify, or rescind any such direction at any time, and it has the power in the first instance; and there is no jurisdiction given to any division until the entire commission grants the jurisdiction. That is exactly what this bill means.

I dislike to differ from other lawyers in the Senate; but this is so plain, it seems to me, that there is not room for controversy about the meaning of it. I have no doubt but that the commission are fully advised of the provisions of this bill, and most probably approved them before they came in here. They know their needs, and they know the condition. They know their business, and are given power to make rules to direct their work or business by order, to modify, amend, supplement, or rescind any such direction; and no jurisdiction is given to any

The amendment ought not to be adopted; and I object to its being accepted, at least.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS].

Mr. KIRBY. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LEA of Tennessee. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Banknead	Hoills	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Ga.
Beckham	Hughes	Nelson	Smith, Md.
Borah	Husting	Newlands	Smith, S. C.
Brandegee	Johnson, S. Dak.	Norris	Smoot
Catron	Jones	Overman	Sterling
Chamberlain	Kenyon	Page	Stone
Colt	Kern	Penrose	Thomas
Culberson	Kirby	Phelan	Thompson
Cummins	La Follette	Poindexter	Townsend
Curtis	Lea, Tenn.	Pomerene	Vardaman
Dillingham	Lee, Md.	Robinson	Wadsworth
Fall	Lippitt	Shafroth	Warren
Fernald	McCumber	Sheppard	Watson
Fletcher	McLean	Sherman	Williams
Hitchcook	Moutin No	Cimmona

Mr. LEA of Tennessee. I have been requested to announce the necessary absence of the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. JAMES 1

Mr. VARDAMAN. I wish to announce the unavoidable absence of the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields], on account of illness.

Mr. OVERMAN. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. Walsh] and the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. Reed] are detained on public business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-nine Senators have responded to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Cum-MINS]

Mr. NORRIS. Let it be stated. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, after line 8, it is proposed to insert the following:

In all proceedings relating to the reasonableness of rates or to alleged discriminations not less than three members shall sit in the hearing and participate in the decision; and in all hearings relating to the valuation of railway property under the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, by providing for a valuation of the several classes of property of carriers subject thereto and securing information concerning their stocks, bonds, and other securities," approved March 1, 1913, not less than seven members shall sit in the hearing and participate in the decision.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS].

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and pays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN (when his name was called). a general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. COLT (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Saulsbury]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND] and vote "yea."

Mr. FALL (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Chilton]. In I have a general his absence I refrain from voting.

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair as on the former vote and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Oliver] to the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Broussard] and vote "yea."

Mr. O'GORMAN. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger], which I transfer to the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 60, nays 5, as follows:

YEAS—60.

	7.1347	D-00.
Ashurst	du Pont	La Follette	Norris
Bankhead	Fletcher	Lane	O'Gorman
Beckham	Hardwick	Lee, Md.	Overman
Borah	Hitchcock	Lippitt	-Penrose
Brandegee	Hughes	Lodge	Pomerene
Chamberlain	Husting	McCumber	Ransdell
Clark	James	McLean	Reed
Colt	Johnson, S. Dak.	Martin, Va.	Sheppard
Cummins	Jones	Martine, N. J.	Sherman
Curtis	Kenyon	Nelson	Simmons
Dillingham	Korn	Nawlanda	Smith Ca

Smith, Mich. Smith, S. C. Smoot Sterling	Stone Swanson Thomas Thompson	Tillman Vardaman Wadsworth Walsh	Warren Watson Weeks Williams
	N.	AYS-5.
Hollis Kirby	Robinson	Shafroth	Townsend
	NOT V	OTING-31.
Brady Broussard Bryan Catron Chilton Clapp Culberson	Fernald Gallinger Goff Gore Gronna Harding Johnson, Me.	Lewis Myers Oliver Owen Page Phelan Pittman Poindeyter	Saulsbury Shields Smith, Ariz. Smith, Md. Sutherland Underwood Works

So Mr. Cummins's amendment was agreed to.

THE REVENUE.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide increased revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extensions of fortifications, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will ask the Senator whether it can not be arranged that the pending bill can be proceeded with to a conclusion after this bill is made the order?

Mr. SIMMONS. After the Senate has made it the order I will discuss that with the Senator from Nevada.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide increased revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extensions of for-tifications, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments.

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator from North Carolina permit me? I desire to submit a resolution relating to the pending measure which I should like to have read, printed, and lie on the table. It is a short resolution, The PRESIDING OFFICER. With Without objection, it will be

Mr. SIMMONS. I wish to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania if he will not be content to state the general purport of the resolution without having it read?

Mr. PENROSE. It will not take a minute to have the resolution read.

Mr. SIMMONS. Very well, I will not object. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read. The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 367), as follows:

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 367), as follows:

Resolved, That H. R. 20573 be recommitted to the Committee on Finance with instructions to amend the bill so as to raise an equitable portion of the required revenue from a protective tariff "sufficient to protect adequately American industry and American labor, and to be so adjusted as to prevent undue exactions by monopolies or trusts"; and With further instructions to the Committee on Finance to give special attention to securing the industrial independence of the United States, to the end that "our industries can be so organized that they will become not only a commercial bulwark but a powerful aid to national defense"; and

That the bill be further amended so as to require the tariff commission to report the difference in wages and the cost of production between foreign countries and the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the Senator from Pennsylvania to request that the resolution should lie on the table.

Mr. PENROSE. I asked to have the resolution read, which has been done, and now I will withhold it until I have an opportunity to address the Senate upon it. Let it lie on the table and be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That course will be pursued.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, if I can have order-The PRESIDING OFFICER. Order, Senators.

Mr. SIMMONS. In response to the inquiry of the Senator from Nevada a few moments ago, I desire to state that if I could have any assurance that the bill which he has in charge—
Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, no one can hear the Senator on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Order, Senators.

Mr. SIMMONS. I was stating, in response to the inquiry of the Senator from Nevada made a few moments ago, that if I I was stating, in response to the inquiry of can have any assurance that the bill which he has had before the Senate this morning will be disposed of in a reasonable time, say, in half an hour, I would not object to going on with that measure and let the revenue bill be laid aside for that length of time.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President— Mr. NEWLANDS. I hope to dispose of it within that time, but I am not informed as to whether any further amendments are to be offered to the bill. I should like to inquire whether

Mr. NORRIS. I rose for the purpose of giving some information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield. Mr. NORRIS. I wish to say to the Senator from North Carolina that I do not believe the bill can be disposed of in half an hour. I think there will be considerable debate on it. I do not object to the consideration of the bill. I am only giving that information because I feel it my duty to do so, since the inquiry was made by the Senator from North Carolina. I think it will take considerable time—a few hours at least.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, another Senator said to me this morning that considerable time will be taken in the discussion in addition to that which has already been consumed. Under the circumstances I feel that I can not yield to the wishes of the Senator from Nevada, much as I should like to do so.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. STERLING. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator desire to have it read?

Mr. STERLING. I desire to have it read.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be read, without objec-

The Secretary. On page 4, line 24, after the word "shall"——
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary informs the Chair that there is no such word in the line.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. To which bill is the Senator offering the

Mr. STERLING. House bill 308, the bill we have been considering, and which I understand is the bill before the Senate at the present time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator that that bill was displaced.

Mr. STERLING. I thought that was the measure before the Senate now. The Senator from Nevada was insisting on going on with the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. House bill 20573, the revenue bill, is before the Senate.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to ask the Senator from North Carolina whether he will yield to me to make a motion that House bill 308, regarding the enlargement of the Interstate Commerce Commission, be made the special order for 8 o'clock this

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I can not yield to the Senator for that purpose

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina declines to yield for that purpose.

Mr. SIMMONS. I hope to go on with the revenue bill to-

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield.

Mr. STERLING. I ask the Senator from North Carolina if he will yield and permit me to offer this amendment that it may be printed and lie on the table?

Mr. SIMMONS. I have no objection to yielding. I hope the Senator will not ask that it be read. Mr. STERLING. I will not.

Mr. LEA of Tennessee. I ask the Senator to yield to me that I may offer an amendment and have it printed and lie on the

I have no objection. Mr. SIMMONS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments will lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. LEA of Tennessee. It is an amendment to House bill 308. Mr. NEWLANDS. I will ask the Senator from North Carolina whether he will yield to me to make a motion to make House bill 308 the special order for Thursday evening at 8 o'clock?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from North Carolina yield for that purpose?

Mr. SIMMONS. As I stated, I desire to continue the consideration of this bill until it is finished, and I shall ask for night sessions until we have finished the bill. I hope we may finish the bill before the time mentioned by the Senator from Nevada, but that is not at all certain. I ask the Senator to withhold his motion now. It may be that we will be able to accommodate him by some compromise arrangement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina declines to yield for that purpose.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, before beginning the statement I desire to make I wish to give notice to the Senate that I shall insist upon night sessions until this bill has been finally disposed of Mr. STONE Let me understand the request of the Senator.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am not going to make a motion now. Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I insist on Senators addressing the Senate so that the minority may hear what is going on. I rise to a question of privilege. The minority have been totally ignored in the preparation of this bill, and colloquies have been conducted by the majority Members in an inaudible tone, the minority sitting here utterly unable to hear the conversation of majority Members.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair appeals to the Senate to be in order.

Mr. PENROSE. We are entitled to hear what is going on. Mr. SIMMONS. I am exceedingly sorry the Senator from Pennsylvania has so much difficulty about hearing. I believe that a majority practically of Senators have heard substantially what I have said. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. Stone] simply asked me a question in a low tone of voice which was probably not heard. I answered the Senator by saying that I had made no motion, but merely notified the Senate that I would ask to have the bill considered continuously and for that purpose I would ask for night sessions.

Mr. STONE. In this connection I desire to say that, while am in entire sympathy with what the Senator from North Carolina has said, I will ask at an early date this week that the bill providing for a government for the Danish West India Islands may be disposed of. I am sure it will not take longer time than to read it and vote upon it. I shall have to insist that my friend from North Carolina will make a gap, a little time somewhere soon, so that that bill may be taken up. It is simply out of the question that those islands should be taken over as they will be very soon and leave thirty-odd thousand people upon the islands without any government at all.

Mr. SIMMONS. I shall do everything I can to assist the Senator from Missouri in passing the bill he has in charge. It is an important measure and one that ought to be acted upon.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SIMMONS, I do.

Mr. NORRIS. In order that Senators may know about meeting here, I wish to ask the Senator in connection with the statement that he is going to have the Senate hold night sessions. does he intend to take a recess for dinner or are we going to be held in continuous session until some hour in the evening?

Mr. SIMMONS. I think we ought to follow the usual custom, especially at the beginning of the consideration of the bill.

and take a recess for a couple of hours.

Mr. NORRIS. Some time about 6 o'clock? Mr. SIMMONS. From about 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do. Mr. CURTIS. I desire to ask the Senator if it is his purpose to ask for anything more than debate at night sessions, or does he expect that the Senate shall vote upon amendments?

Mr. SIMMONS. I assume that we shall have, first, general debate, and then we will begin the consideration of amendments. I think we will not want to take up the amendments for some little time.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. In line with the remarks of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], could the Senator now make a suggestion about the time we will take a recess this afternoon and what time we will convene this evening and how long we will sit?

Mr. SIMMONS. I have just stated that I thought we would follow the usual custom and take a recess from 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock.

Mr. BRANDEGEE.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And then sit until 11 o'clock?
Mr. SIMMONS. I think probably that would be a good hour. I do not desire at this stage to suggest any particular hour. Mr. BRANDEGEE. Very well.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do. Mr. PENROSE. I should like to inquire of the chairman of the committee whether it is his purpose now to address the Senate on the bill? Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; it is my purpose to make an explana-

Mr. PENROSE. Could we not approach the subject with greater lucidity and fuller information if the bill was first read? Mr. SIMMONS. I think that is unnecessary, and I hope the Senator will not insist upon it.

Mr. PENROSE. The direct-tax bill was read last summer. It seems to me in a measure of such importance and great moment it is only decent and orderly to have the bill read.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And appear in the RECORD. Mr. PENROSE. And it ought to be in the RECORD.

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the Senator pardon me? The Senator is the ranking member of the minority, and if the Senator makes the request that the bill be read before I make my statement I shall not make any objection.

Mr. PENROSE. I certainly think that before debating the measure or perhaps voting on it it would be well to see what we are discussing. The reading can only be waived by unanimous consent. People all over the United States, the business interests, are bitterly opposed to this measure, and for us to quietly sit here and have this discussion go on without having the bill read is a gross violation of the proprieties. I ask that the bill be read.

Mr. SIMMONS. I did not, of course, yield to the Senator for a speech, and I think the statement that in proceeding to the consideration of the bill that an initial statement as to its general scope and purpose without having the bill read is a gross impropriety is a gratuitous statement. On the contrary, we all know that that is the constant practice of the Senate with reference to the most important bills that come before the Sen-A request is constantly made that the formal reading of a bill be dispensed with, and that we proceed to its considera-tion. But, as I said, if the ranking member of the minority, the Senator from Pennsylvania, desires to have the bill read, I shall interpose no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania make the request?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, when the Senate votes to proceed to the consideration of a bill the next thing in order is to have it read. The reading is only dispensed with by unanimous consent when a Senator moving to proceed to its consideration asks unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with. That request has not been pre-ferred, and the regular order is to have the bill read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. SIMMONS. I have not begun to discuss the bill, but before I began to explain it I was going to make that request. I had not reached that stage.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the Senator should make the request,
I would object to it. I demand the reading of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair believes that the reading of the bill is in order, and the Secretary will read it.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,

TITLE I .- SPECIAL PREPAREDNESS FUND.

TITLE I.—Special Preparedness Fund.

Section 1. That the receipts from the tax imposed by Title II and one-third of the receipts from the tax imposed by Title III of this act shall constitute a separate fund in the Treasury to be used only for the expenditures incurred under the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved August 29, 1916; the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved August 29, 1916; and the act entitled "An act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes," approved July 6, 1916, or any other act or acts subsequent thereto making appropriations for Army, Navy, or fortification purposes. In addition to such receipts from the taxes imposed under Titles II and III of this act, there shall be credited annually, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, to such separate fund, the sum of $175,000,000, such sum being the estimated additional revenue to be derived under the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, in excess of the revenue to be derived under then existing laws: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may use such fund for other purposes, but such fund shall be reimbursed for any portion thereof so used.

TITLE II.—Excess Profits Tax.

TITLE II.—Excess Profits Tax.

Sec. 200. That when used in this title—
The term "corporation" includes joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies;
The term "United States" means only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia; and

The term "taxable year" means the 12 months ending December 31, except in the case of a corporation or partnership allowed to fix its own fiscal year, in which case it means such fiscal year. The first taxable year shall be the year ending December 31, 1917.

SEC. 201. That in addition to the taxes under existing laws there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every corporation and partnership organized, authorized, or existing under the laws of the United States, or of any State, Territory, or District thereof, no matter how created or organized, excepting income derived from the business of life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan, a tax of 8 per cent of the amount by which such net income exceeds the sum of (a) $5,000 and (b) 8 per cent of the actual capital invested.

Every foreign corporation and partnership including exceeds the sum of (a) $5,000 and (b) 8 per cent of the actual capital invested.

Every foreign corporation and partnership, including corporations and partnerships of the Phillippine Islands and Porto Rico, shall pay for each taxable year a like tax upon the amount by which its net income received from all sources within the United States exceeds the sum of (a) 8 per cent of the actual capital invested and used or employed in the business in the United States, and (b) that proportion of $5,000 which the entire actual capital invested and used or employed in the business in the United States bears to the entire actual capital invested; and in case no such capital is used or employed in the business in the United States the tax shall be imposed upon that portion of such net income which is in excess of the sum of (a) 8 per cent of that proportion of the entire actual capital invested and used or employed in the business which the net income from sources within the United States bears to the entire net income, and (b) that proportion of $5,000 which the net income from sources within the United States bears to the entire net income.

SEC. 202. That for the purpose of this title actual capital invested means (1) actual cash paid in, (2) the actual cash value at the time of payment of assets other than cash paid in, and (3) paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business, but does not include money or other property borrowed by the corporation or partnership.

SEC. 203. That the tax herein imposed upon corporations and partnerships shall be computed upon the busines of the next income shall partnerships and undivided profits used of the part income shall partnerships.

does not include money or other property borrowed by the corporation or partnership.

Sec. 203. That the tax herein imposed upon corporations and partnerships shall be computed upon the basis of the net income shown by their income-tax returns under Title I of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, or under this title, and shall be assessed and collected at the same time and in the same manner as the income tax due under Title I of such act of September 8, 1916: Provided, That for the purpose of this title a partnership shall have the same privilege with reference to fixing its fiscal year as is accorded corporations under section 13 (a) of Title I of such act of September 8, 1916: And provided further, That where a corporation or partnership makes return prior to March I, 1918, covering its own fiscal year and includes therein any income received during the calendar year ending December 31, 1916, the tax herein imposed shall be that proportion of the tax based upon such full fiscal year which the time from January 1, 1917, to the end of such fiscal year bears to the full fiscal year.

Sec. 204. That corporations exempt from tax under the provisions of section 11 of Title I of the act approved September 8, 1916, and partnerships carrying on or doing the same business shall be exempt from the provisions of this title, and the tax imposed by this title shall not attach to incomes of partnerships derived from agriculture or from personal services.

personal services not attach to incomes of partnerships derived from agriculture or from personal services.

SEC. 205. That every corporation having a net income of $5,000 or more for the taxable year making a return under Title I of such act of September 8, 1916, shall for the purposes of this title include in such return a detailed statement of the actual capital invested.

Every partnership having a net income of $5,000 or more for the taxable year shall render a correct return of the income of the partnership for the taxable year, setting forth specifically the actual capital invested and the gross income for such year and the deductions hereinafter allowed. Such returns shall be rendered at the same time and in the same manner and form as is prescribed for incometax returns under Title I of such act of September 8, 1916. In computing net income of a partnership for the purposes of this title there shall be allowed like deductions as are allowed to individuals in sections 5 (a) and 6 (a) of such act of September 8, 1916.

SEC. 206. That all administrative, special, and general provisions of law, including the laws in relation to the assessment, remission, collection, and refund of internal-revenue taxes not heretofore specifically repealed and not inconsistent with the provisions of this title are hereby extended and made applicable to all the provisions of this title and to the tax herein imposed, and all provisions of Title I of such act of September 8, 1916, relating to returns and payment of the tax therein imposed, and all provisions of Title I of such act of September 8, 1916, relating to returns and payment of the tax therein imposed, of the Secretary of the Terasury shall make all precessory required by the title and to the tax because of the Secretary of the Terasury shall make all precessory required to the tax therein imposed, of the Secretary of the Terasury shall make all precessory required.

ax required by this title.

Sec. 207. That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make all necessary regulations for carrying out the provisions of this title, and may require any corporation or partnership subject to the provisions of this title to furnish him with such facts, data, and information as in his judgment are necessary to collect the tax provided for in this title.

TITLE III.—ESTATE TAX.

SEC. 300. That section 201, Title II, of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 201. That a tax (hereinafter in this title referred to as the tax), equal to the following percentages of the value of the net estate, to be determined as provided in section 203, is hereby imposed upon the transfer of the net estate of every decedent dying after the passage of this act, whether a resident or nonresident of the United States:

"One and one-half per centum of the amount of such net estate not in excess of $50,000;

"Three per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $150,000;

"Four and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $150,000 and does not exceed $250,000;

"Six per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $250,000 and does not exceed $450,000;

"Seven and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $450,000 and does not exceed $1,000,000;

"Nine per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $1,000,000 and does not exceed $2,000,000;

"Ten and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $2,000,000 and does not exceed $3,000,000;

"Twelve per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $3,000,000 and does not exceed $4,000,000;
"Thirteen and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $4,000,000 and does not exceed $5,000,000; and "Fifteen per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $5,000,000."

SEC. 301. That the tax on the transfer of the net estate of decedents dying between September 8, 1916, and the passage of this act shall be computed at the rates originally prescribed in the act approved September 8, 1916.

TITLE IV .- MISCELLANEOUS.

tember 8, 1916.

TITLE IV.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Sec. 400. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to borrow on the credit of the United States from time to time such sums as in his judgment may be required to meet public expenditures on account of the Mexican situation, the construction of the armorplate plant, the construction of the Alaskan Railway, and the purchase of the Danish West Indies, or to reimburse the Treasury for such expenditures, and to prepare and issue therefor bonds of the United States not exceeding in the aggregate $100,000,000, in such form as he may prescribe, bearing interest payable quarterly at a rate not exceeding 3 per cent per annum; and such bonds shall be payable, principal and interest, in United States gold coin of the present standard of value, and both principal and interest shall be exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States as well as from taxation in any form by or under State, municipal, or local authority, and shall not be receivable by the Treasurer of the United States as security for the issue of circulating notes to national banks: Provided, That such bonds may be disposed of by the Secretary of the Treasury at not less than par, under such regulations as he may prescribe, giving all citizens of the United States an equal opportunity therefor, but no commissions shall be allowed or paid thereon; and a sum not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent of the amount of the bonds herein authorized is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the expenses of preparing, advertising, and issuing the same: And provided further, That in addition to such issue of bonds, the Secretary of the Treasury may prepare and issue for the purposes specified in this section any portion of the bonds of the United States now available for issue under authority of section 39 of the act entitled "An act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August 5,

CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS.

CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS.

Sec. 401. That section 32 of an act entitled "An act providing ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," approved June 13, 1898, as amended by section 40 of an act entitled "An act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August 5, 1909, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 32. That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to borrow, from time to time, at a rate of interest not exceeding 3 per cent per annum, such sum or sums as, in his judgment, may be necessary to meet public expenditures, and to issue therefor certificates of indebtedness in such form and in such denominations as he may prescribe; and each certificate so issued shall be payable, with the interest accrued thereon, at such time, not exceeding one year from the date of its issue, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided. That the sum of such certificates cutstanding shall at no time exceed $300,000,000, and the provisions of existing law respecting counterfeiting and other fraudulent practices are hereby extended to the bonds and certificates of indebtedness authorized by this act."

RETURNS OF DIVIDENDS.

RETURNS OF DIVIDENDS.

SEC. 402. That Title I of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, be amended by adding to Part III a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 26. Every corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company subject to the tax herein imposed, when required by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, shall render a correct return, duly verified under oath, of its payments of dividends, whether made in cash or its equivalent or in stock, including the names and addresses of stockholders and the number of shares owned by each, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury."

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY LAW.

During the reading of the revenue bill,

Mr. O'GORMAN. Mr. President, out of order, I desire to report from the Committee on the Judiciary the bill (H. R. 12195) to amend section 17 of the United States bankruptcy law of July 1, 1898, and amendments thereto of February 5, 1903. The bill proposes an amendment to the bankruptcy law by which a bankrupt may not be relieved from his liabilities under any judgment rendered against him in a breach of promise action accompanied by seduction. The bill has the unanimous support of the committee, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York for the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, the bill should first be read before consent is given for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the bill. The Secretary. A bill (H. R. 12195) to amend section 17 of the United States bankruptcy law of July 1, 1898, and amendments thereto, of February 5, 1903.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JONES. The bill has not yet been read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington desire to have the bill read at length?

Mr. JONES. Yes

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the bill,

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill. Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I do not understand what permission the Senator from New York has received for the consideration of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. He had unanimous consent.

Mr. O'GORMAN. The consideration of the bill will not take a moment. I followed the precedent which was set by my friend the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood].

Mr. SIMMONS. No; the Senator from Alabama simply asked to introduce a bill; and I thought that was all the Senator from

New York desired to do.

Mr. O'GORMAN. This bill will only take half a minute.

There is no objection to it.

Mr. SIMMONS. I shall not yield any further for such a purpose. I misunderstood the request of the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair put the request for unanimous consent.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill.
Mr. JONES. The Chair does not understand that the Senate has yet given unanimous consent for the consideration of the measure?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No: the Secretary is simply reading the bill.

Mr. JONES. I ask that the bill may be read before unanimous consent is given for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will resume the reading of the bill.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill, which is as follows:

which is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 17 of an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, as amended February 5, 1903, be amended so as hereafter to read as follows:

"Szc. 17. Debts not affected by a discharge: A discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such as (1) are due as a tax levied by the United States, the State, county, district, or municipality in which he resides; (2) are liabilities for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, or for willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another, or for alimony due or to become due, or for maintenance or support of wife or child, or for seduction of an unmarried female, or for breach of promise of marriage accompanied by seduction, or for criminal conversation; (3) have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, with the name of the creditor if known to the bankrupt, unless such creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy; or (4) were created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiductary capacity."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If objection is made to the

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If objection is made to the consideration of the bill, it will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from New York may have leave to withdraw the report.

Mr. O'GORMAN. I will withdraw the report if objection is going to be made to the consideration of the bill; but I think it would only take a minute of the time of the Senate to act upon it.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator may proceed with the bill. I will withdraw my objection to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to withdrawing the report Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator from North Carolina has withdrawn his objection to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina withdraw his objection to the consideration of the bill? Mr. SIMMONS. If it will only take one minute, I will withdraw my objection. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SIMMONS. I shall not object, if it does not lead to any debate.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment. ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE REVENUE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide increased revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extensions of fortifications, and for other purpos

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHEPPARD in the chair).

The reading of the bill has been concluded.

Mr. SIMMONS obtained the floor.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, if the Senator from North Carolina is going to discuss the bill, I think there should be a quorum present; and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Gronna Hardwick Hughes Ashurst Overman Smith, S. C. Beckham Borah Page Smoot Sterling Penrese Stone Thomas Thompson Brady Husting Pittman Poindexter

Brandegee Catron Chamberlain James Johnson, Me. Jones Pomerene Ransdell Townsend Clapp Clark Culberson Cummins Kenyon Lea, Tenn. Lewis Martine, N. J. Underwood Vardaman Wadsworth Reed Shafroth Sheppard Sherman Watson Fernald Simmons Weeks Norris Fletcher Smith, Ga.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I shall content myself with a brief statement—at least, I hope it will be brief—of the general scope and purposes of this bill and an explanation of the amendments which have been made to it by the Committee on Finance.

The estimated expenditures for the years 1917 and 1918 for the Army, the Navy, and fortifications exceed the expenditures for the last normal year—that is, the year before we entered upon this program of preparedness—by the enormous sum of $860,-000,000. That is, an average increase in expenditures during these two years on account of this program for these purposes of $430,000,000. The appropriations, adding to the normal expenditures of the Government these enormous sums of money, were made in response to a popular sentiment, which found expression in Congress by a vote in both Houses approaching the point of unanimity. They have since been approved by the people of the country in the general election which followed their enactment. They are for the purpose of preparing the country for defense, not only against invasion, but for defense in case its rights are disregarded and violated, either upon sea or land.

In these circumstances the House, in framing this bill, de cided that the Government should set aside a special fund for the payment of these increased expenses. In pursuance of that there is written in the bill a provision that all the additional revenues accruing to the Government from the adoption of this bill, estimated to amount in the aggregate to about $248,000,000, and all of the additional revenues accruing to the Government from the so-called emergency act of September, 1916, estimated to amount to about $175,000,000, making together $423,000,000 as the total amount that will accrue to the Government from all of our so-called emergency legislationfor the emergency legislation of the previous Congress, at least that part of it which did not expire by limitation or was not repealed, was brought forward in the revenue act of 1916should be segregated from the balance of the funds in the Treasury, and set apart as a fund to be applied to the payment of the expenses incident to the Army, the Navy, and fortifications. It is true that there is a provision that in cases of emergency the Secretary of the Treasury may use this fund for other purposes; this is accompanied, however, with the requirement that so much of it as is so used shall be reimbursed from the general fund in the Treasury so as to keep this preparedness fund intact.

But for these extraordinary expenses during the present fiscal year and the fiscal year 1918, there would be sufficient revenues from the current receipts of the Government to pay ordinary expenses.

To illustrate: In the fiscal year 1917 the additional expenditures on account of the Army, Navy, and fortifications were estimated at $329,000,000, including the expenses of the Mexican situation. To meet that we expended from the receipts to be received from the last emergency bill $175,000,000, did not then make any provision for the Mexican situation. was stated in the report of the committee upon that bill that it was not the purpose to provide therein for the Mexican situation, but that it was the expectation that those expenses would be financed by the issuance of Panama Canal bonds.

The Secretary has not issued those bonds, but has paid the entire expenses up to this time from funds in the Treasury, and will so continue to do until the end of the fiscal year. As a result of the payment of these expenses in that way, an estimated excess of disbursements over receipts for the year will exist on the 30th day of June, 1917, of $157,000,000. We have in this bill authorized the Secretary—we did not authorize him before on the 30th day of June, 1917, of $157,000,000. We have in this bill authorized the Secretary—we did not authorize him before because we thought he already had the authority, but in this bill we give him express authority-to issue enough of these bonds to cover this expenditure, estimated to amount, by the end of this fiscal year, to $162,000,000, so that when those bonds are sold and the money received therefrom is covered into the Treasury it is apparent that it will pay off and discharge the estimated deficit of $157,000,000 so expended, and add about $5,000,000 to the Treasury balance.

It is estimated that the expenditures on account of the Army and Navy and fortifications for the fiscal year 1918 will reach $530,000,000, or a little over $200,000,000 more than the estimated expenditures for these purposes during the present fiscal year. This amount will exceed the amount that we propose to set aside for preparedness, the amount to be realized from all the emergency-revenue bills-to wit, the one at present under consideration and the one of 1916-by about $107,000,000. The estimated excess of disbursements over receipts for the year 1918 is $366,-000,000. At least, that was the estimate at the time the report upon the House bill was made. There have been some deficiency estimates made since then which will run it up somewhat, but according to that estimate the deficiency will be $366,000,000. So that it is apparent from this statement that but for these extraordinary expenditures imposed upon us as the result of this program to which the country has so heartily agreed, and which it has so strongly indorsed, there would be in the Treasury, exclusive of the total amount which will accrue from this bill and from the emergency act of 1916, ample funds to meet the expenses of the Government.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEA of Tennessee in the chair). Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes. Mr. WATSON. Will it interfere with the Senator if I ask him to state at this point how much revenue was raised under the special act of September 8, 1916, and what became of that revenue? I am asking for my own information.

Mr. SIMMONS. I just stated to the Senate that for the year 1917 that amount was estimated at about $175,000,000, and it is to be used, of course, to defray this additional expense. Probably I did not eatch the Senator's question. I will ask him to repeat it.

Mr. WATSON. The question was, How much revenue was produced by, or raised under, the provisions of the act of September 8, 1916, and what disposition was made of that revenue?

Mr. SIMMONS. I stated that the amount was estimated to be $175,000.000.

Mr. WATSON. All told? Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; under that act. That is a little less than we estimated at the time of the passage of the act, but that is the amount it is now estimated, in the light of further experience, it will yield.

Mr. WATSON. And the revenue produced then was practically the same as estimated?

Mr. SIMMONS. No; it will not be quite as much as was estimated at the time the bill passed.

Mr. WATSON. And that special tax was levied at that time for Army and Navy preparedness, was it not?
Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; and I stated a few minutes ago that after that amount is applied to that purpose we will lack $157,000,000, or about that, of paying off and discharging the increased appropriations for that year for Army, Navy, and fortifications. That additional amount was to be paid out of bonds. The bonds have never been issued, but the amount has been or will be paid out of the current revenues of the Government; and we are now proposing in this bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to sell Panama Canal bonds and reimburse the Treasury for that $162,000,000 spent or to be spent during the current fiscal year on account of the Mexican situation. When that is done, and that fund goes into the Treasury for the purpose of reimbursing it, it will wipe out the estimated deficit for the year 1917, and leave a small surplus.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? If the Senator objects to an inquiry, I will wait until he gets through.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will state to the Senator that I would greatly appreciate it if he would let me go on and conclude my remarks

Mr. PENROSE. I understood, in conversation with the Senator in the rear of the Chamber a little while ago, that he expected inquiries, and was willing that they should be made.

to explain the bill; and while, of course, I shall not object to interruptions, I should like it better if I were permitted to

Mr. PENROSE. I hope the Senator will not suspect me of rising to address an inquiry to him because I wanted to get into a partisan discussion.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; I certainly would absolve the Senator from Pennsylvania of any purpose in that direction.

Mr. PENROSE. I think the Senator would not suspect me of that.

Mr. SIMMONS. Now, Mr. President, the bill has two general provisions imposing taxes. One is in reference to inheritance taxes. The proposition is simply to increase the rates of the The second provision imposing taxes present law 50 per cent. is that which relates to taxes upon excess profits. Speaking generally, this provision imposes upon corporations and copartnerships a tax of 8 per cent upon their net profits in excess of $5,000 plus 8 per cent of their invested capital. In estimating the net income for the purposes of this tax the bill provides that the return made under the income-tax law in that year shall be accepted as the basis of assessing the tax against that That makes, of course, the application of that part of the law very easy.

But there is another side to the problem, and that is one which grows out of the exemption of 8 per cent. In order to ascertain what that exemption is it is necessary to fix a basis for calculating it. The bill fixes that basis by taking the capital actually invested in the business. To make it clear what is meant by those general terms, the bill undertakes to define the meaning of the words "capital actually invested in the business." It defines those terms to mean, first, "actual cash paid in"; second, as amended by the committee, "actual cash value of execute when there each at the time and of assets other than cash at the time such assets were transferred to the corporation or partnership"; and, third, "paid-in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business; but does not include money or other property borrowed by the corporation or partnership, whether evidenced by bonds or otherwise.'

The chief controversy made by the representatives of the corporations who appeared before your committee in opposition to this tax was with reference to the language in subdivision 2 of section 202. Some of them insisted that the correct rule would be the cash value of the property at the time of the return of income for taxation, instead of at the time the property was turned over as a part of the assets of the corporation. Of course, it is to their interest to increase the amount of the exemption, and they insisted that the basis of such exemption should be the value at the time of the return, the effect of which clearly would be to give them the benefit of the unearned increment, of good will, and so forth.

Your committee adopted the basis recommended by it because they thought it would place every taxpayer upon the same basis. That is, it would allow to each taxpayer an amount estimated in cash equal to the actual investment in the This puts every taxpayer upon a standard of parity in estimating the invested capital. It is contended that the rule, the exemption, and the tax imposed is arbitrary. That may be. Most taxation is imposed upon lines that are more or The Government needs a certain amount of less arbitrary. money; it must be raised by taxation. It has the right to determine the way in which it shall be raised. It should be fair as between the class upon which it is imposed. Subject to that qualification, the standard may be arbitrary, and frequently is, and yet be just. When we allow an 8 per cent exemption, that is an arbitrary amount. We might have made it 6; we might have made it 10; but we had in view the purpose of the legislation, and in exercising this arbitrary right we fixed it at 8 per cent based upon the theory that 8 per cent is a good profit in any business.

In presenting the rate of the tax we arbitrarily placed it at We might have fixed it at 10. There were suggestions that we make it that much. In some countries of Europe it is 10, in some 25, in some as high as 60 per cent. There is no certain criterion in respect to that. It is a matter that must be arbitrarily settled by the taxing power.

The same is true as to the time of valuation of property transferred to the business. It is competent for the Government to provide that the valuation should be at the time of the transfer or at the time of the return for taxation. This question may justly be settled upon consideration of the amount of tax which is to be realized and fairness and equity between the class upon which the tax is to be imposed.

Your committee decided, in the circumstances, that the interest of the Government and equality between the taxpayers required that the exemption should be based upon the cash value of the property at the time of investment instead of at the time of return for taxation.

It is clear if you make the valuation at the time of the return, inequalities between taxpayers would arise which do not exist under the rule adopted. The rule adopted secures equality as between the taxpayers with reference in the exemption. Every taxpayer will get an exemption upon the same basis, namely, the amount he actually invested, measured in cash at the time it was invested.

If we should adopt the other basis and take the valuation at the time of the return, the unearned increment of property, and the earning capacity of the concern would be capitalized annually and be reflected in each return for taxation.

The unearned increment of real property would be very great in a place like New York, while it would be very small in many prosperous but smaller places.

The earning capacity, which is reflected in the market value of the property, depends largely upon the nature of the business, upon good will, trade-marks, patents, and so forth. At the present time the earning capacity of certain concerns, like the powder factories, is very great, while for other concerns it is very small.

Under the basis as recommended, the standard for measuring the capital invested is a fixed and unchangeable one; under the basis as suggested, the standard would be a varying one, changing with every season and with every change in condi-

Your committee believes that with the amendment proposed to section 202 of the House bill the definition therein made of actual capital invested will furnish a just and equitable basis of computation as between the taxpayer, and will secure to the Government the income sought to be derived from this source without making it necessary to increase the tax beyond 8 per cent upon net profits.

Another objection urged to the bill as it came from the House was on account of the exemption allowed in that bill in favor of partnerships engaged in agriculture. It was claimed that if partnerships engaged in other business were taxed, they should be taxed when engaged in agriculture.

Again while the House bill exempted partnerships it did not exempt corporations engaged in agriculture. This likewise was objected to and it was contended that if partnerships engaged in agriculture were exempted corporations likewise engaged should be exempted.

On the other hand, it was contended that to exempt either corporations or partnerships so engaged, would be a discrimination against those in other business. It was contended that in certain sections of the country both corporations and partnerships, owning immense tracts of land, supplied with great capital, engaged in the production of food animals, growing cotton, sugar, wheat, and general farm products, making tre-mendous profits, in some cases equal to that of many of our great industrial corporations, would be relieved of all taxes.

After consideration of these and other suggestions to the same general import, your committee decided to recommend an amendment to the House bill making both partnerships and corporations engaged in agriculture, subject to the tax imposed upon other combinations.

Your committee continued the exemption under section 204 of the House bill as it applied to incomes derived from personal service with the amendment that it should apply to corporations as well as partnerships, and only when that income is derived exclusively from personal service.

I think that reasonably meets the objection made on that score.

It was also objected, and probably the objection was urged more strenuously than any other, that the exemption of individuals from this tax is unduly and unjustly discriminative against corporations and copartnerships. Upon its face this proposition would appear to be sound, and, speaking broadly and generally, it probably would be but for the fact that the income tax imposed upon individuals is far greater than that imposed upon corporations, while partnerships pay no tax under that law. The corporation pays an income tax of only 2 per cent. It starts at 2 per cent and it ends at 2 per cent; it does not increase. On the other hand, the individual pays an income tax of 2 per cent upon his entire net income, plus a graduated surtax upon all income above $20,000, reaching by the time his income has risen to the $2,000,000 mark a flat 13 per cent, in addition to the normal tax of 2 per cent. individual receives an income from a corporation which has paid the 2 per cent tax and his income exceeds $20,000, that excess also is subject to this graduated tax.

individual is very little less than that which would be paid by the corporation, the one subject to the excess profits tax and the other not. And the same is true as between the individual and a partnership. If, on the other hand, you add an excess profits tax to the income tax of the individual you will find, as I have found from certain calculations made me by the Actuary of the Treasury Department, that the result will be a gross discrimination against the individual, and that he would pay a larger sum than would the corporations or partnerships

Mr. POMERENE. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. POMERENE. Does the Senator mean by that, adding the excess profits tax to the supertax as applied to individuals. Mr. SIMMONS. I mean if you apply the excess profits tax to the individual as well as to a corporation.

Mr. POMERENE. And also the supertax? Mr. SIMMONS. Oh, certainly.

Mr. President, I wish to put in the RECORD as a part of my statement a computation made by the Actuary of the Treasury at my request. It is a comparison of the total amount of taxes to be paid to the Government from the net profits of a certain business when conducted as a corporation, a corpartnership, or as an individual, said taxes to include all Federal taxes to be paid by the concern or by the members of the same out of profits derived therefrom. It includes all the taxes that are to

For this purpose he used the same capital, the same net income, as to the corporation, copartnership, and individual. He took a corporation with an assumed actual invested capital of $1,000,000, with an assumed net income of $200,000. corporation excise tax of 50 cents on each $1,000 of market value of capital, assumed to be $1,500,000, will amount to $750. The income ax is 2 per cent, or $3,985. We have as the result, net income of $195,265; under the provision of the excess profits to the company of the excess profits. tax there is exempt in the case of corporations $5,000, and 8 per cent of capital invested, $80,000, making the total exempt per cent of capital invested, $80,000, making the total exempt profits $85,000, leaving as excess profits $110,265. A tax of 8 per cent of this amount, that is the excess profits tax, will be $8,821. This leaves as the net excess profits $101,443, and the exempt profits $85,000. Total profits for division among stockholders, after paying all these taxes upon a net income of $200,000, will be $186,443. The shareholders will pay no additional income tax upon their dividends, because the share of each would be less than $20,000. Total taxes, corporation excise, $750; corporation income, $3,985; excess profits, $8,821; total, $13,556.

He made the same calculations with reference to a copartnership. The total profits in that case exempt from taxation he found would be $190,800. He divided this between the five partners in order to ascertain the amount of his individual in-The share of each partner will be $38,160. Income come tax. tax, normal, 2 per cent on $34,160 will be $683.20. 1 per cent on excess over $20,000, will be $181.60; total, $864.80: making the total individual income tax of the five partners $4,324. The net result of that calculation shows that a copartnership would pay $13,524, a difference of only about $30 from a corporation.

Now, take the individual with the same capital and profits. On $196,000 he will pay 2 per cent, an additional 1 per cent on $20,000, an additional 2 per cent on $20,000, an additional 3 per cent on $20,000, an additional 4 per cent o tional 5 per cent on $50,000, and an additional 6 per cent on $50,000, which makes a total income tax that the individual would pay of $11,420. That is, his total income tax would be about $2,000 less than the total tax that would have to be paid from the profits of the same business when conducted as a corporation or as a copartnership, including the excess tax.

If you charge the excess profits tax against the individual you have this result: Exempt profits, $5,000, plus 8 per cent, capital invested, $80,000, or a total exempt profit of $85,000; taken from the net profit after deducting the income tax, $11,420, which would leave as excess profits, $103,580. Impose the 8 per cent tax on this and you have $8,268 as the excess profits tax. The total tax the individual would pay under those circumstances is $11,400 income tax and $8,286 excess profits tax, a total of $19,706, as against $13,524 by a partnership and $13,556 by a corporation. So that it is perfectly clear that under the provisions of our income-tax law, if you impose this excess profits tax upon individuals as well as upon corporations and copartnerships, you will bring about a gross inequality, an inequality amounting to something over $6,000 against the individual taxpayer upon a net income accruing to each of $200,000.

Mr. President, there was more or less vigorous opposition— Mr. HARDWICK. Before the Senator from North Carolina leaves that branch of the discussion, will be explain to me why it was that copartnerships, as well as corporations, were made subject to this tax? Do not the individuals composing a copartnership have the same income tax to pay which other individuals do; and why were copartnerships put on a parity with corporations? If the Senator can tell me just in a word, I should be glad. It may be that he has already made the ex-

Mr. SIMMONS. Copartnerships do very largely the same character of business as corporations, although they do not issue As I have demonstrated, I think, from these figures, the application of this law to copartnerships would not result in any discrimination between them and corporations; that is to say, the profits of a copartnership would have to pay the same tax as the profits of a corporation, and not any more than those of the corporation.

Mr. HARDWICK. But if the argument be applied fairly and squarely, then the individual who is engaged in business with a corporation on one side of him and a copartnehship on the other would have to pay the same tax.

Mr. SIMMONS. The corporation only has to pay the excess profits tax on the profits of that corporation. A copartnership consisting of five copartners, taking that as an illustration, as I do, would divide up the income, and they would divide it up exactly as the income of a corporation is divided up between the stockholders of that corporation. Suppose we have a corporation with five stockholders. They divide up at the end of the year the net profits. Each individual stockholder of that corporation must pay an income tax upon his share of the profits, just as each individual partner in a copartnership must pay the income tax upon his dividends, so to speak. One is a dividend; the other is a division of profits; but they are in principle identically the same thing. They represent the net profits of the operations of that concern. It does not make any difference whether it is a corporation or a copartnership they receive the profits, one in the shape of dividends, the other on shares; but, as I said, it is the same thing in principle. After they have received the profits they are both subject to identically the same With reference to the income-tax law, they are requirements. identical, except that as to the individual he would be entitled to exemptions of the income tax paid by the corporation.

Mr. HARDWICK. Let us see whether that is exactly ac-

The individuals who compose

Mr. SIMMONS. I might call the attention of the Senator to another fact, which is very important in this connection, which was about to escape me, and that is the fact that a copartnership, as such, does not pay any income tax at all.

Mr. HARDWICK. But the individual members of the copartnership pay it on their profits?

Mr. SIMMONS. The individual members of the partnership pay on their profits, just as the individual stockholder pays on his profits.

Mr. HARDWICK. Let us see, then, whether or not the Sena-tor has arrived at a just conclusion about this matter. Here is one man engaged, we will say, in the dry-goods business, for the purpose of this illustration—just one. He pays an income tax, and nothing more, to the Government, so far as this proposition is concerned. Here are two men who are engaged in a copartnership—Smith & Jones. Next door, we will say, is Mr. Brown, the first man I spoke of. Brown pays the individual income tax; Smith and Jones, each one, would have to pay an individual income tax, and yet you are going to charge the copartnership another tax, although each one of them will get half of the profits. I do not see why that is.

Mr. SIMMONS. They do not pay like the corporation. The corporation pays a flat income tax of 2 per cent upon its entire

Mr. HARDWICK. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. But the copartnership does not pay any income tax upon its net profits at all. The 2 per cent income tax which the corporation has to pay, and which the copartnership does not have to pay, I should say, upon the general average, would make up the difference created by the income tax.

Mr. HARDWICK. It must be my own failure to comprehend exactly what the Senator is trying to explain, but I find this trouble about the proposition, and I have from the beginning of the consideration of this question: I can see how you put the copartnership in in order to equalize it with the corporation, but now let us take the other horn of the dilemma for just a Here are two individuals, we will say, engaged in —Mr. Smith and Mr. Jones. They are partners, and moment. businessthey are selling dry goods or any other commodity. Right next door to them, perhaps, there is a man named Brown, who is running a business and has no partner. Smith and Jones, each one, must under the Federal law pay, if he makes enough money, his income tax, just as Brown next door who has no partner pays his income tax. Why, then, do you charge Smith & Jones this copartnership tax when you do not charge Brown anything on his business as a business tax? That is the point I can not understand.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think the figures which I have given to the Senator will explain that. This tax is not a business tax but an income tax, based not on business but upon income or

Mr. HARDWICK. They do not elucidate that point in the slightest particular.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think they do. Mr. HARDWICK. They do not. Mr. SIMMONS. Of course, Mr. President, it is utterly impossible to make absolute equality in these cases.

Mr. HARDWICK. But the Senator's figures do not even apply to the question I have suggested.

Mr. SIMMONS. But my figures show that a copartnership, which is a corporation with the single solitary exception that it is not incorporated, conducts business upon the same general principles as does a corporation.

Mr. HARDWICK. Undoubtedly; but if the Senator will pardon me—and I want to get entirely clear upon that point and not get away from it—the Senator's figures would apply to the comparison between a partnership and a corporation, and they do show that there is substantial equality between a partnership and a corporation, but the question to which I am now directing my inquiry-because I want information on the subject—is how you are going to make the same sort of showing with reference to the individual who is engaged in business on his own account and the two individuals who are engaged in business as a copartnership?

Mr. SIMMONS. I can not answer the Senator from Georgia differently from what I have already done.

Mr. HARDWICK. Then the Senator has not answered the

Mr. SIMMONS. I have answered the Senator that under the present circumstances the individual pays a graduated tax as high as 15 per cent on incomes in excess of $2,000,000; the corporation has to pay a flat tax of 2 per cent, while partnerships pay no income tax at all.

Mr. HARDWICK. Now, if the Senator will pardon me, I am not willing for that sort of an answer to stand. I am going to get this thing straight, if I can. That is not true about either the individual or the partnership. It is true as to the corporation, which pays, as I understand, the 2 per cent tax.

Mr. SIMMONS. The copartnership pays no income tax. Mr. HARDWICK. I know; but its members do. B

Smith and Jones, who constitute the copartnership, pay.

Mr. SIMMONS. The copartnership members; yes.

Mr. HARDWICK. Just like an individual does.
Mr. SIMMONS. The members pay no income tax, as distinguished from a corporation, until the profits are divided. If an individual receives an income from a corporation, that individual receives that income after it has paid the income tax. If a member of a copartnership receives it, he receives it after it has paid an income tax. They both receive it under the same conditions. The individual will not be subject to this income tax upon the dividends which he receives upon his stock in a corporation or upon his stock in a copartnership in any different way from the way in which the members of the copart-nership will be liable for that tax. If the individual has a part of his money invested in a corporation, when the dividends therefrom comes to him, if his total income amounts to more than $20,000, the excess over the $20,000 becomes at once subject to the graduated income tax under the provisions of the

As I have already shown, in the case of the business conducted as a corporation, partnership, or as an individual, the imposition of this excess profits tax upon the individual would be a decided discrimination. In the case instanced this would amount to a tax upon the individual of nearly 50 per cent more than the total tax paid from the profits of the partnership. The principal reason for this is the additional income tax payable by the individual. In general, it may be said that the reason for not applying this tax to individuals is, in addition to the above, that the exemptions allowed to individuals will be duplicated to each member of a partnership in his individual capacity; also the nonimposition of any income tax upon partnerships as such. It is evident that the following deductions and exemptions allowed to individuals are multiplied by the number of partners, when the individual partners pay their income tax upon their receipts from the profits of the business:

All interest paid on indebtedness during the year. All taxes paid during the year.

Losses actually sustained during the year in transactions not connected with the trade or business.

Debts found to be worthless during the year.

The $4,000 exemption of income allowed married individuals. I will here insert the table I have been quoting from:

Comparison of the total amount of tax to be paid to the Government from the net profits of a certain business when conducted as a cor-poration, a partnership, or an individual, said taxes to include all

CORPORATION WITH 10 STOCKHÖLDERS. Capital invested	200	0, 000. 00
Corporation excise tax, 50 cents per $1,000 upon		750. 00
$1,500,000 Income tax at 2 per cent	19	3, 985. 00 5, 263. 00
Excess-profit tax: Exempt profits (cash) 8 per cent of capital invested	80	5, 000. 00 0, 000. 00
Total exempt profits  Excess profits  Tax at 8 per cent		5, 000. 00 0, 265. 00 8, 821. 20
Total profits to be divided:	28 . OIL
Excess profits	10	1, 443, 80 5, 000, 00
Share of each stockholder	180	8, 443. 80 8, 644. 38
Personal income tax: No personal income tax.  Total taxes:
Corporation excise Corporation income Excess profit	2 301	750. 00 3, 985. 00 8, 821. 20
Total	-	3, 556. 20
PARTNERSHIP.
Capital investedNet profitsNumber of partners, 5.	20	0, 000. 00
Number of partners, 5. Excess-profit tax: Exempt profits (cash) 8 per cent capital invested	8	5, 000. 00 0, 000. 00
Total excess profits	11	5, 000. 00 9, 200. 00
Profits for division: Excess Exempt	100	5, 800. 00 5, 000. 00
TotalShare of each partner	19	0, 800. 00 8, 160. 00
Income tax: Normal, 2 per cent on $34,160Additional, 1 per cent on excess over $20,000		683, 20 181, 60
Total Income tax of all partners	gall to	864. 80 4, 324. 00
Total taxes: Excess profit	27, 11, 12, 1	9, 200. 00
		4, 324. 00
* TotalINDIVIDUAL.	1:	3, 524. 00
Capital invested.	$1,000	0,000 00
Profits		0, 000. 00
Income tax : Normal, 2 per cent on $196,000
Total		1, 420. 00
Net profits Excess-profits' tax:	188	8, 580. 00
Exempt profits 5,000 8 per cent capital invested 80,000		5,000 00
Excess profits Tax at 8 per cent	10	3, 580. 00 8, 286. 40
Total tax:	1	1, 420. 00
Excess profits		3, 286. 40
Total (with excess-profits' tax)  Total (without excess-profits' tax)  RÉSUMÉ.	1	9, 706 46 1, 420. 00
	mount	Per cent.
	mount.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, right here may I ask the Senator a question so that I may understand the matter? I understand under this proposed law there is first an exemption of $5,000, both as to partnerships and corporations, and then there is allowed a further exemption of 8 per cent on the capital stock.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; the 8 per cent being based upon the actual capital invested, however, and not upon capital stock.

Mr. McCUMBER. If there is nothing more than that earned by the corporation or by the partnership, it pays nothing, but pays 8 per cent on all above that, and then when the individual, either as a partner or as a stockholder, receives his dividend or his proportion from the partnership, he will be charged again another 2 per cent and an additional tax, according to the amount involved?

Mr. SIMMONS. If the income is received from a corporation, he would pay only the additional tax on the excess of his income over $20,000. In case his income is received from a partnership he would pay the normal income tax and the additional tax also. The reason for this difference is that the corporation has already paid an income tax of 2 per cent upon the amount returned as dividends to the individual, while the partnerships have paid no income tax upon their profits.

Mr. McCUMBER. He does not have to pay unless his income exceeds $20,000? Is the Senator sure about that under this bill?

Mr. SIMMONS. What is the question?

Mr. McCUMBER. That the person who draws the dividends from a corporation or draws his share of the partnership profits is not taxed at all unless his income exceeds $20,000. I do not so understand the bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator is getting copartnerships and corporations somewhat confused. The copartnership pays no income tax at all.

Mr. McCUMBER. It does not under this bill?

Mr. SIMMONS. No; not an income tax, but an excess profits

Mr. McCUMBER. I understand that, but that is upon its

Mr. SIMMONS. It pays no income tax, though.
Mr. McCUMBER. But it does pay a tax on profits in excess of $5,000 and also in excess of 8 per cent profit on the capital invested.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. McCUMBER. That is paid by the copartnership? Mr. SIMMONS. That is paid by the copartnership.

Mr. McCUMBER. Then, if the individual partner draws anything, he is also taxed on whatever he draws as a charge against the individual. Is not that correct?

Mr. SIMMONS. He is taxed under the income-tax law?

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. If his income, as I understand, exceeds $20,000.

Mr. McCUMBER. No; is he not taxed if his income exceeds $4.000?

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator is correct; my answer was inadvertent. Four thousand dollars, I should have said, or $3,000, if his exemption is that low.

Mr. McCUMBER. His exemption is $3,000 if he is single and $4,000 if he is a married man. Then there is a double taxation there clearly upon the same funds, for there is first a tax upon the excess profits of the partnership and then another tax of equal amount against the individual in excess of the exemption of $3,000 or $4,000, whatever it may be.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes; but does not the Senator see that the same thing applies to the stockholder who gets his dividends from a corporation; that is, to the individual who invests his money in a corporation?

Mr. McCUMBER. I presume that under this bill probably that is true; but as I understand, under the old law, if his income did not exceed $20,000, there was no additional tax charged.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator probably did not understand me. If an individual invests a part of his money in a corporation, takes stock in that corporation, and the corporation makes a net earning, that earning is divided among the stock-holders and the individual gets his part of it. That has paid a flat income tax of 2 per cent, a flat income tax of 2 per cent,

Mr. McCUMBER. That is paid at the source.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; that is the corporation income tax.

That has already been paid, and after that is paid the fund is divided and the individual who invests his money in the corporation stock gets his part of those proceeds; but the minute it comes into his hands it is subject to the income tax.

Which they had any their foreign custom Mr. VARDAMAN me—

Mr. SIMMONS. be just as easy for minute it comes into his hands it is subject to the income tax.

Mr. McCUMBER. And to a surtax, if his income exceeds a certain amount.

Mr. SIMMONS. If it exceeds $20,000,

Mr. McCUMBER. If it exceeds $20,000, it is then subject to the surtax.

Mr. SIMMONS. He must pay the surtax, that is true, whether he gets his income from a copartnership, from a corporation, or otherwise.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am not stating that there is a distinction at all in that respect.

Mr. SIMMONS. Now, Mr. President, there was considerable opposition made to the bill on the part of the munition manufacturers. They insisted that they were already paying quite a considerable tax, and the imposition of this additional tax upon them was a discrimination, an unjust imposition upon their business. The answer to that, whether it be satisfactory or not-and every individual must make his own answer to a question of that sort-the answer to that, which was made and urged with force, I think, was that if there is any discrimination against the manufacturer of munitions it is not made by this bill It was made in the present law. The Congress decided in 1916, when it passed the present emergency revenue law, to make a discrimination against these manufacturers, and they fixed the amount of the discrimination at 12½ per cent. That has not been disturbed. We do not add to that discrimination in this bill, because, with reference to the excess profits tax, they are taxed as every other manufacturer is taxed. We simply continue the discrimination, and we say, "subject to the discrimination," if you please to call it so, "made by the prior Congress, we impose this tax upon you as we impose it upon every other corporation."

I do not think that we have levied any tax in this country in many years, certainly not since I have been in Congress, that was more universally demanded by the people than the 121 per cent flat profit tax that we imposed upon this class of corporations in 1916. It was practically universally demanded. The demand was based upon the justice of the situation. They were making admittedly enormous profits out of the very situation that had called forth the action resulting in imposing upon the shoulders of the people of this country heavy additional taxation, and they are still making them. We have not changed that situation at all; we continue that; but we find that it is necessary to levy additional taxes to pay this very identical expense—that of placing this country in a state of preparedness to meet, if need be, the aggressions of some of those out of whom the munition manufacturers have been and are making these abnormal profits. Why should they not bear the same part of this additional taxation that other corporations are made to bear? There is certainly more justice in this additional levy against them, or as much justice, as in the original levv.

But again, Mr. President, in 1916 when we were about to levy this tax against the munitions manufacturers they came here, not to complain so vigorously against the tax, for they admitted they were making the enormous profits about which the country had heard; they admitted that they were receiving enormous orders from abroad day by day; but the thing of which they complained most severely in connection with the tax was the fact that we made it retroactive; we made it apply to all contracts and to all sales made during the taxable year before the enactment of the legislation as well as after the enactment of the legislation. They said that was unjust. What reason did they give for saying that it was unjust? They said, "If you let this apply only to future sales and contracts we can protect ourselves in the contracts by passing the tax on to the purchaser. We did not anticipate and could not anticipate this legislation. We have made provisions in our contracts for many contingencies, but we have not made provision in any of those contracts for passing on this tax." They had made provision for passing on other taxes, States taxes and municipal taxes, but they had not in those contracts made provision permitting them to pass on this tax, and, therefore, they said. "We have a real cause of grievance against you when you propose to impose this tax upon contracts we have already made, and which we are now billing. What does that mean, Mr. President? That means that while a tax which would ordinarily be called a heavy tax was imposed upon them in 1916, they had a means, which they had already employed as to other taxes, of making their foreign customers pay that tax.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow

Mr. SIMMONS. If we shall add this additional tax it will be just as easy for them probably to pass that on as to pass

Mr. VARDAMAN. I was about to suggest to the Senator that it would be interesting to the American people to know how able these people are to pay this tax and that information would be furnished by the Senator putting in the RECORD, if he has it convenient, the profits that they are making on the capital stock of their companies. I understand their profits amount to 200 to 300 per cent.

Mr. SIMMONS. Unfortunately, I have not the figures at hand. If the Senator will supply them to me I will be very glad to see that they go into the RECORD.

Mr. President, the next objection came from the insurance companies. While all these companies, both old-line and mutual companies, objected to this tax in a general way, the chief objection came from the so-called mutual companies, companies doing insurance on the mutual plan. The general objection, though, made and stressed by both lines of insurance went to the very root and fundamentals of the imposition of the tax. They insisted that a war tax, as they characterized it, should not be imposed upon insurance. In 1916 they came and made a fight against the imposition of the income tax upon insurance companies. They insisted broadly then, as they do now, that insurance was a class of business that stood on its merits separate and apart from the other business of the country and should be treated upon a different basis and was entitled to higher and more preferential consideration because of the humanitarian and benevolent elements that enter into it. said, "Our policyholders are making sacrifices and indulging in all sorts of self-denial in order to leave something to those who come after them, and when men make such sacrifices, the usufruct of which is to take place after their death, they are entitled to special consideration by the Federal Government, and income taxes or other war taxes ought not to be

In 1913, and again last year, under the influence of their persuasive appeal, in the goodness of our hearts we made exemptions, I think in some instances rather remarkable exemptions, in favor of these companies. We did not altogether let them out. When they found that we were going to tax them, they asked for first one exemption and then another, and we granted to them practically every exemption that they asked for. The result, Mr. President, was that the insurance companies have paid relatively a mighty small income tax. I have here in my hand the returns from 20 of the largest insurance companies in this country, including some of the old-line companies and some mutual companies, just as they come in the order of their magnitude:

Statement of income, etc., of $0 leading life insurance companies for the calendar year 1915.

	Premium income.	Income from investments.	Total income.	Expense of operation.	Policy losses paid.	Taxes paid.	Other dis- bursements.	Total dis- bursements.	Actual net income.	Net income on which tax was paid.
1	7, 030, 584, 67 6, 612, 723, 05 52, 021, 853, 47 5, 476, 696, 55 28, 684, 561, 55 111, 290, 521, 52 23, 704, 542, 68 62, 782, 699, 98 6, 652, 132, 65 8, 576, 971, 88 47, 51, 481, 11 40, 592, 926, 37 21, 205, 719, 70 5, 505, 614, 35 93, 487, 320, 33 6, 675, 145, 59	$5, 471, 156. 88 1, 341, 736, 10 3, 472, 314. 96 25, 243, 604. 41 2, 523, 759. 88 5, 438, 280. 29 3, 896, 641. 17 24, 443, 457. 95 7, 700, 819. 93 27, 391, 679. 62 2, 204, 122. 90 2, 814, 842. 77 36, 493, 514. 43 15, 963, 602. 60 7, 102, 717. 84 1, 843, 556, 602. 60 7, 102, 717. 84 1, 843, 556, 6142. 02 4, 335, 732. 20 6, 592, 659. 85	$27, 210, 861. 06 8, 372, 320. 77 10, 085, 038. 01 77, 265, 487. 88 8, 000, 329. 43 32, 122, 820. 89 14, 641, 558. 78 135, 733, 779. 47 31, 405, 362. 61 80, 174, 379. 60 8, 856, 235. 55 11, 301, 814. 63 121, 244, 995. 54 56, 555, 928. 97 28, 308, 437. 54 7, 349, 171. 03 111, 489, 813. 31 7, 681, 287. 61 31, 102, 800. 13 10, 283, 433. 74	$4, 361, 110. 75 1, 235, 534. 54 1, 258, 950. 96 9, 199, 196. 91 1, 309, 464. 19 7, 258, 047. 80 21, 53, 379. 56 27, 830, 610. 62 23, 754, 340. 01 9, 074, 552. 29 1, 286, 496. 40 1, 724, 517. 22 6, 553, 552. 91 6, 819, 725. 97 4, 376, 392. 68 1, 185, 389. 31 24, 259, 953. 90 1, 145, 573. 20 5, 128, 932. 79 2, 960, 939. 28	$15, 808, 988. 94 4, 348, 171. 69 6, 447, 937. 76 46, 381, 483. 26 4, 932, 853. 11 12, 856, 970. 61 12, 856, 970. 61 14, 307, 902. 50 51, 425, 764. 37 5, 534, 986. 50 14, 95, 274. 37 5, 686, 250. 84 29, 747, 686. 00 14, 059, 274. 30 4, 000, 999. 91 35, 348, 615. 60 4, 030, 114. 93 14, 000, 989. 47 10, 087, 270. 94	$768, 702. 51 111, 488. 86 312, 048. 86 1, 201, 040. 69 129, 708. 71 334, 587. 90 204, 421. 11 1, 912, 325. 19 620, 522. 95 1, 197, 588. 04 201, 839. 94 221, 053. 87 1, 386, 617. 34 1, 236, 152. 34 445, 297. 54 185, 288. 35 2, 559, 845. 02 111, 279. 15 775, 061. 69 357, 590. 19	$4, 196, 293. 56 54, 282. 12 156, 650. 02 359, 490. 81 81, 394. 67 233, 984. 52 120, 810. 18 14, 690, 356. 02 100, 939. 68 2, 382, 433. 56 86, 641. 08 262, 068. 04 6, 311, 710. 06 1, 805, 068. 02 41, 036. 79 42, 561. 09 640, 965. 14 83, 491. 71 4, 023, 380. 12 442, 300. 55	$25, 135, 095, 76 5, 749, 477, 15 8, 175, 587, 60 57, 141, 210, 67 6, 453, 420, 08 20, 682, 990, 477, 19 84, 932, 710, 02 18, 783, 705, 14 64, 089, 338, 26 7, 109, 874, 27 73, 938, 231, 15 39, 608, 632, 33 18, 922, 001, 31 5, 413, 318, 66 62, 819, 379, 66 62, 819, 379, 66 63, 70, 458, 99 24, 328, 364, 07 13, 848, 100, 96	$2,075,765.30 2,622,843.62 1,909,450.41 20,124,247.21 1,546,909.35 11,439,830.06 5,737,381.59 50,801,009.45 12,621,657.47 16,094,041.34 1,746,381.28 47,305,764.39 16,947.296.64 9,386,436.23 1,935,852.37 2,310,828.62 6,774,435.06 5,435,352.78	$178, 406, 29 315, 399, 76 714, 934, 05 3, 588, 052, 51 692, 518, 11 1, 790, 808, 67 171, 488, 98 4, 946, 953, 04 1, 854, 732, 76 659, 308, 23 11, 333, 882, 38 11, 360, 503, 26 301, 060, 13 20, 521, 04 262, 404, 90 1, 511, 224, 49 763, 165, 28
	623, 994, 031. 69	204, 282, 134. 86	828, 276, 166. 55	122, 876, 740. 29	385, 582, 280. 22	14, 342, 460. 19	36, 115, 857. 14	558, 917, 337. 84	269, 358, 828. 71	30, 464, 641. 88

The gross income of those 20 companies during the year 1915, I believe, was $828,000,000. After taking out all expenses of operation, losses paid to policyholders, taxes, and other disbursements incident to the business, the total disbursements amounted to $558,000,000, leaving an actual net income of $269,000,000. We were so liberal in allowing exemptions to them that of that $269,000,000 returned as net income they returned only $80,000,000 subject to tax under the income-tax law, because, as I said, we exempted nearly everything. Only $30,000,000 of that $270,000,000 returned as net income was on account of $30,000,000 these exemptions liable to an income tax and actually paid an income tax. The total tax paid by those 20 great companies, with a net income of $270,000,000, in the year 1915 was only

I might say right here, in passing, that this bill exempts everything that we exempted under the income-tax law. We carry into this bill the exemptions allowed in that law. What are those exemptions?

In the first place, we exempt the whole legal reserve fund that they are required, under the law, to set apart. That is one of their big funds. We exempt the money that they return to their policyholders in the way of excess premiums. We exempt, in short, every dollar of the income of the mutual companies—and they are the chief complainants, as I said—that they return to their policyholders. In addition to that, we exempt them from taxation on a certain element of their securities—and they are the largest purchasers of this element-that is, governmental bonds, State bonds, and municipal bonds. We let them take out their total expenses, including overhead charges of all kinds, salaries, taxes of every kind to the Federal Government, States, counties, and municipalities, all their losses, and tax them only upon the balance.

Now, they make two objections to this tax. They say that they have no actual invested capital and make no profits. They say, "We make no profits, because we return all our money to our stockholders." Well, if they make no profits, if they do, in fact, return all of their receipts not required to meet expenses to their policyholders, of course they have no meet expenses to their policyholders, or course they have no net income upon which to levy the tax and would not have to pay any tax; but their statement is misleading. There are some fraternal associations, some few cooperative associations, to which this statement does not apply; but practically all the great mutual companies, which are gradually covering the whole field of insurance and absorbing the great old-line companies. panies—for the old-line companies are mutualizing so rapidly that there are but few of them left—do have a fund that stands in place of invested capital. Sometimes they build that fund up until it is pyramided and topheavy. In the case of one company, they have built it up until it amounts now to over $43,000,000, and they are adding to it every year. They do have a fund that they neither set apart as a part of their legal reserve to guarantee death losses nor to pay returned premiums or current losses; a fund that, when it is set aside, may at some time in the indefinite future be distributed among the policyholders, just as the funds of any corporation will ultimately be distributed among its stockholders when it goes out of business or winds up its affairs; but it is a fund that stands there permanently, and out of it they pay expenses; out of it they make investments. It is their operating fund. It is the fund set apart to do all the business that the corporation does in addition to the payment of losses. It is actually used in their business.

That fund, as I said, in the case of one great company, has reached $43,000,000. If they do not add to that fund, if they are content that this great surplus they have piled up and that they are not sharing with their policyholders shall not be en-larged, it will not be taxed. The only tax that this bill imposes is upon the sum that the insurance company annually adds to that great surplus.

To illustrate, the Mutual Benefit Co. of New Jersey, according to the testimony, had a gross income in 1915 of $38,000,000.

That company had what is known in the reports as a surplus—unassigned profits, they call it sometimes, but it is known in the reports as a surplus—of $9,000,000 in 1915, already accumulated. Its income in that year was $38,000,000. They paid out in current losses and returned to policyholders, I think, $21,000,000. They paid in taxes something around $700,000, and $4,200,000 for other expenses. When they had paid all of these expenses out of their premiums for that year they carried to their legal reserve the amount that they were required to add on account of increased liabilities, and after they had paid all of this they had $1,500,000 as net income upon which to pay income tax. If they had returned that $1,500,000 to their stockholders as an excess levy—because it was an excess levy—they would not have had to pay any tax that was based on their profits; but instead of returning it to their policyholders they added it to the $9,000,000 surplus, already big enough for any legitimate purposes of a mutual company.

If any mutual insurance company will do business upon the mutual plan and be what it holds itself out to the public as being, a mutual company, give its stockholders the benefit of what they pay in, if they need an operating fund build it up, but when they have built it up sufficiently stop, as some of them have, and after that time, instead of adding their profits to their surplus fund, give the policyholders the benefit of it in the reduction of their premiums, they will not have to pay any tax. In other words, Mr. President, if they pay any tax under this bill they do it not because they are forced to do it but because they are unwilling to give their policyholders the full benefit of their plan.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President-

Mr. SIMMONS. Pardon me; just one minute. Let me finish this statement.

Mr. CLAPP. Certainly.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think, Mr. President, they will not relatively have to pay much tax, as I will show a little further along—no heavy tax. I think if this law will have the effect of making them return this profit to their policyholders instead of using it to swell an already sufficient surplus, it will serve a good purpose in the interest of the policyholders. It may force these companies from now on to do at least a larger measure of justice toward their policyholders than they have done in the past. It may tend at least to stop the piling up of these great surpluses in the treasuries of these companies.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, is there any provision in this bill to prevent them from passing that to the policyholders, if they want to, and thereby escaping taxation?

Mr. SIMMONS. None in the world.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, I have followed the Senator's remarks with a great deal of interest, and they are certainly illuminating. I simply want to ask a question, perhaps to accentuate and confirm my own view of the conclusion he reaches. I will ask him if this tax that is proposed would in any manner trench upon, reduce, or impair the rights and interests of the policyholders in this mutual company?

Mr. SIMMONS. I think it would in no way have that effect. On the other hand, I think it would force these companies to distribute among the policyholders a fund which they are now carrying to a surplus which already is sufficiently large and in many instances too large.

Mr. President, I have here the estimated tax to be paid by insurance companies, based upon the various insurance companies' reports of business transacted during the calendar year ending December 31, 1915, as shown by the 1916 New York life insurance reports. That is, this table takes the actual returns of 34 corporations made under the New York law, and on the basis of those returns estimates the amount of excess profits tax they will have to pay under this act. Just let me call the attention of Senators to a few of them; and let me say, in passing, that it appears from this table that nearly one-half of these companies will not pay a single dollar of the proposed excess profits tax. A large part of them are not paying a single dollar under the present income-tax law.

One of them, and one of the largest of them, was represented before the committee by a very distinguished lawyer acting as their counsel, and he made a vigorous protest against this bill. I refer to the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. I believe it is a Wisconsin corporation. He made a vigorous protest against this bill. He complained of the income tax that his company was having to pay; and he complained that his company, if this bill was passed, would have to pay an enormous tax, one that would be oppressive to its policyholders. He insisted, as others had, that insurance companies should not be taxed, especially these mutual companies, at all; they ought to be exempt. Before he finished, however, he admitted that his company alone-doing a business that he said, because of its character, the United States Government ought not to tax at all—was paying now in the way of State, county, and municipal taxes in the several communities in which it was doing business, or paid last year, $1,100,000; and yet he thought that it was wrong for the Government to tax it at all. All of these companies whose report I read a little while ago, all of those 20 largest companies, while they paid the Government last year, and complained about it, a tax of only $304,000, according to their own return paid to the States, counties, and municipalities in which they are doing business a tax of $14,342,000.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, as I understand, these companies are required in most States to keep a certain amount on deposit with the States in which they do business, are they not?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes. That is their legal reserve.
Mr. CLAPP. Would or would not that be affected by the proposed tax?

Mr. SIMMONS. Absolutely not—their legal reserves are exempt under the income-tax law and under the pending bill.

What I was going to say about this distinguished counsel that came here to represent this company, protesting against the tax it is paying now and the tax it would pay under this bill, was this: When I turned to the report I have just presented to the Senate, and examined it, after reading his testimony before the committee, I discovered that in the year 1915, about which he was talking, his company, though it is a mutual company, with a surplus, according to its return, of $14,988,000, will not pay one single dollar under this tax, because the deductions to which it would be entitled—the $5,000 and the 8 per cent upon its $15,000,000, in round numbers, of surplus—absorb its net profits, and leave nothing for the act to operate upon.

Mr. President, without reading this report, I wish to incorporate it in my remarks as a part of them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Thomas in the chair). In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE EXCESS PROFITS TAX UPON INSURANCE COMPANIES.

The estimated tax to be paid by insurance companies is based upon the various insurance companies' reports of business transacted during the calendar year ended December 31, 1915, as shown by the 1916 New York life insurance report.

Insurance companies' statements of business transacted during the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, and estimated tax under the excess-profits tax provisions.

Company.	Capital.	Surplus.	Total capital and surplus .		under ex- cess-profits	Taxable income under excess-profits tax.	Estimated tax to be paid under excess- profits tax.	Policy- holders.	Tax per policy- holder (cents).
The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.  Farmers and Traders Life Insurance Co. The Germania Life Insurance Co. The Manhattan Life Insurance Co. The Manhattan Life Insurance Co. The Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Mutual Life Insurance Co. New York New York Life Insurance Co. Niagara Life Insurance Co. Postal Life Insurance Co. Postal Life Insurance Co.  Constructive Mutual Life Insurance Co. United States Life Insurance Co, in the City of New	200,000 200,000 125,000 100,000	43, 436, 629	$10, 166, 675 254, 979 1, 989, 128 2, 978, 283 341, 384 25, 263, 690 14, 740, 055 43, 436, 629 150, 000 251, 113 225, 552	$447, 574 None. 522, 067 None. None. 1, 512, 674 758, 241 9, 208, 371 None. 15, 251 50, 044	$827, 285 25, 398 174, 571 171, 261 32, 311 2, 056, 349 1, 199, 369 3, 664, 098 17, 000 25, 394 24, 045	None. None. $347, 496 None. None. None. 5, 544, 273 None. Sone. 25, 999	None. None. $27,800 None. None. None. 443,542 None. None. 2,080	$653, 207 823 79, 753 61, 665 33, 612 15, 832, 885 734, 560 1, 175, 321 4, 823 21, 991 31, 427	Non Non Non Non Non Non Non Non Non
York.  Etna Life Insurance Co.  Bankers Life Co.  Berkshire Life Insurance Co.  Fle Colonial Life Insurance Co. of America.	264,000 5,000,000	139,498 13,103,148 13,586,320 1,212,939 98,714	403, 498 18, 103, 148 13, 586, 320 1, 212, 939 348, 714	84,377 97,881 252,224 None. 6,640	38,967 1,455,209 1,096,950 102,035 33,030	45,410 None. None. None. None.	3,633 None. None. None. None.	14,443 193,631 189,962 32,106 233,934	Non Non Non Non

Insurance companies' statements of business transacted during the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, and estimated tax under the excess profits tax provisions—Continued.

Company.	Capital.	Surplus.	Total capital and surplus .		Deductions under ex- cess profits tax.	Taxable income under excess profits tax.	Estimated tax to be paid under excess profits tax.	Policy- holders.	Tax per policy- holder (cents).
The Columbian National Life Insurance Co. Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co. John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. The National Life Insurance Co. The National Life Insurance Co. The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. Pittsburg Life & Trust Co. Provident Life & Trust Co. Frovident Life & Trust Co. of Philadelphia The Prudential Insurance Co. of America. State Mutual Life Assurance Co. of Worcester The Travelers Insurance Co. The Union Central Life Insurance Co. Union Mutual Life Insurance Co.	1,000,000 1,000,000 2,000,000 5,000,000	6,308,281 9,725,636 4,303,434 5,118,800 14,988,685	$1, 453, 543 1, 864, 211 4, 423, 627 1, 230, 158 7, 622, 696 6, 308, 281 9, 725, 636 4, 303, 434 5, 118, 800 14, 988, 685 7, 630, 652 1, 603, 039 1, 535, 525 5, 776, 413 28, 615, 188 3, 163, 868 13, 210, 865 4, 147, 724 1, 327, 649	$163, 281 331, 893 675, 333 416, 303 564, 54) 1, 912, 678 None. 83, 718 257, 869 974, 591 362, 757 177, 707 138, 722 3, 460, 384 426, 323 1, 325, 008 803, 787 185, 488	$124,549 160,775 372,397 111,739 627,906 547,916 813,834 349,275 416,178 1,209,252 634,944 140,493 131,396 409,887 2,363,423 409,887 2,363,636 1,883,369 352,894 114,922	$38, 732 171, 118 302, 936 304, 570 26, 634 1, 384, 762 725, 334 None. None. None. 339, 647 222, 259 46, 311 None. 1, 966, 961 159, 663 236, 639 450, 833 70, 566	$3,099 13,689 24,235 24,365 2,131 109,181 58,027 None. None. None. 17,781 3,705 None. 87,757 12,775 18,931 36,071 5,545	28, 629 45, 994 100, 411 64, 403 2, 790, 631 165, 462 124, 438 101, 122 128, 438 548, 762 237, 603 88, 299 60, 135 126, 923 13, 828, 276 75, 388 147, 288 200, 426 43, 052	11 -30 -24 -38 -0.03 -66 -18 -18 -19 -19 -19 -19 -19 -19 -19 -19
Total	17, 389, 000	239, 213, 081	256, 602, 081	26, 844, 900	21, 240, 062	11, 520, 227	921, 620	38, 390, 118

Mr. SIMMONS. This table covers 34 insurance companies. As I said, more than half of them, I think, are mutual companies and many of them will not pay any tax. These comhad altogether a capital stock, in round numbers, of $17,000,000; but these 34 companies returned to the State of New York under the head of surplus $239,000,000, total capital and surplus $256,000,000, net taxable income $26,000,000, deductions under excess-profit tax $21,000,000. So that these 34 companies, among the largest in the world, will return for taxation under this act only $11,000,000 out of a total surplus of $256,000,000, and the tax which they will pay under this bill to the United States Government will amount to the meager sum of $921,000, not as much as one of them, the one to which I have referred to, the Northwestern Mutual—and that is not the largest—paid last year to the States, counties, and municipalities in which it does business

Mr. President, some of these companies have claimed before the committee that this surplus, the additions to which we propose to tax, this surplus that we propose to have constitute the fund upon which the 8 per cent exemption is to be levied and ascertained, and the increase of which we propose to make the basis of net income, is in some way or other set apart and will go back to the policyholder upon the happening of some sort of indefinite contingency that may happen or may never happen. The truth about the business is, I think—and that is borne out by the brief filed by one of the largest of these companies and the statement of its attorney—that this surplus is maintained for the purpose of providing against what they call the fluctuations in the value of the securities which under the law they are required to deposit in the various States as legal reserve. They say those securities sometimes depreciate, and after they fall below a certain standard of value they are required to make good their depreciation by the deposit of other or additional securities, and that this surplus is kept for that purpose and for the purpose of making good losses in investments. Here is the statement made in a brief, I will call it—it seems to be in the nature of a brief—filed with the Finance Committee by the Northwestern Mutual Co.:

This is a protest against imposing an excess profit tax upon mutual life insurance companies, submitted by the North-western Mutual Life Insurance Co. They start out by saying:

We have no stockholders. Our funds belong to our policyholders. We collect from them from year to year a sum which, with interest additions, enables us to fulfill our contracts. We carry a comparatively small surplus to take care of the fluctuations in the market value of our securities and to make good losses in investments. Aside from this surplus, all other income is returned to the policyholders at one time or another.

It may be well to call attention in this connection to the fact that while some of the securities in the legal reserve may depreciate, others may appreciate, and while there may be losses in some investments, there may be compensating profits on others.

From the statement of this company and its attorney that I have just read, it appears that this surplus, which they sometimes call their contingent reserve, is not to be returned to the policyholders, but is kept for a specific purpose, to wit, to guarantee against depreciation of securities in their investment

It may never be called upon for that purpose, and it could only be called upon for that purpose in case the depreciation of some of their securities was so great that it would not be made good by the interest on their investments and that the State should require them to make good their depreciation. It is not kept there idle, of course; it is kept employed. It is used in the operation of business. It is not returned to the policyholders. In the case of a mutual company the annual additions to this fund, Mr. President, is the only part of their profits upon which the tax imposed in this bill will operate.

Mr. CLAPP. I do not know whether the Senator would prefer to present the bill without interruption at this time or not.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am about through, I will say to the Senator. Mr. CLAPP. Then I should like to ask the Senator-Mr. SIMMONS. Will the Senator just let me finish reading this testimony? Mr. CLAPP. Certainly.

Mr. SIMMONS. On the same line a distinguished lawyer, Mr. Barnes, speaking for one of these insurance companies, used this language to the committee:

Let me refer for a moment to this item of surplus. There is only one excuse, in my judgment, for mutual life insurance companies carrying a surplus account at all. We all do it and we do it, I think, for just one reason, and that is to take care of the fluctuations in the value of securities from time to time so that there will no time come when we have not enough property on hand to keep our reserve unimpaired. For instance, our company has an investment of $100,000 in bonds and this goes up and down. There are times when the fluctuations were quite remarkable. We may meet losses from time to time, and so we carry a surplus which we think is large enough to cover those fluctuations and to cover any unusual losses that we may meet. It is an insurance fund to insure the stability and continuity of the reserve fund which we must carry for the benefit of our policyholders.

Mr. CLAPP. What company is that?

Mr. SIMMONS. The Northwestern Mutual Life.

Mr. CLAPP. That has answered the question I designed to ask the Senator.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, the same reason which he assigns for exempting these companies from taxation would apply with equal force to the fluctuating values of raw material or stock which a manufacturing company carries.

Mr. SIMMONS. Of course. That is the purpose of this surplus. The declaration by one of the largest companies that came before the committee is to the effect that that is the only fund which is not returned to the policyholder at one time or another.

Does this bill do an injustice to the policyholders of mutual companies? I do not think it does. The only capital of a mutual company which it treats as invested capital is its surplus accumulated in previous years. If the annual addition to this fund is not in excess of $5,000 plus 8 per cent, it pays no tax. These surpluses are, in the case of most companies, already sufficiently large for the purposes they are intended to serve. These annual additions serve apparently no good purpose except to swell an already sufficient fund. If there are profits that might be carried to this fund, they can as well be returned to the policyholder, and if returned to the policyholder, there will be no income upon which the tax imposed in this bill would operate.

So we impose a tax which can be avoided and will be avoided, if these companies treat their policyholders fairly, if they do not insist upon increasing from year to year by more than one-twelfth, an already overgrown fund.

Mr. President, I have already taken up in explaining the bill more time than I intended. The excess profits tax is not an oppressive tax. There may be those who would prefer some other way of raising this money than by this tax, but I do not believe the tax can be successfully assailed as unjust, unfair, unduly discriminatory, or as excessive taxation.

The bill lays no burden upon any industry in this country that is not making a clear net profit after meeting every actual and contingent obligation that it is liable for, until it makes, in addition, a profit of 8 per cent upon its actually invested capital and, in addition to that, $5,000.

I am not going to discuss the question whether 8 per cent is a sufficient profit for a corporation or partnership to make upon its investment. It is not proposed to take from the taxpayer the excess over 8 per cent. Eight per cent is a good, ordinary business profit, and the Government demands no part of that. It only taxes the excess over that sum plus $5,000.

We are confronted by a great national emergency. not at war, it is true, but we are in a situation almost as bad. We find ourselves unprepared for exigencies of the most portentious import that may overtake us at any moment, a situation that might involve the national safety, not to say the national life.

For 30 or 40 years we have been reposing in a false security, looking to physical conditions and barriers to protect us against aggression from the outside world. These barriers have been removed by the agencies of modern invention and science. have been brought by the progress of the world into practical juxtaposition with all maritime countries. The distance that separates us by water has practically been eliminated. We have been brought into juxtaposition on one side with a warring continent, a continent aflame with war, on another side, with a continent a part of whose people have been said to be ambitious to control one of the great oceans of the world, to drive us out, and to monoplize the trade of that great ocean. Whether this is so or not, a great national emergency has arisen, full of dangers and possibilities not foreseen or anticipated, and for which we had not in advance adequately prepared, and which admonish us to take immediate and quick action involving large expenditures, to the end that we may be able to defend our country and enforce our rights upon land or sea against aggression or invasion.

The public sentiment of the country demands that as speedily as possible this condition shall be changed, that this great Nation, naturally the most powerful and the wealthiest and, with but few exceptions, having the largest population of any country in the world, will not remain in a position of helplessness; that it shall, with such speed as is possible, when backed by the wealth and the resources of the Nation, prepare itself adequately, both upon land and upon sea. For this purpose, and in response to this public demand, we are about to appropriate the great sum of $530,000,000 for the next year in excess of the appropriation for these purposes in 1916, the year before this public awakening.

We say to these men, representing the corporate industries of the country, you are the people who led in this propaganda in favor of adequate preparedness. The only direct tax that corporations are now paying to the Federal Government is a small excise tax upon their capital and an income tax of 2 per cent upon their net income. Compared with enormous consumption taxes paid by the masses of the people, the tax they pay may be said to be a small tax, while their prosperity is exceptionally great under existing conditions. The total taxes which cor-porations other than manufacturers of munitions pay will under the present law not amount to much more than $150,000,000 a year. The net income of corporations for the last taxable year, after paying all expenses, was $5,700,000.000. The consumption taxes paid by the masses of the people amounts to many times that sum. This bill does not tax corporations unless they are prosperous, unless they are making a fine profit upon their investments, and then only taxes them one-twelfth of their profits in excess of a profit above the average made on ordinary investment.

Mr. President, the largest corporate investment of this country is that invested in railroads. Their business is that of selling transportation; they distribute the products of the people. The largest customers of the railronds in this country are the corporations. We have a law in this country which in effect says to the railroads you shall not charge for transportation, including the products of the factories of these great corporations, a sum in excess of a reasonable profit. The courts have applied that law of Congress and of the States, because the States followed in the line of Congress in the matter of regulating railroad rates, and interpreted the purpose and intent of Congress with reference to this matter of rates.

Under the decisions of the courts, applying the laws of reasonable rates, which were made largely for the benefit of corporations, and made largely because of their demands—because it was they who led the fight against excessive railroad tariffs under these decisions, interpreting the will of Congress as de-clared in the enactment, these railroad corporations, the largest investors in this country, in the performance of this great function, the distribution of the products of the industry of the country, are not permitted to make a rate predicated upon a profit of as much, certainly not more, than 8 per cent. I think there is no case in the books in which the court, in de-termining the reasonableness of a rate, have held that the roads were entitled to fix their rates on a higher basis of profit than per cent.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do. Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Of course, the Senator does not mean upon the actual investment in railroad property?

Mr. SIMMONS. I mean a profit upon their business.

Mr. HITCHCOCK, Mr. President, there are undoubtedly some railroad corporations that are paying dividends above 8 per cent, though there are not many; but a large portion of their capital is in bonds, which pay only 4 or 5 per cent. So the Senator is correct.

Mr. SIMMONS. I had reference to the standard of profits which the court establishes in determining the reasonableness of a rate charged by a railroad.

When we come to banks and individual capitalists, which are in most of the States hedged about by usury laws, they are not permitted to charge more than a certain per cent; sometimes 6 per cent; it may be under special contract 8 per cent. upon money loaned; more than that is generally held to be usurious and illegal. A man who is compelled to pay a higher rate in my State and in most of the other States can bring suit and recover it. Yet when the Government, not proposing and recover it. Yet when the Government, to confiscate a cent, not proposing a limitation upon profits at all, says to the great corporations of this country, are making more than 8 per cent plus $5,000 net profit, you shall contribute a reasonable part of that excess—one-twelfth of it— to pay the expenses of the Government," it is denounced as confiscation-that is the term some of them use-denounced as extortion, or, as one of them put it to me, "It is taking our profits away from us."

Why, Mr. President, the $100,000 corporation-and that is an average-size corporation in my part of the country-has got to make 13 per cent profit before it will have to pay a single dollar in taxes under this bill. There are corporations of that size in my State and elsewhere in this country who are making as high as 33 per cent profit. Under this proposed act, what would such a corporation, making a net profit of 33 per cent, pay in the way of excess profits taxes? Taking out the 13 per cent, which represents the $5,000 exemption, and the 8 per cent exemption, there would be $20,000 left. The excess profits tax upon that would be $1,600, leaving that company, after paying this tax, still a net income of over 31 per cent.

Mr. CLAPP. Would this bill impose a tax on an individualand I am not asking the question out of any personal interest on my part, because it does not affect me-who loaned money out at interest in excess of 8 per cent? Would this bill tax that

Mr. SIMMONS. No; of course an individual is not subject to

Mr. CLAPP. It would apply in the case of a corporation loaning money?

Mr. SIMMONS.

Mr. CLAPP. There are States in the Union where the legal rate of interest, I think, in the main is above 8 per cent; in a great many of the States it is 10 per cent; and if the current rate was above 8 per cent, of course it would simply carry that tax right over onto the borrower.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I should not care to go into a question of that sort. There would be no tax charged against the corporation that happens to make over 8 per cent on its money, unless it made a profit after deducting $5,000 and the 8 per cent provided in this bill. It does not make any difference whether the net income comes from usury or other sources, if this net income was in excess of 8 per cent and $5,000; they would pay the tax; otherwise they would not.

Mr. CLAPP. Where it is authorized by the State and local conditions are such that the rate of interest is above 8 per cent, in those cases I think the tax would simply be passed right over onto the borrower. I do not see any escape from that conclusion.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the tax was passed on to the borrower, the profits of the lending firm would be increased; and consequently his tax payable to the Government would be increased.

greater his profits the greater the tax to be paid.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator a question before he leaves the subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL Door the Senator from North

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield. Mr. McLEAN. I want to ask the Senator if he has taken into consideration the possible effect of this 8 per cent excess profits tax on very small incomes which happen to be invested in a particular corporation? Take, for instance, the corporation which the Senator cited as his illustration, having a capital of a million dollars and paying 20 per cent. It seems to me that the tax of 8 per cent on the 12 per cent excess is a 1 per cent tax on the entire capital. A widow left, we will say, with 50 shares of stock in such a company, would pay a tax of $50, or 5 per cent of her entire income.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not know that I quite catch the meaning of the question the Senator has asked, but small corpora-tions are rather favorably dealt with in this bill.

Mr. McLEAN. I am not speaking about that. I am speaking about the illustration which the Senator cited of a corporation with a capital of a million dollars. Of course, there the $5,000 exemption would be a small matter.

Yes; it would be a small matter. Mr. SIMMONS.

Mr. McLEAN. It pays a 20 per cent dividend. Now, the excess profits tax would be 8 per cent of 12 per cent, or practically 1 per cent of the capital; so that the dividend of 20 per cent would be reduced to 19 per cent if it were charged over to the dividend, or 5 per cent of the income. Therefore, a woman, for instance, inheriting 50 shares of stock in such a corporation and having no other property would pay an income tax of a dollar a share, or $50 upon her income of $1,000. I ask the Senator if the committee took that into consideration?

Mr. SIMMONS. That particular case was not taken into consideration.

Mr. BRADY. Mr. President— Mr. McLEAN. I think, if the Senator from Idaho will pardon me, that those cases will not be unusual.

Mr. SIMMONS. We can not frame a law that will not have some of the quicksands about which the books speak.

Mr. McLEAN. I think it would have been very easy to have framed this law to avoid that inequality and injustice

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator will have an opportunity to suggest such amendments as he desires.

Mr. McLEAN. I shall have an opportunity to suggest my remedy, but I doubt very much if it will be accepted.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will suggest to the Senate that I am not quite sure that I fully caught the meaning of his inquiry, but I will not bother him to repeat it.

Mr. BRADY. Mr. President, referring to the statement of the Senator from Connecticut, we must bear in mind that in the case he has mentioned the woman owning the stock would receive 8 per cent before the excess profit tax becomes operative, and in addition to the 8 per cent dividend, which ought to be a reasonable dividend on the stock, she would receive her proportion of the $20,000, would she not?
Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. She would get 19 per cent still.

Mr. McLEAN. But it would be a 5 per cent income tax on an income of $1,000 in that company.

Mr. BRADY. But when she pays that she has already received 8 per cent on her stock.

Mr. McLEAN. Yes; but such investments are very apt to have a market value that would not return more than 4 or 5 per cent on the investment. For instance, a stock paying 20 per cent ordinarily would have a market value of $400 a share, and a very careful and conservative man might invest his accumulations, which might not be very large, in 50 shares of that stock and leave it to his wife as something that would be exceptionally safe. Now, it has been the policy of Congress up to date to exempt all incomes less than $3,000 in any case, and it would seem to me to have been much better to have raised the additional sum needed by adding to the general income tax the amount required.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President-

Mr. McLEAN. Or, if the Senator from Georgia will pardon me, by resorting to that source to which all civilized nations resort, the customs duties.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I have no doubt we will discuss the question of adding to the customs duties before we get through, and I think we can easily show the Senator that that would be an impracticable way to raise revenue at this time. Of course, there is an element of inequality in nearly every system of taxation. It is extremely difficult not to leave some element of inequality. The percentage in the case the Senator gave would be 3 per cent on the income, and not 5-a little less than 3.

than 3.

Mr. McLEAN. No.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes; the fixed tax is 2 per cent, and 8 per cent on 12 per cent is 0.96 of 1 per cent. That, added to the 2 per cent, is a little less than 3 per cent of the lady's income, in the illustration the Senator gave of the dividend of 20 per cent that ordinarily would have been paid.

Mr. McLEAN. If the dividend were reduced by 1 per cent, as the would have to be. I may be wrong, but I assume that a it would have to be. I may be wrong, but I assume that a dollar is 5 per cent of $20.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. It is 3 per cent of the dividend. Two per cent is the fixed tax that the corporation pays, and 8 per cent of the surplus could not be but 0.96 more.

Mr. McLEAN. But that is nearly 1 per cent.
Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Which makes 3 per cent of the income paid in taxes.

Mr. McLEAN. The Senator may be right about that. I have not given it much consideration, but my impression is that the Senator is wrong.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I am undoubtedly right. It is a little less than a 3 per cent tax on the income that otherwise would go to the party. Now, our view of the matter is that where a corporation is making these very large dividends, in a great many instances, these very large incomes are incident to the situation that confronts the country at the present time. I can illustrate my view of that by a letter that I wrote to some constituents of mine in the cottonseed oil and in the cotton manufacturing business who for the past two years have been making quite handsome dividends. I happen to have a little stock in the companies myself.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Georgia will pardon me-

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Let me finish, and then I will yield to the Senator. Their complaint was that up to the last few years they had been making but moderate dividends, and now as they were making quite good dividends they felt that it was hard to put an excess profits tax on them. My answer to them was very simple. I said: "The same condition that has given you an excess income has obliged the Government to have excess revenue, and you ought to be well satisfied, as we all ought to be, to contribute some of it." I understand that this is not the case everywhere, but where the capital of a corporation is producing more than 8 per cent I do think, in view of the present condition of the country and the number of organizations, some partnerships and some corporations, making vast profits, that 8 per cent on the surplus beyond 8 per cent is about as fair a way to reach the unusual prosperity incident to many of those institutions as could be adopted. Now, I yield to the Senator.

Mr. McLEAN. The illustration I stated was that of a person holding 50 shares of the character of stock to which I have referred. The income would be $1,000 instead of $2,000, and the tax would be $50; that is, if the dividend were reduced from 20 to 19 per cent-1 per cent-$50 would be the tax.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. What was the amount of stock held? Mr. McLEAN. The amount of stock was 50 shares in a corporation of a million dollars capital, paying 20 per cent. income in that case would be a thousand dollars and the tax

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The tax would be $30. The tax could not be more than that if the profit the company was making was 20 per cent. Two per cent would be the charge for the fixed income tax, and 8 per cent of the 12 per cent surplus, about 8 per cent, would be 0.96 of 1 per cent.
Mr. McLEAN. I still think that $50 is 5 per cent of $1,000.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Well, I have not figured the $50, but know that 8 per cent of 12 per cent is 0.96 of 1 per cent.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I do not expect to discuss is bill at length this afternoon. The hour is late, and I am this bill at length this afternoon. The hour is late, and I am informed that it is the purpose of the majority to hold an executive session in a short time. I should, however, like to take this opportunity of stating that this bill, like the act of September 8, 1916, has gone through the usual course of consideration in a secret Democratic caucus to which the public were not admitted. It was a usurpation of the legislative functions of the Senate by the majority. The year and nays were not published on the different questions involved. Hearings were held by subcommittees, on which the minority were not represented in any way, and were not even officially informed of the hearings or invited to participate in them. No opportunity was given to cross-examine the few people who appeared before these subcommittees, and the hearings were not even printed, as they should have been, currently from day to day, until the day after the bill had been reported to the Senate. The minority have been completely ignored and have had no opportunity to discuss with the majority the proper ways of raising revenue. Now the bill is reported to the Senate, and in the few days remaining of the session—the Congress expiring by limitation on March 4—it is obviously impossible for the minerity to assume any responsibility or entertain any feeling of responsibility for revenue legislation to meet the growing deficit of the Treasury.

Notwithstanding the fact that the revenue measure passed in the last Congress was declared to be amply sufficient for the requirements of the Government and to meet the deficit in the revenues, the Government is again confronted with a deficit and with a necessity of passing another bill to raise additional revenue. The bill in the last Congress was most fully discussed for many weeks, and I predicted and other members of the minority predicted just what has happened. We declared then, as the RECORD will show, that the then revenue bill would not meet the requirements of the Government; that the Treasury was practically be about in the comment of tically bankrupt, in the sense that the revenues did not balance the expenditures; that the deficit would grow; and that further taxes would be necessary. Notwithstanding the declaration made by the majority in the last Congress that the direct-tax law of that session would be amply sufficient, we are now con-fronted with another revenue bill imposing direct taxes, far more burdensome, in my opinion, than the taxes contained in any of the preceding measures of this character. I again make the prediction, and I make it with the greatest confidence, and I challenge contradiction, that this measure will fail as a revenue producer as the preceding ones have failed, and that the deficit will continue to grow until the deplorable mismanagement of the financial affairs of the country ceases.

The Republican minority in the Senate in the last Congress vigorously called attention to the fact that the revenue bills then under consideration would not be sufficient, and that for all practical purposes the Treasury was likely to continue in a bankrupt condition. To-day, Mr. President, there is a deficit of many million dollars disclosed in the daily reports of the Secretary of the Treasury. The deficit has gone on increasing, and again it is necessary to impose burdensome direct taxes, which will fall principally upon a section of the country.

The Republican minority, Mr. President, is not responsible for the extravagance which has brought about the deficit and, in my opinion, is not called upon to assume responsibility for revenue legislation to meet such a deficit. The minority will recommend that this bill be recommitted to the Finance Committee with instructions to reconsider the same and report, as soon as practicable, on a bill of sufficiently comprehensive character to safeguard American labor and industries, to provide sufficient revenue for the needs of the Government wisely and economically administered, to defray the expenses of necessary economically administered, to derray the expenses of necessary increases in the Army and Navy and for the extension of fortifications, and for other purposes of national defense and development, and to frame the bill along the lines of those fundamental principles which have guided the Congress in matters of revenue legislation, with few exceptions, since the First Congress of Washington's administration approved and adopted the first act. I quote-

For the support of the Government, for the discharge of the debts the United States, and the encouragement and protection of manu-of the United States, and the encouragement and protection of manufacturers.

We earnestly call the attention of the Finance Committee and of the Senate to the fact that absolutely no provision is being made in this revenue bill, nor was provision made in any of the preceding revenue bills since the Democratic Party has been in power, to conserve and protect adequately the industrial and commercial interests of the country when they shall become exposed to the industrial and commercial invasion of European nations when the war in Europe draws to a close. We hold that protection to American industries is now of greater importance than ever before in the history of the country because of these foreign countries.

I am opposed to this measure, Mr. President, because it violates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national taxation; it is unlates the established principles of national protects.

Encreaches the Federal Government upon the field of taxation interest or tak

American, unjust, discriminatory, and sectional. The encroachment by the Federal Government upon the field of taxation hitherto belonging exclusively to the States is already causing a vigorous protest.

I call attention in my remarks on the revenue bill in the last Congress in the following words to the inexpediency of having the Federal Government encroach upon the domain of State taxation:

"The States of the Union and the large municipalities therein all require large revenues for purposes not thought of a few years ago. Our municipalities are nearly all heavily in debt, and are in most cases restricted to a limited field of taxation. The municipal needs, however, are ever enlarging in a constantly increasing ratio, without any prospect of relief from debt or the securing of revenue to meet the demands necessary for projects in the interest of the health and well-being of the citizens. The States themselves and the cities therein are called upon to maintain elaborate boards of health, systems of sewage disposal, continually increasing requirements of educational and eleemosynary institutions, and, over and above all, to cite one instance of development to an extraordinary degree of magnitude in the last few years, the imperative demand for good roads has caused an expenditure running into a staggering amount of money in the aggregate from one end of the country to the other.

"Now the States are expressly excluded by the Constitution from levying duties or imposts, and are obliged to resort to the various well-known forms of State taxation of a direct character. The Federal Government, under the doctrines re-cently advanced that no taxes should be imposed upon articles of consumption and, apparently, that as little revenue as pos-sible should be collected from imports, encroaches upon the field of direct taxation belonging to the States and abandons a source of revenue from the customhouse to which the Government has the exclusive right. This seems to me illogical in principle and unfair in practice. The ultimate effect necessarily following is that the State revenues will be greatly limited, if not impoverished, and the outlook for many of our municipalities from a financial point of view is not very hopeful.'

Since that bill was under consideration, Mr. President, I know in my own State and in many other States the functions of State government have been enormously increased, and many millions of dollars of expenditure have been authorized. Pennsylvania we have the workmen's compensation bureau, the elaborate department of labor and and factory inspection, and the irresistible demands for good roads which, even since last summer, have almost doubled the appropriations required by the legislature of that great State. In my opinion the time is rapidly approaching when we will witness a revolt from Maine to California against this tendency of Congress to tax in-heritances and levy other forms of direct taxation to the depriva-tion and impoverishment of the great sovereign States with their growing needs and requirements.

I was greatly impressed with a notice which I saw in one of the Washington papers the other day on this point, and I will ask the Secretary to read it. Mr. STONE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. PENROSE. Yes.

Mr. STONE. I wish to ask the Senator if he has reached point where he will yield?

Mr. PENROSE. I should like to have this clipping read, and then I will yield to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

A TAXATION CONFERENCE.

For the sake of simplicity in administration, if not in the name of equity, a clear understanding should be reached between the States and the National Government as to the field of taxation that should be reserved to each governmental agency.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President— Mr. PENROSE. I yield to the Senator from Missourl. Mr. STONE. I thank the Senator.

DANISH WEST INDIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. STONE. From the Committee on Foreign Relations I report back without amendment the bill (H. R. 20755) to provide a temporary government for the West Indian Islands acquired by the United States from Denmark by the convention entered into between said countries on the 4th day of August, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 7th day of September, 1916, and for other purposes. I should like to take up the bill. I will ask the Senator from North Carolina if he will agree to lay the revenue bill aside.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from Missouri assures me he thinks it will take a very short time to pass this very important measure which ought to be acted upon. I will consent to temporarily lay the revenue bill aside. I will ask unanimous

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina? There being none, the Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. STONE. I ask that the bill I have just reported may be laid before the Senate, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Will the Senator from Missouri yield to Mr. RANSDELL. me to make a request for unanimous consent? It will take but

Mr. STONE. The Senator can make his request, but I am very anxious to have this bill considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. RANSDELL. I will not detain the Senator, but I wish to ask unanimous consent for the Senate to consider the flood-control bill to-night at 8 o'clock. We are getting close to the end of the session. If we can not get the bill under consideration soon there will be no chance to pass it at this Congress. It is a measure of the greatest interest to a great many people of the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. SIMMONS. I can not consent to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina object?

Mr. SIMMONS. I object.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. objection to the request of the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President—

Mr. STONE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill I have reported.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is there

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I assume that the bill is all right, but before the request for unanimous consent is granted I think it ought to be read to the Senate so that we may understand what is in the bill.

Mr. STONE. I am asking unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Before that is granted I think we should know what is in the bill.

Mr. STONE. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it emacted, etc., That all military, civil, and judicial powers necessary to govern the West Indian Islands acquired from Denmark shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct until Congress shall provide for the government of said islands.

SEC. 2. That on and after the passage of this act there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles coming into the United States or its possessions, from the West Indian Islands ceded to the United States by Denmark, the rates of duty and internal-revenue taxes which are required to be levied, collected, and paid upon like articles imported from foreign countries: Provided, That all articles the growth or product of, or manufactured in such islands from materials the growth or product of such islands or of the United States, or of both, or which do not contain foreign materials to the value of more than 20 per cent of their total value, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from such islands shall hereafter be admitted free of duty.

SEC. 3. That until Congress shall otherwise provide, all laws now imposing taxes in the West Indian Islands acquired from Denmark, including the customs laws and regulations, shall, in so far as compatible with the changed sovereignty, continue in effect, except that articles the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States shall be admitted therein free of duty: Provided further, That upon exportation of sugar to foreign countries or the shipment thereof to the United States or any of its possessions there shall be levied, collected, and paid thereon an export duty of 88 per ton of 2,000 pounds in lieu of any export tax now required by law.

SEC. 4. That the duties and taxes collected in pursuance of this act shall not be covered into the general fund of the Treasury of the United States, but shall be paid into the treasury of the said islands, to be used and expended for the government and benefit of said islands. SEC. 5. That the sum of $25,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid in the city of Washington to the diplomatic representative or other agent of His Majesty the King of Denmark duly authorized to receive said money, in full consideration of the cession of the Danish West Indian Islands to the United States made by the convention between the United States of America and His Majesty the King of Denmark entered into August 4, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 17th day of January, 1917.

SEC. 6. That the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated for the purpose of carrying this act into effect, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and to be applied under the direction of the President of the United States.

SEC. 7. That this act, with the exception of section 5, shall be in force and effect and become operative immediately upon the payment by the United States of said sum of $25,000,000. The fact and date of such payment shall thereupon be made public by a proclamation issued by the President and published in the said Danish West Indian Islands and in the United States. Section 5 shall be immediately available.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, before consenting to the present consideration of the bill I should like to get some information from the chairman of the committee, if I can. I should like to know what are the exact terms of the cession of these islands to the United States. If the Senator has a copy of the treaty will he allow to be read a statement as to the terms and how we acquired these islands as a part of the United States, and what is their status?

Mr. STONE. They belong to the United States by purchase.
Mr. UNDERWOOD. I know, but are they a part of our colonial possessions, a part of our territory, or what is the status of the islands as fixed by the treaty?
Mr. STONE. It is a possession of the United States, a territorial possession acquired by the United States by cession from the former sovereign, the King of Denmark. The entire title and right and sovereignty were transferred to the United States by the terms of the treaty for which the United States is to pay the sum of $25,000,000 within 90 days after the exchange of ratifications.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that portion of the treaty. have read the treaty, and I do not want to delay the bill, but I desire to get that information, and until I get the information will withhold my consent.

Mr. STONE. What is the exact point?
Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to find out whether these islands come to the United States with the status that Alaska came when we purchased it from Russia or whether they come to us with the status Porto Rico came to us under the treaty with

Mr. STONE. I should say it was more analogous to the cession from Russia to the United States of what is now the Territory of Alaska.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. There was a debate in the Senate a great many years ago concerning Florida, then recently acquired by the United States from Spain. Mr. Calhoun, who was discussing it, said: "The Senator from Massachusetts," referring ter, "has declared that it is a part of the United Mr. Webster, from his seat, said, "Never." Calhoun to Webster, States." Mr. Webster, from his seat, said, "Never." Calhoun said, "The Senator certainly said it belongs to the United States." Mr. Webster said, "That is a very different thing." The Danish Islands belong to the United States; they have been

There is no condition about statehood, no condition about territory, but the power is the power over Government property.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator from Massachusetts grasps

my point of view.

Mr. LODGE. Perhaps not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think he does. I want to know what is the status of the islands to-day under the cession. Are they a part of the territory of the United States, as Alaska was when we acquired it, and does the Constitution go there, or are they an insular possession, under the Porto Rican decision? Mr. LODGE. The Constitution does not go there unless it goes automatically.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is true; it either goes automatically or goes there by legislation. We can send it there by legislation or it can go there automatically by the terms of the treaty.

Mr. LODGE. The treaty gives the islands to us as our abso-

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If it is our absolute property-Mr. LODGE. Except such restrictions as are in the treaty which relate to Danish property rights and certain corporations.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If that is so, the guaranties of the Federal Constitution have already gone there.

Mr. LODGE. I did not say that, because that is confined to a territory

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to know the language of the treaty.

Mr. LODGE. This is not a territory, it is not-

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to know the conditions in the language of the treaty taking these islands over, where it places them, in so far as the Constitution of the United States is concerned.

Mr. LODGE. The relation is the same as in the treaty in relation to the Philippines and Porto Rico.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Can the Senator from Massachusetts refer me to the part of the treaty which defines the status of Mr. LODGE. The treaty of peace with Spain.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am talking about the Danish West India Islands. Do I understand the Senator to say that legally, so far as the Constitution of the United States is concerned, they occupy the status that Porto Rico does? Whatever status they do occupy is determined by a treaty. There is no other legislation or action. I do not want to delay the bill and ask that it go over until to-morrow, but-

Mr. LODGE. The treaty simply ceded the islands to us in consideration of $25,000,000. Of course, it makes certain provisions that inhabitants may remove therefrom at will.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does it make any provision about the inhabitants becoming citizens of the United States?

Mr. LODGE. None.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Will the Senator allow me? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield. Mr. BRANDEGEE. If it is a clear cession in consideration of $25,000,000 paid, and there is nothing said in this act about extending the guaranties of the Constitution to the islands, I should think it would be clear the guaranties of the Constitution did not extend under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. LODGE. The treaty provides that-

The civil rights and the political status of the inhabitants of the islands shall be determined by the Congress, subject to the stipulations contained in the present convention.

And there are no stipulations except these about certain property rights and certain corporations.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. There is a citizenship proposition.

Mr. STONE. There is a citizenship proposition in the treaty, if that is what the Senator is speaking about.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The point I had in mind, I will say to the Senator, is that this bill, possibly very properly, seeks to levy a tax on sugar coming from the Danish West India Islands into the United States for the support of those islands. That may be a proper handling of the question at this time, but as to whether it can be handled in that way, it seems to me, clearly depends upon the status of the islands. If they are a part of the United States, as is Alaska, clearly we can not pass a law that would fix a customs tax between this country If they occupy the status of the Philippine Islands and them. toward this country, I concede that under the Porto Rican decision you could pass such a law. Therefore I wished to obtain the information.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the restriction of the Constitution in regard to export duties relates wholly and solely to the States; it applies to nothing else. The language is as explicit as it possibly can be.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not sure about that.

Mr. LODGE. It is confined to the States explicitly. Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think, though, if the Senator would examine some of the decisions with relation to the District of Columbia he would find that we could not levy an export tax upon goods made in the District of Columbia and exported. The District of Columbia is not a State.

Mr. LODGE. These islands are not organized as a Territory; they are not a Territory; they are not recognized as such; and they are not a State.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Of course, outside of that, we can not levy a customs tax between a Territory to which the guaranties of the Federal Constitution apply and the territory of continental United States.

Mr. LODGE. The question of the Constitution extending automatically to those islands is, I think, an open question, but in the Philippines it was explicitly excepted, while in Porto Rico

It was not. Now, this export tax is made necessary by the fact that the only sources of revenue they have are imports, which come chiefly from the United States, and an export duty on We have obliged them to remove their import duties so far as we are concerned, and they would be left entirely without revenue if we did not continue the export duty. I do not understand that the Senator questions the expediency of it, and, as to the constitutional power, I do not think there is any doubt about

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not complaining of the course which has been adopted; it may be necessary to adopt such a course in the emergency which confronts us, but the question in my mind, and what I desired information about, was as to whether the committee having the bill in charge was prepared to state what was the status of these islands and as to whether or not we could, under the status fixed in the treaty, levy a customs tax between the islands and continental United States.

There is none levied by the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If I understood the reading of the bill correctly, there is a tax levied on all sugar going out of the Danish West India Islands to other countries,

There is an export tax on sugar. Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is a customs tax-Mr. STONE.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Between those islands and this country. I do not think there is any question that we can not levy a customs tax or an export tax between Hawaii and continental United States under the Constitution, because it is a part-

Mr. STONE. Hawaii is a Territory of the United States. Mr. UNDERWOOD. Because it is a Territory of the United States. Now, the question as to whether we can levy such a tax between the Danish West India Islands and continental United States is dependent entirely upon the status fixed for those islands in this treaty. That is the proposition that I am trying to get light on, as to what is their political status as defined in this treaty. Now, I am told that this treaty makes the citizens of the Danish West India Islands citizens of the United If that is true, and they are made citizens of the United States, they are entitled to all the guaranties of the Constitution of the United States; and if they are entitled to all the guaranties of the Constitution of the United States, because they live and reside in the Danish West India Islands, does not that bring the Danish West India Islands within the inhibition of the Constitution against levying export taxes or of levying customs taxes between the several States?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I would like to say to the Senator from Alabama that under the treaty the Danish citizens in those islands must renounce American citizenship, provided for in the treaty with Denmark, or they become ipso facto citizens of the United States. The treaty specifically says that "the civil rights and the political status of the inhabitants of the islands shall be determined by the Congress," subject only to the limitations of the treaty, which do not limit the question of citizenship.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That may save the question. hoped, Mr. President, that the committee had investigated this subject and could give us some direct light upon it. I recognize the importance of the bill passing at an early date; and even if the tax should be subsequently decided to be unconstitutional, that portion of the bill which seeks to pay for the islands, if we live up to our contract, of course, ought to become a law. The only question is that if we pass this bill and there is doubt as to the status of those islands, and there is doubt as to whether or not we can properly levy this tax, we may find the citizens of those islands and the government of the islands in a very embarrassed condition.

It was only my purpose to try to ascertain those facts in withholding consent for the immediate consideration of the bill. I do not, however, desire, after calling the attention of those in charge of the bill to the matter I had in mind, to delay the passage of the bill further

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Stone] for the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. STONE. I move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill as read and to insert in lieu thereof what I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri proposes a substitute for the pending bill, which will be read.

The Secretary. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

The Secretary. It is proposed to strike out all after the enerting clause and insert the following:

That in so far as the same may be compatible with the changed sovereignty, all powers exercised in the Danish West India Islands on and prior to the 17th day of January, A. D. 1917, by and under the sovereignty of the Government of Denmark, shall, until otherwise provided by the Congress, be exercised by the President of the United States. For the proper administration of the laws, rules, and regulations appertaining to said islands, until otherwise provided by the Congress, the President is authorized to appoint a governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, for the said Islands, and to appear the said of the said Islands, and the proper of the chief administrative officer of said islands, and such other administrative officers as the President may appoint as herein provided shall be subordinate to the governor and subject to his direction under such rules and regulations as the President may appoint as herein provided, That the President may assign an officer of the Army or Navy to serve as such governor and perform the duties appertaining to said order: President said appears of the said of the of said islands under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe.

SEC. 6. That for the purpose of taking over and occupying said islands and of carrying this act into effect and to meet any deficit in the revenues of the said islands resulting from the provisions of this act the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to be applied under the direction of the President of the United States.

SEC. 7. That this act shall be in force and effect and become operative from and after the date upon which the United States shall pay to Denmark the sum of $25,000,000, as stipulated in the convention between said countries signed at New York on the 4th day of August, 1916, and the fact and date of such payment shall be made public by a proclamation issued by the President, which proclamation shall be published in one or more newspapers printed and circulated in said West India Islands, and be incorporated in the rules and regulations prescribed by the President, as provided for in section 1 of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate adhere to its amendment to the bill, ask for a conference with the House of Representatives, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and Mr. STONE, Mr. HITCHCOCK, and Mr. Lodge were appointed as conferees on the part of the EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. O'GORMAN obtained the floor. Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President-

Mr. O'GORMAN. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina, Mr. SIMMONS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. I understand there are some nominations which it is desired to act upon.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

RECESS.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I will inquire of the Senator from Pennsylvania whether he desires to go on until 6 o'clock?
Mr. PENROSE. I do not think it is worth while.
Mr. SIMMONS. I move, then, that the Senate take a recess until 8 o'clock to-night.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Kirby
Lee, Md.
Martin, Va.
Myers
Overman
Penrose
Pittman Ashurst Bryan Chamberlain Reed Robinson Sheppard Sherman Thomas Thompson Vardaman Clapp Fletcher Simmons Smith, Ga. Smith, S. C.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I wish to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] on account of illnes

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is not present. The Secretary will call the roll of absentees.

The Secretary called the names of the absent Senators.

Mr. LEA of Tennessee entered the Chamber and answered to his name

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is not present.

Mr. SIMMONS. I move that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to notify absent Senators to attend the session of the Senate.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to inquire if the Sergeant at Arms can be instructed to arrest Senators and bring them here? The first question in on the motion I made, Mr. SIMMONS. if the Chair please.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina moves that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant at Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

Mr. Lane entered the Chamber and answered to his name. Mr. CLAPP. It seems to me it is due to the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] to state that he is dangerously ill, and has been so for some time. I think that ought to appear in the RECORD, if it has not already been stated.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I wish to state again that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] is absent on account of illness. He is confined to his room.

I am also advised that the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood] is quite indisposed. I trust these Senators will be excepted from the order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to excusing the Senators who have been named? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] on account of illness, and also the unavoidable absence of the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger].

Mr. ROBINSON. I was requested to announce the absence of the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] owing to illness. He has been absent from the Senate some two or three days, and his absence has been occasioned by illness, ask that he be excused from the order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the junior Senator from Delaware will be excused.

Mr. RANSDELL and Mr. HUGHES entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

Mr. VARDAMAN (at 8 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.). Mr. President, may I inquire the number of Senators who have re-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-nine Senators have responded to their names, the Chair is informed.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to make a report as to what he has done to execute the order

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina moves that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to report as to progress. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. Lewis and Mr. Wadsworth entered the Chamber and answered to their names

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I should like to inquire how many Senators have now answered to the roll call?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that 31

Senators have answered to their names.

Mr. Brandegee, Mr. Beckham, Mr. Pomerene, and Mr. Shafroth entered the Chamber and answered to their names. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant at Arms has made to the Senate a report, which will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, SERGEANT AT ARMS, February 20, 1917-8.25 p. m.

SERGEANT AT ARMS,
February 20, 1917—8.25 p. m.

The President of the Senate:

I beg to report on the following Senators:
Senator Lippitt is reported "not in."
Senator Lippitt is reported "not in."
Senator McCumber reported sick in bed.
Senator McLean reported as dining with Senator Warren's residence.
Senator Bankhead reported sick; gone to bed.
Senator Bank proported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Brant reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator C. D. Clark reported out.
Senator Newlands reported out.
Senator Newlands reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported as being on way to Senate.
Senator Sterling reported sick.
(8.35 p. m.) Senator Warren's residence reports not knowing where the Senator is dining.

Very truly, yours,

Charles P. Higgins,
By John T. Wayland,

CHARLES P. HIGGINS, By JOHN T. WAYLAND, Assistant Sergeant at Arms.

Mr. SIMMONS (at 8.37 o'clock p. m.). Mr. President, I move the following order:

Ordered, That the Sergeant at Arms be directed to use all necessary means to compel the attendance of absent Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina proposes the following order, which will be read

The Secretary read as follows:

Ordered, That the Sergeant at Arms be directed to use all necessary means to compel the attendance of absent Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the order submitted by the Senator from North Carolina. The order was agreed to,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the exception of those Senators excused by reason of illness the order will be executed as to other absent Senators at once.

Mr. Broussard entered the Chamber and answered to his

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina (at 8 o'clock and 39 minutes p. m.). I inquire how many Senators are now present?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that 36 Senators have answered to their names.

Mr. Townsend and Mr. Brady entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

After a little delay Mr. Husting, Mr. Colt, Mr. Catron, Mr. Johnson of Maine, and Mr. La Follette entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

and answered to their names.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina (at 9 o'clock and 51 minutes p. m.). Mr. President, how many have we now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-three.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I desire to say that my colleague [Mr. SWANSON] is just out of a very severe and lengthy spell of sickness, and he did not feel well enough to come to the Senate to-night. While he is not ill, after a day's work he did not feel equal to the task of coming to-night, and he was warned by his physician not to tax himself much

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from Virginia will be excepted from the order compelling other Senators, except those who are ill, to attend the session of the Senate.

At 9 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m. Mr. TILLMAN entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I wish to explain why I was not here when the Senate met. I have been hard at work all day on the naval appropriation bill and I feel very tired. come down here at night at no time unless notified. If those in charge of the revenue bill had notified me that they wanted me to stay, I would have been here; I would not have gone home at all.

Mr. SIMMONS. I wish to say to the Senator from South Carolina that I announced this morning that I would ask the Senate to consider the bill to-night.

Mr. TILLMAN. I was upstairs and did not hear it.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will see that the Senator is notified hereafter.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The Senator from South Carolina not being well, I think he should be excused from attending the session to-night.

Mr. TILLMAN. The Senator from South Carolina was notified over the telephone by the Sergeant at Arms that he was wanted in the Senate, and he asked me if I was sick. I told him I was very tired and would be glad to stay away, but that I would come if necessary to make a quorum and carry on the business of the Senate. They sent a taxicab after me with a young boy from Georgia acting as Assistant Sergeant at Arms, and we had a very pleasant ride down. Having come I will stay here until morning if it be necessary to break up this filibuster.

Mr. SMOOT. There is not any filibuster.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I will say that the Senator from South Carolina should not have been notified at all to come. He should be excused from attending all night sessions if he feels that to do so would tax his strength. I am very sure that no Member of the Senate would have the Senator from South Carolina imperil his health by attending these night sessions.

Mr. WATSON, Mr. CURTIS, Mr. CUMMINS, Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey, Mr. STONE, and Mr. Hollis entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

Mr. STONE. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Hollis] and I were brought by the Sergeant at Arms to the Senate Chamber. I wish to apologize to the Senate for my absence. The Senate did right in using its authority to compel my attendance.

Mr. PENROSE. I move that the Senator's apology be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is out of order.

Mr. STONE. I hope the example will be followed in future.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty Senators have answered their names. A quorum of the Senate is present.
Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that the unfinished business be proto their names.

ceeded with.

THE REVENUE.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide increased revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations of the Army and Navy and the extensions of fortifications, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHERMAN addressed the Senate. After having spoken for some time,

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VARDAMAN in the chair).
Will the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. SHERMAN. I yield for a question. I am extremely desirous not to lose the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will not lose the

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. A parliamentary inquiry. The Senate is now operating under a call of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And the call has disclosed a quorum?

The PRESIDING OFFICER It has.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Then I move that all further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois will proceed.

Mr. SHERMAN resumed his speech, and after having spoken for some time

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Husting in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from South

Mr. SHERMAN. I do, for a question. Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator yield for a motion to take

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

RECESS.

Mr. TILLMAN. I move that the Senate take a recess until 10.30 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock and 47 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 21, 1917, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 20, 1917.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.

William B. Colver, of St. Paul, Minn., to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission, for a term expiring September 25, 1920, vice Edward N. Hurley, resigned.

John Franklin Fort, of New Jersey, to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission, for a term expiring September 25,

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

D. C. Westenhaver, of Cleveland, Ohio, to be United States district judge, Northern District of Ohio, vice John H. Clarke, appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

CAVALRY ARM.

First Lieut. Frederick T. Dickman, Seventh Cavalry, to be captain from July 7, 1916, vice Capt. Lawrence S. Carson, Twelfth Cavalry, detailed in the Quartermaster Corps.

First Lieut. Adna R. Chaffee, Cavalry, unassigned, to be captain from July 7, 1916, vice Capt. George F. Bailey, Second Cavalry, detailed in the Quartermaster Corps.

First Lieut. George W. De Armond, Fifteenth Cavalry, to be captain from July 7, 1916, vice Capt. William C. Gardenhire, Tenth Cavalry, detailed in the Quartermaster Corps.

First Lieut. John G. Quekemeyer, Seventh Cavalry, to be captain from July 10, 1916, vice Capt. Alfred E. Kennington, Tenth Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Frank M. Andrews, Second Cavalry, to be captain from July 15, 1916, vice Capt. Herman A. Sievert, Seventh Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Joseph C. King, Cavalry, unassigned, to be captain from July 17, 1916, vice Capt. Christian Briand, Twelfth Cavalry, who died July 16, 1916.

First Lieut. George L. Converse, jr., Fourth Cavalry, to be captain from July 21, 1916, vice Capt. Walter S. Grant, Third Cavalry, detailed in the Signal Corps.

First Lieut. Donald A. Robinson, Fifteenth Cavalry, to be captain from August 21, 1916, vice Capt. Thomas F. Ryan, Thirteenth Cavairy, retired from active service August 20, 1916. First Lieut. Bruce L. Burch, Fifteenth Cavairy, to be captain from August 27, 1916, vice Capt. George E. Mitchell, Sixth Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut, Edgar M. Whiting, Fourth Cavalry, to be captain from September 6, 1916, vice Capt. Pierce A. Murphy, First Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Edward G. Elliott, Cavalry, unassigned, to be captain from September 13, 1916, vice Capt. Frederick T. Arnold, unassigned, promoted.

First Lieut. Wade H. Westmoreland, Eleventh Cavalry, to be captain from September 14, 1916, vice Capt. Leonard L. Deitrick, Seventh Cavalry, detailed in the Quartermaster Corps.

First Lieut Guy H. Wyman, Eighth Cavalry, to be captain from September 21, 1916, vice Capt. William S. Valentine, Tenth Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Verne R. Bell, Seventh Cavalry, to be captain from September 28, 1916, vice Capt. Thomas B. Esty, unassigned, retired from active service September 27, 1916.

First Lieut. Henry W. Baird, Ninth Cavalry, to be captain from October 6, 1916, vice Capt. Aubrey Lippincott, Fourth Cavalry, detailed in the Signal Corps.

alry, detailed in the Signal Corps.

First Lieut. Alexander H. Jones, Cavalry, unassigned, to be captain from November 15, 1916, vice Capt. Alexander B. Coxe, Second Cavalry, detailed in the General Staff Corps.

First Lieut. Charles L. Stevenson, Fourteenth Cavalry, to be captain from November 21, 1916, vice Capt. William L. Lowe, Tenth Cavalry, retired from active service November 20, 1916.

First Lieut. Frank K. Chapin, Seventh Cavalry, to be captain from December 3, 1916, vice Capt. Ralph Talbot, jr., Fifteenth Cavalry, detailed to the Quartermaster Corps:

First Lieut. Henry L. Watson, Seventeenth Cavalry, to be captain from December 25, 1916, vice Capt. James D. Tilford, unassigned, placed on detached officers' list.

unassigned, placed on detached officers' list.

First Lieut. Murray B. Rush, Cavalry, detached officers' list, to be captain from January 16, 1917, vice Capt. Samuel Van Leer, Seventh Cavalry, who resigned January 15, 1917.

First Lieut. Augustine W. Robins, Twelfth Cavalry, to be captain from January 23, 1917, vice Capt. Kyle Rucker, Fourteenth Cavalry, who resigned January 22, 1917.

Second Lieut. Daniel A. Connor, Seventeenth Cavalry, to be first lieutenant from November 2, 1916, vice First Lieut. Hugh

S. Johnson, First Cavalry, promoted.

PROVISIONAL APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE ARMY.

Second Lieut. Leander R. Hathaway, Sixteenth Cavalry, to be second lieutenant of Infantry, with rank from November 30, Second Lieut. Athael B. Ellis, Sixth Infantry, to be second lieutenant of Cavalry, with rank from November 30, 1916.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Capt. Harry S. Knapp to be a rear admiral in the Navy from the 13th day of August, 1916.

Capt. William L. Rodgers to be a rear admiral in the Navy from the 29th day of August, 1916.

Commnder Louis R. de Steiguer to be a captain in the Navy from the 10th day of August, 1916.

The following-named commanders to be captains in the Navy from the 29th day of August, 1916:

Louis A. Kaiser, William C. Cole, Carl T. Vogelgesang, Charles B. McVay, jr., Julian L. Latimer, and De Witt Blamer.

Commander John K. Robison to be a captain in the Navy from the 10th day of October, 1916.

Commander Henry H. Hough to be a captain in the Navy from the 1st day of January, 1917.

Lieut. Commander Earl P. Jessop to be a commander in the Navy from the 10th day of August, 1916.

The following-named lieutenant commanders to be commanders in the Navy from the 29th day of August, 1916:

Lyman A. Cotten, William T. Tarrant, Yancey S. Williams, Charles P. Nelson, Victor A. Kimberly, Claude C. Bloch, Edward C. Kalbfus,

Cyrus W. Cole, and John W. Greenslade.
Lieut. Commander Harry L. Brinser to be a commander in the Navy from the 30th day of September, 1916.
Lieut. Commander James H. Tomb to be a commander in the avy from the 1st day of January, 1917. The following-named lieutenants to be lieutenant commanders in the Navy from the 29th day of August, 1916:

William Ancrum, Benjamin K. Johnson, Joseph V. Ogan, Albert T. Church, Logan Cresap, John N. Ferguson, Louis C. Farley, Arthur C. Stott William S. McClintic, Byron McCandless Roscoe C. MacFall, and Robert L. Irvine.

The following-named lieutenants (junior grade) to be lieutenants in the Navy from the 29th day of August, 1916:

Riley F. McConnell, and Edmund D. Almy. Boatswain Dallas Wait to be an ensign in the Navy from the 9th day of February, 1917.

Capt. Seth Williams, assistant quartermaster, to be an assistant quartermaster in the Marine Corps, with the rank of major, from the 29th of August, 1916.

The following-named first lieutenants to be captains in the Marine Corps from the 29th day of August, 1916: John L. Mayer, and Benjamin A. Moeller.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Tuesday, February 20, 1917.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We bless Thee, our Father in Heaven, for that quality of soul which in times of stress or peril lifts men above the sordid and makes them heroes. Sanctify the proceedings of the hour to the public weal and help us to realize that we must work while it is yet day for the night cometh when no man can work; that we may go forward with patriotic zeal and unanimity of purpose as servants of the people. And all praise be Thine. In His Name, amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

Senate concurrent resolution 32.

Resolved by the Senate concurrent resolution 32.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the expenses incurred by the committee appointed by the Vice President and the committee appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives in arranging for and attending the funeral of the late Admiral George Dewey, in the Rotunda of the Capitol at Washington, D. C., January 20, 1917, be paid in equal proportion from the contingent funds of the Senate and House of Representatives, upon vouchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and the Committee on Accounts of the House of Representatives.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 8252. An act to authorize the change of name of the steamer

Charles L. Hutchinson to Fayette Brown; and

S. 8228. An act authorizing the commissioners of the Red River bridge district to construct a bridge across the Red River at or near Index, Tex.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; had requested a conference with the House of Representatives; and had appointed Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Smoot as the conferees on the part of the Senate:

H. R. 20451. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said

H. R. 20496. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War and to widows of such soldiers and sailors.

The message also announced that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On February 17, 1917:

S. 5082. An act adding certain lands to the Missoula National Forest, Mont.;

S. 5632. An act for the relief of Aquila Nebeker;

S. 6595. An act to reimburse William Blair for losses and damages sustained by him by the negligent dipping of his cattle by the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture;

H. R. 455. An act to define the rights and privileges of the trustees of municipally owned interstate railways and construing the act to regulate commerce with reference thereto;

H. R. 11288. An act for the relief of S. S. Yoder; H. R. 8669. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the lease of certain land in Stanley County, S. Dak., for a buffalo pasture; and

H. R. 17055. An act providing when patents shall issue to the purchaser or heirs on certain lands in the State of Oregon.

On February 19, 1917:

H. R. 10697. An act for the relief of S. Spencer Carr;

H. R. 14074. An act granting the consent of Congress to the village of Fox Lake, in the County of Lake, State of Illinois, to construct a bridge across both arms of the Fox River where connects Pistakee Lake and Nippersink Lake, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in the county of Lake, State of

H. R. 17602. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county commissioners of Polk County, Minn., and Grand Forks County, N. Dak., to construct a bridge across Red River of the North on the boundary line between said States; H. R. 18550. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Montgomery, in the State of Tennessee, to construct a bridge across the Cumberland River;

H. R. 18551. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Montgomery, in the State of Tennessee, to construct a bridge across the Cumberland River;

H. R. 18725. An act granting the consent of Congress to Kratka Township, Pennington County, Minn., to construct a bridge across Red Lake River; and

H. R. 20574. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county commissioners of Decatur County, Ga., to reconstruct a bridge across the Flint River at Bainbridge, Ga.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee as indicated below:

S. 8252. An act to authorize the change of name of the steamer Charles L. Hutchinson to Fayette Brown; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

AMENDMENT OF THE GENERAL DAM ACT.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I would like the Speaker to lay before the House Senate bill 3331 and have the House further insist on its amendment and grant a further conference with the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3331) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters," approved June 21, 1906, as amended by the act approved June 23, 1910, and to provide for the improvement and development of waterways for the uses of interstate and foreign commerce.

Mr. ADAMSON. I ask unanimous consent that the House further insist on its amendment and grant a further conference asked for; and I would like to state in a minute or two to the House the reason why I have concluded to ask that a further conference be granted.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, do I understand the conferees have now concluded that they can agree?

Mr. ADAMSON. I stated that if the House would indulge me a minute or two I would state the reasons why I have concluded to ask the House to grant a further conference. If the gentleman will allow me to make that statement, I think he will be satisfied.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection. Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, as the House knows, the House made but one amendment to the Senate bill, which was a substitute.

The conferees met and took the substitute bill as the basis of the conference, we stating to the conferees that the House insisted on retaining the form as well as the substance. We found in three consecutive meetings, in which we went over the entire subject, that the Senate had about four objections to our substitute, on which they insisted with more or less determination. After three meetings, failing to agree, we set another meeting for the 22d of November. The House con-ferees came here, but the Senate conferees did not appear. One, we heard, was sick at home and another had a celebration on hand, and having accounted for two we did not inquire about the third. We adjourned the Joint Subcommittee on Transportation for two days for the purpose of enabling the House conferees to attend that conference. We attended, and the other side did not.

Nothing further was said about a conference until some time in January, when the Senate conference and some time in January, when the Senate conferees asked for a meeting. We replied, "If you are ready to yield anything, we will have another meeting; if not, there is no use in wasting time on this, because the House insists on its amendment, and we will not betray the House." Finally, when it looked hopeless, we did meet and declared a general disagreement and reported it to the House. At that time an agreement appeared hopeless, because no concessions were in sight.

Since that time, however, conferences have been going on among members of the House and Senate conferees. Now, whether or not they are prepared to make some concessions, and if so how far, I do not know; but I am perfectly willing to go back and try, assuring the House that the rights of the House shall be protected.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that the House further insist on the amendments of the House and consent to a further conference requested by the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, this whole matter has been treated, up to within a recent period, wholly as a nonpartisan proposition. The newspapers state that some very distinguished gentlemen on the Democratic side of the House and of the Senate have been called into conference with the President, to which, of course, I take no exception. No one on this side of the House has been consulted in reference to any such Now, I do not know whether it is the intention

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit

Mr. MANN. In just a moment. I do not know whether or not it is the intention or expectation that the President-to use the term without offense, or meaning to be offensive at all-is to force the Democratic side of the House and the Senate into some compromise, leaving gentlemen on the Republican side who have been interested in the matter entirely out of consideration. Heretofore it has been treated only as a nonpartisan proposition. It seems to me that it ought to continue to be.

Now, I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I simply desire to say this, which will be borne out by gentlemen on the Republican side: There have been a number of informal conferences between various gentlemen interested in this legislation, with the idea of seeing if a common basis could be found on which the Senate and the House might agree about legislation. Those negotiations have gone through various stages without anything final having been agreed upon. Every step of them-and I say that advisedly—has been brought to the knowledge of gentlemen on the Republican side of the House. There has been no intention on the part of anybody to undertake to take the House or any part of the House by surprise, and I am quite sure that nothing will be done, from the understanding that I have had with the gentle man from Georgia, which will take anybody by surprise; but that prior to any attempt at a final agreement there will be sufficient consultation to apprize everybody of the situation and to reserve to everybody his full rights in the matter.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, of course, I do not know what conferences have taken place involving gentlemen on this side of the House. I have taken a rather active part in connection with this dam legislation from the beginning. I have had no consultations with anybody in reference to the matter—

Mr. SHERLEY. Of course, the gentleman has not—
Mr. MANN. And I have not heard of any.
Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lex-Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Len-moot] has had, and it was my understanding that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] was cognizant of what was going on. There was no secrecy about it. The gentleman from Wiscon-

Mr. ADAMSON. If all gentlemen will yield to me for a minute. I think I can clear up the situation.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Len-ROOT) and myself, undertaking informally to carry out what we believed to be the views of men on both sides of the House, have met a number of times. I then met informally a number of times with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], and the result of all those meetings has been conveyed in its entirety to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot], and I think he will bear witness to the accuracy of that statement.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Adamson] yield to me to allow me to ask a question of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY]?

I will do that, although I think I can Mr. ADAMSON. straighten this out.

One of these bills relates entirely to water Mr. MONDELL. powers on the public lands.

Mr. ADAMSON. This has nothing to do with that. Mr. MONDELL. I want to ask the gentleman from Kentucky whether anyone from a public-land State, on either side of the House, has been present in these conferences to which he refers?

Mr. SHERLEY. The conferences have dealt with the bill that relates to navigable waters, and not with the public lands. There were present at a number of conferences, and there have been kept informed, gentlemen who do come from public-land States, and are familiar with the legislation of the House on that particular phase of the matter.

Mr. MONDELL. I have inquired of a number of gentlemen from the public-land States who are tremendously interested, because the rights of their constituents are affected, and have asked them if they knew anything about these conferences, and they have all of them told me that they did not.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I should like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question.

Mr. ADAMSON. If gentlemen will yield to me, I think I can

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Esch] is the ranking Republican member on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. Has he been consulted in these conferences?

Mr. SHERLEY. I have not talked with Mr. Esch, I will say to the gentleman-

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I should like to ask one more question.

Mr. SHERLEY, All right. Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. The Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, of which I happen to be an humble member, has charge of some legislation of this character. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cooper] is the ranking Republican member of that committee. Has he been consulted?

Mr. SHERLEY. I have not talked recently with Mr. Cooper. Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Now, one further question.

Mr. SHERLEY. Just wait a moment. I do not want to answer questions with an implication in them-

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. The gentleman does not need to.

He has plenty of time.

Mr. SHERLEY. All of these matters have been informal conferences, without any desire to take anybody by surprise, but simply with the desire, if possible, to adjust matters. On a bill of this kind it is impossible to talk with 20 people about every stage of it, when it is under informal discussion; but it was my understanding that the Republican Members were advised, and certainly the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] has been in full touch with the situation, and he will bear witness to the fact that there has been nothing done with the idea of having one side of the House alone control the matter.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. One further question. Does the gentleman think consulting with the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] is a consultation with the Republican side of the

Mr. SHERLEY. Oh, no; but I think it is a consultation with one of the best Republicans in the House.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. There is no question about that. would like to ask a further question of the gentleman. As I understood him to state a moment ago, the bill pending relates to navigable streams of the United States?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes. Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] is the ranking Republican member of the Committee on the Public Lands?

Mr. SHERLEY.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Which committee, the gentleman intimated, was a committee that naturally would not have particular charge of this class of legislation. Does the gentleman think it is a consultation with the Republican Members who ought to be consulted on a matter of this kind, to consult with a gentleman who is on a committee that has nothing to do with the subject, and to leave out gentlemen Members who do have to do with it?

Mr. SHERLEY. Oh, well, there was no intention-

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I do not think there was any consultation at all except with one man.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman can think what he pleases. I am not required to consult him or any other particular man.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Nobody cares to have the gentleman consult me, but when the gentleman speaks of consulting the Republican side of the House, the statement he has made does not bear out the facts.

Mr. SHERLEY. I am willing to submit whether it does or

Mr. ADAMSON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MANN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON ]

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not think all this has much to do with the case. The conferences that have been had with my knowledge have been directed entirely to finding out whether the Senate would yield anything or not. That is all. There was no partisanship. There has never been any on our There was no partisanship. There has never been any on our committee. We respect Mr. Esch, the ranking Republican on that committee, as much as any Member, and this morning we reported out a very important bill in his name because we like him and there is no partisanship in it. As to consultations, they have been directed to two points. The two gentlemen with whom I have talked about them are the two men who have stood for the two propositions. It seems that the insurmountable difficulties were the question of a charge, which the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] was the author of, and the question whether we should remit the matter to the Secretary of War, which proposition the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] has always opposed. We brought in, in his name, the first general dam bill. We had a subcommittee of which he was chairman and I was a member of it. When that law was amended in 1910 we both fought the amendment because we thought the original bill was good enough. I would not allow anything done on that question without conferring with him; so while we conferred with Mr. Sherley and Mr. Lenroot about the tax I have conferred with Mr. Mann, the only other Republican beside Mr. Esch, with whom I have conferred about it. I want the House to understand now that I do not want any partisan bill here. I have conferred with Senator Nelson as much and as often as with Senator BANKHEAD. Gentlemen will understand that we think we have more sense, when we get into conference, than to bring back a conference report that the House would not adopt. I have not talked to the President any more than I did to the Republican President on commerce matters when the Republicans were in power. And after we get into conference I expect to confer with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] as much as with anybody else.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, of course, I take no exception to the gentleman from Georgia talking with the President. I think it is a perfectly proper thing to do. When this bill went to conference in the first instance, without any vote in the House on any of the propositions except an informal unanimous-consent vote on the disagreement, there was an understanding that the conferees would not agree to certain Senate propositions without giving the House a chance to determine what its attitude would be on those propositions.

Now the conferees reported a disagreement. It has been intimated by certain distinguished gentlemen, not Members of this House but Members of another great legislative body, that the very purpose of reporting a disagreement and getting a new conference was to get rid of the obligations which were made when the bill first went to conference

I attribute to the gentleman from Georgia the utmost of good faith. I do not question that for one moment, but admitting that entirely, I know what the influence of the Executive at times may be. The House and the Senate have been diametrically opposed on certain propositions relating to water-power The gentleman from Georgia said the Senate is willing to yield something; of course they are willing to yield something, but what we want to know really is whether they yield a pin and we give away the whole thing. I do not think that is the disposition of the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. GARNER. May I ask the gentleman from Georgia a

Mr. ADAMSON. I know what the gentleman from Illinois refers to about the purpose of the disagreement. That statement was a pure piece of romance. The disagreement was made because it appeared absolutely hopeless to get an agreement, and since the disagreement the Senate has indicated a disposition to make concessions. If they do not make substantial concessions, they will get no agreement from me.

have betrayed the House.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Georgia never has betrayed the House, but the gentleman's attitude and the attitude of the other House conferees on this bill has not been in conformity with the attitude of the House as expressed on several occasions. have no desire, so far as I am concerned, to change conferees. I have the utmost faith in the conferees, but their personal opinion is not the same as the opinion expressed by the House heretofore.

Mr. ADAMSON. The gentleman refers to the charge question?

I refer to the whole question. Mr. MANN.

Mr. MANN. I refer to the whole question.
Mr. GARNER. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. ADAMSON. Yes.
Mr. GARNER. Does the gentleman from Georgia go into the conference still considering the agreement made with the House heretofore as still in force and that it still holds?

Mr. ADAMSON. I will say that unless we go in with some latitude to talk, propose, and discuss things it is of no use to go into conference.

Mr. GARNER. There is no disposition to deprive the conferees of talking, hearing, and discussing every item.

Mr. ADAMSON. I have no disposition to bring in any report not in conformity with the wishes of the House.

Mr. GARNER. The gentleman will remember that we had a distinct understanding as to the views of the House; does the gentleman still believe that that is the view of the House?

Mr. ADAMSON. My understanding is that the Senate conferees propose to agree to the proposition which the gentleman has in mind.

Mr. GARNER. And the gentleman will give us a chance to vote on that?

Mr. ADAMSON. I shall not give away the amendment without the consent of the House.

Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann]. There has never been any general dam legislation or general bridge legislation that has not provided that in the erection of each bridge, even a highway bridge over a navigable stream, the consent of Congress by a specific bill for that particular project must be obtained. There has never been any general dam legislation that has not provided for the same condition. The House amendment to this bill provided that a special bill authorizing a dam shall be passed in each case. The House has not consented to yield to the contention of the Senate as provided in the Senate bill that only the Secretary of War shall be consulted. There is no part of our bill that I have stood for more firmly in conference and out than that we shall pass no general dam legislation that authorizes the Secretary of War to authorize these water-power dams to be constructed without the consent of Congress in each case. I contend that a special act in each and every case shall be passed by the Congress. There are 435 Members of this House to be consulted on each project, and with scrutiny of the 435 Members on each bill there is going to be no joker dam bills that will get through here. impugning the motives or the wisdom, even by implication, of the present Secretary of War, or any Secretary of War in the past or in the future, but the office of Secretary of War is a political office. Sometimes the personnel changes two or three times during one administration. Therefore, I think it exceedingly important that Congress should retain jurisdiction on each project. As far as I am concerned, unless I am instructed by this House to yield on that particular feature of the House amendment to the Senate bill, there will be no yielding done on my part, and any insinuation that I am not in harmony with the action of the House is uncalled for and unwarranted by any action or any utterance of mine that has fallen from my lips in committee or in the House.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

What is the parliamentary status?

The SPEAKER. The parliamentary status is that this colloquy has been going on for 15 or 20 minutes, with nothing before the House

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I call for the regular order. Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not think the gentleman from Illinois insinuated-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama demands the regular order.

Mr. ADAMSON. I would be glad to have the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] say a word. Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot] have five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Wisconsin may proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the Chair to recognize me for the purpose of making an objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia or to reserve an objection. I would be glad to have the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenboot] proceed for five minutes, but I want an opportunity to make an inquiry of the gentleman from Georgia

The SPEAKER. The trouble is that the regular order has been demanded by a Member of the House.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the demand for the regular order and reserve the right to object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri that the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenkoot] have five minutes?

Mr. ADAMSON. Will not the gentleman permit me to conclude the remarks I was making about the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann]? I was going to say that I do not think the gentleman

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia has not the floor.

Mr. ADAMSON. I understood the gentleman from Wisconsin to consent

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin has five minutes only, and the House has the rest.

Mr. ADAMSON. Will not the gentleman yield me just a moment?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the gentleman for half a minute.
Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois
[Mr. Mann] refers to the amendment about charging, which I always have opposed, because I do not believe it would bring money, but the House wants it, and I am the House's lawyer, and I am for it as long as the House wants it.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I would like to state just exactly the situation as it exists, as I understand it. Something to make a statement in view of what has just been said by the like a month ago I received a letter from Senator Bankhead asking me if I would join in an informal conference with the ing me if I would join in an informat conference with the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Sherley, the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Rainey, the gentleman from Illinois, Dr. Foster, and the gentleman from Oklahoma, Mr. Ferris, with a view of discussing this dam legislation. I readily agreed to it, as I am always ready to informally confer with any Member of the House upon any matter of important legislation. We did meet, and nothing came of that meeting. We found ourselves just as far apart as the House and the Senate are apart upon the bill. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Shekley] afterwards asked me whether I would sit down with him and go over the House bill and the Senate bill, with a view of seeing what we individually, representing no one but ourselves, might be willing to agree to. We did that, and we drafted or redrafted a bill that contains every provision that is contained in the bill as it passed the House and some others. I understand from Mr. SHERLEY that he presented that to Senator BANKHEAD, and that they have come back with a proposition to him that contains substantially the bill as passed by the Senate. So the fact is that these informal conferences up to this point have accomplished nothing and have gotten nowhere, and they amount to nothing further than any Member of the House on either side of the aisle is justified in making with anybody

With reference to the conferences, I did report the matter to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] in a general way, but as nothing was being accomplished I did not go into detail with him, and nothing has been accomplished up to this time. That explains the situation as it exists; but I want to say further that before this bill went to conference in the House last year several gentlemen had an informal understanding with the chairman of the committee, Judge ADAMSON, among them the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Mann, the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Sherley, the gentleman from Illinois, Dr. Foster, and myself. Those I now recollect; I think there may have been The informal agreement reached was this: That, in view of the attitude of the House, a conference agreement would not be reached without its being submitted to at least that number of gentlemen and found satisfactory to them, upon the understanding that this group of men represented the views of the House in a general way. I do not understand that the motion that the gentleman from Georgia now makes is made for the purpose of avoiding that informal understanding, but that the gentleman agrees to keep it just the same as if no disagreement had been reached.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not think the conferees would have any disposition to bring in any report contrary to the will of the House

Mr. LENROOT. That is a little different proposition from the one I stated. The gentleman's informal agreement was that

Mr. ADAMSON. It was stated in the House that the conferees would observe the wish of the House in its conference.

Mr. LENROOT. No; I sincerely hope the gentleman— Mr. GARNER. That is exactly what I suggest. That the informal understanding had should be adhered to.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. LENROOT. I can not yield. This is too important a matter.

Mr. ADAMSON. I thought we agreed about it.
Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] made exactly the agreement I stated, and I certainly do not expect by reporting a disagreement and then asking for a new conference that the gentleman from Georgia thinks he is going to avoid that agreement that he made informally.

Mr. ADAMSON. The purpose of the disagreement was to get the Senate to agree, not the House. We have no idea in the world of betraying the interest of the House.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama demands the

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Will the gentleman withdraw that

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I am willing to have the gentleman have five minutes, and then I shall make my demand for the regular order.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. I renew my request. The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

ferees reported back to the House that they were unable to agree. The House accepted that report and discharged the conferees. This morning, in the closing hours of this session, we are asked to again report conferees to consider the Adamson bill and the Shields bill. I think, Mr. Speaker, it is very unwise, in the congested condition that we find the calendar, to again have conferees appointed to consider this matter at this late hour. It is a proposition so important that we can not do it justice at a time like this, and I trust that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Adamson] will withdraw his request. It is farcical to attempt to whip into shape a bill of this kind at this late hour.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. No; I can not. Mr. Speaker, there are three or four distinct propositions that every water-power bill must contain if it is going to protect the rights of the people.

ESSENTIAL FEATURES OF A SAFE PUBLIC WATER-POWER BILL.

First. There is the recapture clause providing for a safe and effective process by which the Government for the protection of the public interest may recover its valuable water-power property after the expiration of the lease to the private corpora-

Second. There is the feature of public regulation of rates and use to protect the public against extortionate power and lighting

Third. There is the preferential provision giving to a public corporation, such as the State, a municipality, or Federal institution, preference as lessee over a commercial corporation in competitive application for a lease:

Fourth. There is the section reserving the right of the United States by act of Congress to amend or repeal the act to meet the public interest and change of national conditions.

Fifth. But of far less import than the above is the provision for a public charge for the use of the power in the form of a public rental.

The great and essential provisions for the protection of the public in its vast water-power properties are the four first named, namely, recapture, rate regulation, public preference, and repeal.

I maintain that the idea that we must make a charge is the least of these, and I have expected from the time this legislation was framed and brought in, in the way it has been, that the Senate would yield on the question of charge. Now, if the Members of the House will bear with me for just this one statement, I will ask them in all candor, what does it amount to, what difference does it make to the Hydroelectric Trust and I speak without any disrespect of that organization, because it is a business that is monopolistic in its very tendencies, and you can not stop it—if we are going to get the best results, what difference does it make what charge you make upon a monopoly when that monopoly can charge it back on the public that will use the current? Now, that is it in a nutshell, and any scheme that attempts to make this House believe that because the Senate is yielding this point is deceiving the House and obscuring the principal features of the bill. Let us not be led astray on this proposition of charge. Why, gentlemen—

Mr. ADAMSON. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. No; I want to complete this statement and then I will. One of the leading water-power advocates in this country was in conversation with me one day, and I said, "Mr. —, why do you put so much force and strength upon the proposition of charge?" "Why," he said, "that is the only part of this bill that the public understands, and that is why I am harping on it." Now, the public does understand the Hydroelectric Trust will pay something into the National Treasury, and for that reason it appeals to and appeases them, but we can see that a charge amounts to nothing. It is only taking money out of one pocket and putting it in another.

PRACTICAL EFFECT OF A PUBLIC RENTAL CHARGE.

Any layman can see the practical effect of a public rental charge for the use of the water power. It is simply one of the fixed charges, like interest and taxes, which must be met by an increase of rates to yield a return upon the capital invested.

Any public-utility commission, whether State or Federal, would allow the lessee company to increase its rates to meet this extra fixed charge. Otherwise the company might be shorn of sufficient earning power to warrant its existence as a business enterprise. If the margin of profits which the State or Federal public-utility commission, or War Department, as the case might be, decided was a reasonable return for the invested capital was, say, 8 per cent, as some State commissions have ruled, the rate charged by the lessee company for power and lighting would be increased by the public commission to the Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, this bill went to conference over six months ago, and only a few days ago the conpublic rental charge plus the usual operating and fixed charges.

In other words, every dollar of extra cost represented by the public rental charge paid to the Government is an item of cost of operation and maintenance—an item of the cost of production—for which the public user must pay in additional rates. There is no escape from this proposition. It is elemental. The public rental charge, in the last analysis, is simply a method of causing the purchasers of hydroelectric power and light, the local consumers, to contribute to the Federal Treasury. The corporation which holds the lease simply passes it on to the consumer, and every public-utility commission and every court would permit the act as a justifiable business transaction necessary to protect the holders of its securities.

I am not opposing the rental charge. It may have its benefits. The Government may be entitled to a just rental on its vested interest. But I am simply stating the plain facts of the case as they are. Incidentally, also, we may find here why the corporate interests behind the Senate bill are so willing to make this concession. They are entirely willing that consumers should pay money into the Public Treasury. They are willing, moreover, that Congress by this provision should legalize a higher standard of public-utility rates generally. The higher rate standard thus produced by this act for water-power leases issued thereunder is a profitable margin of protection for existing water powers, perhaps owned by the same corporations, which do not pay this public charge to the Government. In this way this provision works both as insurance against competition with water powers already developed and exempt from this public charge, but also gives them an extra margin of profit to the amount of the increase in rates sufficient to take care of the public rental charge paid by lessees under this bill. Do not for a moment, therefore, be deceived into thinking that the interests behind the Senate bill are making any con-

Do not for a moment, therefore, be deceived into thinking that the interests behind the Senate bill are making any concessions in offering to compromise in favor of a public rental charge. They are conceding nothing. On the other hand, they are simply adding to the profit margins of existing plants owned by them. They are doing it, moreover, under the guise of false pretenses. Their generous offer is that of the traditional Greeks offering gifts. Their pretended concessions to reform are the professions of the wolf in sheep's clothing.

Let us not be led astray by the proposition that a surrender by the Senate of the right to make a charge is going materially to affect any legislation we may enact concerning this proposition. Now I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ADAMSON. I suppose the gentleman failed to hear my statement that the House amendment was the basis of our conference and the House conferees have no idea of taking anything but the House bill as the basis.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Now, let me understand—
Mr. ADAMSON. The House conferees intend to bring back

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. If the conferees can get the Senate to adopt the House bill just as it passed, I have no objection, and I will vote for the conference report, but we will take nothing less than that. There is not an item in the House substitute bill that really is not necessary in order to make an effective piece of legislation which will protect the rights of the people, except section 19.

AN UNLIMITED FRANCHISE TO THE HYDROELECTRIC TRUST.

In the very nature of the case, an act of this kind is in effect an unlimited franchise to the great Hydroelectric Trust, which has absorbed the bulk of the large water-power companies of the country. It should be considered by Congress in that light. We do not need any additional evidence on that point. six years past every Government commission dealing with the subject, and a score of experts and publicists appearing before the committees of this House have testified, until the world knows that an aggregation of interwoven hydroelectric corporations control practically all of the important developed water powers of the United States and much of that of Canada, and constitute the parties with whom we are dealing in this so-called general dam act. In its very nature, the water-power grant is a monopoly, and the Hydroelectric Trust is a consolidation of monopolies. We, as representatives of the American people, are simply naming the terms upon which the people shall issue a charter to this hydroelectric monopoly. We are naming the terms upon which the people are to allow this hydroelectric monopoly to hold and operate one of the greatest public resources in the national possession.

Moreover, this franchise we are granting is not merely for a day. It is not something which may be recalled the next session or the next year. It may be a grant which will govern the Nation for a half century; or, if we are hasty or otherwise neglectful of our full public duties, it may be in effect a franchise forever.

We are dealing with huge responsibilities. Everyone knows that the coal supply of this country is limited, that it is beginning to show exhaustion, and that it can never be replenished, Its days are numbered. Long before the proposed 50-year hydroelectric franchise demanded by the trust in the terms of the Senate bill has expired the coal supply of this country will be so far exhausted that our very industrial existence as a Nation will hang upon the use of hydroelectric power. The corporate trust which holds the water powers of the United States in its grasp under a favorable grant of Congress, the terms of which the attorneys of this trust themselves in the main have suggested or dictated, will then be in a situation to dominate the principal channels of American industry and commerce. Hasty and ill-considered provisions passed by this House in the closing days of the session, when the country is threatened with the possibilities of plunging into the European war, may lead to undreamed-of consequences affecting our national welfare and that of our sons for generations.

I do not mean to intimate to anyone in either House any suggestion of bad faith, but I do charge that in the zeal of those handling the two measures to pass some kind of bill in this legislative crisis there is involved necessarily an amount of risk which we prudently should avoid. There is danger, moreover, that special interests urging this legislation may put over provisions which look good superficially but which may hang as a millstone upon the public welfare throughout the lives of all Members present.

To a man who is conscientiously anxious to see the passage of a good bill securely protecting the public interest, and, conversely, anxious to prevent the passage of a bill dictated by special interests, or in which they have skillfully planted their legal "woodchucks," there are several aspects of this present demand for hurried action that do not look auspicious.

In the first place, why six months' delay on the part of the conferees until the session is nearly closed if it is so necessary to hastily pass a bill at this time? Why was the report and the motion delayed until a day when well-considered legislation on these vital and complex provisions is almost a physical impossibility? And if the welfare of the country can stand six months' delay, why can it not stand delay until another session can act with the deliberation and thoroughness which the great national interests involved demand?

In the second place, why must this bill be forced upon us in the closing hour of a congested session when every nerve is being strained to get through the administration program before adjournment? Why must it be forced upon us in an hour when diplomatic relations with perhaps the greatest military power on earth have been severed, and no man knows when he retires at night that sunrise may not find his Nation involved in the greatest war of its history?

In the third place, all that has been said as to the nature of the terms of a possible compromise indicates that agreement has been reached, not upon the great essentials of a sound and safe water-power bill for the protection of the American people and succeeding generations but upon comparatively unimportant provisions, like the rental charge, which are concessions to reform only in name. Why do we not hear that agreement has been reached to give the American people an ironclad recapture provision, an effective and thorough regulation of rates, and the reserved power to amend or repeal?

Moreover, every Member familiar with the appearance of the officials, agents, and attorneys of the hydroelectric interests about this Capitol during the past four years in which this general dam bill has been agitated, knows that at the present time there is camped in this city and about Congress all their band of paid workers and lobbyists, like buzzards scenting a carcass. Some of them are from my own State, some from Chicago, some from Niagara, and some from Wall Street; but they are all here busy getting in their work and apparently expectant that now will come the fruition of dreams for which they have hitherto labored in vain for years.

It is not necessary for me to characterize the Senate measure. It has been exposed and denounced, not only in the press of the country but upon the floor of this House again and again by those loyal to the public interest in water-power legislation, as an ultracorporation measure many of whose provisions are traced to hydroelectric special counsel.

It is not necessary for me to emphasize in detail before this House the necessity of the great essentials which should govern a good water-power bill that will conserve and protect future generations. The general outline of these essentials is known to you in the House measure which passed this body originally, but which the Senate conferees have steadily refused to accept.

What I fear is that in the rush of the closing hours hurried compromise may commit this country to hastily studied provisions which look good at a hurried glance, but which in the last analysis may prove the people's undoing. Under attractive and false guise the special counsel of the great Hydroelectric Trust may have for our consideration in the last days of the session, when no Member will have time to digest the bearing thereof, provisions which look pretty on paper, but the acceptance of which may make this Congress the target for just and serious criticism for a half century to come.

Finally, however, if we must have this hurried conference, I trust that every Member will see that no steps are left untaken to put the compromise measure about to be issued to a strict test. We must see to it that the great essentials of the House bill, the bulwarks without which the protection of the people is gone, are amply and securely anchored. The great public interests of the American people must not be jeopardized in an hour of haste.

Mr. ADAMSON. My understanding-

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, I renew my demand for the regular order.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist on the House amendment and grant the conference

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, there ought to be some debate on

Mr. ADAMSON. How much does the gentleman want?

Mr. MANN. Well, I do not know that I want any.

Mr. ADAMSON. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois the conferees have no disposition at all to let the Senate take snap judgment on them, and when we get in conference we will hear him and anybody else and we will keep faith with the House; that is all.

Mr. MANN. The conferees will not be entertained by hearing me.

Mr. ADAMSON. We would not have an agreement contrary to the wishes of the House if we get the conference.

Mr. MANN. It is not customary for a conference committee to hear Members of the House, and I hope this conference committee if appointed will have sand enough not to hear individual Senators on the subject.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Georgia.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama demands the yeas and nays. [After counting.] Three gentlemen have arisen, not a sufficient number.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will announce the conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ADAMSON, Mr. SIMS, and Mr. ESCH.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Post Office appropriation bill H. R. 19410, to disagree to all the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object,

I wish to ask the gentleman-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California reserves the right to object. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] asks unanimous consent to take the Post Office appropriation bill from the Speaker's table, to disagree to all Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, there are four Senate amendments-

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to ob-

Mr. MANN. There are four Senate amendments

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman if it would be agreeable for him to have action upon the Senate amendments, particularly upon Senate amendment 34?

I want to move to concur in Senate amendment 34. Mr. MANN. I think we can very quickly reach an understanding. There are four Senate amendments upon which a separate vote is desired; there may be others. One is No. 15, that is the pneumatic tube; one is 32, that is increase in compensation; one is 33, that is the branch post offices; and the other is 34, which is the advertisement, or Reed, amendment.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to shut off the House from a vote on any amendment that it desires to express its opinion about previous to conference. Therefore, inasmuch as a separate vote is requested on Senate amendments Nos. 15, 32, 33, and 34, I amend my proposition so as to ask unanimous consent to disagree to all the other Senate amendments in the bill.

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur— Mr. MANN. That question is not up yet.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] to ask unanimous consent to disagree to all the Senate amendments except 15, 32, 33, and 34.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask that No. 30 be included in that, as I want to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. MOON. I will not object to that. If anybody wants a separate vote on anything, he can have it, so far as I am concerned.

The SPEAKER. Which amendment does the gentleman from California refer to?

California refer to?

Mr. RAKER. No. 30.

The SPEAKER. What amendment does the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Tague] refer to?

Mr. TAGUE. I refer to No. 15.

Mr. MOON. That motion is out of order now.

Mr. RANDALL. Reserving the right to object to the last re-

Mr. VAN DYKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on amendments Nos. 18, 19, 20, 21, and 22. Mr. MOON. That all goes into conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VAN DYKE] asks unanimous consent that a separate vote be had on amendments Nos. 18, 19, 20, 21, and 22.

Mr. BENNET. Reserving the right to object-

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] include these in his request?

Mr. MOON. I do not, and I do not see any reason why that should be done. If the gentleman has any good reason for it, I would like to hear it. I think they all ought to go to conference. If the House wants to take up the bill beginning with these various sections, I do not care.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Did the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] except Senate amendment No. 15 from his request?

Mr. MOON. I did.

The SPEAKER. He did. Mr. BENNET. Reserving the right to object to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon], I would like to ask him if he would not withdraw it for the present. I may want to make a preferential motion concerning these separate votes, but I may not. But if the gentleman gets all his mendments to conference it will cut them all off.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is mistaken. The other amendments do not go to conference until these other ones are acted on.

Mr. BENNET. The gentleman from Tennessee asks to disagree to all the remaining amendments.

Mr. MANN. When amendments are accepted, the request for conference may be out of the request.

Mr. BENNET. The remaining amendments go to conference. Mr. MANN. Not at all. You need not be alarmed about that. The SPEAKER. The request is to disagree to all the Senate amendments except 15, 32, 33, 34, and 30.

Mr. CRISP. I reserve the right to object to that. At least, I want amendment No. 19 to be acted on by the House.

Mr. MOON. It can be acted on by the House when the conference report comes back.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I would like a vote on amendment No. 19. Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman had better exclude that from his request. I do not think it will take the House long to act on that.

Mr. MOON. I will include 19 in my metion.

The SPEAKER. What is the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Mr. MANN. I understand the request now is to take from the Speaker's table the Post Office appropriation bill and to disagree to all the Senate amendments except 15, 19, 30, 32, 33, and 34.

The SPEAKER. That is it.

Mr. MANN. And there it stops.
The SPEAKER. There it stops.
Is there objection?
Mr. BENNET. I object.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Reserving the right to ob-

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York has already

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know whether the pneumatic-tube amendment, which is No. 15, is now excluded from the request of the

The SPEAKER. The whole thing is withheld. The gentleman from New York objected. There is nothing before the

CLAIMS AGAINST CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW INDIANS.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 5427 be transferred from the Private Calendar to the Union Calendar.

The SPEAKER. What is the bill about?

Mr. RAYBURN. It is an act referring certain claims against the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations of Indians to the Court of Claims.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill by title. The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 5427) referring certain claims against the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations of Indians to the Court of Claims.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the bill be transferred from the Private Calendar to the Union Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I have not been able to hear the request in the confusion which prevails.

The SPEAKER. It is simply transferring a small bill from one calendar to another.

Mr. MANN. What is the bill?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill again.

The bill was again reported.

Mr. MANN. What is desired to do with it?

The SPEAKER. It is on the Private Calendar and the gentleman asks that it be transferred to the Union Calendar. there objection?

Mr. MANN. It might as well be buried in one place as another.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE, DONOVAN AGAINST HILL.

Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a privileged resolution (H. Res. 515) from the Committee on Elections No. 1.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi presents a privileged resolution from the Committee on Elections No. 1, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Jeremiah Donovan was not elected a Member of the Sixty-fourth Congress from the fourth congressional district of Connecticut and is not entitled to a seat therein.

Resolved, That Ebenezer J. Hill was elected a Member of the Sixty-fourth Congress from the fourth congressional district of Connecticut and is entitled to a seat therein.

The SPEAKER. Is this a unanimous report?
Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi. It is. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

CHANGE OF CALENDAR-H. R. 6814.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, House bill 6814 is on the Union Calendar by mistake. I ask to have it transferred to the House

The SPEAKER. What is it about?

Mr. RANDALL. The exclusion of intoxicating liquors from national parks.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6814) to exclude intoxicating liquors from national parks and national forest reserves.

The SPEAKER. Now, what is the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. RANDALL. That it be transferred from the Union Calendar to the House Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Ask unanimous consent.

Mr. RANDALL. I think it is on the Union Calendar in error, by mistake.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to transfer the bill H. R. 6814 from the Union Calendar to the House Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can we hear the bill read?

Mr. MANN. Oh, we ought not to stop for that.

Mr. RANDALL. I think the transfer should be made in order to correct the proceedings. I do not ask unanimous consent. ask that the error be corrected.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent, and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TAGUE] objects.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CRISP. When a public bill is erroneously referred to a committee, I understand that it takes unanimous consent or a motion to correct the reference; but when a bill is favorably reported to the House the Speaker refers it to one of the calendars of the House; and if the reference is erroneous, does it require unanimous consent for the Speaker to correct the error and have the bill referred to the proper calendar? That is the situation that confronts the Speaker in this case.

The SPEAKER. When a bill is called up, the Speaker can decide that he can transfer it from the wrong calendar to the

Mr. CRISP. That is the case.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows; but the question is now put, and you can not break in the regular proceedings of the House in that sort.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CRISP. Under the call of committees a bill on the House Calendar can be called up for consideration, but a bill on the Union Calendar can not be called up. In the case at bar, if the bill is erroneously on the Union Calendar, if the committee had the call, would it be precluded from calling up

The SPEAKER. That is precisely the case where the Chair held he had the right to transfer it from one calendar to another.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 20783, the Army appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 20783) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, pending that, I think the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bennet], who made the objection, had a misunderstanding as to the Post Office appropriation bill. I renew my request for unanimous consent to disagree to all the Senate amendments except amendments numbered 15, 19, 30, 32, 33, and 34, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to take the Post Office appropriation bill from the Speaker's table; disagree to all the Senate amendments except Nos. 15, 19, 30, 32, 33, and 34; and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman from Tennessee if under that arrangement there will be an opportunity in the House for a vote on the pneumatic-tube amendment?

Mr. MOON. I will state to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that if that agreement is reached I will move to take up this bill and vote to nonconcur in all the Senate amendments except those named, and give the House an opportunity to take what action it pleases.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the unanimous consent asked for.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York objects.

Mr. MOON. Does the gentleman from New York object?
Mr. CALDWELL. I will withdraw my objection for a moment, but if you are going to have a discussion all day, I will object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object— Mr. BENNET. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker-The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin reserves the right to object.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, there is an important amendment, namely, No. 33, which has not been mentioned in this agreement.

Mr. MOON. Oh, yes; it has. Mr. STAFFORD. No. 33?

Mr. MOON. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. I refer to No. 23. I am following this rather closely. It relates to the subsidy of $10 per mile to ocean-going steamships plying between the United States and Great Britain.

Mr. MOON. We will include that. Mr. STAFFORD. I do not ask to have it excepted; only I would like to have an understanding with the gentleman before it is agreed to in conference, because I question whether it will be agreed to; that the House will have the opportunity to vote on it separately?

Mr. MOON. I have no objection to it. I am not for it myself.

Mr. STAFFORD. I think the House will vote overwhelmingly to disagree to it; but before the bill is sent to conference I want to have an opportunity sometime to vote on it separately.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. If I have that understanding, I will not press my point.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to ob-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York reserves the right to object

Mr. HULBERT. I should like to inquire of the chairman of the committee what, if any, action has been taken on this agreement with regard to amendment No. 14?

Mr. MOON. I have just proposed to disagree and let it go to conference. That is a matter that can go to conference without being decided by the House in advance. We can not take up all these questions here in the House and decide them.

Mr. HULBERT. I would like to get a separate vote on that amendment.

Mr. MOON. I hope the gentleman will not insist on that. He does not want to kill this bill.

He does not want to kill this bill.

Mr. HULBERT. All right; I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object,
I have talked with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] and I understand the situation is that he is perfectly willing, as, of course, the rule permits, that there shall be a separate vote on amendment 15 and others, and that if the House concurs in Senate amendment 15 he will not carry his antagonism to that principle—which antagonism of course he has a perfect to that principle-which antagonism, of course, he has a perfect right to, as we have the right to advocate it-he will not carry his antagonism to that amendment so far as to kill the bill himself because the amendment is in it.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, just one minute. When this House concurs in Senate amendment 15, that is the end of all controversy on that question, and that section becomes a part of the law; and the suggestion from the gentleman from New York that I, disagreeing with the action of the House upon that particular amendment, would seek to kill the balance of this bill is unworthy of him and a reflection upon myself that Mr. BENNET. It may be unworthy of me and it may be a reflection, but I take the gentleman's statement as an indorsement of my position, unworthy though it may be, and I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming objects.
Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman from Wyoming will not do that. I would like to have three minutes to address the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent for three minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, every effort that I make is to give the House the widest latitude in the disposition of matters that come before it. But we are now within less than two weeks of the end of the session. I believe not a single appropriation bill has yet been enrolled. The enrollment of the appropriation bills is just as essential as passing them. They have to be enrolled and presented to the President and signed before a week from next Sunday at 12 o'clock. We are behind in the enrollment of bills. We are behind in the disposition of conference reports on the appropriation bills. It is not within human physical power to enroll all of these bills instantly. Unless we get a move on ourselves in disposing finally of appropriation bills, and commence very soon, when the time comes for the final adjournment of Congress we will be in the attitude of having probably passed bills which are not yet enrolled, thereby causing an extra session of Congress; and I hope we will be able to dispose of these appropriation bills and the conference reports, and that the conferees will act upon the matters in conference and bring them before the House speedily, so that we will have the opportunity to consider the propositions, and then have the bills enrolled, without waiting along until the last, when there will be neither opportunity to consider nor time to enroll. [Applause.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that may proceed for two minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, there may be ground for difference of opinion as to the proper method to be pursued to advance the business of the House and the Congress at this time. My opinion is that we will advance the business of the House if this bill goes to the committee and is disposed of in the regular order under the rules, better than by taking up these matters and attempting to dispose of them now, when we ought to be debating and passing the military bill. I think the way to dispose of this matter speedly is to dispose of it in accordance with the rules of the House and to go on with the discussion of the military bill, which is certainly as important a measure as there is before the House.

This bill has passed both Houses. It can be taken up most any time and disposed of without great delay. On the other hand, the military bill has not passed the House, and still has a long road before it. Let us dispose of that in the House while the committee-in the first instance, at least-disposes of the Post Office bill. Therefore I object.

ARMY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, I renew my motion. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill,

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, pending that, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by printing a telegram from some of my constituents expressing their views on the present international situation.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The telegram is as follows:

PRESTONSBURG, KY., February 19, 1917.

Hon. John W. Langley, Washington, D. C.:

Expect you to do all you can to keep us out of war. Honor not at ake. We want peace. EMPLOYEES OF PRESTONSBURG COAL CO.

The motion of Mr. Dent was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 20783) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, with Mr. Saunders in the chair.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of members of Officers' Reserve Corps, $1,500,000.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, when the committee rose last Saturday the Clerk had finished reading the proviso on pages 9 and 10 of the bill, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] had reserved a point of order.

Mr. STAFFORD. That is a correct statement of the par-liamentary situation. I had reserved a point of order on the proviso beginning with line 24, page 9. With the consent of the committee, I would like to have the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Tilson] explain the purport of the amendment that he inserted in the RECORD under leave of the committee.

Mr. DENT. I have no objection to that. I have great respect for the judgment of the gentleman from Connecticut. But why not dispose of the proviso first?

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not wish to have anything made in order, like an extraneous amendment that would be offered by the gentleman from Connecticut, which might be objectionable under the rule. I have no serious objection to the proviso as incorporated in the bill, but I do not want that made a handle to incorporate an amendment that would be subject to a point

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I do not understand that the amendment that was offered by me last Saturday and printed in the RECORD will be made in order by the proviso to which the gentleman from Wisconsin reserves a point of order. amendment presented by me is subject to a point of order, because it is clearly legislation. It is legislation, however, of such a wise character that it should go unchallenged.

The question of promotion in the Army, as you all know, is a very perplexing and vexing question. Originally promotions in our Army were regimental. There was a certain advantage in regimental promotion. It kept the officers a longer time in the same regiment. There came to be more cooperation between officers who worked together for a long time in the same service. The officers of a regiment became something like a family, and worked together accordingly.

The trouble was that regimental promotion soon developed great inequalities. Two men becoming second lieutenants at the same time, one going to one regiment and another to another, would very soon find themselves of quite unequal rank. regiment promotion by reason of casualties, resignations, or something else was very rapid. In another regiment few died and none resigned, and premotions were few and far between.

The result was great dissatisfaction in the Army.

Then came the proposition to have a lineal list in the different arms, so that when there was a vacancy in one regiment the next in line in that regiment would not take it, but an officer from another regiment, if at the top of the list, would be assigned to the vacancy. That had its disadvantages in bringing together men not accustomed to working together, but it did something toward preventing inequalities in promotion. However, it soon developed that inequalities which formerly prevalled when promotion was regimental began to appear between the different arms of the service, so that an officer who went into the Cavalry would find himself a first lieutenant when his more fortunate classmate would find himself a major of Field or Coast Artillery.

That is the situation we have to-day. One of the results is that each arm of the service is unduly desirous of increase in that particular arm. Army officers are human, like the rest of Their only chance of advancement is by promotion in the service. Every increase in that particular arm of the service means promotion for the officers of that arm. It is natural that officers should regard their particular arm of the service as most important, and would therefore favor an increase of it. Their ardor for an increase would not be lessened by the fact that it would also give them promotion. The result is we have the officers of the different arms of the service pulling this way and that, each trying to increase his own arm of the service in order that there may be promotions. Under such conditions it is no wonder that the advice of capable Army officers on the subject of relative increases in the several arms is often subject to the suspicion that it is not entirely disinterested.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. TILSON. Certainly.

Mr. KAHN. Assuming that the gentleman's amendment is adopted, with the condition that has arisen this year, with about a thousand second lieutenants appointed, if his provision were now the law, in 27 years from now that entire thousand of second lieutenants, or all those left in the service, would be-

Mr. TILSON. At the end of 27 years, in the normal course of events, there would be a few more colonels than there probably would be by the present method, though it would probably even itself up to some extent by deaths, resignations, and retirements. There is under our present method what we call "humps," and the difficulty would be no greater than it is at present, unless we assume that the Army is going to stand still; that is, not going to be enlarged any further. If there is to be further development, further increases as the needs of the country grow, then what the gentleman says would not be true to any harmful

Mr. KAHN. Of course, I am in harmony with the gentleman that something ought to be done to equalize promotions, but I doubt if his amendment would be effective.

Mr. TILSON. I am quite sure it would be effective. My plan, in a word, is to take the average time required to reach the several grades of promotion and fix this as the time in which each officer shall reach these grades. At present we have second lieutenants receiving promotion within the first year of commissioned service and captaincies within two or three years, while other officers equally efficient, but less fortunate in their choice of service, wait 20 years or more for the much coveted two bars. Under this amendment all are treated alike. No waiting for dead men's shoes, resignations, or retirement. Upon passing the required examination each officer becomes a first lieutenant in 4 years, a captain in 10 years, and a major in 19 years, and so on. The time in each case is, of course, arbitrary, but corresponds roughly to the average time now required to reach the several grades. No change is proposed in the examination required for promotion. They must pass an examination the same as they do now.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of a point of order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am inclined to think that there is something in the gentleman's contention about promotion. very difficult, as the gentleman realizes, but would it not be better to have this go over until the next session of Congress, when we will have more time and can go into it and settle it

Mr. THLSON. It will probably have to go over, because it is subject to a point of order, but I wish to refer to it now so that when the gentleman from Tennessee reaches his higher estate at the other end of the Capitol he may assist in having it considered and be ready to act upon it.

Mr. FIELDS. The gentleman means when he enters on his longer tenure.

Mr. TILSON. We have adopted the same principle in regard to the Medical Corps, and it has worked out well. When we adopt universal military training it will be the only workable Instead of having each officer tied up to a particular organization, officers will be available for use throughout the Army and all over the country for training others, which will be the real occupation of the Army when that time comes.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, do I understand that the gentleman offers that amendment at this time?

Mr. TILSON. I offer at this point the amendment as printed in the RECORD.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that it is new legislation,
Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, it is clearly legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained, and the Clerk will read.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, before the Clerk reads, on page 10, line 7, the first word "by" should be "in," and I move to strike out the word "by" where it occurs the first time in the line and insert in lieu thereof the word "in."

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I accept that amendment. The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that will be done.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk proceeded to read at line 24, page 10.

Mr. CALDWELL (interrupting the reading). Mr. Chairman, by unanimous consent on Saturday the proviso beginning on line 24, page 9, and ending on line 23, page 10, was read in connection with line 22, page 9, and lines 23 and 24, up to the word "Provided," page 9, were omitted, to be read after the proviso. Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, that is correct.

Mr. CALDWELL. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Dent] asked unanimous consent that the Clerk should read line 22, and then skip lines 23 and 24, down to the word "Provided," and read the proviso in connection with line 22, which was done; and it was the understanding that the reading should be resumed with line 23, page 9.

Mr. DENT. That is correct, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Additional pay to officers for length of service, $2,000,000.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, is it understood that the proviso to which the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] made the point of order and later withdrew is the proviso to be attached to line 22?

Mr. KAHN. That is correct.
Mr. DENT. That is correct.
Mr. TILSON. On page 9, "For pay of officers of the line, $11,500,000.

Mr. CALDWELL. That is correct.

Mr. DENT. Yes; unanimous consent was given for that. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of members of Officers' Reserve Corps, $1,500,000.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I do not want to take up the time of the House except to say that I desire to call attention to the fact that the proposition read into the RECORD on February 16 at my request, for universal military training, is a proposition that will go out on a point of order if any Member of this House makes the point of order, and that if the matter is to be discussed by any Member of the House he will have to take advantage of the five-minute rule before the proposition is reached on page 75. I also desire to call the attention of Members to two photographs which I have in my hand of two Regular Army soldiers, one taken when they enlisted in the Regular Army and the other of the same men four months thereafter, showing the effect of military training in the service, and I shall ask a page to hand them around.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of officers, National Guard, including staff corps, $2,500,000: Provided, That out of this appropriation the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay assistant inspectors of small-arms practice of the Organized Militia and National Guard whose services were accepted in the mobilization of said troops under the call of the President, June 18, 1916, the pay and allowances of the grade in which they were accepted and served.

Mr. SLAYDEN and Mr. BORLAND and Mr. DENT rose. Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I desire to offer Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the proviso.

The gentleman from Wisconsin reserves The CHAIRMAN. a point of order and the gentleman from Alabama offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 11, line 2, by striking out the proviso and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"That so much of this appropriation as may be necessary for the purpose shall be available to pay inspectors and assistant inspectors of small-arms practice of the Organized Militia and National Guard who responded to the call of the President of June 18, 1916, the pay and allowances appropriate to their grade from the dates they would have begn entitled to pay had their services been authorized to the dates on which they were mustered out or their services were otherwise terminated; and the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be and they are hereby directed to allow credit for any such payments which have heretofore been made to such officers from the appropriation from which made."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I reserved the point of order, and I assume that this amendment is being offered merely for information.

Mr. DENT. I offer that as a substitute.

Mr. STAFFORD. But prior to the gentleman offering it I reserved a point of order on the proviso, waiting to hear the amendment of the gentleman read. The amendment would not be in order until the point of order is disposed of. I would like to inquire the purpose of this proviso to include inspectors as well as assistant inspectors of small-arms practice.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is perhaps familiar with the fact that these officers existed under the old Dick bill, inspectors and assistant inspectors, prior to the act of June 3, 1916, in which law these positions were abolished. When the When the National Guard and the Organized Militia were called into the service on June 18, 1916, only a short time after the act of June 3 had become a law, these organizations were not familiar with the fact that these particular positions had been abolished. and they took these officers along with them to the mobilization camps and some actually paid them under the old law, being ignorant of the fact that it had been abolished. It is simply to take care of that situation.

Mr. CRAGO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DENT. Yes.

Mr. CRAGO. I would like to add this further statement to the explanation that the chairman has made, namely, that the mustering officers directed these men to be mustered in in this rank, and personally I called up the Bureau of Militia Affairs and they directed me to tell one of these officers that he should be mustered in, so that the error was on the part of the War Department and not the National Guard officers themselves.

Mr. STAFFORD. As I understand the amendment, it only applies to inspectors and assistant inspectors of small arms

mr. DENT. That is true.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation.

Mr. DENT. and I offer the substitute for the proviso.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama offers a substitute for the paragraph and the gentleman from Theorem.

substitute for the paragraph, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Slayden] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I believe every person who appreciates manly and virile qualities in men must have heard with keen distress this morning of the death of the distinguished commanding officer of the Southern Department, Gen. Funston. He died suddenly last night in the city of San Antonio while engaged in entertaining a little child. It shows the truth of the observation of the poet that "the bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring," and I have no doubt that Gen. Funston, if he had to go suddenly, would have been glad to be called from the scene of earthly activities under such circumstances.

The people of the frontier will be exceedingly distressed and no little disturbed by the fact that this distinguished officer had to end his earthly and military career so unexpectedly and so prematurely. The frontier had confidence in Funston. It felt secure while he was on guard. He was a great soldier, a splendid officer, but had not had the privilege of the usual training of that class. His high endeavor on all occasions and his brilliant successes are certainly an inspiration to men in humbler ranks and to enlisted men who may not have concealed in their knapsacks the baton of a marshal, but who may pull out the commission of a major general. So did Young, Chaffee, and Schwan, and other of our distinguished officers, who began their career in the humblest way. Funston made his reputation and earned his first star as a volunteer with State troops, and in these times when the State troops are so disparaged, when they are spoken of with such contempt by critics, some of whom, in my judgment, are not qualified to pass on them, it is well to remember that Gen. Funston did his first important work and won his first great recognition as a soldier with troops from the State of Kansas.

The State troops have been harshly and unjustly criticized since the movement to the Mexican border began, a little more than a year ago. They have been denounced as incompetent, they have been held up to ridicule and said to be an unstable reliance for the defense of the country. But against that criticism, Mr. Chairman, I appeal to all the history of our coun-They do not fail us. They may be defeated occasionally, but what Regulars are not? The old guard had to die if it were not forced to surrender at Waterloo, and it is true the most skillful veterans must sometimes yield. [Applause.] Texas troops, in which I am personally and more directly interested, were criticized in the very beginning harshly and untruthfully, but I want to call attention to the fact, Mr. Chairman, that they were among the first who arrived on the border; that they have served uncomplainingly; and that they are still there, guarding the people of this country against the invasion of bandits from the other side. I regret to say, sir, that these invasions have been renewed in a minor way, of course, and since the withdrawal of the army of Gen. Pershing from Mexico and since the dispersion of the army of State troops, there have been sporadic incursions from Mexico, and American citizens have been killed on their own properties Mexico and in Arizona. I do not say that that would have not occurred if the State troops had been kept there. I only call attention to the fact that it did occur after their withdrawal, and I hope that those gentlemen who criticize the volunteers and State troops as an unstable and unfit reliance in time of trouble will remember this

Mr. MEEKER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. SLAYDEN. I have only a few minutes.

Mr. MEEKER. How recently has that killing occurred? Mr. SLAYDEN. I will say to the gentleman that I have here an extract from a paper dated February 15, telling of an incident that happened two days before, in which three Americans were murdered in our own country on their own property while going about their peaceful business

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. SLAYDEN. May I have one minute more? The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas. [After a pause.] The Chair hears

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. KAHN. The gentleman has spoken of the reliance to be placed in the State troops. Has the gentleman seen the article signed "Militiaman" in the Army and Navy Register of February 3, 1917

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes; I had my attention called to it, I will say to the gentleman from California.

Mr. KAHN. I ask unanimous consent that it be inserted in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California unanimous consent that the article indicated be inserted in the Is there objection? [After a pause.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. Now, Mr. Chairman, just a word. The most unfortunate incident in this whole Mexican border movement and one which, to put it mildly, reflects least credit upon the United States Army, is referred to in the communication to the Army and Navy Register, which the gentleman from California has just secured consent to print in the Record. The facts are, as anyone will see who reads that document, that the Regulars were surprised at Columbus. The town was invaded, citizens and soldiers were killed, the town burned, and the humiliation came to the Army of the United States of having a large number of its horses stolen and carried off by a lot of ill-armed, illkept, undisciplined, untrained bandits from Mexico. I am glad the gentleman inserted that article in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

The matter referred to by Mr. KAHN is as follows: A MILITIAMAN'S QUESTIONS.

A MILITIAMAN'S QUESTIONS.

Sir: We of the Organized Militia, who have been instructed in our military duties by officers of the Regular Army and have studied the rules and regulations prescribed for that Army, have been impressed with the supreme importance of "the service of security"; that is, of protecting a command, wherever it may be, against the invasion of marauders of any kind, and especially against a surprise attack by an armed and hostile force. We were astounded and shocked, therefore, to gather from newspaper accounts some time ago that this important service was see performed, or neglected, by a force of Regular troops stationed at Columbus, N. Mex., presumably for the protection of that town and its neighborhood against a possible and even probable raid by Mexican bandits, that Villa and his small band could surprise both camp and town by a night attack and, after much burning, looting, and killing, could escape with but little punishment, taking with them as trophies a goodly number of horses that belonged to the troops that were supposed to be protecting the town.

How could such a surprise have been effected if patrols and sentinels had been employed as they should have been in view of the fact, known to everyone, that our troops were sent to the border because of the dangerous conditions prevailing to the south of it?

But our astonishment that Regular troops of the United States should have permitted themselves to be surprised in this way while guarding a notoriously hostile border became amazement when we learned, as we did learn from public accounts, that a "special inspectar" had investigated the affair and that, as a result of his investigation, he and his superiors not only exonerated the officers and most highly for their good conduct in the affair.

If National Guard troops had been so unfortunate or negligent in the discharge of their duties anywhere as were the Regular Army troops at Columbus is it likely that any special inspector could be found with hardhood enough to commend thos

Is it a fact that two days or more before that attack the State Department delivered to the War Department copies of telegrams containing this information?

Is it a fact that the person in the War Department into whose hands these telegrams unfortunately fell failed to send them to the proper bureau, where they would have been immediately telegraphed to the commanding officer at Columbus, but that, on the contrary, he sent them to the War College, where they remained unacted upon and unheard of until long after Villa had made his attack and escaped?

At any rate, an investigation that will investigate the Washington as well as the Texas end of this affair seems to be called for.

MILITIAMAN.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. SLAYDEN. My time has expired. Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the attention of the committee.

Mr. DENT. Will the gentleman yield for a moment? I would like the debate on this paragraph to be closed in some reasonable time. If gentlemen desire to speak on this subject for a few minutes, I have no objection. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto be concluded in 20 minutes, five minutes of the time to be consumed by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Campbell], five minutes by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Borland], five tleman from California [Mr. KAHN], and five minutes by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Fess].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto terminate at the expiration of 20 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for a slight extension of my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD. there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, the little town of New Carlisle, Ohio, is 15 miles from where I live and located in the seventh district, which I have the honor to represent. To-day its people are thinking of its most distinguished son, whose achievement has given the little town great recognition. It is the birthplace of Gen. Funston, and the people in that little quiet village per-sonally take a great deal of pride in the career of this soldier. I think that he is one of the most brilliant representatives of the possibilities of American life. His early beginnings were not unlike those that have marked so many of the distinguished men of the Nation. Of very little promise, as is the case with so many of America's great, he took the wise course that many another boy has taken and decided to enter college, which he did in the State of Kansas, and made not only a career as a college boy in his classroom but also rather a distinguished career as one of the fellows in the various activities of the college. His later life displayed that striking paradox; that is, of the quiet sort in his demeanor and yet most of his life was spent in

My first interest in Funston was not in "Gen." Funston. It was in the stories told about him, as a very wide-awake student in a college and, secondly, as a conductor on a railroad train in the Southwest, but more especially the work that he attempted to do as a research man and investigator. However, my chief attraction was to the biologist, who had undertaken a special work in botany, and who for that purpose had become identified with one of the Government departments. This expert research work was carried on in the Klondike region, also in Death Valley, and later he extended his explorations to the Bering Sea. One of his most romantic expeditions was that which took him down one of the country's lonely and unfrequented rivers with a canoe, hundreds of miles, without seeing scarcely a single individual except his companions. After giving some distinguished evidence of what the research man could do, that pioneer element so prominent in him, that strenuous quality so characteristic of American manhood, displayed and exerted itself. Those elements which had been so prominent in his college days took possession of him, which carried him from the work of the research man to that of the heroic realm. He planned to go to Cuba, where he became a figure in many battles, and where he was once captured. Then, after having distinguished himself in that struggle for the disenthrallment of a subject people, and after our country had extended her influence over the islands of the southern seas, you very well recall his remarkable career in the Philippines, where, by his capture of the insurrectionist leader, he ended that unhappy rebellion. After this service he did unusual work at San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, where the highest tributes of praise from those whom he served are still remembered, and finally his work down here on the border and at Vera

As I suggested, his was a quiet, modest life of a very fraillooking gentleman, not over 120 pounds in weight, as quiet in his demeanor as was Gen. Grant, as quiet in his attitude as the peerless Gen. Lee; and yet back of that quiet exterior there raged the storm center that thrust him in the midst of the fight for the right as he understood it, and which caused him to become interested in the freedom of Cuba, the rehabilitation of the Philippines, the rebuilding of San Francisco, and the conserving of the honor of the American troops on the border.

I rise as a Representative of the district that contains the little town in which he was born, simply to pay to him this quiet tribute. [Applause.]

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, last night there passed away one of the splendid figures of American military life. Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston was so well known in Kansas City, having spent a portion of his early years there in newspaper work, that he was almost like a Kansas City boy, although his residence was in the neighboring State of Kansas, which State his father represented in this House. His whole career is one of those romantic chapters that we sometimes think is impossible in this rather gray and neutral age of human

The young soldier was born in Newcastle, Ohio, but was brought by his parents to Kansas when an infant and spent his boyhood on the prairies of the Sunflower State. He attended the University of Kansas, and during his summer vacations earned his expenses and gratified his love for adventure by acting as mountain guide in Colorado. He was a stocky little fellow, barely 5 feet 2 inches tall, with a round bullet head and a quiet, reserved demeanor. But somewhere hidden under that stoic exterior was the fire of restless adventure. For a quiet man whose words were few and never boisterous, he seems to have found the storm centers with unerring accuracy. When Funston left college his first job was as a passenger conductor on the Santa Fe Railroad, which then ran through the old West of the cowboy and the cattle king. The bad man had not yet disappeared from the fringe of civilization, and one of the first tales told of Fred is that he put a drunken cowboy off his train and then chased him 2 miles across an Arizona desert.

Restlessness carried him from that job to Kansas City, where he tried his hand at newspaper reporting for the Kansas City Star. His methods seem to have been too strenuous even for advanced journalism in that advanced community, nor did they make a success in Fort Smith, Ark. A scientific study of botany, which had attracted his attention, lead him to secure a position as field agent for the Department of Agriculture in an expedition to Death Valley, Cal. Here adventure as usual met the quiet man on every turn. Death Valley at that time meant only danger, privation, and toil to those who braved its terrors. Soon afterwards he went with another Government expedition to the Yukon, and was one of the first white men to cross the Chilcoot Pass.

During his experience in the frozen North he floated alone in a cance 1,100 miles down the Yukon. This was just before the gold excitement in the Klondike, and the young Kansan soon joined the army of gold seekers. While excitement and adventure gravitated naturally toward him, money gravitated directly away from him, for not a single business venture of his was crowned with even moderate success.

From Alaska he went to Mexico and to South America, traveling extensively and having many thrilling experiences. tried coffee planting, but without success. The Indian and the natural military man seem to have no commercial ability. This portion of Funston's life when he was finding his true career and trying to fit a round peg into a square hole reminds us of the first 40 years of the life of Gen. Grant, whose experience in earning a livelihood was quite similar. For Funston fate was continually turning the great kaleidoscope of events, until it fell into the proper combination. Somewhere, somehow, forces were gathering in which the restless energy of his indomitable spirit and his wonderful coolness in danger would count in the scale when the fate of nations was in the balance.

We may easily say that opportunity makes the man, but the truth is that man more often fits himself for the opportunity. Doubtless in the prodigality of God's providence genius of some sort is poured out with a lavish hand, and men are always to be found fitted by nature and training for every crisis. the individual is may depend upon who has the courage and the spirit to seize the opportunities. There is no predestined nor prophesied place where prophets may be born. Good can come out of Nazareth and military leaders from a Kansas farm. I have never agreed with the poet Gray that environment always clips the wings of genius, although he says:

Beneath these stones there might have laid Hearts once pregnant with celestial fire; Hands that the rod of empire might have swayed Or waked to ecstasy the living lyre.

Some village Hampton, who with dauntless breast The little tyrant of his fields withstood; Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest, Some Cromwell, guiltless of his country's blood.

But knowledge to their eyes her ample page, Rich with the spoils of time, did ne'r unroll; Chill penury repressed their noble rage And froze the genial currents of the soul.

During Funston's wanderings in South America the fires of During Funston's wanderings in South America the fires of the last revolution in Cuba were being lighted. As the magnet draws the steel, this coming storm drew the Kansas conquistador. He hastened to New York and employed the long, patient weeks in the back streets of the East Side drilling a group of Cuban plotters in the use of the American machine gun. With a commission as chief of artillery in the patriot army of Cuba he sailed from New York. When the great searchlight of American public opinion was turned upon the struggle in the people of the Aprilles there stood out in that white light the Pearl of the Antilles there stood out in that white light the figure of the young Kansan as a colonel in the patriot army. He had disappeared for a few years from the sight of his neighbors and friends in Kansas and suddenly reappeared in this dramatic way.

Wounded and on sick leave, he started to return to the States, but was captured by the Spanish troops, and to save his life ate and swallowed the important papers which he carried that would have identified him with the cause of the insurrection. One reason of his withdrawal from the Cuban Army was the proposal of its commander to execute a number of Spanish prisoners over Funston's protest.

By that time our whole Nation was aroused by the Cuban outrages, and the Spanish-American War was just beginning. Funston was elected colonel of the Twentieth Kansas, a Volunteer regiment of Kansas boys. We thought at that time that the western troops would have no opportunity to reach the real theater of war, as the number of volunteers in the East far exceeded the demand, and it was supposed the fighting would all be done in the West Indies. But suddenly the call came for troops for the Philippines. The Twentieth Kansas in the West was not to do the tedious police duty which it anticipated, but was to play a striking and gallant part in the Philippine insurrection, which was the most prolonged and hazardous portion of the entire war.

We are all familiar with the record of this regiment in the hot fight in North Luzon. When they were chasing the insurgent troops, it became necessary at one time to strike a quick blow by crossing the river and scaling the opposite bank in the face of the enemy. We remember the story of Funston calling for volunteers | of the field. He died at the early age of 51 in what should have been the very prime and vigor of his manhood, and yet he died to swim the river. We can see now the picture of those 80 Kansas lads upon the banks of the Tropic stream in the far-off Orient, preparing to carry a Kansas cyclone into the 600 Philippine insurgents on the opposite bank. There are so many exciting adventures that are a part of our familiar school history! remember also the romantic enterprise of Funston in capturing Aguinaldo. How he went with a small group of Macabebe scouts, disguised as Filipino insurrectos, down into the jungles and villages and mountain passes into which no white man had ever penetrated, until he located his man, captured the chief of the insurrectos, and brought him safely out, thereby taking the very heart out of the revolt. And here we may pause to remark that under any previous rule to which the Filipinos had been accustomed Aguinaldo would have been promptly shot. result would have been the continuance of bitterness and hostility, and the insurrection would still probably be in progress. But Funston not only safely brought Aguinaldo to the American authorities, but the native leader was afterwards set at liberty unharmed, and for 15 years the Philippines have been in peace for the first time in 300 years of their history.

Funston was created brigadier general of the Regular Army for his gallant service in the Philippines. He was not only one of the youngest men to hold that rank but the smallest man physically.

His services did not end with the return of peace. When the terrible visitation came to San Francisco, he was in command at the Presidio. He promptly declared martial law over that raging chaos of man and nature and enforced it with a firm hand. Life and property were soon safe. Shelter was provided for the homeless; food and hospital supplies were dis-Shelter was protributed; the sufferers were gathered into camps and the work of relief systematized by districts and divisions; and soon the generous impulses of the Nation were in touch, over the wire of military efficiency, with the actual needs at the scene of disaster. The San Franciscans are the sincerest mourners at disaster. The San Franciscans are the sincerest mourners at Funston's bier. He occupies a warm place in their hearts for his quickness of decision and his broad impulses and sympathy. What San Francisco needed in that hour was not only the heart

What San Francisco needed in that hour was not only the heart to feel but the brain to decide and the hand to execute.

When the troops were to go into Mexico to deal with Huerta, Gen. Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the Army, selected Gen. Funston as the proper man to lead the Vera Cruz expedition. That port fell first into the hands of the naval authorities, but was turned over to the control of the Army under Funston. It was a peculiarly difficult task which Funston had to perform at that crisis, especially to a man of his blood. The tiny Ameriwas on hostile soil. Hot-headed ambition would can Army have counseled some rash enterprise of invasion and of conquest. Every impulse led the Americans to advance, but humanity and wisdom compelled them to stand their ground. The hardest thing to do under the circumstances was to repel with firmness the dangers which surrounded our troops and restrain with equal firmness their pardonable impatience. Funston did both. No Army under such circumstances in the history of the world ever withdrew with less bitterness and less bloodshed.

Funston was on his way to be made a major general, but on six successive occasions he was passed over and other officers Only a short time ago his long-expected promotion came at the hand of President Wilson.

When events required that our soldiers be ordered to the Mexican border, the War Department again decided that Funston was the man to be placed in command. As he was then a major general, his duties were at the headquarters in San Antonio rather than on the firing line at the front. While we have no way of telling at this time, there are many in this administration who believe that if he had been given a free hand to go into Mexico and get Villa he would have gotten him as promptly and as easily as he got Aguinaldo in the Philippines. [Applause.] Be that as it may, the career of the American Army on the Mexican border shows that some giant hand was at work in organization and discipline. Never before, in the history of our country at least, has there been an army so well handled from a physical and moral standpoint. There were no fever camps, no hospital scandals, and little of the discouragements and breakdowns which distinguished the Spanish-American War. The militia regiments that went forward from the various States were practically raw recruits, unused to camp life. They returned to their homes finished soldiers. The pale-cheeked bank clerks that marched out came back bronzed The militia regiments that went forward from the veterans as hard as nails. There was less sickness and fewer deaths from disease than have ever been known in such a gathering of men. It was this work that broke Funston down-harder work, doubtless, to him than the dangers and privations when his life history had been fully written. Few men have been able to crowd into a short lifetime so many and so varied It seems to have been his part to experiences as Funston. show that the spirit of high emprise and daring is not dead in the American heart. The deeds of his career will be known wherever courage stirs the human heart and manhood has a friend. Out of this gray old world, with its neutral tones of sordid business and its leaden background of the commonplace, there springs the flash of fire that lights up the whole landscape of human events.

Some men can not be forced into the shopkeeper's mold nor grind like tired horses at the treadmill of business. Some men leap to the front in moments of danger with the same energy and instinct with which the eagle soars toward the sun. And as the great bird of freedom leaves the barnyard fowls far below, so the indomitable spirit of genius shakes off the trammels of environment. Evidently, Funston was not born to be a railroad conductor, a newspaper reporter, nor a coffee planter. His career was of his own making. No carpet knight was he with the gold straps pressed upon his shoulders by loving hands or the political influence of friends. He won his spurs in the tented field. The striking thing about the life of this Kansas boy is not that he possessed greater opportunities than other boys but that he was ready for the opportunity when it came. I desire here to pay a tribute of respect to his memory. His record and his fame are safe. [Applause.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, in the death of Fred. Funston this Nation has lost one of its great men and great Funston, as he will be pictured in history, feared nothing. He was adventuresome. He undertook the unusual. His trip to Alaska was that of a pioneer. He spent 18 months with the Indians and Eskimos in that unexplored country studying the flora and fauna of that great Territory. His report would do credit to a scientist in those branches of science.

Immediately he went from that frozen region to the Death Valley in California to make researches and discoveries there. His soul was not satisfied. Hearing of the insurrection in Cuba, he at once went to that island. Without knowledge of the language, without knowledge of the topography of the country, he went there with the determination to fight for the freedom of Cuba; and without any experience whatever as a soldier or any previous military training, he soon rose to the rank of a colonel in the Cuban Army, was severely wounded, had fever, and was thrown to one side to die.

He turned up in a hospital at New York, went through a series of repairs, and again undertook the unusual. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he was appointed as a colonel of the Twentieth Kansas. They were volunteers. They were boys of the State; many of them were his schoolfellows; many of them had attended the State university with him. They were appointed lieutenants and captains and majors in that great regiment, a regiment that made a record that will be a credit to American soldiers as long as history records the achievements of soldiers of the Republic. [Applause.] None of them had any previous experience in military life. They were volunteers. Fred. Funston's only service in the Army before that had been his service in Cuba; and yet his record in the Philippines will compare favorably with the record of any soldier who served his country there.

His capture of Aguinaldo has been referred to as one of the achievements of our Army in the Philippines. That capture really took the heart and life out of the Philippine insurrection.

Fred. Funston's services in San Francisco in restoring order bringing out of the chaos of that catastrophe order and discipline and aid to the citizens of that stricken community, in ministering to the necessities of life, showed that he was a man of more than military ability. His services to those people in Vera Cruz were similar to the services rendered by other distinguished soldiers in some of our tropical countries, in Habana and Santiago. He cleaned up Vera Cruz and made it a habitable city, and the citizens there mourned when Funston retired from that city. They regretted the departure of those who had made their city a habitable place in which to live.

Funston was not afraid to do a soldier's duty. He had a genius for accomplishing things, and, as stated by the gentle-man from Missouri [Mr. Borland], if he had been permitted to go into Mexico with a free hand, there would now be nothing said about the insurrecto Villa, who has given this country and that country so much trouble. [Applause.] He would have disposed of the bandit Villa long ago. [Applause.]

The Army and the country have suffered a great loss in his death, and I am sure that the tribute that this House pays to him is a worthy one. We all join in sympathy with those he left behind-his wife, his children, his mother, his brothers, and

s sisters. [Applause.] Mr. KAHN. Mr. Cha Mr. Chairman, I desire also to pay a brief tribute to Gen. Funston. He was acting as commandant of the Army in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake and fire, which occurred there April 18, 1906. He had his quarters in the hotel and apartment-house district of San Francisco, living on the side of the eminence known as Nob Hill. When the earthquake occurred he immediately jumped into his clothes, rushed into the street, and saw fire breaking out in half a dozen different places in the city. He immediately dispatched a courier to the mayor of the city, informing him that he felt sure there would be a great conflagration in the business and financial sections; that he would at once patrol those sections of San Francisco with troops of the Regular Army of the United States. He also sent a courier to the Presidio of San Francisco and gave instructions to send the troops in double-quick time into the stricken city. By 8 o'clock that morning every street in the financial section of the city was patrolled by the Regular Army soldiers, who effectively prevented looting or destruction of property. They also saved many lives.

It was only a man of Funston's character and initiative who could have realized so readily the dangers that confronted the city, and he was quick to act in the emergency. His readiness on that occasion prevented the destruction of many thousands of dollars' worth of property and the looting of the business houses of the city. San Francisco will never forget Funston's services during that trying period.

Mr. Chairman, within the last six or seven months I have received letters from some of his brother officers, telling me of the splendid work that he performed in Mexico and on the border. They suggested that Congress ought in some fitting way to recognize his splendid ability. In some way or other Gen, Funston heard of this movement. He immediately wrote to me, asking me to take no steps in the matter whatever; that what he had done was his plain, simple duty as a soldier. [Applause.] Recently when I saw him in San Antonio he again referred to the matter. He said when he was appointed a brigadier general in the Regular Army by President McKinley there was some dissatisfaction expressed at his appointment; that since then he felt satisfied that his brother officers had become reconciled to that appointment; that he thought he had won their regard and esteem and wanted nothing done by Congress or anybody else that would subject him to any criticism of any kind, and that, that would subject him to any criticism of any kind, and that, if he were to be given special recognition, he thought other officers ought to be treated in the same way. [Applause.]

He was magnanimous, brave, and a splendid officer. Personally, I shall always hold a very warm spot in my heart for Gen. Funston. When San Francisco was burning there was a four days' old baby in my home in that city. Gen. Funston heard of that, and immediately sent one of his subordinates to my house and left a message that if there were any occasion to bring my wife and baby to a place of safety all the facilities he had at his command were at the disposal of my household. [Applause.] I can never forget that fact. To his own wife and children, as well as his mother, who were very dear to him. I know that every Member of this House extends heartfelt sympathy. They have suffered a great loss, and this country of ours has likewise suffered a great loss in the death of Gen. Funston.

[Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Alabama to the proviso.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

ENLISTED MEN OF THE LINE.

For pay of enlisted men of all grades, including recruits, $27,000,000. Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers n amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GARDNER: Page 11, line 12, strike out $27,000,000" and insert "$40,000,000."

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, that amendment is introduced in order to provide money sufficient to pay the enlisted men in the Army if subsequently we adopt, either in this body or in the other, a new provision of law and a new scale of pay for enlisted men.

There has been a good deal of discussion in this House as to the exact shortage of enlisted men in the Army. After a good deal of correspondence and two sets of letters signed by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] and myself, we finally framed an issue and presented the question to Gen. McCain. His answer is that as nearly as he can estimate it we were short 20,600 enlisted men of all kinds on February 15—five days ago. But he says it is not fair to include in this shortage the total number of vacancies in the unassigned recruits. That may or may not be the case. It is a complicated question, but doubtless there is ground for such a view. However, if the general's opinion is sound, we ought not to go about telling the people that we have authorized one hundred and thirty-three thousand and odd enlisted men of the line for the current year, if it is not proposed to fill up the ranks of the unassigned recruits.

But, Mr. Chairman, I have taken pains, so far as I can, to find out exactly what our Army shortages were, not counting the unassigned recruits, on the 3ist of December, 1916. I believe I am accurate, because my totals correspond with the figures given me by The Adjutant General. If my figures are correct—I have not had time to submit them to The Adjutant General, but shall do so to-day or to-morrow—on December 31, 1916, we were short 109 men in the Engineers, 791 men in the Field Artillery, 11,936 men in the Infantry, 2,675 men in the Coast Artillery, 2,137 men in the Quarter Corps, 500 men in the Ordnance, 1,612 men in the Coast Artillery, 2,137 men in the Quarter Corps, 500 men in the Ordnance, 1,612 men in the Middel Department and in the Signal Corps, 411 men in the Medical Department, and 562 miscellaneous enlisted men, which means school detachments, prison guards, Indian scouts, and so forth, making in all short-ages amounting to 20,733 men, not counting vacancies in the ranks of unassigned recruits. In the Cavalry we had an excess of 199 enlisted men. Deducting that excess leaves a shortage on December 31, 1916, of 20,534 men, not counting the shortages among unassigned recruits.

But, Mr. Chairman, the real question in which the public is interested is the actual number of enlisted men of the line; interested is the actual number of enlisted men of the line; that is to say, the fighting men; the Artillery, Field and Coast; the Infantry, and the Cavalry. The real question of interest is how many fighting men we have, not how many fighting men plus hospital stewards and plus quartermaster's employees and the like. On December 31, 1916, we had 84,771 enlisted men of the line, and that is all we had. As long ago as October 31, 1915, we had nearly as many as that. We had, as a matter of fact, 82,620 men, and yet that was before we passed our boasted preparedness laws. On March 17, 1916, we passed an emergency resolution allowing the President to recruit the Army up to its maximum strength, which at that time was legally up to its maximum strength, which at that time was legally 109,746 enlisted men of the line. Actually at that time we had in the Army 75,830 enlisted men of the line. It does not look as if our recruiting were going on very fast.

Now, what is the use of going around and telling the country that we have provided for a Regular Army of 225,000 men in time of peace and a Regular Army of 300,000 in time of war? It simply misleads the people. I have tried to show the House and this committee that the principal difficulty facing us in the matter of recruitment is the question of pay. I am trying to meet that difficulty by this amendment which I have offered. I shall, as a matter of form, even if it proves not to be in order, offer an amendment a little later increasing the scale of pay. offer an amendment a little later increasing the scale of pay. In the same part of the bill I shall also offer an amendment curtailing the period of enlistment.

Mr. Chairman, I include as a part of my remarks the correspondence with Gen. McCain to which I have referred:

Brig. Gen. H. P. McCain, United States Army, War Department, Washington, D. C. FEBRUARY 17, 1917.

Dear General: Will you be kind enough to answer the following question: How many enlisted men is the United States Army short of the number authorized by the national-defense act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917?

Very truly, yours,

H. E. Hull. H. E. HULL. A. P. GARDNER.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, February 17, 1917.

Hon. Harry E. Hull and Hon. A. P. Gardner, House of Representatives.

GENTLEMEN: In response to your joint note of to-day, in which you request to be advised of the number of vacancies in the enlisted strength of the Army at present, I have the honor to advise you that the total number of vacancies is approximately 20,000. Included in that figure are the vacancies in the unassigned recruits (8,639); but if the unassigned recruits are excluded as not being a part of the strength of either the line or staff the number of vacancies at present is 17,628.

strength of either the line or staff the number of vacancies at present is 11,568.

These figures agree substantially with those furnished to Mr. Gardner on the 26th ultimo; but the figures furnished to Mr. Gardner were those for December 31, whereas the figures now given are brought up to date. As shown by the figures furnished on January 26, the actual strength was 109,959, and the authorized strength 133,166, a difference of 23,207; but included in the vacancies are the 8,639 unassigned recruits, which are not a part of the authorized strength of either the line or the staff.

In other words, it is estimated that the net gain between December 31 and to-day is approximately 3,000 enlisted men.

Very truly, yours,

H. P. McCain,

H. P. McCain, The Adjutant General.

FEBRUARY 18, 1917.

Brig. Gen. H. P. McCain,
Adjutant General United States Army,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.

Dear General: As a good many Members of the House of Representatives are still somewhat puzzled with regard to the extent of the shortage of enlisted men in the Regular Army, would you mind answering the following questions, so that we may be able to put before the House an agreed statement of fact:

1. According to the latest available figures, how many enlisted men of all descriptions, including unassigned recruits, are there in the Regular Army?

2. By how many does this number fall short of the total numbers of enlisted men of all descriptions, including unassigned recruits, authorized by the national-defense act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917?

Very truly, yours.

Very truly, yours,

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, February 19, 1917.

Hon. H. E. HULL and Hon. A. P. GARDNER, House of Representatives.

Hon. A. P. Gardner,

House of Representatives.

Gentlemen: In response to your letter of yesterday in which you request to be advised (1) how many enlisted men of all descriptions, including unassigned recruits, are there in the Regular Army, and (2) how many does that number fall short of the total number of enlisted men of all descriptions, including unassigned recruits, authorized by the national-defense act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, I have the honor to advise you as follows:

On December 31, 1916, the latest date for which complete returns are available, the actual strength of the Army, including unassigned recruits, was 109,959, and the authorized strength was 133,166, leaving 23,207 vacancies of all kinds on that date. From the best data now obtainable it is estimated that the net gain between December 31 and February 15 was approximately 3,000, which would make the actual strength of the Army on the latter date approximately 112,900, and the number of vacancies, including those in the unassigned recruits, approximately 20,600.

The strength of the Philippine Scouts is not included in the foregoing figures. The authorized strength of the Scouts is 5,733, while the actual strength is 5,550, leaving 183 vacancies in that organization on December 31, 1916. It is not believed that any material change in the number of vacancies in the Scouts has occurred between December 31 and February 15.

If the Philippine Scouts are included, the total authorized enisted strength is 138,899 and the approximate actual strength is 118,150, a difference of 20,749.

Very truly, yours,

H. P. McCain,

The Adjutant General.

H. P. McCain, The Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, February 20, 1917.

The Adjutant General's Office,

Washington, February 20, 1917.

Hon. A. P. Gardner,

House of Representatives.

My Dear Mr. Gardner: Referring to my letter of yesterday to you and Mr. Hull in response to your joint request for information concerning the authorized and actual strength of the Army for the purpose of determining the number of vacancies in the enlisted strength, I desire to invite your attention to the following facts:

The statement furnished you yesterday was an accurate answer to your inquiry, but I do not think that the difference between the authorized and actual strength as shown in that letter should be regarded as the number of vacancies in the enlisted strength. To regard that difference as the actual number of vacancies seems unfair to the recruiting service, because it includes the total number of unassigned recruits authorized, and those recruits are not a part of the authorized strength of any line, staff, or miscellaneous organization. They are nothing more nor less than a surplus or reserve that may be maintained without impairment to the strength of the established organizations. In other words, they are an addition to, but not a part of, the established units of the Army.

Under the act of February 2, 1901, the unassigned recruits were a part of the line and were included in the strength authorized by law for line organizations, and consequentiy it was proper to include vacancies in the unassigned recruits as vacancies in the enlisted strength of the Army. Different from that act, the present law provides for unassigned recruits in excess of the authorized by law for line organizations, and consequentiy it was proper to include vacancies in the unascigned recruits as vacancies in the enlisted strength of the Army. Different from that act, the present law provides for unassigned recruits in excess of the authorized strength of the various units; not for the purpose of maintaining the total number of recruits in excess of the authorized. In fact, it would not be necessary to make any

H. P. McCain, The Adjutant General.

Mr. CRAGO. I realize the necessity for utilizing all our time in the discussion of this important bill, but under the circumstances I think I would be remiss in my duty if I did not add or attempt to add something to the words of eulogy which have been so fittingly pronounced over one of our national officers who has answered the last roll call, Gen. Frederick Funston, who died February 19, 1917, at San Antonio, Tex.

In 1898, as an officer of the Tenth Pennsylvania Regiment, I reached San Francisco sometime during the month of May. A few days after our arrival another organization joined us, the Twentieth Kansas Regiment, commanded by Col. Frederick Funston. I could give no better illustration of the unpreparedness in which our country found itself in 1898 than by pointing to that particular organization. We thought we were unequipped and unprovided for, but the Twentieth Kansas boys, as fine men as ever shouldered rifles, came into camp in San Francisco ununiformed, unequipped, with hardly the semblance of the equipment of a soldier. They were not equipped by the time we left, so we left on an expedition before them. As an officer of our regiment, I met Col. Funston at that time, and when a few months later he joined the Eighth Army Corps in the city of Manila, it was my pleasure to meet him care. the city of Manila, it was my pleasure to meet him again. On the 4th of February the Philippine insurrection started, and when the line of troops was formed to advance on Malolos the Twentieth Kansas was on our left, and for weeks and months our work of driving back the insurrectos, of disarming them, of clearing the country, and opening up the railroad, was per-formed in conjunction with this splendid regiment composed of citizens of Kansas.

Our men mingled with the men from Kansas and we came to know them well. We knew Gen. Funston well; he was always regarded as a real fighter, and the boys of the regiment were never afraid to follow him any place. [Applause.] Today in this National Legislative Hall on behalf of the men of the Eighth Army Corps, the men who knew and loved Gen. Funston, on behalf of the men who followed him and looked to him as a leader during those days in which they were engaged in a warfare which cost the lives of many brave American soldiers, I want to add my feeble words of tribute and respect to the memory of a gallant soldier, a real American. The life of Gen. Funston is typical of our institutions; here and there out of the good red soil springs forth a man towering high above his fellows in the elements of leadership, and we wonder at the seeming mystery his life gives us. In life he gave all to country, in death he becomes one of our immortals, an example to those who shall follow after him. [Applause.]

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I do not know how the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] arrived at the figures which he has included in his amendment—$40,000,000—but I presume it is a mathematical calculation. Last year we appropriated for the enlisted men of the line $23,000,000. This year the estimate submitted to us was $31,979,596, and this bill proposes to appropriate $27,000,000, which sum was arrived at as explained by the chairman of the committee when he explained the bill a few days ago.

I presume the figures of the chairman are correct; that is, figuring on the statement of Gen. McCain as to the number of men that we will get during the next few months. I simply took the floor to say that I have been and am now an advocate of higher pay for the privates in the Regular Army. I realize that to give the private more pay we will have to increase this item, and I further understand that an amendment to increase the pay of the soldier is subject to a point of order if anyone feels to make it. However, it may be that we are all convinced at this time that the only way that we can get the men to fill up the Army as provided for in the national-defense act is to increase the pay of the private soldiers, and feeling so, the point of order may not be made. But if not made, we should increase this item, and, while I do not know whether the figures of the gentleman from Massachusetts are correct, I feel inclined to support him, because it will lead up to increasing the pay of the private soldier. When we are increasing the pay of the officers and promoting them, I feel that the time has come when we ought to increase the pay of the man who carries the gun in the Army of the United States.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in-how much time does the gentleman want on that side?

Mr. ANTHONY. I want five minutes.
Mr. GARDNER. I would like two minutes to explain about the figures

Mr. FREEMAN. I would like to have 10 minutes.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraph and amendments thereto conclude in 17

Mr. STAFFORD. Does that allow 10 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. DENT. That allows 7 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut. I will make it 20 minutes, Mr. Chairman, and give the gentleman from Connecticut 8 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close at the expiration of 20 minutes, the time to be divided as has been informally indicated.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. May I inquire of the chairman if he has changed his purpose to present a certain amendment in connection with the paragraph?

Mr. DENT. I have not, and will present it.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. But if amendments are foreclosed by limiting debate

The CHAIRMAN. The agreement does not foreclose the right to offer an amendment. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks that I have just made by inserting the correspondence alluded to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FREEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gardner] in his laudable desire to provide in this country an adequate defense, but I have no sympathy whatever with his proposal to enlist men by the inducement of higher pay for the protection and defense of other able-bodied men of the United States. I believe that in this great Republic we should not depend upon a hired Army. The other day I had occasion to state that it was our plain duty to maintain a fleet sufficient to prevent the transportation of troops across the Atlantic and the Pacific by any other nation. I believe if we are faithful and energetic in the pursuit of such a policy there will be no need of a large standing Army. Our combined Military and Naval Establishment should be organized solely with a view of home protection, and never for the purpose of foreign aggression. [Applause.] There is always a risk that a large standing Army may be used for other purposes than for protection and defense, and for that reason I have been fairly content with the provisions of the national-defense act and with the provisions of the bill now pending.

I am, however, not unmindful that through the courage and statesmanship of loyal, patriotic Americans in the past we have become a great Nation of the world, with ever-widening dominion, with ever-increasing responsibilities, and I am deeply grateful that through their hardships, through their sacrifices. we have inherited a country great and prosperous in all things; rich in agriculture, rich in manufactures, rich in mineral resources, rich in the arts and sciences, rich in freedom. And I now keenly realize that this great national wealth of ours, if left unprotected, is an element of peril when other nations of the world, animated by lust of conquest and greed of trade, are arming and equipping by the aid of conscript laws millions and millions of their men, trained in the art of modern warfare. Our friendly neighbor upon the north will soon have over 500,000 men, trained veterans. Our unfriendly Our friendly neighbor upon the north will neighbor on the south is making out of every Mexican bandit more or less of a trained soldier, and there is ever present the possibility that we may not be able to maintain control of the ocean so as to prevent the transportation of foreign troops to So now I believe that our traditional military our shores. policy, so much praised by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] the other day, our traditional military policy which heretofore has been successful, of no large standing army and of reliance solely upon a civilian population formerly somewhat trained in the use of firearms, should now be improved and brought up to date in a most radical manner. The experience of England in this war has demonstrated that a civilian without previous military training is absolutely worthless for immediate use as a soldier. I believe that we should now adopt the policy of universal military training for all young men in the Regular Army of the United States, enlistments to be lim-ited to one year, denying to privates and perhaps to corporals the privilege of reenlistment. In this way there will be a chance for all, and yet there will be no large permanent standing army. The youth of our country are compelled to go to school for years without pay for their own good and for the good of society. Therefore, I hold that they should be compelled to serve with merely nominal pay, certainly not higher pay, for another year in the military service of their country. I believe that this policy could be adopted without any real economic loss to the Nation at large. I believe that this one year of training in the Regular Army will never be forgotten and that the lessons of loyalty, of patriotism, of obedience to constituted authority will turn them out better men, better civilians, better equipped in every way to perform the duties of civic life, and will make them more ready, more willing to respond to their country's call in their country's hour of need. Experience has shown that a man without previous military training, a man over the age of 21 years, is apt to weigh alto-gether too nicely the discomforts and perils of war.

I have been informed that in our Civil War in the Union Army there were more enlistments of boys under the age of 16 than there were of men under the age of 22, that there were more enlistments of boys under 19 than there were over 19, and that there were enlistment of 2,150,000 boys under the age of 21. I am in favor of universal military training in the Regular Army, playing no favorites, granting no certificates of exemption to those who are serving in the National Guard, nor to those who are attending military and naval academies, to anyone else for any cause whatsoever save physical disability. I believe in one year enlistments in the Regular Army, of all young men at some time, between the ages of 17 and 22 I believe that in such an army there will be no great hardship, in that kind of an army there will be no snowbirds, men who enlist in November and desert in May. In that army there will be no industrial failures, men anxious only for their $15 per month and their keep. Men in that army under the uniform of the United States when off duty will be welcomed everywhere, in theaters and places of amusement. Young ladies may walk down the streets with perfect propriety with privates of the United States and rest under no suspicion.

The uniform of the United States would cover alike the son of a millionaire and the son of a day laborer, the son of a Such an minister of the gospel and the son of a gambolier. army a real democracy should have. Such an army this great

Government of the people ought to have. [Applause.]

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, if I believed that the only reason why we have failed to secure as many recruits for the Army as we should was due to the fact that the pay was not sufficient, I might agree with the proposal of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gardner], but I make the assertion that if this country has to compete with the wages being paid in civil life, the big scale of wages now in vogue at the munition plants supplying the warring nations of Europe, in order to secure recruits for the Army, it will bankrupt this country even though it is the richest Nation on the face of the earth. fore, it is impossible to attempt competition of that kind. Aside from that, the figures in this bill have been framed upon the assertion from The Adjutant General of the Army that in his opinion we will make the second increment authorized under the reorganization bill by July 1. I saw Gen. McCain yesterday, and he told me that the figures of recruiting for the last month were so far in excess of what he thought they would be that he fully believed, had no reason to doubt, that he would obtain the necessary recruits to bring the Army up to its authorized strength by July 1.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. GARDNER. Is it not a fact that the reason the recruiting figures are showing so favorably is that they are holding on to the time-expired men instead of letting them go to the

Mr. ANTHONY. I can not say as to that.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit me to answer, I will state that I asked Gen. McCain that identical question in the hearings, and the gentleman from Massachusetts will find his statement there to the effect that in making his calculation he did not calculate upon those.

Yes; but he has in these 3,000 in that Mr. GARDNER.

Mr. Chairman, I will say that twice in my service upon the Military Affairs Committee I have assisted in increasing the pay of the enlisted men-not only of the enlisted men, but of the noncommissioned officers of the Army. of all, we should see to it that the noncommissioned officer is well paid. He is the man that we want to retain in the service, and first of all he should receive our consideration. I can not agree again with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gard-NER] that it is clearly a matter of pay that stands in the way of obtaining an army of the size we need. If we go to the extreme of the policy advocated by the gentleman from Massachusetts, we might as well hire an army of Hessians and mercenaries, because that is finally what it will come to. I believe there are other things to be considered in this matter of making the service attractive so that we can obtain recruits. is becoming more and more an acceptable place for service for the American boy, and we can make it even more so with the reforms that can be brought about; so that, as friendly as I am to the enlisted man of the Army, I do not believe we would be proceeding along a proper course by merely raising the pay at this time.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. ANTHONY. I will.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is it not a fact that these figures that are in the bill are figures of the committee after a most careful investigation and examination of the expert testimony of the Army officers who came before us?

I will say they are. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. GARDNER.

Mr. ANTHONY. I will.

Mr. GARDNER. Is it not also a fact they are calculated based on the present rate of pay?

Mr. ANTHONY. They are.

Mr. GARDNER. Then what is the point of the question of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. ANTHONY. Let me say this

Mr. GARDNER. I propose to raise them; that is the whole

Mr. ANTHONY. It is very easy to speak of the enlisted men of the Army receiving $15 a month as their pay. As a matter of fact, the House should remember that a large percentage of the enlisted strength of the Army are noncommissioned officers, and when you speak of the average pay of the enlisted men of the Army the average pay, instead of being $180 a year, will run up to about $266.50 on the average. That is the pay in dollars and cents.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. ANTHONY. Let me complete this. On top of that, if you add the board and lodging of the men, it is worth at least $20 a month. If you add to that clothing and shoes, it is worth at least $10 a month, and if you add to that the medical service and hospital service, it will reach $5 a month, and the pay of the average enlisted man in the Army to-day is nearer $48 a month than the contemptuous "$15 per month" generally mentioned by critics of Army pay.

Mr. GARDNER. Now, the gentleman knows, I suppose, that the bulk of the noncommissioned officers are corporals?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. GARDNER. How much more does a corporal get than an enlisted man?

Mr. ANTHONY. Only a few dollars more; but I will say to the gentleman when he figures the noncommissioned enlisted staff along with the others it will run to a high figure. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. McKenzie], the way I arrived at my figure of $40,000,000 is this: I prepared a complete scale of pay for the enlisted men and noncommissioned officers of the Army and submitted it some months ago to Gen. Sharpe, Quartermaster General, and asked him to calculate out its expense. He calculated it out, I suppose, on the basis of the entire second increment next year, which is not the basis on which the committee has calculated its figures of $27,000,000. After Gen. Sharpe informed me that my scale would call for $30,000,000 more, I reduced the scale somewhat. I have offered an amendment providing $13,000,000 more. I wanted to be perfectly sure that there should not be more money to pay enlisted men than the number of enlistments would warrant. I prefer that the War Department should be obliged to come back for a deficiency appropriation. I can not tell how far short my amendment will fall of the amount required to meet the wage scale which I shall offer. It is, of course, impossible to predict to what extent the increased pay will or will not result in increased enlistments.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARDNER. I will.

Mr. DOWELL. On the basis that the gentleman has figured what would be the pay of the enlisted man?

Mr. GARDNER. The base pay of a private of the second class is now $15 a month, and I raise it to $25 a month. I have raised corporals and sergeants more than privates, because I believe that one of the greatest inducements to enlistment is for a recruit to realize that it is possible for him to rise to a highly paid place, even if his education prevents him from becoming a commissioned officer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.
Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes of my time to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Tilson].

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, this is clearly and purely a matter of mathematics. If the amendment to be offered later by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GAEDNER] shall prevail it will be necessary that we put in the figures he proposes here. If that amendment does not prevail, there is no good reason for putting in the figures he proposes.

Mr. GARDNER. Is it not possible an amendment which is in order in the Senate to increase the scale of pay might be adopted? If it saw the House wished to increase the pay but were merely prevented by their own rules, the Senate might act and make their own increase.

Mr. TILSON. If we assume that the amendment of the gentleman is going to be adopted in the Senate, I take it we should also assume that the Senate will increase the appropriation to fit. It seems to me that we might well pass this paragraph with a unanimous-consent agreement that in case the amendment to be proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts be agreed to that we will return to this item. I assure him I shall then vote for his amendment. It seems to me that is all there is to it. There is no use voting an increased appropriation here when under the law, as it now stands, we can not spend it.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. I will yield.

Mr. GARDNER. Does not the gentleman see that my scale of pay is bound to go out on the point of order and we have no way to test the sense of the House except on the amendment which I have offered?

We can not get a vote in this House except on my amendment, because the increased scale of pay is out of the bill.

Mr. TILSON. Suppose we should pass the amendment proposed by the gentleman to increase this item to $40,000,000?

By adopting it we should be increasing the item $13,000,000 more than we could expend under the law.

Mr. GARDNER. If that is an unexpended balance, it returns to the Treasury, does it not?

Mr. TILSON. Oh, yes.
Mr. GARDNER. What possible harm could it do, then?

Mr. TILSON. By the same reasoning we might increase all these items a hundred millions, for that matter, because they are all authorized by law. But we are not going to do it.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, the whole proposition now before the committee is whether or not the Committee on Military Affairs of the House has submitted a sufficient appropriation for the Army under the law as it now exists. I undertook to say in my statement the other day when presenting this bill that we had made these figures based upon the probable strength in the Army in accordance with past and present conditions, and that under no circumstances could the Army next year be hoped to be greater than 115,000 men of the line. This being the case, and basing the figures upon the figures of the Quartermaster's Department, at $237 a year, which includes extra pay for superior marksmanship, and so forth, it was a little more than $26,000,000. In order to amply provide for the support of the enlisted men of the line, we made the figures $27,000,000. I understand the gentleman from Massachusetts is offering an amendment that is to increase it to $40,000,000, upon the theory that he is going to offer a subsequent amendment to increase the pay of privates from $15 to $25 a month. Of course, that would be subject to a point of order, and I expect to make the point of order

Mr. GARDNER. I am not so sure it is going to be subject to a point of order.

Mr. DENT. Well, I think it is subject to a point of order, and I understood the gentleman a few moments ago, in reply to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Tilson], to admit that it was subject to a point of order.

Mr. GARDNER. I will take back the admission if I made any such mistake.

Mr. DILL. Will the gentleman from Alabama yield for a question?

Mr. DENT. Yes. Mr. DILL. Has the committee made any provision for increased pay of the private soldier in this bill?

Mr. DENT. It has not. Mr. DILL. Did the committee consider the fact that all expenses have greatly increased?

Mr. DENT. The committee considered that, but the committee also considered the fact that the Government supplies the enlisted man with his subsistence, and so forth, and he does not have to pay for it.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DENT. Yes, sir.

Mr. DOWELL. Has the committee recommended any other provision for the stimulation of recruiting to the Regular Army?

Mr. DENT. Not in this bill; no. I stated the other day when this bill was presented to the House that during this short session of Congress the Committee on Military Affairs came to the conclusion early in the hearings that it would be impossible to make any radical or material changes in the legislation providing for the Military Establishment of the country. This is an appropriation bill to carry on the establishment as created by this Congress at the last session.

Mr. DOWELL. Does not the gentleman believe that something should be done in this bill to increase the recruits up to the authorization?

Mr. DENT. Well, the gentleman would like to have something done in order to accomplish that, but I confess so far as I am concerned no tangible suggestion upon that subject has been made to the committee.

Mr. DOWELL. Does the gentleman believe that if the pay is increased it will have the tendency to stimulate recruits and fill up the ranks?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Gardner: Page 11, line 12, strike out "$27,000,000" and insert "$40,000,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.
The committee divided; and there were—ayes 24, noes 55.

So the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as 10110ws:

That the act of May 11, 1908 (35 Stat. L., 110), is amended to read as follows:

"That hereafter enlisted men now qualified or hereafter qualifying as marksmen shall receive $2 per month; as sharpshooters, $3 per month; as expert rifiemen, $5 per month; as second-class gunners, $2 per month; as first-class gunners, $3 per month; as expert first-class gunners, Field Artillery, $5 per month; as gun pointers, gun commanders, observers second-class, chief planters, and chief loaders, $7 per month; as plotters, observers first-class, casemate electriclans, and coxswains, $9 per month, all in addition to their pay, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, but no man shall receive at the same time additional pay for more than one of the classifications named in this section."

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I see the gentleman from Kentucky has done what I was going to do.

Mr. SHERLEY. I would like to ask why the proposed increase touching the Field Artillery, $5 a month, is limited to Field Artillery?

Mr. DENT. I will state to the gentleman from Kentucky that is the only provision, as I recall the hearings in this amendment, which is new matter. The Ordnance Department suggested that expert first-class gunners of the Field Artillery should have the benefit of this, as the others named in the act. That is the only reason that is given for it, and I confess it is subject to a point of order. It is new legislation.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman says the Ordnance Department indicated that?

Mr. DENT. The Chief of Ordnance.

Mr. SHERLEY. I do not see why it comes under him to indicate an increased pay for men in the mobile army under the Field Artillery.

Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DENT. Yes.

Mr. KAHN. That was put in there because the expert rifleman with the small arms gets that additional pay.

Mr. SHERLEY. Why should it not apply, then, to the coast artillery man, who is an expert with coast artillery as well as field artillery?

Mr. KAHN. Because the department said and the committee felt that a man who would become expert with a big gun ought to get the increased pay as well as the man who had become expert with the small arms.

Mr. SHERLEY. I understand; but there are some big guns in connection with the Coast Artillery.

Mr. ANTHONY. Does not that paragraph cover the Coast Artillery as well as the Field Artillery, the gun pointers, and the chief commanders, and the chief planters and chief loaders connected with the Coast Artillery?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes; but this is raising the Field Artillery. Mr. ANTHONY. We are even going so far as to pay the Coast Artillery a higher bonus than the Field Artillery.

Mr. SHERLEY. Gun pointers are limited to Coast Artillery? Mr. STAFFORD. That provides only for the increase of the salary of expert class gunners in the Field Artillery, $5 a month. That is the only change of the existing statute.

Mr. SHERLEY. I understand that. That is not the point I was trying to arrive at. I am free to confess that I am not familiar with the regulations touching the pay and the classifications made here, but I understand from the gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn] that the classifications that follow this new matter are those that relate to the Coast Artillery and do not relate to the Field Artillery.

Mr. KAHN. Some of them; yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. What ones?

Mr. KAHN. I think all of them relate to the Coast Artillery. They all refer to the Coast Artillery.

Mr. SHERLEY. The Coast Artillery only?

Mr. KAHN. Yes. We have no first-class observers, no gun pointers, no observers of the second class, no chief planters and chief loaders in the Field Artillery. They are all Coast Artillery.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Dent] realizes that this makes the paragraph open to other amendments that would otherwise be subject to a point of order.

just tell the gentleman that for what it may be worth.

Mr. KAHN. All the other raises in the paragraph are provided for by existing law.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky withdraws the point of order.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

Mr. STAFFORD. It is merely a formal amendment. I think in amending a paragraph of a prior Army appropriation act the paragraph should be described sufficiently; and the purpose of my amendment is to make more exact the description of the paragraph about to be amended by the action of the com-

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. STAFFORD: Page 11, line 13, after the word "That," insert "that paragraph of," and insert after the word "ten," in line 15, the following: "which provides for additional pay of marks-

Mr. STAFFORD. So as to read-

Mr. FESS. Let it be read in the way it will read as amended. Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary in-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Is it too late to make a point of order against the paragraph as to the expert first-class gunner?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks so. The reservation was withdrawn some time ago, and we proceeded to take up the matter, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] offered an amendment. The Chair would not be hasty in holding that, but under the circumstances the proceedings have Has the gentleman from Wisconsin completed what he had to say? The Chair understood he had the floor.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

Mr. STAFFORD. If the gentleman from Alabama has followed the amendment-

I have not.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the Clerk read the amendment as it is amended?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the paragraph as it will appear when amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Stafford: On page 11, line 13, after the word "That," insert the words "that paragraph of," and insert after the word "ten," in line 15, the following: "which provides for additional pay of marksmen, etc.," so that the paragraph as amended will read, beginning on line 13, "That that paragraph of the act of May 11, 1908 (35 Stat. L., 110), which provides for additional pay of marksmen, etc., is amended so as to read as follows."

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, would it not be better to have the exact paragraph stated?

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask a question, if I can get the floor.

Mr. STAFFORD. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DOWELL. As I understand the gentleman's amendment, by adding the words "That that paragraph," it does not sufficiently describe or specifically describe the paragraph of the act of May 11.
Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, yes, it does.

Mr. DOWELL. My view is that the wording as it is now is more definite and certain than with the amendment of the gentleman.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman is only observing part of the amendment. If he will observe the second part of the amendment, which provides for additional pay of marksmen, and so forth, he will find that it describes it absolutely.

Mr. DOWELL. But "That that," as I suggested, is not definitely describing what is contained in this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order to that part of the paragraph referring to expert gunners and field artillery, that it is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. We have already passed on that.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the point of order of the gentleman comes too late.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has already ruled on that, to the effect that while he would not be hasty, yet we had proceeded too far to take that up.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made a few moments ago on Gen.

Funston

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I make the same request. Mr. FESS. And I make the same.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Fess] make the same request. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford].

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Gardner: Page 12, line 2, after the word "section," strike out the quotation marks and insert:

"Provided, That hereafter the monthly pay of enlisted men of the Army shall be increased as follows: Master electricians and all others receiving $75, to $85; master engineer, junior grade, Corps of Engineers, from $65 to $75; sergeant, first class, Medical Department, from $50 to $60; first sergeants, from $45 to $65; sergeant, first class, Corps of Engineers, and all others receiving $45, to $55; battalion sergeants major of Infantry, and all others receiving $40, to $50; sergeants of Engineers, and all others receiving $30, to $40; cuartermaster sergeants of Cavalry, and Artillery, from $30 to $40; quartermaster sergeants of Cavalry, and all others receiving $30, to $40; cuporals of Engineers, Ordnance, Signal Corps, Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry, from $24 and $21 to $38; chief mechanics, and all others receiving $24, to $34; saddlers, and all others receiving $21, to $31; privates, first class, and all others receiving $18, to $28; privates, second class, and all others receiving $15, to $25."

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order. Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I should like to know what the point of order is.

Mr. DENT. The point of order is that it is new legislation and an attempt to change the law with reference to the pay of privates in the Army.

Mr. STAFFORD. I make the further point of order that it is not germane.

Mr. GARDNER. I wish to be heard on the point of order. I read from section 824 of the rules:

A paragraph which proposes legislation being permitted to remain, may be perfected by a germane amendment.

The paragraph which I seek to amend was permitted to re-That seems to dispose of one of the points of order. Yesterday I furnished the Chair with the references on that They are to be found in volume 4 of Hinds' Precedents.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman kindly cite the precedents which he called to the attention of the Chair?

Mr. GARDNER. I will ask the gentleman to refer to the rules of the House of Representatives, page 367, ending with the second paragraph. Yesterday, I brought the precedents to the attention of the Chair. Now, this question which the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] has raised may, or may not, be a good point of order. I have sent for the national-defense act, but I can not find in it the paragraph which provides for marksmanship pay.

Mr. TILSON. It is not in the national-defense act. It is in the act of May 11, 1908. That is where the marksmanship pay

Mr. GARDNER. Has the gentleman got that paragraph? Mr. TILSON. No; it is in 35 Statutes at Large, page 110. Mr. GARDNER. If the same paragraph which provides for marksmanship pay also provides for the pay of the Army, under the wording of the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin, it is germane, because his amendment provided that the paragraph of the act of May 11, and so forth, which provides pay for marksmanship shall be amended, and so on. Now, if that same paragraph also provides for the general pay of enlisted men, then my amendment is germane.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman is in error in that particular.

Mr. KAHN. It does not provide for the pay of enlisted men. I have the statute here.

Mr. GARDNER. Then the gentleman's point of order is well

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman virtually concedes that the point of order is well taken, because I have examined the paragraph referred to in the bill which is sought to be amended, and have it before me. It is the Army appropriation bill of 1909. The paragraph under consideration is limited exclusively to the pay for marksmanship of gunners and the like. There is but one class of enlisted men to which it applies. The gentleman by his amendment seeks to include a different class and many other We had that same question before the House, but if the gentleman concedes the point of order—

Mr. GARDNER. I do not. I find in the statute that marksmanship pay is included under the general heading of "Pay of enlisted men." I have it here.

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not wish to cut short the argument of the gentleman from Massachusetts. When he has concluded, I shall be glad to take the floor, with the indulgence of the com-

Mr. GARDNER. The amendment adopted on the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin-and I fancy that he was in-telligent enough to offer that amendment with a view to shutting out my subsequent amendment-

Mr. STAFFORD. I had no such idea in mind. I wanted to perfect the bill.

Mr. GARDNER. All right. I gave the gentleman credit

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, no. If I had wanted to shut out the gentleman's amendment, I would have made a point of order on the original paragraph. I was well aware of the procedure to take if I wanted really to bar the gentleman from the consideration of his amendment.

Mr. GARDNER. Very well. Now, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] did, as a matter of fact, offer an amendment, which as adopted, makes the paragraph which we are discussing relate in terms to a certain paragraph in the act of May 11, 1908, Thirty-fifth Statutes at Large, page 110. By the gentleman's amendment a certain paragraph in that act is described as the paragraph which provides for marksmanship pay for enlisted men. Now, the gentleman raises the point of order that my amendment is not germane to that particular paragraph. I admit at once that it is not germane to the marksmanship pay of enlisted men. I contend, however, that it is germane to the paragraph, because the paragraph re-lates to pay of all sorts. It begins—

For pay of enlisted men of all grades, including recruits, $10,000,000and so forth. Later the same paragraph provides for marksmanship pay, all under the subheading of "pay of enlisted men." Now, I do not know the definition of the word "paragraph," when it refers to a statute. But this provision cites a It cites a particular paragraph of that law and describes it as the paragraph which contains the provision for marksmanship pay. I submit that the very same paragraph which contains the provision for marksmanship pay also contains the provision for the monthly pay of the enlisted men of the Army. For that reason I dispute the point of order which the gentleman makes to the effect that my amendment is not germane to the paragraph of the law which I seek to amend.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the Chair ask the gentleman a question. A point of order was reserved by the gentleman from Kentucky to some portion of the present paragraph as found in the reported bill. I presume that was directed to some content of that paragraph out of order. What particular part of that paragraph was the reservation to?

Mr. GARDNER. The whole paragraph, beginning at line 13, page 11, to line 2, page 12, at the end of the quotation marks.

The CHAIRMAN. Some portion of the paragraph, I suppose, is undoubtedly in order.

Mr. GARDNER. I know of nothing. It is an entire change from existing law.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, that is not the fact. is that the entire paragraph is now the law except that part in lines 20 and 21, "as expert first-class gunners, Field Artillery, $5 a month." That is all the additional matter that is not in the original law of May 11, 1908. There is also the word $5 a month." "coxswain" which was not in the original law of May 11, 1908, but was made law by the national-defense act. Therefore, the only part that is new legislation are the lines 20 and 21, reading "and expert first-class gunners, Field Artillery, $5 a month."

Mr. GARDNER. May I ask the Chair a question?
The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.
Mr. GARDNER. Suppose it is true that the point of order those particular words, would the Chair in sustaining that point of order have ruled out the whole paragraph or broken the sentence in the middle and ruled out the offending words?

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order may be directed against the paragraph as a whole containing offending matter, or directed only against the offending matter.

Mr. GARDNER. Then it is for the RECORD to show what the reservation in the point of order was?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. The Chair was trying to seek what the gentleman in making the point of order had in mindwhether the whole paragraph was the offending matter.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I was mistaken in supposing that the entire scale was new, and the RECORD will show whether the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] made his point of order against the whole paragraph or to some particular part. It seems to me the whole contention should rest on that Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, this question of what constitutes a paragraph was decided by the Chair on last Saturday.

Mr. GARDNER. Only so far as bills are concerned, not the statute law

Mr. KAHN. What constitutes a paragraph in a bill constitutes a paragraph after the bill has become a law.

Mr. GARDNER. No; what constitutes a paragraph in a bill the House of Representatives will determine, but what constitutes a paragraph in a law is what the court decides after the Senate and the House have both acted.

Mr. KAHN. I rather think the court would look at the debates in the House in trying to construe whether it was a paragraph in the bill or not. Debate on this very bill points out very clearly what constitutes a paragraph and what Congress intended. The Chair ruled on Saturday, if you remember, that certain provisions of the section, each separate provision, notwithstanding they were separated from each other by a semicolon, constituted a paragraph. The Chairman will find the debate on the matter on page 3534 of the Congressional Record. The matter in the bill was on page 6, lines 1, 2, and 3. Chair held that the separate provision was a separate paragraph.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph under consideration merely changes existing law by including in the enumerated classes to receive higher pay "expert first-class gunners, Field Artillery, $5 a month," and "coxswain."

Also in the further particular that the proviso carried in the original paragraph limiting the number that may be appointed is eliminated.

I wish to direct the Chair's attention to the phraseology of the paragraph sought to be amended. It is a paragraph that seeks to increase the pay of the enlisted men when performing a certain function, that of gunnery; in fact, the annotator of the Statutes at Large, page 110, recognizes that by saying, "Additional pay, marksmen and gunners." I direct special attention to the wording of the paragraph itself because it must all turn on that pivotal point. The first sentence of the paragraph is as follows: "That hereafter enlisted men now qualified or hereafter qualified"—as what? Qualified "as marksmen, shall receive $2 a month; qualified as sharpshooters, $3 a month; qualified as expert riflemen, $5 a month; qualified as second-class gunners, $2 a month," and going right down the line increasing salaries to those qualified in respective grades of gunnery work to which they may be assigned.

The question before the Chair is whether the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts, which seeks to increase the salary of the whole Army, is germane to this paragraph.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.
Mr. GARDNER. My argument was that it was germane to the paragraph.

Mr. STAFFORD. And I am saying that it is not germane to the paragraph. This is not, as I was about to say when interrupted by the gentleman, a new proposition for decision by the It is the very same question that was raised here when the Post Office appropriation bill was under consideration in the House, when the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL] attempted to offer to sections 3 and 5 of the Post Office appropriation bill, which carried an amendment to the criminal code, an amendment providing for the exclusion from the mails of newspapers containing liquor advertisements. What did the Speaker hold on that occasion? I raised the point of order that it was not germane to the paragraph under consideration. And the Chair must take notice that while there has been in this paragraph new legislation incorporated and that waives the right to object to kindred legislation, it does not waive the right was not reserved against the whole paragraph but only against to raise the point of order as to that legislation which is not germane. The Speaker of the House, after an extended argument and good consideration by the Speaker, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley], the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], and myself participating in the debate, held and followed the principle that if these paragraphs were submitted as a separate item in a bill it would not be in order to offer the amendment that the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL] sought to

The only question before the Chair is, supposing there was brought in the House a separate bill, the paragraph contained on page 11, between line 13 and line 2 on page 12, whether an amendment limited exclusively to providing pay to enlisted men who were qualified as marksmen would be permitted to be a handle upon which to hang other amendments to incorporate something entirely different, to provide an increase in pay for the entire enlisted force whether they performed the service as marksmen or not. The Chair will have to hold under the wellrecognized rule that because a bill provides one character of proposal is no warrant for opening it to include additional characters of proposals or different characters of amendments. The amendment of the gentleman which purposed to increase the salary of other enlisted men hinges on the words in line 17, "That hereafter enlisted men now qualified or hereafter qualifying as marksmen," and so forth. This was an increase of salary of enlisted men qualified as marksmen. It had but one central idea, and that idea was connected with gunnery; but the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gardner] has nothing to do with gunnery or marksmanship. It is extraneous, and because it is extraneous on the subject of marksmanship he can not, because the paragraph has been amended in a proper way so far as germaneness is concerned, use it to carry another proposal for increasing the salary of the enlisted force. I shall not stop to cite the numerous decisions pertaining to germaneness where the Chair on prior occasions has ruled such amendments out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. GARDNER], a day or two ago called the attention of the Chair to certain precedents, in this connection. These precedents have been duly examined, and found to be difficult of reconciliation. The general proposition with which the Members are all familiar, is that a paragraph in a bill which contains matter not in order, is subject to a point of order even though the offending and illegal matter may constitute but a relatively small proportion of the entire paragraph. This point of order is good either against the entire paragraph, or the offending matter. But if the point of order is not made to the paragraph, or offending matter, then the entire paragraph becomes in order. been held in the latter case that such a paragraph may be perfected by a germane amendment. (Hinds, Vol. IV, secs. 3823-Hence the question has often arisen whether these perfecting amendments should be germane to the paragraph as a whole, thereby adding a new and greater proposition of illegality than that contained in the original offending matter, or germane only to this matter which has become in order by reason of the failure to raise the question of illegality. The precedents It has been held that the right to perfect a are conflicting. paragraph which would have been out of order if the question had been raised, by a germane amendment, does not permit an amendment which adds an additional proposition of illegality (Hinds, Vol. IV, secs. 3836, 3837, 3862).

In other words, the latter precedents require the perfecting amendment to be germane to the original offending language in the paragraph. If the amendments carrying additional legislation are germane to the offending language, they are in order, but not so, if they relate rather to the body of the paragraph. This proposition is clearly stated in the following decision:

If a paragraph has been included in a bill which has in it a taint of illegality, that paragraph can be corrected or perfected by an amendment, but if the paragraph which is proposed as an amendment, carries a further degree of illegality, affecting the whole paragraph as amended, then it is not in order.

The offending matter in the paragraph under consideration is contained in these words:

As expert first-class gunners, Field Artillery, $5 per month.

It can hardly be said that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts, is germane to this language, and designed to perfect it. This being so, the Chair holds that a new and comprehensive proposition of illegality is sought to be added to the paragraph by the proposed amendment. For this reason, and in conformity with the precedent last cited, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GARDNER: Page 12, line 2, after the word

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Gardner: Page 12, line 2, after the word "section," insert:

"Section 27 of the national-defense act, approved June 3, 1916, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 27. Enlistments in the Regular Army: On and after the 1st day of November, 1917, all enlistments in the Regular Army shall be for a term of three years, the first year to be in the active service with the organizations of which those enlisted form a part and, except as otherwise provided herein, the last two years in the Regular Army Reserve hereinafter provided for: Provided, That at the explication of one year's service with such organizations, either under a first or any subsequent enlistment, any soldier may be reenlisted for another period of three years, as above provided for, in which even he shall receive his final discharge from his prior enlistment: Provided further, That in all enlistments hereafter accomplished under the provisions of this act one year shall be counted as an enlistment period in computing continuous-service pay: Provided further, That any noncommissioned officer discharged with an excellent character shall be permitted, at the expiration of one year in the active service, to reenlist in the organization from which discharged with the rank and grade held by him at the time of his discharge if he reenlists within 20 days after the date of such discharge: Provided further, That no person under the age of 18 years shall be enlisted or mustered into the military service of the United States without the written consent of his parents or guardians, provided that such minor has such parents or guardians entitled to his custody and control: And provided further, That the President is authorized in his discretion to utilize the services of postmasters of the second, third, and fourth classes in procuring the enlistment in the Army, the postmaster procuring his enlistment shall receive the sum of $5.

"In addition to military training, soldiers while in the active serv

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman reserve the point of order for two minutes? It is clearly subject to the point of order.

Mr. DENT. Yes. Mr. GARDNER. That amendment seeks to substitute an enlistment period of one year with the colors and two years with the reserve in lieu of three years with the colors and four years with the reserve. I merely wished to explain that.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.
The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of enlisted men of the Enlisted Reserve Corps, $100,000.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. To which paragraph does the gentleman refer?

Mr. SANFORD. The one just read, providing for the pay of enlisted men of the National Guard, $10,000,000.

Mr. KAHN. That has not been read.

Mr. SANFORD. I think the Clerk just read it. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk informs the Chair that he has

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of enlisted men, National Guard, $10,000,000.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order. The CHAIRMAN. To what does the gentleman direct his point of order?

To pay of enlisted men of the National I make the point of order on that item Mr. SANFORD. Guard, $10,000,000. for the reason I would now like to indicate to the Chair. The Constitution itself clearly provides in express terms what jurisdiction Congress has in reference to pay for the national defense. The Constitution expressly provides that Congress may provide for the raising and "support" or armies. In relation to the militia it provides that we may provide for the "organiz-ing," "disciplining," and "arming" of the militia, and the National Guard is clearly a portion of the militia. The national-defense act, section 67, provides:

A sum of money shall hereafter be appropriated annually to be paid out of any money in the Treasury for the support of the National Guard.

Now, while the bill was pending the gentleman from Virginia, the chairman of the committee, introduced several amendments providing for striking out the word "provide" wherever it was used in connection with the National Guard and inserting the word "support" in its place, showing explicitly that it was the purpose of the committee intentionally to use the word in reference to the National Guard. In another "support" portion of the same act, section 57, it provides that the National Guard is "militia." Well, it is not militia, of course, in the same sense in which the word "militia" has been used in this country nor in the sense in which the word "militia" was used at the time that word was used in the Constitution. The defense of the country by citizen soldiers was of universal application. It was the duty of every citizen to train himself and to be organized and to be disciplined in the defense of his country. That was an obligation which every American under the law between the ages of 18 and 45 recognized. By this act for the first time in the history of this country Congress has attempted to pay an American for training himself in time of peace in the State at a time when he is not in any way in the service of the Federal Government and to pay him for keeping ready to de-fend his country in case of need. The national-defense act, in so far as it provides for the payment of some citizens who are a branch of the militia, is clearly contrary to the Constitution and, so far as I can see, is a direct violation of the express provisions of the Constitution.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SANFORD. I will.
Mr. McKELLAR. Then is it the gentleman's purpose to have us as Congress declare that the national-defense act of 1916, so far as it referred to the National Guard, is unconstitutional?

that the gentleman's idea?

Mr. SANFORD. I have two purposes. One is to raise the question and show to the Congress that it is absolutely providing unconstitutionally for the National Guard and also to emphasize the fact that some men seem to have overlooked that the Congress has taken the position that the only way to raise an army is to pay the citizens for training in the States in time of peace. would like to emphasize it because I think it is ridiculous. think the National Guard think it is ridiculous. I think they feel insulted by it; I know many of them do.

Mr. McKELLAR. But the effect of the gentleman's argument is that he is calling upon the chairman of this committee to hold that this act is unconstitutional?

Mr. SANFORD. It is so clearly unconstitutional when you look at the manner in which this bill is drawn that I think that if the Chair thinks it is unconstitutional, and if the Chair feels that he must be bound by the Constitution, he will be bound to hold it is unconstitutional.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SANFORD. I will. Mr. GREENE of Vermont. The gentleman's second proposition simply runs to the merits of the proposition and not to the parliamentary status?

Mr. SANFORD. That is probably so. My purpose in making the point of order is to show that the item is unconstitutional.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I mean the second part of the gentleman's argument—that is, to say it is a reflection on the National Guard to pay its members for their services?

Mr. SANFORD. That is merely argumentative.

Mr. SANFORD. That is merely argumentative.
Mr. GREENE of Vermont. It has no relation to the parliamentary status?

Mr. SANFORD. Not at all. I would like to ask the gentleman if he considers the National Guard is now American militia?

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I have not undertaken to get at any definition beyond that contained in the national-defense act, and I was nearly out of breath when we arrived at that.

Mr. SANFORD. It is very clear that the word "militia," as used in the national-defense act, is not at all the militia as provided for in the Constitution.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it the contention that the gentleman from New York puts up to the Chair for decision that this payment is in conformity with an existing statute of the Congress of the United States, but that that statute is not constitutional?

Mr. SANFORD. That is my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.
Mr. SANFORD. I supposed the Chair would do so, but I wanted to emphasize the point just the same.
Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 9, page 12, insert:
"Provided, That the provisions in the act of August 29, 1916, as amended by the act of September 8, 1916, providing support for the dependents of enlisted men in the Regular Army and National Guard shall not apply to applications for such support which are not received in the office of the depot quartermaster at Washington, D. C., on or before the 1st day of April, 1917."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, of course that provision is subject to a point of order. I intended to offer it under the "pay of line of the Army." It is subject to a point of order anywhere. It is new legislation, but it is recommended emphatically by the Secretary of War and has been adopted by the committee as a committee amendment. This is what the Secretary says:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 17, 1917.

The Chairman Committee on Military Affairs,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN:

My Dear Mr. Chairman:

1. The act approved August 29, 1916 (39 Stat., 649), and amended by act of September 8, 1916 (39 Stat., 801), made provision for dependent families of enlisted men of the National Guard and Regular Army, and under these acts there has been appropriated to this time $6.250,000.

2. The number of applications for aid to this date is 20,027, and the amount paid is $3,663,696.75. The average amount paid on each application is $183.

The number of men in service in the Regular Army and National Guard during the mobilization was, in round numbers, 240,000. A conservative number of those eligible to designate beneficiaries is 120,000, or 50 per cent of the strength mobilized. If this number actually make application, and the average of $183 is maintained, there would eventually be obligations amounting to $21,960,000.

3. Applications for aid are coming in at the rate of 120 a day. Without some restrictive legislation, such as a time limit after which applications are barred, this law promises to require continuing appropriations for years to come, whereas it may be presumed to have been the intent of Congress to extend the aid only because the wage earner was absent in the Federal service. All but about 44,000 of the men of the National Guard have been mustered out or are at home for muster out, or under orders to proceed home for that purpose, and hence are present with their families again, or soon will be.

4. It is therefore recommended that a time limit be provided sufficiently far in the future to allow of the presentation of all just claims, and for this purpose the following proviso is suggested for insertion in the Army appropriation bill now under consideration in the House of Representatives:

Now, the Secretary of War did suggest that that time limit

Now, the Secretary of War did suggest that that time limit be extended until the 30fh day of next June, but the committee thought that as long as an order had been issued for all the National Guard to be returned from the border right away, the 1st day of April would give everybody ample time within which to make claims.

Mr. MANN. These claims that are now being filed, under the gentleman's statement, are for back pay, as it were?

Mr. DENT. Yes, sir; for back pay, as I understand. Mr. MANN. Of course, the gentleman knows, to begin with, and every other Member of the House knows, that there never has been an instance where Congress has provided a limitation of time in which to file claims of that sort, that it has not been extended repeatedly, and then again, and then again, and then again, when there was any necessity for it. But what will happen if the National Guard is called out in the present emergency? Will this existing law apply to that?

Mr. DENT. Would the present law apply if there was another call?

Mr. MANN. Yes.
Mr. DENT. I really could not answer that positively, but my recollection of the law is that it was intended for that particular emergency

Mr. MANN. I know what it was intended for, but I do not know how it reads.

Mr. DENT. I do not find it here. That was a separate resolution

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from California [Mr. Kahn] has furnished me the appropriation act. That, however, does not cover the case. But if it did cover the case, it would apply between now and the 30th of next June to National Guardsmen who were called out hereafter. The gentleman would repeal by implication the provision in the Army act in reference to the appropriation of $2,000,000. Of course, we passed an act by itself, but the provision in the Army act is:

That the sum of $2,000,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, and under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, for the support of, at a cost of not more than $50 per month, or so nuch of said amount as the Secretary of War may deem necessary, and not more than such enlisted man has been contributing monthly to the support of his family at the time of his being called or drafted into the service of the United States or during his enlistment period in the Regular Army at the time of such call or draft of the Organized Militia or National Guard, the family of each enlisted man of the Organized Militia or National Guard called or drafted into the service of the United States until his discharge from such service, and the family of each enlisted man of the Regular Army until his discharge from active service therein or until the discharge of the Organized Militia or National Guard from such a service if such enlisted man is at that time in active service in the Regular Army, which family during the term of service of such enlisted man has no other income, except the pay of such enlisted man, adequate for the support of said family.

Now, it is not improbable that Congress within the next week or 10 days may authorize the President to call the National Guard into service again. And if we do, and he calls the National Guard into service again, and they admit married men into the service, or men supporting families, why should they not have the same benefit of a provision like this as the men who went to the Mexican border?

Mr. DENT. I think they ought. But I will call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to this fact: I confess I do not remember whether that resolution, which was an independent resolution, was permanent law or whether it was intended to limit it to the Mexican situation. But I wanted to say this: It has been construed by the War Department to have been limited to the situation down on the Mexican border, as there were no estimates submitted to the Committee on Military Affairs for the continuation of this appropriation.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the gentleman will yield, I have the law here, and will read it, if you would like.

Mr. MANN. I have just read that. That is a mere appro-

Mr. McKELLAR. That is the condition.

Mr. MANN. We passed a separate act, first carrying a certain appropriation, but not sufficient. Then this was included afterwards in the appropriation act, appropriating $2,000,000. Everybody was in favor of it at the time.

Mr. DENT. I believe everybody voted for it, but whether they were in favor of it I do not know.

Mr. MANN. Nobody expressed his dissent. Mr. QUIN. But the Senate put on the provision making it apply to the Regular Army men. Not everybody in the House approved of it.

Mr. MANN. That is not in the law, so that that has nothing to do with the case.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; that is in the law—in the statute.

Mr. MANN. Then we must have approved of it.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Yes. Mr. MANN.

Mr. McKENZIE. Do you not think it safe to assume that if the National Guard would be called into the service again they would not be called in prior to the calling of Congress in extra session?

Oh no. I think it is safe to assume in every probability-I do not know whether it will be done or not-that we will be asked to give the President certain power, and Congress is likely to give the President certain power without the President's calling Congress into extra sesssion, and that may include the calling out of the National Guard.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Is it the understanding of the gentleman from Illinois that Congress must confer authority on the President to call out the National Guard before he can call them out?

Mr. MANN. That depends upon what the President does.

In case of war I believe he can call them out.

Mr. GORDON. He called them before without any action of Mr. MANN. The gentleman is mistaken. We passed a resolution before

Mr. GORDON. That was after they were called out.

Mr. MANN. No; that was before. Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is subject to a point of order. The question is whether we should put a time limit on the existing situation, so that the War Department will know exactly when claims of this kind are going to end.
Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I have the provision here under the act of September 8, 1916, which reads:

The sum of $2,000,000, therein appropriated to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War for the support of the family of each enlisted man of the Organized Militia or National Guard or of the Regular Army, as therein provided, shall be available to be paid on the basis of and for time subsequent to June 18, 1916, the date of the call by the President, and the time for which such payment shall be made shall correspond with the time of service of the enlisted man, and payment shall be made without reference to the enlisted man having enlisted before or after the call by the President.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. If the gentleman will permit, that is the act of September 8, amending the act of August 29.

Mr. KAHN. Yes.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAMES. Would not the effect of the gentleman's amendment be to place a time limit on the National Guard but not on the Regular Army?
Mr. DENT. It would place a time limit on both. I understand the point of order has not been made.

Mr. MANN. I make the point of order, Mr. Chairman,

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of enlisted men, $383,760.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Vermont moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I do so, Mr. Chairman, if the House will indulge me for a moment, just to call attention to a situation which has been presented in the discussion of the amendment proposed by the chairman and just ruled out of order. If time at this short session of Congress had permitted, I would have been glad to propose to the House some plan for a revision of the Army pay table, something along the line that is now employed in Great Britain and in Canada, where what is called "a separation allowance" in case of war is a part of the contractural basic pay of the soldier.

It seems to me it is time for us, in the consideration of our Army pay table and the propositions that are made to raise it, at least to take into consideration the wisdom of preparing in time of peace, when there is no stress, no sentimentalism, and no emotionalism in the air more or less to influence men's feelings in the consideration of such a matter, an allowance to go to the dependent families, under certain restrictions, of soldiers enlisting whenever they are brought into active service in time of war. This would be an automatic provision, and would be scaled according to certain details which have been well worked out in the British system, and would then meet just exactly the situation that now confronts this Congress.

When the soldier signs his enlistment contract he would do so with the understanding that as a part of the contract and as a part of the emoluments was the expectation that if he was called into service under certain conditions this settlement of allowance for the support of his family would automatically take effect, and that under all other conditions it would be of no effect whatever. That would do away with a great deal of the investigation and the inquiry that are being held now to adjudicate each separate case, and it would put out of expectancy the situation that we now find ourselves confronted with, because the rights of those entitled to this allowance would all be set out in the original contract and would be of no avail unless that contract were made and fulfilled.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws his pro forma amendment. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Five charwomen, at $240 each per annum, $1,200; in all, $114,590.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, it is not very important, but there is a mistake there. I move to strike out "$114,590," on line 17, and insert "$104,590." There is a mistake of $10,000 on page 13, line 17.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 13, line 17, strike out "$114,590" and insert "$104,590."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. TILSON. I do so for the purpose of asking the chairman whether it was intentional or a mistake in printing the bill that we say "one laborer, at $720 per annum, $720," and then repeat, "one laborer, at $720 per annum, $720." Was it not the intention to have two laborers at $720 each per annum? In other words, we take two items to cover the same classification.

Mr. DENT. It really should have been prepared in the way the gentleman suggests, but it means the same thing

Mr. TILSON. It means the same thing; but in this way, if we had a dozen laborers, it would require a dozen lines, each line appropriating for one laborer.

Mr. DENT. I have no objection to an amendment to consolidate the two.

Mr. STAFFORD. It is clearly an oversight. The fact is that last year one of these laborers received $660 and you increased his pay to $720.

Mr. TILSON. We siming two in the same class We simply raised the $660 man to $720, mak-

Mr. MANN. You raised the $600 man to $720 as well as the $660 man.

Mr. TILSON. We raised the pay of both. That is correct. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the words "one laborer, at $720 per annum" and to amend the next line by making it "two laborers, at $720 each per annum, $1,440."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut moves that line 13, page 13, be stricken from the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 12195. An act to amend section 17 of the United States bankruptcy law of July 1, 1898, and amendments thereto of February 5, 1903;

H. R. 18534. An act to authorize the construction, maintenance, and operation of a bridge across the St. Francis River at or near Parkin, Ark.; H. R. 18720. An act permitting the building of a railroad bridge across the Mississippi River at Bemidji, in the State of Minnesota: and

H. R. 14426. An act to amend section 6 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American National Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

S. 1792. An act for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands;

S. 5716. An act to establish the Mount McKinley National Park in the Territory of Alaska;

S. 7644. An act to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Texas and to provide for terms of court at Wichita Falls, Tex., and for a clerk for said court, and for other purposes

S. 40. An act to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations;

S. 5450. An act to provide for an additional judge in the State of Texas; and

S. 5612. An act providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of lands within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation, had asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. MYERS, Mr. THOMAS, and Mr. SMOOT as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend line 14, page 13, by striking out the words "1 laborer, at $720 per annum, $720," and inserting in lieu thereof "2 laborers, at $720 per annum each, $1,440."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk rend as follows:

Fifty-nine clerks, at $1,000 each per annum, $49,000.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend, in line 2, page 14, by striking out "59" and inserting "49." That is a mistake in the number

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 14, line 2, strike out the word "fifty-nine" and insert in lieu thereof "49."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Thirty-nine messengers, at $720 each per annum, $28,080.

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Imendment offered by Mr. Swift:

1 age 14, line 4, after the figures "$28,080," insert:

"That hereafter all classified civil-service clerks now of the Quartermaster Corps shall be know as field clerks, Quartermaster Corps; and field clerks, Quartermaster Corps, shall receive the same pay and allowances, except retirement, as heretofore allowed by law to pay clerks, Quartermaster Corps.

"That field clerks, Quartermaster Corps, shall be subject to the Rules and Articles of War."

Mr. DENT. I make a point of order against that amendment.

Mr. SWIFT. Will the gentleman reserve his point of order?
Mr. DENT. I reserve the point of order.
Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is proposed in behalf of the classified civil-service clerks in the Quartermaster Corps. There has been no beneficial legislation enacted by Congress for these men since the close of the Civil War, although they are performing in many instances the same duties that socalled quartermaster pay clerks render who are detached from departmental bureaus for field service. The Chief of Staff of the Army, Maj. Gen. Scott, in a memorandum to the Secretary of War, stated as follows:

These clerks are subject to call for duty in the field, such as in second division, at camps and maneuvers during the continuance of outdoor work for troops in the summer. Some must be sent to the Philippines, Hawaii, and Panama. When absent from permanent station these men must make provision at permanent station for those dependent upon them for support. This adds a burden to these clerks which does not fall upon clerks permanently stationed in Washington. This additional burden is uncertain as to amount and as to when it will be placed upon these clerks, so that they can retain their homes for their families at their permanent station, no matter how long their duties require their absence from their permanent station.

The attention of the committee is invited to the following excerpt from General Orders No. 68, War Department, 1904:

The Secretary of War considers that the interests of the service require that employees at large in the War Department must be subject to orders in regard to transfer of station, and a refusal to obey such orders will be deemed a proper and sufficient reason for discharge from the service.

In many instances these classified civil-service clerks, particularly during the last year, have been detached for field service at Plattsburg, N. Y.; on the Mexican border; and with the punitive expedition that went into Mexico. The pay clerks in the Quartermaster Corps, although they entered the department without any examination, are receiving $250 per annum more than the classified civil-service clerks performing the same service. Moreover, the civil-service clerks are subject to all the rigors and privations of camp life, laboring every day in the year without extra compensation for overtime, or reimbursement for extra expenditures, such as car fare and other incidental expenses. I believe it is only an act of human justice that they should receive the same compensation as men who are performing similar services in offices equipped with modern improve-ments, whereas the clerks to whom I refer are subjected in many instances to all the conditions of camp life. The matter was presented to the committee, but did not receive favorable consideration. I am convinced that these men should receive this additional rating and increased compensation, and I hope the gentleman from Alabama will withdraw his point of order.
Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, the committee have considered this matter, and I will have to insist on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of officers of the General Staff Corps, $132,600.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of inserting in the RECORD a statement from the office of the Chief of Staff showing the number of staff officers who composed the General Staff of the Army under date of February 15, 1917. I do this because Congress and the Military Committee have been charged with dereliction of duty by the Chicago Tribune and other newspapers, charged with withholding from the War Department authority to constitute such a General Staff as it ought to have. The statement which I ask to print in the Record shows that the number of officers of the General Staff at present consists of 43 members, while the national-defense act, in section 47, authorizes the appointment of 55 members of the General Staff; so after eight months of authority under this act they are yet 12 officers short of the number authorized, showing that there is no foundation whatever for the charge that Congress and the Military Affairs Committee have been derelict in their duty in conferring sufficient authority upon the Secretary of War. If the General Staff is not as large as it ought to be, it is the fault of some one else than the Committee on Military Affairs or the Congress itself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to print in the Record the statement to which he refers. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The statement is as follows:

List of officers of the General Staff Corps.

	On duty in Washington.					Manchu or
Names,	Room.	Phone.	Residence.	Residence phone.	On duty elsewhere— Station.	date of expiration of detail.
Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff	224 War Depart-	77	Fort Myer, Va	W. 948		Sept. 22, 1917
Maj. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, Assistant to the Chief of Staff. Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn, president Army	ment. 220 War Department. War College	71	1715 I Street	М. 6917		Dec. 31, 1917
War College.  Maj. Gen. Erasmus M. Weaver, Chief of Coast Artillery, additional member General Staff	225 War Depart- ment.	88	The Farragut	M. 2651		May 23, 1918
Corps.  Brig. Gen. William A. Mann, Chief of Militia Bureau, ex officio member General Staff Corps.	445 War Depart- ment.	181	1863 Columbia Road			July 31, 1918
COLONELS (5),
George T. Bartlett, Coast Artillery Corps				•••••	Chief of Staff, Eastern Department.	May 26, 1920
Chase W. Kennedy, Infantry Ernest Hinds, Field Artillery	War College	War College.	1644 Twenty-first Street	N. 7552	Chief of Staff, Philippine Department.	May 5, 1917 Sept. 17, 1917
William H. Johnston, Infantry	War College	War College.	2337 Ashmead Place	N. 7374	Southern Department	July 24, 1918
William F. Martin, Infantry	218 War Depart- ment.	39	1725 H Street	M. 8332		Mar. 10, 1918
Malvern-Hill Barnum, Cavalry					Chief of Staff, Southern Department.	(1)
P. D. Lochridge, Cavalry	War College 218 War Depart- ment.	War College. 189	The Farragut	M. 2651 N. 8218	Department.	Nov. 27, 1917 Aug. 16, 1918
LIEUTENANT COLONELS (7).	Inches.
Frank W. Coe, Coast Artillery Corps					Chief of Staff, Western Department.	June 13, 1920
James W. McAndrew, Infantry		,			Fort Leavenworth	Aug. 19, 192
William S Graves Infantry (secretary General	222 War Depart- ment.	183	The Westmoreland	N. 4131	Southern Department	Feb. 20, 1917 July 18, 1918
Staff Corps). Robert E. Callan, Coast Artillery Corps Robert L. Howze, Cavalry					Philippine Department Southern Department Chief of Staff, Hawaiian De-	June 20, 1915 Nov. 4, 1915
MAJORS (13).					partment.
Andrew Moses, Coast Artillery Corps	War College	War College .	The Toronto	N. 106		Aug. 10, 1919
George A. Nugent, Coast Artillery Corps Palmer E. Pierce, Infantry	War College	War College.	4001 Woodley Road	C. 809	Southern Department	June 5, 1919 Apr. 28, 1919
Ralph H. Van Deman, Infantry	do	do	The Beacon	C. 424		Apr. 8, 191 Nov. 4, 191
John McA. Palmer, Infantry Douglas MacArthur, Corps of Engineers	218 War Depart-	30	The Ontario	C. 424 N. 8524 C. 800		Nov. 4, 191
Frank S. Cocheu, Infantry	ment. 222 War Depart-	183	The Woodley	C. 5785		July 4, 191
Oliver Edwards, Infantry	ment.				Southern Department	Aug. 11,1919
Oliver Edwards, Infantry					do	Jan. 21, 192 Dec. 23, 191
Francis Le J. Parker, Cavalry	010 Was Danast	30	The Dupont	N. 2286	Roumania	July 16, 191 Mar. 22, 191
	218 War Depart- ment.	30	тие Бироне
Charles E. Kilbourne, Coast Artillery Corps					Headquarters Eastern De- partment.	Apr. 11,191
Dan T. Moore, Field Artillery	War Collegedo	War College.	Army and Navy Club Fort Myer, Va	M. 8400 W. 695	Roumania	Oct. 5,1911 Dec. 13,1911 Oct. 31,1911
CAPTAINS (13),		- 175 MILES		1133
Tenney Ross, Infantry	War College	War College.	The Dresden	N. 3593		Aug. 6,191
William H. Raymond, Coast Artillery Corps Harry N. Cootes, Cavalry	223 War Depart- ment.	77	1226 Seventeenth Street	N. 5975	Southern Department	Mar. 1,191 July 12,191
Henry C. Merriam, Coast Artillery Corps					Assistant Chief of Staff, Hawaiian Department.	Pare
Alexander B. Coxe, Cavalry Daniel F. Craig, Field Artillery					Southern Department

1Manchu.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. It will be seen from the above table that 22 officers are serving in Washington and 21 in other departments of the country, making a total of 43 officers, or in all, 12 less than are authorized by the national-defense act. The defense act would allow 6 more staff officers at Washington than were serving at the Capital on February 15. The Military Committee has amended that act in the present bill so as to permit 55 staff officers to be assembled at Washington at any, time the Secretary of War so desires.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Saunders, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the Army appropriation bill, H. R. 20783, and had come to no resolution thereon.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, in order to expedite the business of the House I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent that the Post Office appropriation bill, H. R. 19410, be taken from the Speaker's table and that the amendments of the Senate, all except Nos. 15, 19, 30, 32, 33, and 34, be disagreed to.

agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Post Office appropriation bill and to disagree to all the Senate amendments except 15, 19, 30, 32, 33, and 34. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. May I ask the gentleman from Tennessee, assuming that he is not going ahead just now, when does he expect to call up the rest of the amendments for disposition?

pect to call up the rest of the amendments for disposition?

Mr. MOON. I will give notice now that I will ask the House to take up these amendments for a vote immediately after reading the Journal to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee gives notice that to-morrow immediately after reading the Journal and the clearing up of matters on the Speaker's table he will call up this appropriation bill.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 20783, the Army appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. SAUNDERS in the chair.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of officers of the Ordnance Department, $289,300.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 15, between lines 10 and 11, by inserting the following: Provided, That section 24 of the national-defense act of June 3, 1916, be so amended as to authorize the President to organize immediately the whole of the increase in the Ordnance Department authorized by section 12 of said act, or such part thereof as he may deem think this needs some explanation.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. DENT. This is requested by the Secretary of War and urgently requested by the Chief of Ordnance, because they say that that particular department is short of men, and the committee thought that so far as the Ordnance Department is concerned it ought to have the benefit of this amendment. They will obtain as I recollect it 108 officers immediately, and they already have 93 officers authorized.

Mr. STAFFORD. Is that the entire additional force that the amendment will provide?

Mr. DENT. Gen. Sharpe, on page 63 of the hearings, says that that provides for an increase of 23 officers. There were 85 last year and there are 108 this year. He was asked by the gentleman from California if there was a likelihood of their getting all the officers they were entitled to next year, and Gen. Sharpe replied that he should think so if they secured them all for this year.

Mr. STAFFORD. This amendment excepts the Ordnance

Bureau from the proviso that was previously agreed to for the pay of officers.

Mr. DENT. This amendment excepts that; yes. Mr. KAHN. This proviso allows the Ordnance Department to appoint all the officers that that department is entitled to without regard to the provision in the national-defense act providing for the increment.

Mr. DENT. Yes; and what the gentleman from Wisconsin states is true, that this proviso excepts that department from the provision that we then adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of officers of the Medical Department, $2,225,000.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That in increasing the Medical Corps of the Army, as provided in the national-defense act approved June 3, 1916, the officers of the Medical Reserve Corps on active duty, irrespective of age, and subject to the approval of the Surgeon General and the physical examination now required by law, whose services have been satisfactory and who have been in the military service for at least 12 years, including contract service, volunteer service, Medical Reserve Corps service, and enlisted service, shall be, and are hereby, transferred to the Medical Corps of the Army, with the rank of first lieutenant, to take relative rank in accordance with the length of their respective services, next below all first lieutenants, Medical Corps, holding that grade at the time of the passage of this act: And provided further, That any first lieutenant, Medical Reserve Corps, who does not receive the approval of the Surgeon General for transfer to the Medical Corps of the Army or who is found physically unfit as provided by law shall be retired with the rank and allowances of a first lieutenant, Medical Corps, United States Army.

Mr. Chelwing a Lawrey of point of order on the text of the Corps.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that. Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I trust the chairman will not insist on his point of order. This amendment seeks only to provide for the Medical Reserve Corps. As I understand it, these physicians have given, in a great many cases, their services for more than 12 years, as provided for by a former act passed by Congress. Unless in this bill they are taken care of, after giving the best years of their life to the Government, they will go out of existence, as the law above referred to only provides for them until next July. They are only asking the same recognition that Congress has given the dentists and veterinarians. I have no criticism to make of Congress for their action in relation to those other gentlemen in said mentioned professions who have served the Government, but it does seem to me that when a physician has given to the country 12 years of his life in the medical-reserve department that if the Medical Corps is in-creased it should be increased from the said Medical Reserve Corps. I would like to have the chairman give me his attention. I realize that this is not a $10,000,000 appropriation, but I realize also that if a man has worked for the Government 12 years in the military service, taking care of the health of the Army, he should be given some recognition.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEARS. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. I could not hear the reading of the amendment; but does the gentleman refer to contract surgeons?

Mr. SEARS. I will explain that. If the amendment is adopted it is subject to the approval of the Surgeon General, and unless the Surgeon General approves same not a single one of the men in the Medical Reserve Corps can come into the service. In addition, even though they have given 12 years of their life to the service, they must stand a physical examination before they can be taken into the service. There is no need of my taking up more of your time if the chairman is going to insist on the point of order; but I do say these men should receive some consideration at the hands of this committee.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I insist on the point of order. The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CRISP). The Chair sustains the point

The Clerk read as follows:

RETIRED OFFICERS.

For pay of officers on the retired list, $2,700,000: Provided, That assignments which have been or may hereafter be made of retired officers of the Army to active duty as acting quartermasters shall be regarded as assignments to staff duties not involving service with troops within the meaning of the act of Congress approved April 23, 1904.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. A few days ago I called the attention of the House to the fact that we were paying 900 retired naval officers the sum of $2,940,368.72, and in this present bill there is provided for pay of retired Army officers the sum of $2,700,000. I was struck a few days ago, in listening to an argument of one of my colleagues, I forget whether upon this side of the House or the other, and it is immaterial, with the statement that Army officers sufficient to train enlisted men could not be found. call to the attention of the House and the country the fact that you are paying now $2,700,000 to 1,017 retired Army officers for which nothing in return is given to the Government, or the people, it seems to me that some change should be made, and also that it will be hard to convince the people that there is a scarcity of officers. It will certainly be a hard job to explain to your constituents why there is any scarcity of officers. There are only about four or five thousand officers in the Army for 98,000 men, and yet we have 1,017 retired Army officers. year there were 36 officers retired from the Regular service. I am not criticizing this committee when I call attention to these facts, because I realize they have worked hard and have attempted to do what they thought was best, and will do what they think is best. My sole desire is that at the next session of Congress they may look into this matter and see if it is fair to pay to 1,017 retired Army officers about one-eighth as much as it takes to pay for the entire standing Army of the United States when it comes to enlisted men.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SEARS. Yes. Mr. KAHN. Does the gentleman understand that th

Does the gentleman understand that the Military Committee has nothing to do but to appropriate the money, because it is existing law that provides for the appropriation?

Mr. SEARS. My amendment having just been stricken out on a point of order, I realize that to the fullest extent.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEARS. In just one moment. But the committee might look into the matter and report a clause in the bill would stand if some Member did not object, as some one did would stand if some member did not object, as some one did would stand in the matter and report and the region of order. here a few moments ago when he raised the point of order.

yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. In reference to the Military Committee, and without any reflection upon them, does the gentleman not understand that last year, in the current Army appropriation bill, the committee permitted to go into the law four cases where retirement was given purely as a matter of privilegespecial preference outside of the law?

Mr. SEARS. I remember that, and I objected to it then, and is what I object to now.

Mr. KAHN. It was put on in the Senate. Mr. MANN. And agreed to by the conferees of the House,

Mr. ANTHONY. Why did not the gentleman, with his watchful eye, strike that out?

ful eye, strike that out?

Mr. MANN. I did my best; but I was not upon the Military Committee, nor was I one of the conferees.

Mr. KAHN. The conferees on the part of the House did everything they could to prevent it.

Mr. MANN. Oh, everyone knows that when an amendment of that kind is inserted in the Senate all the House has to do Mr. KAHN. The House conferees did say nay, nay.
Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, as I said a few moments ago, I do not believe the people of the country know that they are paying nearly $6,000,000 a year to less than 2,000 retired Army and Navy officer

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEARS. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. I just want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that his position is not consistent. Most of the men alluded to upon the retired list are men put there on account of 30 years' service. The gentleman's amendment proposed to put civil employees upon the retired list with 12 years' service.

Mr. SEARS. Provided they could stand the physical examination and give to the Government full service, but I am told—I do not know whether it is true or not—that men under 45 years of age are placed on the retired list because they are temperamentally unfit to serve in the Army.

Besides, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman evidently misunderstood my amendment. It was not intended to place men on the retired list, but was intended to keep them in the service; provided, of course, they could stand the physical examination. By raising the point of order, which I admit was well taken, you have, as I understand it, made it impossible for the Medical Reserve Corps to remain in the service longer than next July, and regardless of the number of years they have served the Government, they must retire. And, Mr. Chairman, they must retire, however meritorious their services may have been, regardless of however anxious they may be to remain in the service, and this without any future consideration from the Government.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to get some information. the reason these retired officers can not be put to drilling the boys of the country?

Mr. DENT. Under the law as I understand it they can not be required to do anything unless they are willing to do it, but there are a great many of them who are willing to do it, and a great many of them have been used for various purposes connected with the Military Establishment.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Everybody wants to see a sufficient number of boys drilled, and 2,000 of these officers ought to be able to drill a great many of them. I inquired into it once as much as I could, and I obtained this strange answer, that the young fellows did not like to have these retired officers made commandants at the various schools because most of them were old and their habits were fixed and they were crabbed with the boys, and so forth. But it looks to me as though the law ought to be changed so that the President of the United States could assign one of these retired officers to any school in the country.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes. Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I have prepared here for the information of the House, and I expect to insert it in the RECORD, a list of 35 retired Army officers who are serving right along as the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Clark] has indicated they should do. One of them, for instance, named John Quincy Adams, is 73 years old, and he is serving as an instructor at the military school at Culver, Ind., one of the best in the country.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. He is a good man. Mr. KEATING. Does he receive any extra compensation for

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Under the national-defense act there is a provision that where these men were serving on active duty they should be allowed credit for that active duty, so that they have received additional compensation and have been promoted, because under that act they receive credit for it the same as if they were actually officers on the active list.

Mr. KEATING. Was this man of 73 years of age receiving full pay?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Full pay, and, added to the service he had in the line of the Army, he has been given credit for the time he has served on active duty under this bill.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It seems to me it would be the cheapest and most efficacious way to get a large number of boys drilled, so they could become lieutenants, captains, majors, colonels, or something of the sort when they were needed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the gentleman take into consideration this: These men are old men. It has been a long time since they were drilled in the kind of drill necessary for young students at college or young men to be trained in the Army.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words for the purpose of extending my remarks in the Record by inserting three tables showing the list of retired Army officers that have been returned to the service and have been promoted under the act of June 3, 1916.

Mr. FIELDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I will.

Mr. FIELDS. I think the law ought to be changed. Many of these men are as useful now as they ever were in their lives. One was in my office yesterday afternoon, and he is strong, active, and vigorous. He has been connected since he retired about 15 months ago with the public-health board of my State, and he has been doing very excellent service there, and the retirement of a man of that class, possessing the ability this man does, is simply extravagance—a waste.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I think the Speaker raised a very important question, and I would like to add this testimony. In the Ohio Northern University we had a retired officer, and the commandant's work has been very exceptionally effective and very satisfactory, and I do not see why retired officers could not be made very effective in connection with our various schools. as provided by the act we passed last year or last fall.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I will say for the information of the gentleman the committee had that very idea when they added these provisions which have been referred to. Now, all of these 35 men I have referred to as promoted are serving their country voluntarily. There is nothing under the law that compels a retired officer to come back into the service, but they voluntarily did so, and in order to induce men to come back the law provides they should receive the same pay they would receive in active

The present law provides that in the matter of promotion they should receive credit for the time on active duty. The national-defense act provides that a man who has been retired for disability and who has recovered, been examined, and found efficient can be put back upon the active list. We have had several men to come in under that provision. That is a different provision from the one that allows them to come back voluntarily. These men go upon the active list. But the 35 in the list I have inserted have come back voluntarily and are performing the duty which the Speaker thinks these retired officers ought to do.

Mr. FIELDS. Our retired officers can be made very effective. Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Yes; and save the services of younger and more efficient men for active service in the Army Mr. SEARS. I will state the latest list I have got is this,

Are these 35 in addition to the 1,017 to which I referred?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Yes; these men are still on the retired list, except those actually returned to the active list.

Mr. SEARS. One other question. Does this list give the date of the retirement of each officer?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Yes; it does. Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. All this legislation the gentleman referred to fails to reach the real point if there is no authority for the President to detail these men, no matter how much their services may be needed. Is there any authority of law?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Yes. Mr. GORDON. On the retired list?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. To detail them for active service at these institutions where the Secretary of War thinks they can be used, and while they are there serving they are to receive the pay of men upon the active list.

Mr. GORDON. Provided they voluntarily come back into the service? Does not the gentleman think there ought to be some legislation by which the President might order them to duty?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. There is. We have put legislation in the bill, and now I call attention to the fact that there are men who have come back and have been examined, no man has been compelled to come back, but under the provisions of the defense act in time of war the President has power to bring them in, but not in time of peace.

Mr. GORDON. Does not the gentleman think he ought to have that power in time of peace?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I think so myself; yes.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman offer an amendment? Mr. SHALLENBERGER. That would be new legislation and would go out on a point of order.

Mr. GORDON. It seems to me it would come under the Holman rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Nebraska has expired. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The tables referred to are as follows:

List of officers advanced in grade on the retired list under section 24 of the national-defense act approved June 3, 1916.

	From- To-		100 FEB. U.S.	pay	Monthly pay	34.0
Names.			Date.	prior to advance- ment.	after advance- ment.	Age.
James Ronayne John A. Lockwood William E. P. French	do	do	do	$280.00 280.00 280.00	$333.33 333.33 333.33	56 61 62
Solomon P. Vestal Hugh La F. Applewhite Edward T. Winston	do	do	do	280.00 260.00 260.00	333.33 325.00 325.00	52-9 42-6 53
Charles D. Clay Edward O. C. Ord	do	do	June 3, 1916	260.00 210.00 210.00	325.09 250.00 250.00	47-7 60- 58-3
Thomas M. Moody Henry W. Stamford Robert L. Hamilton	do	do	Oct. 28, 1916 June 3, 1916	280.00 280.00 280.00	333. 33 333. 33 333. 33	56 54 50
Lewis D. Greene	do	do	do	280.00 210.00 210.00 280.00	333.33 250.00 250.00	69-9 66-5 65-6 66-11
Frederick E. Phelps John Q. Adams George L. Converse	do	do	do dodo	280.00 280.00 280.00	333, 33 333, 33 333, 33	69- 4 73- 9 60- 2
William Roberts Charles H. Cabaniss, ir	First lieu- tenant	do	do	280. 00 233, 33	333. 33 333. 33	52-3 66-7
Frank L. Graham Samuel A. Smoke James O. Green	Captain.	do Cap- tain.	Aug. 24, 1916 Jan. 26, 1917 June 3, 1916	210, 00 195, 00 175, 00	333. 33 325. 00 210. 00	56-10 54 57- 9
Melzar C. Richards John M. Kelso, jr Paul A. Barry Franklin R. Kenney	do do do	do	do do		280, 00 220, 00 220, 00 220, 00	61-5 42-7 40-10 38-8
Charles S. Fowler	do	do	do	175, 00 175, 00 150, 00 175, 00	210.00 210.00 240.00 280.00	64-11 71-2 47-9 66-6
Hugh T. Reed Cyrus R. Street	lieu-	lieu-		770	137.50	37- 4
Frank L. Beals	do	do	do	155, 83 148, 75	183. 33 175. 00	35- 5 57- 2

List of officers reappointed to the Army under section 24 of the national-defense aet approved June 3, 1916.

Names.	Grade to which ap- pointed.	Date of leaving the service.	Date of reappointment.	Prior pay.	Present pay.	Age.
William A. Phil-	Major	July 14, 1915	Dec. 20, 1916	$4,000	$4,000	50- 9
Chapman Grant	Second lieu- tenant.	Jan. 20, 1916	July 12,1916	1,700	2,000	29-11
Duncan C. Rich- art.	do	June 15, 1914	Aug. 31, 1916	1,870	2,200	29- 2
Wilmot A. Daniel- son.	First lieu- tenant.	Dec. 29, 1913	June 30, 1916	2,200	2,200	32- 7
Clarence E. Brad- burn.	Second lieu- tenant.	June 14, 1915	Aug. 17, 1916	1,870	2,200	30
Daniel A. Connor	do	May 1,1913	Nov. 2, 1916	1,700	1,700	35- 1

List of retired officers transferred to the active list under the act of Mar. 4, 1915.

Names.	Transfe	Date.		Prior	Present	1/
vames.	From-	To-	D	ate.	pay.	pay.	Age.
William O. Owen Lorenzo P. Davison. Robert C. Williams.	Major Captain	Coloneldo Lieutenant colonel.	Aug.	27, 1916 31, 1916 3, 1916	$250.00 250.00 195.00	$416.67 416.67 375.00	62-7 57-3 53
Harold L. Jackson Ben H. Dorcy Jacob Schick	do First lieu- tenant.	Major Captain	de	17, 1916	210.00 175.00 150.00	375.00 240.00 240.00	54-5 47-3 39-5
Joseph I. McMullen .	Second lieutenant.	First lieu- tenant.	June	3, 1916	127.50	240.00	42-8

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 16, line 25, after the word "four," strike out the period, insert Page 10, life 23, after the control of this appropriation shall be used a colon, and add:

"Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used in payment of salary of any retired officer who is in the employ of any business institution having contractual relations with the United

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, my purpose in introducing this

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CRISP). The gentleman will state it. Mr. CALDWELL. Is that subject to a point of order?
The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it is too late now, anyway. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis] had commenced his remarks by addressing the committee on the merits of the proposition. But otherwise the Chair thinks it is a limitation that would not be subject to a point of order.

Mr. CALDWELL. If it is subject to a point of order, I desire to make the point of order.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I have been recognized? The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska is recog-

Mr. REAVIS. My purpose, Mr. Chairman, in introducing this amendment is because a practice has grown up among many of the Army officers which is so pregnant with evil that I believe Congress should give it some attention. I will not undertake to say how many of the retired officers of the United States are in the employ of business institutions having contractual relations with this Government, but I do know that the officers who are so employed have been educated at the expense of the people of this Nation. They have been in the employ of this Nation during the whole of their service, and because of that education and because of the peculiar character of their service they have come into possession of technical knowledge which, in the employ of these business institutions, they are using against the interests of the very Government which gave them the education and which kept them in the service. I have paid a good deal of attention to the hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs, and I found in reading the testimony of these officers, meaning by that not retired officers but those who are still in the service, that whenever a question was put to them touching the feasibility of the United States manufacturing its own munitions and competing with these private institutions, they either declared it was not feasible or they evaded the question. It has been the policy of these officers to gravitate from their employment with this Government into the employ of these private institutions, as the county treasurer in a rural county gravitates to the bank with which he has kept the money

And I have found this, and you will find it if you look over these hearings, that every one of the officers now in service, or practically all of them, are so hopeful that when the time comes for their retirement they will get employment with these institutions you can get no facts from them with reference to the feasibility of the United States manufacturing munitions in competition with these private institutions.

Now, Mr. Chairman, no man can serve two masters. lieve that so long as these Army officers are holding their office their fealty and their service should be exclusively in the interest of the Government of the United States. I do not believe that we should permit them to hope that, when their term of office expires and they are retired, they can enter the employ of munition works and at the same time draw a large salary from the United States. It is immoral and unwise.

I have heard it stated on this floor that Gen. Humphrey is in the employ of the Du Pont Powder Co. at a time when he is drawing $6,000 a year from the United States as a retired Army officer, and I have heard read on this floor the contract of the Du Pont Powder Co., whereby they are obligated to advise Germany at all times of the quantity, the quality, and the price of every pound of powder that the Government of the United States purchases of that company, so that Germany is constantly advised as to our powder reserve.

Now, it is scandalous, it is pregnant with evil, that any Army officer, retired though he may be, drawing a large salary from this Government, should be in the employ of such an institution as that. And I believe that this amendment should be adopted as that. And I believe that this amendment should be adopted in order that they may be prohibited from looking forward to the time when, retired as an Army officer, they may receive employment with these private institutions. If you do remove that hope, you will leave them in a position where they will no longer hesitate in giving testimony before the Committee on Military Affairs on the advisability or the feasibility of the United States manufacturng munitions in its own plants.

Mr. PLATT. We could not prevent their resigning and taking these offices!

Mr. REAVIS. We could not; but I have a picture of an Army officer resigning a $6,000 job to take employment with these private institutions. If they care to resign and go into the employment of these institutions, I know of no means by which we could prevent it, but I would like to prevent the payment of the salary of retired Army officers amounting to thousands of dollars annually while permitting them to accept employment with an institution that has contractual relations with this Government. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CALDWEIJ. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be again reported. Without objection, the amendment will The CHAIRMAN. be again reported.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, may I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis] and amendments thereto be concluded in 25 minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment and amendments thereto be concluded in 25 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The genjection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, tleman from Kentucky [Mr. Fields] is recognized.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, as I said a moment ago, many of the retired Army officers are as active on retirement and after retirement as at any previous period of their lives. the gentleman referred to the fact that these men might be serving concerns that would give information to Germany. That might be true so long as relations were not broken between this country and Germany. But every man knows that if we should become involved in war with some foreign power that had been buying our information, that information would then and there cease. The business transactions between this Government and that government would then and there cease. Now, what condition have we here?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Nebraska?

Not now. Here are men who possess tech-Mr. FIELDS. nical knowledge that is valuable in the manufacture of powder, or valuable along certain other lines in which they have been engaged. If this country becomes involved in war with any country it will immediately take over all the private industries of the United States that can be used in the manufacture of ammunition or munitions of war of any kind. Therefore, the excluding of these men from that class of service, causing them to go and engage in other business, in different pursuits, would deprive the private manufacturer of the knowledge which they have acquired and would indirectly deprive the Government of that knowledge in the event that the Government should need to take over the private manufactories in the future.

I see no objection to these men being employed after they have gone on the retired list. First, I believe they are retired too soon. I believe that a man who has been educated by the Government should be maintained by the Government so long as he is useful, but if the Government places him on the retired list when he is still useful, is it right and proper that he should be forced into idleness? And if you are not going to force him into idleness, why force him into some new field with which he is not acquainted, or some new line of business with which he is unfamiliar?

I believe it is a bad business proposition. If war should ever come, this country is interested in the private manufacture of munitions, for without munitions the Army would be in a helpless condition. Therefore if war should come the country is as much interested in the private manufactories as it is in the Government manufactories, and I for one am in favor of lending such encouragement to the private manufacturers of munitions in this country as will keep them going upon a reasonable basis of operation. I am not in favor of driving them out of existence

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for one question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. HOWARD. Does not the gentleman think that the mere fact that these Army officers and naval officers, so far as that is concerned, can go into private employment at fabulous salaries | peared before the committee.

and still retain three-quarters of their pay from the United States is in itself a great incentive to them for their retirement?

Mr. FIELDS. That may be. I am in favor of limiting retirement.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. How many officers on the retired list of the United States Army to-day are having such employment as the gentleman mentioned?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not know; but we have as many in such employment probably as in any other employment.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Has the gentleman forgotten that we just recently voted into the service of the United States a man who had service with an ammunition factory and has now come back to the service of the Government after that private service had ended? The Congress is now legislating against similar cases in the future.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, one thing was said with reference to this amendment which I think was not entirely accurate. The statement was made by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis] that the Dupont Powder Co. was under contract to give the secrets of America to the German Government, or something to that effect, if I understood it correctly. If I have not quoted the gentleman correctly, I would like to be set right.

Mr. REAVIS. I said that I had heard it stated on the floor of this House that such a contract was in existence.

Mr. CALDWELL. I want to say that in a trial in the United States Circuit Court in the city of New York that thing was thrashed out, and the evidence showed that instead of the Dupont Powder Works telling the secrets of the United States, or agreeing to tell the secrets of the manufacture of powder in the United States to Germany, as a matter of fact the Dupont Powder Works acquired the secrets of the manufacture of German powder, and in that way brought our art into a higher state of perfection than it ever was. [Applause.]

Now, there is one other thing that I want to say in opposition to this amendment and that is this: That this amendment proposes to take from the retired officer his pay until he quits this employment, which we, by passing statutes in the past, invited Why? Because it was thought that if our Army officers, in whom we had great confidence and for whom we have great respect and who were educated at our expense, would go into this line of employment, as pointed out by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Fields], we would thereby enable them to learn something more than we would be able to teach them, and in the days of stress we could call on these men whose patriotism was not such as could be questioned and use them, as we are about to use of the greatest ordnance officers that this country has ever had. I refer to Col. Dickson.

Mr. DALE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. DALE of New York. Is it not a fact that representatives of private military academies all over the United States have offered the services of officers of those academies who have had three or four years' experience, boys ranking in age from 18 to 21 years, to do the work that is suggested here in reference to this bill?

Mr. CALDWELL. I do not know anything about that. I could not answer the gentleman's question because I am not familiar with it. But I will take the gentleman's statement that it is so.

Mr. DALE of New York. Will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. CALDWELL. Yes. Mr. DALE of New York. Do I understand that the gentleman from New York is a member of the Military Affairs Committee?

Mr. CALDWELL. Yes.

Mr. DALE of New York. Do I understand that so far as the gentleman knows, no such representative appeared before the Military Affairs Committee, representing the military academies all over the United States, and offering the services of such boys?

Mr. CALDWELL. I think perhaps the gentleman does not apprehend just what is before the committee.

Mr. DALE of New York. Oh, yes; I do.

Mr. CALDWELL. The proposition is to put a provision in this bill to cut off the pay of retired Army officers who seek employment elsewhere. If there has been any such person before our committee, I was not present when he came, and the other members of the committee tell me that no such person apMr. DALE of New York. I wish to state that I am fully familiar with what is before the House at the present time relative to this amendment. For my own personal information I was desirous of receiving from the committee a statement as to whether it was not a fact that representatives of private military academies all over the United States had appeared and offered the services of experienced boys, who were members of these academies, to do the work that is provided for in some part of this bill.

Mr. CALDWELL. I think not. If so, I have not seen any such person.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I do not think that even long usage can sanction or warrant the continuance of a thing that is inherently wrong. I believe that the statements made in defense of the present practice by members of the committee ignore the fundamental objection, which is this: It is an old principle of the common law that one who is the authorized agent of his principal can not enter into contractual relations with another to his personal advantage in a transaction between the third party and his principal; that such a transaction is a fraud and absolutely void, if challenged by the principal. That doctrine is based upon the idea that no man can serve two masters. A man can not act as the officer or agent of the United States and at the same time act with fidelity to that principal when it engages in transactions with another in whose business the officer is financially interested. That is the difficulty in this case. Although these men are retired officers, they are still serving the Government of the United States. They may under certain circumstances be called into active service. receiving pay for such service. They are still the agents of the United States. It can not be said that they are mere pensioners of the Government. It can not be said that because they are not in the field they are not still representatives of the Government. Presumably they are influential in the councils of the Nation. Presumably they are influential in the adminis-tration of the Government when it comes to the consideration of military affairs. It is inherently wrong that they should have any financial interest in any concern, in any business, that has an opposite interest from that of the Government. It seems to me this is so plain that this amendment ought not to be opposed by any member of the committee.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TOWNER. Yes. Mr. FIELDS. I can not see where there is any conflicting interests between the Government and the manufacturer, so long as the law provides that a certain amount of the supply shall be purchased from private manufacturers. Of course it is optional with the War Department whether it pays the price. In other words, the War Department does not have to pay the price that the private manufacturer makes.

That can make no difference in the prin-Mr. TOWNER.

ciple involved.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Will the gentleman from Iowa yield?

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I would like to have the gentleman from Kentucky call our attention to that part of the law where the Government is required to buy of the private manufacturer. Mr. FIELDS. It is provided in the law that not more than a certain proportion shall be purchased by the Government. Mr. TOWNER. No agent of the United States ought to be allowed to maintain his place as an officer or agent and be financially interested in any business or concern which has contractual relations with the Government. He still owes a supreme, an undivided allegiance to his country

Mr. McKELLAR. I agree with the gentleman entirely, and is it not unfair to those private manufacturers who do not employ these retired Army officers? Because, as soon as one factory has a retired Army officer working for it, it gives that manufacturer an advantage in dealing with the Government.

Mr. TOWNER. The gentleman is certainly correct. Mr. FIELDS. If the country becomes involved, we have got to call upon these private manufacturers for their product; then the Government is directly interested in the amount that they produce, is it not?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. TOWNER. I am sorry I have not time to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, the gentlemen who have preceded me have convinced me that this amendment ought to be adopted. Some of the gentlemen who have discussed this amendment do not seem to comprehend the scope and meaning of it. It simply prohibits retired Army officers from continuing to draw the three-fourths pay and allowances to which they are entitled under the retirement law after they have engaged themselves in the employment of business firms having contractual relations with the Government. The mere statement of the thing ought to show that the amendment ought to be adopted. Now, my observation has not been entirely that of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner], who just spoke of these retired Army officers as being still in the employ and service of the Government. I have never known any of them to give any service to the Government after they retire, unless they were put back at full pay and allowances. That simply calls attention to another error in our legislation here. These gentlemen, many of them, are very strong for compulsory military service. I think we should provide by law that whenever the Government of the United States needs the services of these retired Army officers the President should be authorized, in peace as well as in war, to order them back into the service of the United States at once, regardless of their wishes in the matter, or stop their retired pay and allowances, and not wait until they find they can not make more money elsewhere. The Government educates them, pays them big salaries until they get to be 64, and then they are retired on three-quarters pay and allowances for life. I heartily agree with the gentleman from Nebraska, and believe that the amendment should be adopted.

Mr. PLATT. How large a proportion of the Army officers are West Point graduates? The gentleman says the Government educates these officers.

Mr. GORDON. I understand only about one-half are West Point graduates—that is, of the active officers; I am not advised as to those on the retired list.

Mr. KAHN. About one-fourth. Mr. PLATT. The Government educates less than half of them. Mr. GORDON. Does the gentleman think it would be an injustice to have a man who is on the retired list ordered back into the employment of the Government on full pay?

Mr. PLATT. No; I think that might be a good thing, but while the man on the retired list is a pensioner you can not say that the pensioner shall not take any job he can get.

Mr. GORDON. No; but you can say you will cut off his pen-

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, the appropriation bill passed last year contains the following provision:

That the Secretary of War shall make a list of all officers of the Army who have been placed on the retired list for disability and shall cause such officers to be examined at intervals as may be advisable, and such officers as shall be found to have recovered from disabilities or to be able to perform service of value to the Government sufficient to warrant such action shall be assigned to such duty as the Secretary of War may approve.

So I think we have the power under the law now.

Mr. FIELDS. But that does not apply to those officers on the retired list who were retired for age.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. No; it does not apply to them.

Mr. GORDON. It is not broad enough,

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, it does not seem to me that this amendment would be a very wise provision to put into the law. Whatever the reasons may be for the retired list—and there are as weighty reasons in favor of the proposition as there may be against it-the retired list is the product of a law which has stood for many, many years without an attempt on anybody's part, so far as I know, to repeal it.

When men go on the retired list they are not any more in the employ of the Government. They are no longer even in the sense used in the Constitution officers of the Government. They are on the retired list. It is called a retired list, and you might nearly as well say that no one who draws a pension from the Government shall seek employment with anybody who may ever seek to sell anything to the Government. That is what this proposition amounts to. I do not think that anyone will seriously contend that men in the active service of the Army deliberately betrayed the trust placed upon them because they have in view the possibility when they retire of seeking employment with some private concern. If that were true, the same implication might be made against every Member of Congress—that when he retires he retires in the hope that his services in Congress have been such that some private corporation will give him employement.

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MANN. No; I have not the time. That would not be true as to Members of Congress and it is not true as to Army officers. If it be true as to Army officers, they all ought to be re-We have men leaving the Government service every day because somebody in private life pays them higher salaries than does the Government. I rather welcome that because I think then the Government has educated some man, educated him well, who knows something about the Government, who goes into private life, and if the Government ever has to deal with him or with some concern that he is employed by, the point of view of the Government will be better understood.

Take the case of Gen. Goethals. He is on the retired list. Do we propose to say that no one can employ him and then offer to do anything for the Government of the United States? [Ap plause.] Why, I would welcome the Government dealing with Gen. Goethals representing the other side, and there are many other cases like it. Take the young lieutenant who loses a leg in battle, which may soon occur. He retires on a salary of $1,800. Is it to be said that during all his life he may not seek employment with anyone unless that person or that corporation deliberately determines that it never will seek a contract or offer to make or sell anything to the Government of the United States? I do not think I want to take that position yet. [Applause.]

Mr. TAVENNER. On the subject of retired naval officers taking employment with concerns having dealings with the Government, and the principle is the same whether we refer to Army or Navy officers, the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs of the Fifty-fourth Congress, following its discovery of a great deal of this practice in 1896-97, had the following to say in its report made to the Senate on February 11, 1897 (S. Rept. 1453, 54th Cong., 2d sess.):

No man can well serve two masters; and if contractors having large dealings with a department of the Government can take into their employment, with no limit as to compensation, officials of that department, and through them learn the secrets and the purposes of the department, and morever insidiously influence its action, great injury may result to the public service. The fundamental principle upon which all legitimate business is transacted—that each side shall be represented solely by persons wholly devoted to its own interests—is viciously violated by a custom which allows one side to take into its pecuniary employment a representative of the other side.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. TAVENNER. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? The Chair hears none,

Mr. TAVENNER. In extending my remarks for the RECORD I wish to conclude the findings of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on the question as to whether retired Army and Navy officers should be permitted to take employment with concerns having dealings with the Government. The report continued as follows:

An effort was made in the debate to draw a distinction between officers on the active list and officers on the retired list. The committee deny that any well-founded distinction exists which ought to influence the decision of the question. Retired officers of the Navy remain officers to all intents and purposes, with an important exception. Section 1462 of the Revised Statutes provides that "no officer on the retired list of the Navy shall be employed on active duty except in time of war."

But notwithstanding this statute exempts retired officers from all obligation to render any service for the liberal retired pay which they receive for life, amounting usually to three-fourths of their active duty pay, yet they remain a part of the Navy of the United States, available in any emergency of war. They are entitled to wear their uniforms on public occasions and are allowed free access to every bureau of the Navy Department, on the theory that they are still ready to serve the interests of the Government by fidelity, sound advice, and an earnest spirit of devotion to public duty. It is quite enough to allow such officers to enter into ordinary private employment for compensation. To permit them to take sides against the Government and to enter into the employ of contractors having dealings with the Government reaching to millions of dollars will certainly, if the custom continues, become most pernicious and injurious to the public interests. Proclaim that such officers may be so employed by repealing the clause which has now become a law, and a boil and wealthy contractor, willing to spend enough money to take into his employ a sufficient number of naval officers on the active and retired lists, would be able thoroughly to weaken the department in its dealings with such contractor and to put the Government at his mercy in making bargains, which would be substantially entered into with the representatives of one side alone conducting all the negotiations.

Whenever there has been an investigation by Congress of the Navy Department-and there has not been one for a good many -the investigators incidentally turned up information showing that Navy officers were secretly connected with the armor-making concerns.

The Senate Committee on Naval Affairs of the Fifty-fourth Congress in 1897 was doing a little investigating into the reasonableness of the cost of armor and discovered that 8 or 10 naval officers were on the pay rolls of armor and steel companies and at the same time on the pay roll of the Government.

When an officer received an offer to go into the employment of a private firm having dealings with the Navy Department, it was the custom to obtain leave of absence with what was known as waiting-orders pay, which amounted to $2,300 a year, the officer at the same time receiving a salary usually of $5,000 or $6,000 a year in addition from the war-trading firm with which he had taken employment. Lieut. C. A. Stone, even after having retired from the Navy and taken employment with the Carnegie Steel Co., for a time kept his desk in the Bureau of Ordnance at the Navy Department. Lieut. J. F. Meigs resigned from the Navy and went into the employment of the Bethlehem Iron Co.

The most deeply involved of all was Commander William M. Folger, former Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance. He was many times in the employment of the armor and projectile concerns, receiving both salary and blocks of stock. He was employed by the Gatling Gun Co. as their European agent for two years on a salary; by the Simonds Rolling Machine Co. for about six months, in London, his expenses being paid and an interest in the business given him in the shape of stock in the company, which was profitable and paid good dividends. He was also mechanical adviser, on a salary, for the American Projectile Co.

Commander Folger's connection with the Harvey Steel Co. was severely criticized. After assisting and advising the Harvey Steel Co. in many ways while Chief of Ordnance and negotiating contracts as Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance with the Harvey Co., Commander Folger resigned as Chief of Ordnance and became an employee of the Harvey Steel Co., meanwhile, however, also receiving a salary of $2,300 from the Government. Folger's salary from the Harvey Co. was to be $5,000 a year, and he was given $20,000 worth of stock in the Harvey Co., which stock paid 20 per cent dividends from its receipts from the United States Government alone.

Commander Folger testified that while he was Chief of Ordnance he had many offers to go into the employment of the steel and armor companies, including offers from the Carnegie Steel Co. and the Bethlehem Iron Co., the only two firms manufacturing armor at that time.

In accepting the following offer from the Harvey Steel Co. Commander Folger accepted the offer of the firm to which he had given the most valuable service while Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance.

No. 52 Wall Street, New York, December 28, 1892.

Commander WM. M. FOLGER.

My Dear Sir: I am instructed by the board of directors of this company to invite you to accept the office of consulting engineer to our company on ordnance and armor plate and such other matters as may come under our patents whenever you are at liberty to so act.

We shall be happy to meet you then and arrange the terms with you.
Yours, very truly,

H. A. Harvey.

H. A. HARVEY, President of the Harvey Steel Co.

When Hilary A. Herbert became Secretary of the Navy and heard of Folger's connection with the Harvey Co. he recalled him to active service. Commander Folger was retired as rear admiral June 30, 1905, and therefore is now, and has been for the last 10 years, receiving $6,000 a year from the Government as a retired rear admiral.

Relative to the custom of Army and Navy officials to take employment with private firms Commander Folger testified as follows (54th Cong., S. Rept. 1453, p. 338, hearings):

Senator McMillan. Was it not and is it not customary in the Navy for officers to obtain leave of absence and to take employment from companies outside?

Mr. FOLGER. Very generally so.
Senator McMillan. And so it is in the Army?

Mr. FOLGER. So it has been in the Army.
Senator McMillan. I have known several cases of that kind.

Mr. FOLGER. They are so employed very often.

These same hearings (pp. 155 and 353) brought out the fact that former Secretary of the Navy B. F. Tracy, after having made a large contract as Secretary of the Navy with the Carnegie Co., without advertisement or any attempt to obtain competitive bidding, entered the employ of both the Carnegie Co. and the Harvey Co. as counsel.

I do not pretend to know the number of ex Army and Navy officers now connected with munitions manufacturers. There are more of such instances to-day, I believe, than at any time in the history of the Government. A very considerable amount of the munitions that are going to the allies from the United States is being made under the supervision of ex-officers of the American Army and Navy, who have resigned their official positions to take employment at two, three, four, or more times their former salaries.

This exodus from the ranks of the best-trained officers of the Army was permitted by the War Department, the officials of which take the ground that it is to the interest of the Government to have highly trained men in the plants of the private manufacturers which may be called upon in the emergency of war, but which, however, also have dealings with the Government in time of peace.

Personally I do not believe that either the War or Navy Departments should accept the resignations of officers who desire to enter employment with concerns having dealings with the Government. Army and Navy officers are but human, and if they know that by winning the favor of private war trafficking firms they may be taken into their employment at two, three, or four times their present salaries they are not likely to be as insistent upon holding out for all that the public is entitled to as they would otherwise be. In a few words, this policy places a premium upon serving the interest of the war trading firms instead of serving the interest of their employers, the American taxpayers, who have paid for their special training and are entitled to the full benefit therefrom.

Furthermore, the basis of the policy of accepting resigna-tions under the conditions noted is the assumption that the Government is going to continue to give the maximum amount of contracts for war materials to private plants and manufacture the minimum amount in Government arsenals, navy yards, and shipbuilding plants.

I believe this assumption is entirely erroneous. Although I realize full well that the great majority of the Army and Navy officials view the proposition of complete Government manufacture of war materials with derision and contempt and that this view is fully shared by those Army and Navy journals that rely upon the advertising of the great war trafficking firms for their principal revenue. But unless I mistake the temper of the American people, the days of the war traffickers are numbered. That great giant, public sentiment, is slow to act, but if I read the signs aright, the giant has already begun to stir. Once aroused, the sentiment of the American people is bigger and stronger even than the forces of the war traffickers, and these forces are strong, for they have behind them every last ounce of the strength of big business and special privilege. In fact, the war traffickers are big business and special privilege combined, supported by the sentiment of the naval and military Government manufacture of war munitions is coming-coming with a seven-league-boot stride, and gaining impetus every This movement was slow in starting, but it will bowl over all the obstructions and obstructionists that are in its path at the end. The masses are long suffering. Already they have suffered too long, and their temper now will not permit of long delay. Unless this Nation should be plunged in war and attention diverted, the policy of Government manufacture is not far away, so let us retain our Army and Navy officers who have been specially trained in the manufacture of munitions of war to take charge of Government plants.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr.

REAVIS) there were 41 ayes and 40 noes.

Tellers were demanded and ordered; and the Chair appointed as tellers the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDWELL].

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that the ayes were 54 and the noes were 59.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I make the point that no quorum is present.

The CHAIRMAN. The vote just taken discloses a quorum, but the Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and seventeen Members present, a quorum.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CALDWELL, Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. CALDWELL: Page 16, line 25, after the word Amendment by air. Cabrilla of four insert:

"Provided further, That any officer on the retired list found physically fit may be from time to time assigned to such military duty and for such period as the President may designate."

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve the point of

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CALDWELL, Yes.

Mr. MANN. If under the gentleman's amendment the President orders a retired officer to do something, what pay would that retired officer get?

Mr. CALDWELL. The pay prescribed by law, which I understand is not over that of a major.

Mr. MANN. There might be no pay prescribed by law. Mr. CALDWELL. But there is.

Mr. MANN. Would he get the retired pay or the full pay of Mr. CALDWELL. As I understand it, the statute prescribes that when he goes back into the service he shall be paid according to the service he performs up to the pay of major; but he can not get more than a major's pay.

Mr. MANN. So that if the President should order a brigadier general back into the service he would have to accept three-quarters pay?

Mr. CALDWELL. He would take three-quarters pay for his active service.

Mr. MANN. Is that fair?

Mr. GORDON. Of course it is not.

Mr. MANN. Oh, I suppose if the gentleman from Ohio were ordered back into private life, to get three-quarters pay of a Congressman, he would get paid too much, then.

Mr. GORDON. But I was not advocating this amendment. Mr. MANN. The gentleman sat in his seat and interrupted me with a statement to that effect.

Mr. GORDON. I did not. The gentleman misunderstood me. Of course, it would not be right to order him back on anything but full pay; but the President ought to have the right to order any of these retired officers back into the service.

Mr. MANN. I agree with the gentleman; and I agree that he is worth a great deal more than a Congressman's salary.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Additional pay for length of service, $467,000.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I voted against the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis], but there is a sort of penumbra to that subject that does raise an idea of unfairness, as one might say, and I think if the gentleman would analyze the situation he probably would reach what he wants by an amendment to existing law increasing the age limit for retirement. learning every day from what is happening across the water, and it can not have escaped the attention of any of us that the men who are doing the planning, and that is what superior officers ought to do, are in every instance, I think-and the gentleman from California [Mr. KAHN] will correct me if I am wrongin practically every instance, at least, over 62 years of age

Mr. KAHN. The age for retirement in the Army of the United States is 64 years.

Mr. BENNET. Over 64 years.
Mr. KAHN. But most of the officers—that is, the general officers—in command of troops are nearer 70 than 64 years of age,
Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BENNET. Yes.
Mr. REAVIS. Does the gentleman know of a single army officer upon either side in the European war who has attained distinction in the war who would not have been retired under the American system?

Mr. BENNET. I certainly do not, and therefore I rose to suggest to the gentleman the amendment I have proposed.

Mr. BRITTEN. Was not Von Hindenberg retired and afterwards recalled to the service?

Mr. BENNET. That is not the question, and I am not familiar with the exact facts, but I did desire to call to the attention of the committee the fact that men who are planning the successful movements on all sides in Europe are men who are over the age at which our officers are retired.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENNET. Yes. Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, we have a provision in the law that takes care of just such cases as Von Hinden-In the national-defense act there is a provision that in time of war retired officers of the Army may be assigned to active duty in the discretion of the President, and when so employed shall receive full pay and the allowance of their grade. In other words, in time of war you may call anybody on the retired list, and he shall receive the pay of his grade.

Mr. BENNET. Of course, then, that raises this interesting inquiry: If those men are fit to be called back as that statute contemplates, why do we not utilize three or four more years of their active life right in the active service?

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENNET. Yes.

Mr. KAHN. Does the gentleman realize that the one trouble in the Army seems to be the difficulty of promotion. The age of 64 years for retirement is fixed so that men in the lower grades can be promoted as the other men retire. That is the sole purpose of it.

Mr. BENNET. I think if that is the sole purpose of it, that Mr. BENNET. I think it that is the sole purpose of it, that the loss to the Army by putting out capable men in their prime is not compensated for by the rapidity of promotion.
Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BENNET. Yes.
Mr. FIELDS. Is it not only fair to assume that if a man is fit to be called back and serve the country in time of wir, he certainly must be fit to serve the country in time of peaci? Mr. BENNET. Yes.

Mr. FIELDS. And his services should be retained by the

Mr. BENNET.

Mr. BENNET. Yes.
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I agree with the gentleman from New York, and I believe the age requirement should be increased. I have no fight to make against retired officers because the Congress makes it possible for them to retire, but I believe the law should be changed. There is something radically wrong with it. I dislike to disagree with my colleague from Illinois, but it is certainly not a fair comparison when he compares a Congressman to retired Army officers. When my constituency retires me, which perhaps they will do in the near future—I hope not—I will not get three-fourths of my salary, but will go back and undertake to earn my living like I did before I came to Con-But, Mr. Chairman, it may also strike this House forcibly when I state to them there are only about 5,000 enlisted men on the retired list to-day out of the entire Army, and last year from the report only 310 enlisted men were placed on the retired list out of approximately 98,000 of enlisted men. And yet 36 men, drawing large salaries, were retired out of less than 5,000 Army officers.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SEARS. I have not the time. Of course, this less than 5,000 men who get the munificent salaries of three-fourths of $16 a month, having served the number of years required, should not be placed upon the same basis that the Army officers who are getting $4,000, $5,000, or $6,000 a year are placed. I want to say to the Members of the House, in reply to one of my colleagues, if you are going to pay a retired Army officer $6,000 a year for 10, 15, or 20 years to retain his patriotism in time of distress and in time of war, I fear we had better lose his patriotism at the present time.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman yield?

M. SEARS. I will.

Mr. ANTHONY. I simply wanted to call the gentleman's attention to the statement that these enlisted men retire on the basis of three-fourths of $15.

Mr. SEARS. Sixteen dollars.

Mr. ANTHONY. Sixteen dollars a month. The gentleman is

A member of the committee so stated to me.

Mr. ANTHONY. Let me say to the gentleman probably 80 per cent of the enlisted men on the retired list are retired with the highest noncommissioned rank they can get, and the average pay of the entire enlisted men is nearer $35 a month than it is three-fourths of $16 a month.

Mr. SEARS. Do any get $3,000 a year? Mr. ANTHONY. No; but their pay averages nearly $35. Mr. KAHN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEARS. I will.

They generally get in the neighborhood of $65. Mr. KAHN. That is what they get on the retired list-most of them-because they have served 30 years before they are put on the retired list, and nearly every one of them is a noncommissioned

Mr. SEARS. Then practically no privates are retired; and, on the other hand, the proportion is about 25 to 1 of Army officers retired to 1 enlisted man.
Mr. FIELDS. That is explained by the fact-

Mr. FIELDS. That is explained by the fact— Mr. SEARS. These officers have had to live a hard life and had to go through West Point—

Mr. FIELDS. They are not retired from the Army until they have served out their time.

Mr. SEARS. In other words the private who fires the shot to protect your home has to serve out the entire time until he is retired and the Army officer does not.

Mr. FIELDS. If all privates who enlist serve 30 years, there would be a great many more privates on the retired list.

Mr. SEARS. I know it is hard to save a few million dollars for the people. As I said in the beginning, I have no fight to make against the Army officers. My sole object was that the committee would take the matter under consideration and next year see if they could not make a more equitable basis of distribution between Army officers and the private soldiers serving

Mr. TALBOTT. Will the gentleman show this House how he can save money by retiring them at a greater age?

Mr. SEARS. I would not retire them as long as they were

Mr. TALBOTT. Then, there is no economy in it. If they are kept on the active list they still belong to the Government

Mr. SEARS. Take your own time. I can not yield to the gentleman further. If they are retired on a graduated scale—
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.
Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SEARS. If officers were retired on a graduated scale of salary instead of a three-fourths scale regardless of length of service or efficiency and the age of retirement was increased. I dare say no one will deny it would be more equitable and would save to the people thousands of dollars.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words. Mr. Chairman, I think the situations of the enlisted man and the commissioned officer of the Army with reference to the retired list are not similar, by any means, and no such comparison as the gentleman from Florida has undertaken to institute between them is fair to the commissioned officer. In the first place, the commissioned officer, as a general rule, goes into the service when he is 21 years of age, surrenders all other opportunity to follow any kind of pursuit in civil life that may be more remunerative, and it is part of his contract and commission at the time he enters the mili-tary service that from that time until he is retired for disaibility or for cause he shall refrain from any gainful occupation.

Therefore the Government promised him that if he refrained from gainful occupation during that period of service, which in normal conditions might extend over 40 years, he should be retired on an annuity, which in some degree, it may be thought, would compensate him for losing his opportunity all the way along up the line to profit by any other form of occupation.

Now, the enlisted man, as a general proposition, does not go into the Regular Army with the idea of making it a life occupation. The greater number of men who enlist in the Regular Army have no idea of making it a regular occupation. Most of them go in through some chance experience, adventure, or the impulse of the moment, and only a few of them go in with a settled determination to stay in until they can retire. So that there are very few men who ever stay in the Regular Army in the enlisted rank long enough to retire, or who have gone into the service in the first place with the idea of staying long enough to retire. Those men who have stayed in 30 years and can, therefore, retire have reached those advanced ranks of the noncommissioned officers where they retire from the Army on an equivalent footing, relatively, with the commissioned officer.

Mr. SEARS. Having been a soldier for two years, I admit there is no fair comparison between the private soldier and the commissioned officer.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. The law has stood the test for nearly 60 years, and practically no one up to this time has made an attempt to change it, because everybody thought it was fair.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that at the expiration of seven minutes the debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that at the expiration of seven minutes the debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be closed. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Mr. Chairman, if we have war, or if we do not, one of the greatest problems of this year will be the securing of an adequate food supply. The lack of good seed wheat in the Northwestern States furnishes a serious problem, owing to the rust conditions prevailing through the hardwheat States during 1916. Almost no wheat was raised in that area suitable for seed.

Mr. Steenerson has introduced a bill to permit wheat to be imported without duty when used for seed. This is a most important bill, which ought to be passed without fail before we adjourn.

All authorities agree that wheat plants grown from the rusted wheat of 1916, according to germination tests recently made, are away below the standard of former years. The factors which determine whether seed is good or not are shown by the portion of the kernels which will grow, the vigor of the growth, the freedom from weed seeds, and freedom from disease. The thing of greatest importance is the vigor of the growth. In a backward The thing season this is of fundamental importance. Some of the injured seed will grow, but it is likely to die if untoward conditions. such as a cold, backward spring, or late frosts or high winds prevail. Under such unfavorable conditions the reliance of the farmer should be placed in seed wheat with a plump berry. The supply of this kind of heavy, plump wheat is located for the most part in the Canadian Northwest. The farmers of our country should be encouraged to import it. The removal of the duty from wheat to be used only for seed will not only be a saving to those who import it but it will encourage many farmers to buy such seed who would not otherwise do so. The more good seed planted the greater chance there will be for an adequate wheat supply in this country during the season of 1917. It will also insure a large supply of wheat grown this year suitable for seed in the

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Do I understand the gentleman to say that there is no seed wheat in the Northwest?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. There may be some held over from the 1915 crop, but there was no wheat grown last year that was suitable for seed. While it makes good flour, it lacks in germination quality. The tests show that only a portion of the kernals will germinate, and that those that do lack vigor and strength and will not produce a good, healthy plant likely to withstand an unfavorable season.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I would like to say this to the gentleman, in view of the fact that we are discussing the war, that the cost of living has risen in the East because of the alleged lack of wheat, and we are informed through the announcement of the railroad embargoes on trains from the West that wheat intended for export is being held up, and that there is plenty of it.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. The wheat supply in the United States now is not as great as it was a year ago, and the wheat supply is likely to be very much less if this war goes on, even if we are not in it, and if our seed for the next spring is not of the proper quality we are going to have a great shortage in the quantity of wheat next fall.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is, there is going to be a greater shortage in the United States?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. If the war continues.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Can the gentleman tell us how much wheat is coming out of the West now for eastern consumption? We would all like to know.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I have only five minutes, and I want to talk about the bill that has been offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON] before the Ways and Means Committee, providing that wheat shall be admitted. and Means Committee, providing that wheat shall be admitted free of duty when used for seed only.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. There is difficulty in getting cars for carrying wheat to the East.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I can not yield for that purpose, much as I would like to. I have only five minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will say as to the bill of the gentle-man from Minnesota [Mr. Steenerson], that it was before the subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee and the subcommittee agreed to report it to the main committee, and I have no doubt, although it has not been considered by the main committee, that it will report it and bring it before the House at this session.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I am glad to hear the statement of the gentleman. If the main committee does report this bill favorably, I hope this House will see to it that it receives consideration at this session. I do not think there is any bill before Congress of greater importance. It will have the effect of saving a lot of money to those who will buy this seed, and what is still more important, it will encourage many people to buy good seed who otherwise would be using inferior seed. It will have a psychological effect. It will give a great deal of advertising to the fact that the grain grown last year was not suitable for seed, and they can get good, sound, plump wheat, weighing something like 60 pounds to the bushel, in the Canadian Northwest, that will give promise of good crops.

Mr. GORDON. What is the bill you are advocating?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I am advocating the passage of the bill introduced by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON] to permit wheat to come in for seed without duty.

I am in favor of it. Mr. GORDON.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Can they not do that now under the tariff act?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. No. The present law will not permit it.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It is not too late now to bring such

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. No; I do not think so. The crop will not be seeded for two or three months in the hard-

Dakota Farmer, which is well worth reading and study. I ask permission to have this article printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection. The matter is as follows:

SEED VALUE OF RUSTED WHEAT.

[By John Bracken, professor of field husbandry, University of Sas-katchewan.]

Twelve million acres of land will be sown to wheat in Western Canada in 1917. In about one-sixth of this area the seed is perhaps as good as in the average year. In over one-half of it the crop from which seed would ordinarily be taken has been more or less seriously damaged by rust. In a portion of the balance the grain has been injured by frost; and weathering, snow, and heating have lowered the value of the grain for seed here and there throughout considerable areas.

areas.

The question in the minds of thousands of crop growers is: "Shall I use my own seed or purchase better?"

This is a question that is important under some conditions in different communities every year, but in certain districts this year the answer that will be given it is likely to result in serious consequences. The purpose of this discussion is to present some data and observations that will aid the crop grower in arriving at a safe decision regarding the value of his grain for seed.

WHAT IS GOOD SEED?

WHAT IS GOOD SEED?

The factors that determine the value of wheat for seed are:

1. The proportion of it that will grow.

2. The vigor of the growth.

3. Its freedom from weed seeds.

4. Its freedom from disease.

5. Its freedom from other grain, other varieties, and foreign matter.

6. Its suitability to the district.

Those factors that are of particular importance at this time are the first and second, the proportion that will grow and the vigor of growth. It is an easy matter to get a suitable variety, and it is not very difficult to see that the seed is clean and free from disease, although many are careless about these simple matters. All these requirements are important, but the vigor of growth is much more important as compared with the others than in any season since the frosted crop of 1911.

The photographs and germination records illustrate the vigor of growth and give the percentage germination, the number of germinable seeds per acre, and the weight of 1,000 kernels from a sample of No. 1 hard, samples of No. 4 special, No. 6 special, and feed, and three miscellaneous samples. In each of No. 4 special, No. 6 special, and feed, this information is given for the original, the cleaned portion, and the screenings.

In addition to a photograph of the seed itself, the vigor of growth screenings.

In addition to a photograph of the seed itself, the vigor of growth 9 days after planting is shown immediately above it, and the vigor of growth 16 days after planting is shown at the top.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THESE TESTS.

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THESE TESTS.

A proportion of the rusted and frosted kernels, varying with the seriousness of the injury, will grow, but the percentage of germination, though relatively high in the rusted grain, is not a safe guide to their value for seed. The reasons for this are twofold:

1. It is not fair to the normally developed grain, because it gives no indication of the vigor of the germination or subsequent growth and in a backward season this is of fundamental importance.

2. It is not fair to the injured grain, because the latter contains more seeds per bushel than the uninjured. Every sample of rusted seed shown here, with the exception of the badly frozen sample, contains more germinable seeds per bushel than the sample of university grown No. 1 hard. In fact the least valuable rusted sample reported upon (Marquis B), which germinated only 72 per cent, contains nearly three times as many germinable seeds per 60 pounds as the plumpest sample of No. 1 hard, which germinated 100 per cent.

But if there were ten times as many there would be no justification for using it for and because of its low vigor, and the danger of the vitality being destroyed by untoward conditions either before or after coming up.

vitality being destroyed by untoward conditions either before or after coming up.

The weight of the germinable seeds seems to be the safest guide to the vigor of growth. In other words, the safest guide to the value of clean, rusted grain for seed is the percentage germination and the vigor of growth as expressed in a germination test. The weight per bushel, the size and plumpness of the berry, its relative freedom from injury, and, better still, the weight of single kernels are generally safe guides to the vigor of growth, but the vigor of growth in a germination test is a measure of all these.

If we were sure there would be warm weather, plenty of moisture, and no killing frosts or soil drifting between the 15th of April and the middle of June, much of the rusted seed might be used with considerable hope of success, but this "if" is beyond the expectation of the most optimistic. The facts are:

1. That some of this injured seed will grow;

2. That it may not be killed if ideal conditions after planting obtain; and

and
3. It is likely to either fail to germinate or to die if untoward conditions such as a cold, backward spring, late frosts, and high winds prevail.

The thinner and lighter the seed the less the chance of success. The plants from plump, heavy seed will recover after any of these conditions. The man who would lessen his chances for failure, the one who would not gamble with his crop—and in 1917 it will be a valuable stake—should plan now to test his own seed, and, if necessary, to get from some source a supply of vigorous, germinable seed for the coming year.

Much of the best seed is moving out of the country. It may be too late next March to get a good supply. The experiences of the past and the need of the present both demand quick action now.

DOES RUSTED SEED CARRY THE DISEASE?

In the oninion of most investigators rusted seed is valuable in proporcrop will not be seeded for two or three months in the hard-wheat States.

Our North Dakota Agricultural College put out an excellent bulletin upon this subject which I regret to say has been mislaid, but I have a brief article by John Bracken, professor of field husbandry, University of Saskatchewan, printed in the

THREE KINDS OF SEED.

Three are three different kinds of clean seed this year:

1. The kind that will not grow.

2. The kind that will grow but will produce only feeble plants.

3. The kind that will grow and produce vigorous plants.

The first is obviously unfit for seed if it is known it will not grow.

The germination test will tell whether it will or not.

The second is unfit for seed in proportion to its thinness. The more lean it is and the lighter it is per bushel the greater the risk in using it.

The third is the only kind that should be used, for the reason that it is the only kind that carries with it the least risk. Large, plump, and sound kernels are the only insurance we have against backward spring conditions and killing frosts after the plants are up.

	No. 1 hard, univ., cleaned.	Feed.	Feed, cleaned.	Feed, screen- ings.
Weight per bushel	641	46
sandsPer cent germination	782	2,031	1,610	2,568
	100	(68) 68	(92) 96	(64) 64
Number of germinable seeds per bushel	782	1,381	1,546	1,643
Weight of 1,000 kernels, in grams	34.8		16.9	10.6

A very poor sample for seed, yet it contains twice as many germinable seeds per bushel as the No. I hard. Notice the vigor as compared with the good sample on the left.

	No. 1 hard, univ., cleaned.	No. 6 special.	No. 6 special, cleaned.	No. 6 special, screen- ings.
Weight per bushel. Number of seeds per bushel, in thousands. Fer cent germination. Number of germinable seeds per bushel. Weight of 1,000 kerneis, in grams.	641 782 100 782 34.8	48 1,779 (56) 60 1,067 15,3	1,328 (72) 72 956 20,5	2,110 (52) 60 1,266 12.9

Too low in vigor to be risked for seed. Cleaning made a great improvement, but not enough to make safe to sow.

	No. 1 hard, univ., cleaned.	No. 4 special.	No. 4 special, cleaned.	No. 4 special, screen- ings.
Weight per bushel. Number of seeds per bushel, in thousands. Fer cent germination. Number of germinable seeds per bushel. Weight of 1,000 kernels in grams.	641 782 100 782 34.8	55 1,509 (84) 92 1,386 18.04	1, 334 (88) 96 1, 281 20. 4	2, 143 (32) 52 1, 114 12. 7

The cleaned sample is a fair one for seed, carrying 60 per cent more germinable seeds per bushel than the No. I hard, but showing perhaps 60 per cent less vigor. Cleaning improved this sample very much.

	No. 1 hard, univ., cleaned.	Marquis B, badly rusted.	Rusted Marquis W.	Frosted Marquis A.
Weight per bushel. Number of seeds per bushel, in thousands. Per cent germination. Number of germinable seeds per bushel. Weight of 1,000 kernels in grams	64½ 782 100 782 34.8	3,058 (60) 72 2,202 8.9	1,573 (56) 56 881 17.3	1,076 (28) 48 516 25.3

Marquis B is the least vigorous sample tested, yet it contains three times as many germinable seeds per bushel as the No. 1 hard. This crop was not considered worth cutting, and the grain is certainly unfit for seed.

Marquis W is a very poor one for seed, yet some of the plumpest kernels produce fairly strong plants.

Frosted Marquis A. Not "frosted" but badly frozen. The photograph flatters the seed. At twice the ordinary rate it might give a full stand, but it would likely rot in the ground if the spring were backward. As a matter of fact it heated after this test was made, and now none of it will germinate.

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman—
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for two minutes

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which was offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis] was a very excellent one. It should be adopted before the bill is finally The same provision the House has just rejected is law now, so far as it relates to naval officers.

The naval bill which became a law June 10, 1896, prohibited any naval officer on the active or retired list from taking employment with concerns having dealings with the Government. The provision reads as follows:

And provided further, That hereafter no payment shall be made from appropriations made by Congress to any officer in the Navy or Marine Corps, on the active or retired list, while such officer is employed, after June 30, 1897, by any person or company furnishing naval supplies or war material to the Government; and such employment is hereby made unlawful after said date.

There is, however, no similar legislation with reference to Army officers, the absence of which makes possible instances like that of Gen. Humphrey, who is on the pay roll of both the Du Pont Powder Co. and the Government.

W. H. Brownson, retired rear admiral, now drawing $6,000 a year from the Government, is a director of the International Nickel Co.

Charles F. Humphrey, who receives $6,000 a year from the Government as retired major general, is an employee of the Du Pont Powder Co. E. G. Buckner, vice president of the Du Pont Co., testified before a committee of Congress that he employed Gen. Humphrey at Washington to "look after such little details as getting information from all of the departments.

I believe that perhaps as much as 90 per cent of the munitions going to the allies is being made under the supervision of ex-United States Army and Navy officers, some of whom are retired and some of whom resigned to take employment with private munitions firms. Some of the resignations were accepted more than a year ago, when Mr. Garrison was Secretary of War. I do not believe the War Department should have accepted the resignations at that time, knowing unofficially that the very next day these officers, educated at the expense of the American people, were to start making munitions for the allies. The Government was endeavoring to be neutral in every way, and I believe it would have been better for the Secretary of War to have refused to accept the resignations just at that time, with the explanation that under the circumstances some might misunderstand the acceptances. Of course, if we had been at war with Germany, or even if we had broken off diplomatic relations, the situation would have been different.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Additional pay for length of service, $46,225.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I do this for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the House an item that more properly should have been presented when we were considering the subject of aviation in this bill.

When the fortification appropriation bill was before the House some weeks ago, among other gentlemen who took occasion to make some remarks I uttered the following, and I quote this extract from an article in the Army and Navy Journal; and I have a reason for doing it. I would not take the time of the House now otherwise. I read:

We all know, who have taken occasion to make inquiry, that when Gen. Pershing's expedition went into Mexico it was not without the airplane. They had eight. Did the eight fly? Good God, no! They were naturally not built for the air; they were built to go near the ground; they were built to rest in the sand; they were built to move only through the sagebrush. They had not the ability to fly. No one there could instill into them the blood or the microbe of flying. After a while two were able to fly by jerks, and after a further time some were able to fly spasmodically and intermittently, and some of the time I suppose have been flying regularly. We appropriated $13,000,000, as I remember distinctly, a year ago, and we have not had much better results yet. I have been told that the Aviation Corps of our Army has not been properly organized. I do not know whether it has or not; I do not know what a proper organization ought to be. I have heard it stated that there was difficulty in connection with the high officers. I know there has been a shaking up and a reorganization, and I hope it will be for the lasting good of the Aviation Corps. While we sit here with patriotism and vote the money in large sums, it ought to be possible to put that money so as to produce efficient results.

The Army and Navy Journal then goes on to say, after quoting the above:

Before Mr. Miller and his colleagues "sat there with patriotism, and voted the money," an Army officer and a civilian aeronautical expert of the highest standing in his profession, appeared before the Military Committees of Congress and described the work of the aviation section of the Army for his benefit and for that of his colleagues, Their statements are to be found in the printed hearings of the committees which are available for everyone in the United States who cares to inform himself as to these matters.

Then follows a further discussion, citing the statement made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley], and then it continues with this:

"During the expedition into Mexico the first areo squadron at Columbus were continually being used as dispatch bearers and mail carriers. About September 15 a daily airplane mail service was established between Columbus, N. Mex., and Colonia Dublan, Mexico. In addition to the above cross-country flying there have been numerous flights made from San Diego, Cal., to Los Angeles, Cal., a distance of 120 miles, by pupils of the San Diego school. Similar flights have also been made by pupils and pilots at the Mineola school."

There is also somewhere a statement, that I can not at this moment flud, showing the total distance that has been flown during the past year and which is so considerable as to occasion surprise upon learning it.

Mr. Henry Souther, the War Department's civilian expert on flying machines, testified before the House Committee on Naval Affairs on December 7, 1916, as to the marked progress of the Army aviators attached to the Southern Department were making not only in the duration of flights, but in the mechanical improvements on their machines. It is a part of patriotism for a Congressman to acquire information on any subject he discusses.

Then, in another place this is said, and I do not care to take the time of the House to read it all. I will try to pick out this particular feature in just a moment:

Mr. Sherley, chairman of the Committee on Fortifications, edeavored to throw a little light into the darkness that "obfuscates Mr. Miller's mental perceptions.

Now, I have wendered for a long time what is the matter with me. [Laughter.] It remained for this article from the Army and Navy Journal to enlighten me. I have been "obfuscated." I have looked into the dictionary to find out the exact nature of my ailment. I have consulted medical books, and I have talked with some of my distinguished friends who are occupied with physician's duties. Nobody seems able quite to give me the accurate definition of what "obfuscation" means, how it begins, what are its symptoms, how long it lasts, what its effects are. I would like to make some observations on that, or invite my friend from Illinois, Dr. Foster, to give me some dissertation on it. [Laughter.] It appears that the Army and Navy Journal thought it proper to tell that one Congressman was talking about something that he knew nothing about, and was criticizing an important corps of the Army.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, may I have five minutes more?

Mr. DENT. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the gentleman's remarks, five minutes, all debate on the paragraph be closed.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman let me get in for five minutes on that particular point? I think I have some information that I can give to the committee.

Mr. DENT. Ten minutes, then.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that at the end of 10 minutes debate on this paragraph be closed. Is there objection?

Mr. FOSTER. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask if we are to continue this sort of discussion on this bill all the time? If we are, I am going to object to any more, I will not object at this time; but here we have spent a whole day on two or three pages of this bill. I am going to object to any more of them, I do not care who they are.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. The intention is to indicate to the world that the Aviation Corps of the Army was unjustly eriticized, and the writer of this article took occasion to jump upon a Member of Congress for having the temerity to criticize the Aviation Corps. You will note that in this article, while there may not be a plain attempt to misrepresent, there nevertheless is an intention to convey an impression that is not borne out by the facts. In the first place, it is assumed that the criticism was improper. It is intended by the article to furnish evidence that the criticism was improper. But a careful inspection of the article will disclose that every fact therein stated tending to show efficiency in the Aviation Corps has nothing whatever to do with the criticism I made. My criticism was directed at the flying corps as it started with Pershing in Mexico, not in September, October, or November, but in March and April, 1916, when the clarion call sounded and our President said to Pershing and his men, "Cross the line and get Villa, dead or alive." To get him we needed the aid of aeroplanes. Aeroplanes were sent down to aid in the work. I was not discussing whether pupils have learned to fly from San Diego to Los Angeles, or what is the total number of miles flown by all the men wearing the uniform of Uncle Sam and flying in recent months. I tried to direct the attention of the House, and I am frank to say I hope the attention of the Army, to the fact that we were observing them. I tried to call the attention of the House to the fact that our Aviation Corps up until recently was a shame and a disgrace to our Army, and I do not take back one jot or tittle of that. Now let us see if I am fortified in what I have to say. The Chief of the Aviation Corps to-day is Col. Squier. The Chief of the Signal Corps of the Army, as everybody knows, is Gen. Scriven, a very distinguished man. Both these gentlemen appeared before the committee having charge of this bill. Now I want to read from the testimony on page 200 this bill. Now I want to read from the testimony on page 993 of the hearings the following. Gen. Scriven, who has charge of the Signal Corps, was testifying. He said:

the Signal Corps, was testifying. He said:

Take, for instance, the conditions as they exist on the border. An aeroplane goes up, meets with some unfavorable conditions, and comes down perhaps 30 or 40 miles away from any place where it can get any assistance. That is the end of the machine. On the contrary, if the machine came down at a place where repairs could be made, the broken parts may be replaced without difficulty.

Mr. Kahn. What do you mean when you say that is the end of the machine? Do you have to abandon it?

Gen. Scriven. We may have to abandon it if you can not get any of the parts you need. That would be especially true in case the machine came down in an enemy's country.

Mr. Kahn. How many of our machines have met with such a fate recently?

Gen. Scriven. There have been a good many of them which met such a fate down in Mexico. All of the first lot we sent down there suffered that fate.

that fate. All! Not one, or two, or three, but all.

Mr. Kahn. There was some question about those machines being fitted for the work you expected them to do, was there not?

Gen. Scriven. They were picked up and taken down there because they were all we had. They were taken down from Fort Sill and San Diego, where the conditions were different; but it was absolutely necessary to send them out, as the days were those of war. They were low-power machines—90-horsepower Curtiss machines.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. How many of those machines were there with the Pershing expedition at first-only nine, were there not?

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. My recollection is there were eight. There may have been nine. A little further on Col. Squier, who is the very efficient head of the Aviation Corps, was testifying, at page 1018:

Mr. McKellar. As I understand it, when you went down on the border, all the machines that you had failed to come up to what was required of them; in other words, you could not fly over mountains?

Col. Squier. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Mr. McKellar. These new machines that you say you are now equipped with, have you had a practical demonstration that they can fly above the highest mountains down there?

Col. Squier. Perhaps not the highest ones, but they fly readily over mountains.

Mr. McKellar. Do they cross mountains in going down to Gen. Pershing?
Col. Squier. Yes, sir,
Mr. McKellar. And those are the same mountains that those previous machines could not cross?
Col. Squier. I think so; these 160-horsepower machines—
Mr. McKellar. (interposing). What was the difficulty with the other machines—that they had too small a horsepower?
Col. Squier. Yes, sir,
Mr. McKellar. And you got rid of all of those?
Col. Squier. Yes, sir.

I do not ask for any other testimony. None is needed. The flying detachment that first went to aid Pershing in his expedition into Mexico was a flat, complete failure, and it will not help the Aviation Corps of the Army one bit at this moment or at any future time to try to cast slurs upon any Member of Congress who knew the facts and who desires to call the attention of his colleagues to them. [Applause.]

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, the writer of the article which the gentleman from Minnesota has just read says that our machines in Mexico did not fly. "Good God, no!" says this writer. Did the writer of that article know anything about what he was writing about? Good God, no! He had not investigated it. He says it was the duty of Congressmen and the part of patriotism for them to investigate into such I agree with him, and I did investigate into them. I found out some things in addition to what the gentleman from Minnesota had stated why the machines were a failure. It was not the fault of Congress and in some respects not the fault of the Signal Corps that they were failures, but the writer seems to intimate, as we have heard and seen in the papers all over the country, that everything that fails in the hands of the Army or the Navy is the fault of Congress. Whatever befell these machines in that respect was not the fault of Congress. The machines that went to Mexico did not fly, as the writer of the article says—or some of them did not fly any distance to speak of, as I was informed by a member of the Signal Corps, who claimed to know all about it-failed to fly because of the rarity of the air and the dryness, which caused the propeller to disintegrate and fly to pieces.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Then the opinion of the gentleman is that the aviation system fell down in Mexico because they were trying to fly with conditions under which they had not tried to use the machines before; that they were successful at the sea level, but failed under the high atmospheric conditions that existed down there?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. That is the information I have and which I received from a member of the Signal Corps. It was not all the reasons, as stated by the gentleman from Minnesota. The principal reason was that the propeller wheels went to pieces and they had to experiment a long time to find a place where they could have them manufactured so they would stand the climate. They did find a manufacturer in Chicago who was able to make propellers of a proper kind.

Mr. KEATING. Is the gentleman familiar with the testimony given by a dozen experts before the Naval Affairs Committee in which they testified that we had never manufactured an aeroplane in this country which could fly under war conditions?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I am not.

Mr. KEATING. Certain experts came before the Naval Committee and testified to that effect.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. That is not entirely correct, because we have built some aeroplanes that have flown under war conditions.

Mr. GARDNER. Does the gentleman remember that since 1910 Mr. Edison has been trying to adapt a battery to submarines and has not been yet successful?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I remember that he has been claiming that he had the best battery in the world.

Mr. GARDNER. He had the best explosive that could be

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. He succeeded admirably in creating an explosion. But the point I want to make is that the newspaper attack on Congress for not making proper supplies for the Mexican expedition had no foundation whatever.

Mr. KAHN. If the gentleman will allow me, it has been the policy of the Military Committee of the House to say that it will not advise the executive branch of the War Department as to what kind of machines or instruments they should use. That is left entirely to the War Department. We furnish the money and they must take the responsibility of acquiring the proper materials

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman is correct; I was coming to that point. We have acted upon the advice of the experts, but for some reason or other the public think that Congress is acting on its own information in these matters, while exactly the contrary is true. [Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Durké having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 9533) to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes, had asked a conference with the House of Representatives on said bill and amendments thereto, and had appointed Mr. Shafroth, Mr. Kern, and Mr. Poindex-ter as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

For expenses of courts-martial, courts of inquiry, military commissions, retiring boards, and compensation of reporters and witnesses attending same, and expenses of taking depositions and securing other evidence for use before the same, $60,000.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOSTER], who is sort of an official timekeeper of the House, has indicated that he proposes to prevent any further extension of time on this bill. I want to join him, with this statement: That I will do everything I can to help him expedite this bill, except this, that I have asked the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Callaway] to be here to-morrow morning, when I wish to make a motion for the passage of the resolution investigating the charges the gentleman from Texas put in the RECORD affecting some of the great newspapers of the country, that are alleged to have been coloring war news with a view to embroiling the United States in the war in Europe.

While I have not spoken on this bill to-day, hoping to advance the passage of it, I want to congratulate the committee and the country upon the more pacific tone of the great editorial writers this morning. They seem less bellicose than they were last week, when they were declaring this country in a state of war. If during the last three or four days some of us have made it possible for the masses of the people of the country to understand the frightful consequences of being thrown into a European conflict it may have been a very fortunate thing. It has at least given them a chance to breathe.

The President, according to some of the publications, was to have addressed us yesterday upon the question of the war; some of the great editors had been urging that he should appear did not find the "overt act" for which they were searching, nor have they yet found the "insult" they were ready to substitute for the "overt act," so that for a moment the people have been able to think and this body has been able to deliberate and go on with two important bills, the Post Office bill and the Army bill, as a representative body should without pressure from the outside and without being stampeded. This is as it should be before the country is plunged into war, with all its entangling alliances and subsequent burdens. The President has at least been given liberty for a brief time to deal with this great problem seriously and to come to Congress in the constitutional way. I am glad to have this opportunity to say to the chairman of the committee that I shall speak no more to-day and will do all I can to hasten the passage of this Army preparedness bill. [Applause.] The Clerk read as follows:

For amount required to make monthly payments to Jennie Carroll, widow of James Carroll, late major, United States Army, $1,500: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, suthorized and directed to pay to Harriet C. Carroll, mother of the late Maj. James Carroll, United States Army, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $600 per annum, payable monthly.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve the point of order.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I desire to strike out the last word. I want to get some information from the chairman of the committee. Mrs. Carroll is the widow of the major who died as the result of the yellow-fever experiment?

Mr. DENT. Yes. Mrs. Jennie Carroll is the widow of the officer who gave up his life in experiments in yellow fever in Cuba. Harriet C. Carroll, the other named in this paragraph, is the mother. That portion of the paragraph is new. It is intended to take care of his old mother, who is now living in Washington. I understand she is about 83 or 84 years of age and is living in some home for old women. She is being supported largely by the charity of the friends of Maj. Carroll.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order. Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, has Mrs. Jennie Carroll remarried?

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I could not answer that question positively, but I should say not, because her name is being carried, and has been carried for years, in this appropriation bill in that way.

Mr. KEATING. Is there any other member of the committee who can give a positive answer to that?

Mr. FIELDS. I have no information about it.

Mr. DENT. We are still carrying her under the same name. We have no information that she has been remarried. She has several children, I understand, and this is about all she has to support herself.

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 20, line 3, after the figures "$75,000," insert the following: "Provided, That Mary Elizabeth Graham, mother of Leo J. Graham, late of Company C, Thirty-first Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, National Guard, shall be regarded as the duly designated beneficiary of the late Leo J. Graham, under the act approved May 11, 1908, as amended by the act approved March 3, 1909."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve the point

On the amendment I reserve the point of order. Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman give us some information about this?

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, this is the case of a boy who was shot while on the border, near the Mexican line, through an accident at target practice. He failed to name a beneficiary. This amendment simply calls for $60 pay that his beneficiary would have received providing he had named a beneficiary.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. Yes

Mr. DENT. Has the gentleman introduced a bill of this

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. I introduced a bill and was informed that it would not get through in this session. Therefore I have offered this amendment at this session.

Mr. DENT. Has it gone to the Committee on Military Affairs

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. I think so; but I was informed that it would not get through at this session.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I want to state to the gentleman that the Committee on Military Affairs has a number of these before this body and demand a declaration of war. But they | bills of this general nature where a soldier on the border has been killed without naming a beneficiary. The committee in several instances, where the proof was that the soldier had no wife and no children that the person designated was the mother, father, or some one dependent upon him, has invariably reported the bill favorably.

But I really think it ought not to be incorporated in the Army appropriation bill unless these facts should have investigation at the hands of the committee. I will state to the gentleman that if the facts warrant it the committee will undoubtedly and gladly report out a bill allowing the beneficiary suggested in

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. If the gentleman thinks it can go through this session.

Mr. DENT. Well, of course, it would have to go through on the Private Calendar.

Mr. CARTER of Massachusetts. As long as it goes through this session. I have no objection.

Mr. DENT. I have no objection personally to the bill. have supported these measures in the committee. I think it is perfectly right, and the only question is whether or not we should not have an investigation to know whether or not we are naming the proper beneficiary, and there ought to be some investigation in order to determine that fact. If we open the doors to one bill, then these others would be naturally offered to this bill also. That is the only objection to the gentleman's bill. I will state, as far as I am concerned, the Military Committee stands ready to report the bill, if the gentleman puts it before the committee, and do what we can to have it passed this session, but under the circumstances I shall have to insist upon the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman asks leave to withdraw his amendment, if it is agreeable to the gentleman.

There was no objection. The Clerk read as follows:

All the money hereinbefore appropriated for pay of the Army and miscellaneous, except the appropriation for mileage to commissioned officers, contract surgeons, expert accountant, Inspector General's Department, Army field clerks, and field clerks of the Quartermaster Corps, when authorized by law, shall be disbursed and accounted for by officers of the Quartermaster Corps as pay of the Army, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to strike out lines 5 and 6. They are unnecessary.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 21, by striking out lines 5 and 6.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Subsistence of the Army: Purchase of subsistence supplies: For issue as rations to troops, civil employees when entitled thereto, hospital matrons, nurses, applicants for enlistment while held under observation, general prisoners of war (including Indians held by the Army as prisoners, but for whose subsistence appropriation is not otherwise made). Indians employed with the Army as guides and scouts, and general prisoners at posts; for the subsistence of the masters, officers, crews, and employees of the vessels of the Army transport service; hot coffee for troops traveling when supplied with cooked or travel rations; meals for recruiting parties and applicants for enlistment while under observation; for sales to officers, including members of the Officers' Reserve Corps, and enlisted men of the Army: Provided, That the sum of $12,000 is authorized to be expended for supplying mais or furnishing commutation of rations to enlisted men of the Regular Army and the National Guard who may be competitors in the national ritle match: Provided further, That no competitors in the national ritle match: Provided further, That no competitors that be entitled to commutation of rations in excess of $1.50 per day, and when meals are furnished no greater expense than that sum per man per day for the period the contest is in progress shall be incurred. For payments: Of commutation of rations to the cadets of the United States Military Academy in lieu of the regular established ration, at the rate of 40 cents per ration; of the regularion allowances of commutation in lieu of rations to enlisted men on furlough, enlisted men and male and female nurses when stationed at places where rations in kind can not be economically issued, and when traveling on detached duty where it is impracticable to carry rations of any kind, enlisted men selected to contest for places of absence, applicants for enlisted men and female nurses on leaves of absence, appl

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amend-

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

On page 21, line 20, after the word "corps" insert "while on active

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, the object of that amendment is apparent on the face of it. Those words were left out in the print. The purpose is to give the officers of the Reserve Corps while on active duty the right to purchase supplies like the regular officers and enlisted men.

The question was taken and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask why it is, on page 23, $4,000 is appropriated for subsistence of West Point cadets while attending the inaugural ceremonies and, on page 32, $15,000 is also appropriated for their traveling expenses. Why were those two items separated?

Mr. DENT. Mr. DENT. One is, of course, for expenses of the cadets in going to and from West Point and Washington and the other is to take care of them while they are here.

Mr. KAHN. We have done it every four years.

These appropriations are made every four years. Mr. DENT Mr. SEARS. If this is the usual appropriation I will call attention to the fact there are about a couple of hundred more cadets at West Point at this time than four years ago.

Mr. DENT. The department asked us for this amount and did not ask any more and I suppose if they wanted any more they would have asked for it.

Mr. SEARS. Perhaps the other amount was too large.
Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, perhaps the most interesting part of the debate on this great military appropriation bill is on the subject of obtaining enlistments and then having the soldiers stay in the Regular Army.

The distance between the Regular officer, with his West Point or other institutional training, creates, perhaps unconsciously, an aristocracy in the Army, both as to culture and remuneration. This, I think, is a large reason why enlistment is repulsive to the better class of young men, and continued service thereunder becomes undesirable and irksome. My criticism, in brief, would be that in the Regular Army we have a European system rather than an American system. We seek to fit the European system upon an American people. Our young men consider themselves the equal of the other young men of the United States and superior to the young men of any other nation on the earth. Moreover, within bounds and reason the man who marches in the ranks regards himself fundamentally as good as he who carries the sword and issues the orders. So American young men, unless unfortunate in life in some way, are not inclined to enter a service where they take the lower side in a system of more or less caste,

In the National Guard, and therefore in the United States troops coming from the National Guard, there is not the snobbishness of the officers nor the abject subservience of the men. Enlisted men and noncommissioned officers usually know personally the officers, their station, and families at home. To the ordinary young member of the National Guard, officer, neighbor, and friend are synonymous terms. Barriers of rank are only on formal parade, drill, or other important function.

I believe that National Guard officers and men would go to-gether as far or farther into danger as seasoned officers and veteran Regulars. First, they are on an average more intelligent. Second, there is no crushed spirit in their ranks. On the other hand, there is an ambition to advance and excel, which the enlisted Regular does not always have or know

These facts seem to have seized the Regular Army officers from the highest to the lowest. They have, instead of trying to Americanize the Army, or at least improve, when Americanization had been shown, condemned it. Therefore in the past months during the Mexican expedition from every Regular quarter, including those near the head of the service at Washington, emphatic if not always intelligent criticisms have been turned loose at the club, in committee hearing, on the platform, and in the press against the National Guard systemand men as well.

Congressman CRAGO, for 25 years a member of the National Guard of his State, in a speech in Congress made a few very interesting observations, from which I quote:

Interesting observations, from which I quote:

The National Guard was contemplated or was expected to exist under the provisions of the act of June 3, 1916. In other words, the act of June 3 had not gone into effect, so far as the National Guard was concerned. Hence all these criticisms of the National Guard in that call for the border service are based on a wrong conception of what we had to call on when that call of June 18 was made.

The Regular Army could not get recruits. The National Guard did get recruits overnight. They furnished this Government with almost 140,000 enlisted men, with trained officers to handle them. When the Government could not turn in any other direction, and was absolutely helpless for recruits for the Regular Army, the National Guard furnished the men who were needed. We are told that some of the Regular Army organizations which went to the border and some which went to Vera Cruz had as low as 20 men to the company. I know this is true, that so many officers had been detailed on special duty here in Washington and elsewhere that company after company of the regular units were commanded by second lieutenants, lieutenants of the National Guard, and in some cases noncommissioned officers, not a single commissioned officer being present with his company, because these officers were doing work which could have been done by some clerk at a very small salary. In fact, much clerical work has been done by men holding the rank of captains and majors which should have been done by clerks. Now, I think a great mistake has been made in minimizing the experience of these men on the border. The fact that the newspapers of this country have condemned this service has taken a great deal of the pride out of these men who so willingly and so patriotically offered their services when the President thought they were needed. Only the other night. I am glad to hear Maj. Gen. Scott say, the purpose of mobilizing the guard on the border had been accomplished, that prior to that time they were hearing continually of the invasion of our border by the Mexicans, but that since the guard had gone down there he had never heard anything of that kind. The Mexicans thought the only Army we could possibly muster was our small Regular force, and when within a few days' time these Volunteer organizations were sent down there it put an entirely different aspect on affairs.

From the report of William A. Mann, brigadier general, General Staff, Chief of Militia Bureau, dated December 19, 1916, I take the following: Number of members of National Guard transported to the Number of members of National Guard transported to the 151,096

Looking back in fair retrospect we can say that the delays and mistakes were largely those of the War Department and not those of the National Guard. If the War Department had furnished uniforms and arms, transportation, and subsistence as promptly as many of the boys of the National Guard furnished from farm, factory, shop, and office good physiques, clean lives, quick brains, and effective activities, then there would have been little ground for the carping criticism that we read and hear.

I know something of the two gallant regiments from Nebraska, the Fourth and Fifth, and also the Hospital and Signal Corps from the same State. They were among the first to muster, the most early to equip, and prompt to start for the border.

If the men knew the worth of these young men "of the border" there would be more springing to their defense. A large number in the organizations named were from the farms, leaving the most valuable harvest our State ever produced. A loss of money and a loss of opportunity in our great harvest year. There were professional men, including physicians, teachers, and lawyers; there were clerks, students, and tradesmen. All left employment to go when called, and at a time when they could have avoided it. Among these were many who left wife and children. Of course, there were similar separations in other States, but separation from such wives and babies as we have in Nebraska is a test of which only a Nebraska thoroughbred is capable.

All of these organizations distinguished and acquitted themselves with distinction among the border organizations for devotion to duty, capacity to learn, and ability to perform duties assigned them. They were sober and law-abiding. There was little demand for court-martial. There was much occasion for official commendation. They were typical Nebraska Americans, and that meant Nebraskans by birth or choice. They were descendants of New England Purltan and southern cavalier, sturdy middle-section stock as well as those coming from the best blood of Europe, many of whose relatives are now yielding their blood and lives in the awful conflict of the Old World. To these of the National Guard the English Jack, French tri-color, or Teutonic eagles had little interest. The Stars and Stripes filled their patriotic sky and satisfied their military vision. [Applause.]

Among all the regiments in the Brownsville district it was a Nebraska regiment that ranked first in inspection, examinations, drills, and in the great maneuver. The soldiers of the monarchies are well described by Shakespeare in Henry V: "Give them great meals of beef, iron, and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils." Give our American National Guards who graduated into the United States service, wholesome food like they might have at home, tents for refreshing sleep, sanitary surroundings, as all men during this age should have, good books to read, humane and intelligent officers to direct; let all those in authority from Commander in Chief down to the humblest noncommissioned officer recognize the soldier to be a man; give him then a worthy cause in which to either carry or defend the flag, and it will be carried and where carried stay put. [Applause.] And while they might not fight "like devils," they would fight to victory "any devils" who opposed them at or beyond the Rio Grande. [Applause.]

Of such men and of such mettle were the gallant regiments and corps from Nebraska.

They made good on the border. They would make good elsewhere if properly called. I hope no great international provocation may arise that may call these or any of those now back from the border to active service from their well-earned rest.

Discussion on this floor in recent days has often been ill tempered and ill advised. There have been some special protestations of loyalty and patriotism which no one questioned. There have been strictures upon the conduct and policy of certain Members living in the great heart of the continent. prompted me to make some investigations, first, relative to my own State, and second, those States where the respective majorities of their Congressmen voted to warn Americans from taking passage on endangered ships.

The scope of my inquiry was the record made in the Spanish-

American War and in the recent border expedition.

I found that Nebraska furnished in these two military campaigns 49 soldiers out of every 10,000 population. Compared with certain States it was:

Nebraska	49
Ohio	45
Massachusetts	45
New York	43
Indiana	40
Illinois	40
Missouri	40
Now Toyour
New Jersey	39
Alabama	35
Virginia	34

As compared with certain geographic sections recognized by the census.

Nebraska	4
New England	4
Middle Atlantic
East North Central
East South Central	4
West South Central
South Atlantic
East South Central Mountain
Pacific	4

The States where majorities in this House voted for warning to reckless sea passengers, speaking collectively, furnished in the two military campaigns for every 10,000 population 43 soldiers; all other States, 38; and for the whole United States, 39.

Nebraska is in good company, and Nebraska helps swell the company's average rather than reduce it.

Nebraska as a Territory did her full share in furnishing soldiers for the Union Army. Nebraska in the only two opportunities it has had since assuming statehood demonstrated two things: First, that she will wait for the action of the constitutional authorities before engaging in battles or winning victories; second, when put to the test does her share in full and rounded measure. The West generally always believes in and hopes for peace with all the world, as long as it can be maintained with honor, as do all the people of the United States, yet when war has been declared and soldiers have been called for, history shows that the West furnishes the highest quota of soldiers to fight the battles, win the victories, and maintain the honor of the United States. [Applause.]

We will tolerate no aspersions of our motives. We move in national matters in harmony with the Constitution. We accept suggestions as to our course from none who seem to have forgotten that between severance of diplomatic relations and a foreign war there is a deliberative branch of the Government known as the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Regular supplies, Quartermaster Corps: Regular supplies of the Quartermaster Corps, including their care and protection; construction and repair of military reservation fences; stoves and heating apparatus required for heating offices, hospitals, barracks and quarters, and recruiting stations, and United States disciplinary barracks; also ranges, stoves, coffee roasters, and appliances for cooking and serving food at posts, in the field, and when traveling, and repair and maintenance of such heating and cooking appliances; and the necessary power for the operation of moving-picture machines; authorized issues of candles and matches; for furnishing heat and light for the authorized allowance of quarters for officers and enlisted men; contract surgeons when stationed at and occupying public quarters at military posts; for officers of the National Guard attending service and garrison schools, and for recruits, guards, hospitals, storehouses, offices, the buildings erected at private cost, in the operation of the act approved May 31, 1902; for sale to officers, and including also fuel and engine supplies required in the operation of modern batteries at established posts; for post bakeries, including bake ovens and apparatus pertaining thereto, and the repair thereof; for ice machines and their maintenance where required for the health and comfort of the troops and offices at such places as the Secretary of War may determine, and for preservation of stores; for the construction, operation, and maintenance of laundries at military posts in the United States and its island possessions; for the authorized issues of laundry materials for use of general prisoners confined at military posts without pay or allowances, and for applicants for enlistment while held under observation; authorized issues of soap; for hire of employees; for the encessary furniture, textbooks, paper, and equipment for the post schools and libraries; for the purchase and issue of instruments, office furniture, stationery, and other authorized articles for the use of officers' schools at the several military posts; commercial newspapers, market reports, etc.; for the tableware and mess furniture for kitchens and mess halls, each and all for the enlisted men, including recruits; of forage, salt, and vinegar for the horses, mules, oxen, and other draft and riding animals of the Quartermaster Corps at the several posts and stations and with the armies in the field, and for the horses of the several regiments of Cavalry, and batteries of Artillery, and such companies of Infantry and Scouts as may be mounted; for remounts and for the authorized number of officers' horses, including bedding for the animals; for seeds and implements required for the raising of forage at remount depots and on military reservations in the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and for labor and expenses incident thereto, including, when specifically authorized by the Secretary of War, the cos

Mr. TILSON and Mr. GARDNER rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Tilson], a member of the committee, is recognized.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TILSON. Is this the proper place to submit an amendment to this paragraph, or should I wait until after the proviso has been read? I desire to move a slight amendment to the phraseology of the paragraph just read.

Mr. DENT. I will ask the gentleman if it is just a matter of

Mr. TILSON. It is a new item, increasing the scope of the

The CHAIRMAN. Where does the gentleman want to insert the amendment?

Mr. TILSON. On page 24, line 23. I would like to know whether I should offer the amendment now or wait until after the proviso is read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. Tilson: Page 24, line 23, after the word "posts," insert the words "for purchase of relief maps for issue to organizations."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, I am informed that while National Guard organizations can be and are supplied with relief maps for war-map problems the Regular Army is not authorized to purchase them. I understand that under existing law relief maps may be purchased and issued to the National Guard, and that they have been so issued and are being used in war-map problem work, while the Regular Army can not purchase them under any appropriation made for the Regular Army. A relief map is very helpful, indeed, in the instruction of officers by the war-map problem method. This amendment does not increase the amount appropriated, but simply inserts the new language that was read at the Clerk's desk, authorizing the purchase of relief maps for issue to regular organizations.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. DENT. I have no objection to the amendment, Mr. Chair-

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Tilson].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.
Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Incidental expenses, Quartermaster Corps: Postage; cost of telegrams on official business received and sent by officers of the Army; extra pay to soldiers employed on extra duty, under the direction of the Quartermaster Corps, in the erection of barracks, quarters, and storehouses, in the construction of roads, and other constant labor for periods of not less than 10 days; as additional school-teachers during the school term at post schools, and as clerks for post quartermasters at military posts, and for overseers of general prisoners at posts designated by the War Department for the confinement of general prisoners, and for the United States disciplinary barracks guard: Provided, That hereafter the extra-duty pay to the United States disciplinary barracks guard shall be at the following rates per day: Battallon sergeants major, first sergeants, mess sergeants, supply sergeants, and sergeants, 35 cents; cooks and mechanics, 20 cents; corporals, privates first class, privates, and buglers, 30 cents; of extra-duty pay at rates to be fixed by the Secretary of War for mess stewards and cooks, and instructor cooks at the schools for bakers and cooks; for expenses of expresses to and from frontier posts and armies in the field; of escorts to officers or agents of the Quartermaster Corps to trains where military escorts can not be furnished; authorized office furniture; authorized issue of towels; hire of laborers in the Quartermaster Corps, including the care of officers' mounts when the same are furnished by the Government, and the hire of interpreters, sples, or guides for the Army; compensation of clerks and other employees to the officers of the Quartermaster Corps, and clerks, foremen, watchmen, and organist for the United States disciplinary barracks, and incidental expenses of recruiting; for the apprehension, securing, and delivering of deserters, including escaped military prisoners, and the expenses incident to their pursuit, and no greater sum than $50 for each deserter or escaped military prisoner shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid to any civil officer or citizen for such services and expenses; for a donation of $5 to each dishonorably discharged prisoner upon his release from confinement under court-martial sentence involving dishonorable discharge; for the following expenditures required for the several regiments of Cavalry, the batteries of Field Artillery, and such companies of Infantry and Scouts as may be mounted, the authorized number of officers' horses, and mules, chests and issue outfits; and such additional expenditures as are necessary and authorized by law in the movements and opera

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendments. The Clerk read as follows:

On page 27, line 13, between the words "cents" and "cooks," insert "corporals, 30 cents." Also, strike out of said line 13 the words and figures "20 cents; corporals."

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Chair will submit the amendments together. [After a pause.] The Chair hears

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 27, line 14, by striking out the figures "30" and inserting "20" in lieu thereof.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting after the last word on the last line of page 28 the following:

"Provided, That not exceeding $6,000 of said sum, to be paid in monthly installments, shall be expended in the employ of a congressional accountant, who shall be selected by a joint resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, and whose duty shall be to examine and audit the sums expended under this item, as well as all the items of expenditure contained in this act, to the end that the expenditures under this item and the expenditures under all items in this act may be conserved and in proper cases lessened; that the said employee shall be learned and trained in the business of accounting; that he must have no official connection with said department; that he shall not be connected by blood or marriage with the head of any department or any assistant therein, or the chief of any bureau in said department. He shall examine and audit not only the items of expenditure contained in this act, but he shall examine and report upon the estimates for the appropriation bills submitted by the said department for the next fiscal year. He shall be prepared at all times to give to the Committees on Military Affairs in each branch of Congress all the information needed about each and every appropriations et forth in such appropriations bills; the advisability of continuing such appropriations or items of appropriations; whether said appropriations may be reduced, whether said appropriations shave been judiciously and economically expended, and every detail in connection with each item of expenditure of said appropriation shave been judiciously and economically expended, and every detail in connection with each item of expenditure of said appropriation shall at all times be given him by the officials of said department and those acting under them, and every facility furnished so that said accountant may be able to have the most accurate information concerning the wor

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. Chairman, I do not think it is subject to a point of order.

Mr. STAFFORD. If the gentleman has any doubts about it, let us have the question decided forthwith in order to save the time of the committee, unless the gentleman really wants to

Mr. McKELLAR. I will be glad to discuss the point of order, if the gentleman desires it.

Mr. STAFFORD. I will make the point of order, if the gentleman desires it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. Chairman, I think this is not subject to a point of order for this reason: Taking it in connection with the section just preceding, to which it refers specifically, it is certainly germane, and in addition to that the effect of this amendment is to lessen the expenditures in this bill, and it must necessarily have that effect. It does not do so in terms, but it must necessarily have that effect.

Now, for the many years that I have been connected with this committee I have noticed these very large items, amounting to many million dollars, one of them in the section just preceding this amounting to $11,000,000, and in this section amounting to $1,800,000 for various expenses; and in examining the witnesses who appear before our committee it is very difficult to tell how these moneys are expended. It is absolutely necessary to an economical running of this department of the Government that we should have an accountant of this kind in order that the expenditures of Congress for the military department of our Government shall be lessened.

Now, if the Chair please, I find that this case falls almost directly within a ruling made by the present occupant of the chair several years ago. In 1912 the present chairman [Mr. Saunders] ruled, and I call the attention of the gentleman to his ruling, on page 508 of the Rules and Practice:

ruling, on page 508 of the Rules and Practice:

In this connection the Chair will state that it is not necessary for an amendment to be in order that it should be specifically directed to a reduction in terms of an amount in a bill. Of course, if it is addressed to such an amount, and reduces the same in terms, it will be in order. As, for instance, if the sum of $1,000,000 is appropriated for a designated purpose pursuant to the requirements of existing law and an amendment is submitted reducing this amount to $995,000, such an amendment will be in order. But the Holman rule admits of other amendments in order. The language of the rule is to the effect that germane amendments changing existing law are in order provided they retrench expenditures by the reduction of amounts of money covered by the bill.

The words "amounts of money covered by the bill" refer not only to the amounts specifically appropriated by the bill, but to the amounts required under the different heads or items of expense to which the bill relates.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that that amendment comes almost directly within this provision of the Holman rule. I read further:

And if the necessary effect of an amendment is to reduce in the operation of the departments or bureaus for which appropriations are made the amount otherwise required for any one or more heads or items of expense, then a retrenchment has been effected by a reduction of the amounts of money covered by the bill.

The precedents say, in this connection, that the amendment, being in itself a complete piece of legislation, must operate ex proprio vigore to effect a reduction of expenditures. The reduction must appear as a necessary result; that is, it must be appearent to the Chair that the amendment will operate of its own force to effect a reduction.

Now, I submit that this amendment on its face, by a necessary intendment, shows to anyone who is familiar, as I believe, with our method of appropriating money, that the necessary effect of the amendment, if adopted, would be to reduce expenditures. I believe it will reduce expenditures in this department of the Government by many millions of dollars every year. We appropriate items of money here in bulk for a vast number of purposes that are covered in general terms. No man in this House, no man on this committee, can tell where all of that money goes. We ought to have some knowledge of it. Why, as a business Government, spending this large amount of money, it seems to me beyond the shadow of cavil that it is absolutely necessary for us to have this system, unless we are just going to appropriate all the money there is in the world in these various bills.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I will with pleasure.
Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Does not the institution of a department for Congress to examine these accounts simply duplicate a service that is now performed by the Auditor for the War Department?

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no. It has nothing to do with that. It is a different method entirely. The accountant examines into the items of this very bill and reports to the House as to what is done with these items.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Before the money is expended? Mr. McKELLAR. No.

Mr. CRAGO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. CRAGO. Does not the gentleman know that the reports of the different heads of the Army give all these expenditures

Mr. McKELLAR. No, indeed; that is exactly what I am seeking to get at. The reports of the department do not give any real facts. I have tried in the committee time and time again by cross-examination, as gimletlike as I could make it, to bring from these officers a statement as to how the money is expended, and you can not get it, and we all know we can not get it except in general terms. The only way it can be done effectually is by having an agent of this Congress, our agent, do it. They appeal to us for money. We ought to know for what purpose all of this money is expended and in what way it is expended; and whenever we do that we will save this Govern-ment countless millions of dollars, if this is adopted in every department of the Government, as I believe it ought to be.

I believe that this amendment is in order. under the decisions under the Holman rule the necessary effect of the adoption of this amendment will be to bring about retrenchment in the expenditures in this department. It will lessen the expenditures

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Is not the purpose of an auditor simply to show where the money has been expended and to get an itemized return of it?

Mr. McKELLAR. That may be the technical definition of what an auditor is, but the specific duties are imposed here in this amendment to show just exactly what becomes of the money.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. That is just exactly what an auditor does in his report. He states what has become of the money, does he not? Mr. McKELLAR.

An auditor shows what has become of money spent after it has been spent. The object of this provision is to show to Congress where the money is to go before it is spent.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. How can you show where money is going before you appropriate it?

Mr. McKELLAR. You can not show where money is going before you appropriate it; but any official charged with the expenditure of money will know that he has got to account to this congressional examiner, this agent of ours, who will pass upon this matter and report it to the next Congress, and the very necessary effect of it will be to lessen expenditures.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Can they spend a penny now that is not approved by the Comptroller?

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course not; but if the gentleman from Vermont will indulge me right there, we appropriate for a vast number of purposes, general purposes, for instance, horseshoe-ing, water, food—a thousand different objects of the most general nature, hundreds of items in this very section and the section preceding it of the most general nature, and the expenditure will pass the Comptroller for almost any one of these or similar items. If we have an accountant of our own, not amenable to anyone else except this body and to the Senate, in my judgment it will mean a lessening of the Government expenditures, not only this year but every year in the future, and I hope the gentleman will not make the point of order. If we are going to abdicate our power-

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. To an auditor of this kind? Mr. McKELLAR. No; if we are going to abdicate our power and turn it over to the departments, and just accept whatever the departments send down here to us-if we are just to accept their recommendations, what is the use of our serving at all? Why do we not just accept the recommendations made by the What is the use of our attempting to Secretary and pass them? legislate on them at all?

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Then the gentleman contends that the moral effect of having a congressional auditor for the benefit of this committee will so terrify the executive branch of the Government that there will be a speculative hope of saving money

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no; not at all.
Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Does the gentleman contend that comes under the provision of the Holman rule?
Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no; of course no speculation comes under the Holman rule.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Then the point of order lies.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no; quite the contrary. This is not speculative decrease. The decrease comes as a necessary consequence.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Because you are depending on the Holman rule.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; quite the contrary. The gentleman wholly misunderstands it. My proposition is that in order that we may intelligently appropriate and expend this money we ought to have some man who is amenable to this Congress and to no one else to pass upon the expenditures and give us information in reference to them, and furnish us a statement as to how these moneys are spent. Why, you just take the items for rent of various buildings in this town. Is there a man on this floor who can give you a single statement of what is paid and whether we get value received for it? We spend it in lump sums and in sums that are sometimes astonishing to contem-

Mr. KAHN. The gentleman is mistaken in saying that we pay rentals in the District of Columbia in lump sums.

Mr. McKELLAR. In this way: I recall one particular instance where we pay $5,000 or $4,900 in yearly rental for a garage or warehouse in the northeast. I have no doubt the property can be bought around that figure. But how do we know? We have a general statement made by the head of a department or the assistants. They do not know and we do not know from examination how the money is spent. They do not know themselves.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKellar. Yes. Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman is in error as to the lack of information furnished to the House as to the rentals of buildings. Under the law they must furnish the information in the Book of Estimates as to the rentals, the estimate per square

Mr. McKELLAR. Not in this department.
Mr. STAFFORD. Yes; in all the departments; and if the gentleman will examine the Book of Estimates he will find that he is mistaken.

Mr. KAHN. Will the a Mr. McKELLAR. Yes. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KAHN. In these hearings every item is set forth in detail, with every dollar required for every item. For instance, this item, "Regular supplies," covers in the hearings pages 157 to 233, and every particular item of this paragraph is placed in these tables.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the gentleman read one-pick it out himself?

Mr. KAHN (reading)-

Care and protection of regular supplies of Quartermaster D ment: United States, $63,760; Philippine Islands, $16,300; $80,073. Appropriated for the fiscal year 1916, $61,841.67.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does that show this House anything about where the money is expended?

Mr. KAHN. It shows where it is to be expended. There is also a statement as to the particular items embraced in the

Mr. McKELLAR. In general terms that the War Department spends $61,000 for the warehousing of the quartermaster stores. These appropriations are mounting up to a stupendous sum. I recall that Mr. Taft said time and again that with a proper accounting system this Government could save $300,-000,000 a year. I do not believe he was out of whack about it; I believe it would be more. The one thing that we need to do is to take hold with our own authority, have our agents to tell us just exactly what is done with the money, how it is expended, and whether properly expended or not, and whether the figures they give us are correct or not.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to the gentleman from Tennessee that he is pursuing a course which I think in the end may accomplish some good; but I hope the gentleman will not insist on that amendment at this time to this appropriation bill. Unquestionably it makes some material changes in the law. We have been proceeding on the theory that this bill is to carry into effect the legislation already adopted, and we have recommended only such changes in the administration of the law as the department has found inconvenient.

Mr. McKELLAR. I agree to that, but I think the amendment is in order; and I will ask the Chair for a ruling.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee insists that his amendment is in order under the Holman rule, and in that connection cites a ruling heretofore made by the present occupant of the chair. The Chair thinks that the principles announced in that ruling are correct and will follow them, but it hardly thinks that the gentleman from Tennessee has brought his amendment within the benefit of those principles. The main principle announced in that ruling was that in order for an amendment carrying new legislation to be in order on an appropriation bill, it must necessarily effect a reduction in expenditures. It can hardly be said that such will be the effect of the pending amendment. It proposes to create an economy agent, so to say. This functionary may serve a very useful purpose and recommend very wholesome economies, but it does not follow that Congress will act favorably upon these suggestions. It has notably failed to act on many of the recommendations of the $15,000,000.

Economy Commission. Having in mind, therefore, that it is impossible to predicate the favorable action of Congress upon the recommendations of this functionary, how then can it be confidently claimed, much less considered, as established, that this amendment in its necessary operation will effect retrenchment? And unless it will necessarily operate to effect a retrenchment of expenditures the amendment is not in order under the Holman rule. The Chair sustains the point of order raised by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. It is almost 6 o'clock.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, at the suggestion of the gentleman from California, which was that as we were running along harmoniously we might run until 6.30, I had prepared myself to that end.

Mr. MANN. Of course, I am willing to stay here as long as anybody, and do stay here from the time we meet until we adjourn, and I expect to do so to-day. But my understanding is that the gentleman from North Carolina is going to propose an evening session, and if so, and we take any recess at all. I think it ought to be a recess of two hours.

Mr. DENT. May I make a counterproposition, and that is that the next item be read? And then I will move that the committee rise.

Mr. MANN. Then I withdraw my motion to strike out the last word

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MANN. Then I withdraw my motion to strike out the last word.

The Clerk read as follows:

Transportation of the Army and its supplies; For transportation of the Army and its supplies, including transportation of the froops when moving either by land or water, and of their baggage, including the cost of packing and crating; for transportation of recruits and recruiting parties; of applicants for enlistment between recruiting stations are for puting electric for travel allowance to enlisted men on the control of the cost of the cost of packing and crating; for travel allowance in the cost of the C

Provided further, That $75.000 of the appropriation hereby made shall be available for additional pay of employees on harbor boats, quartermaster service, in lieu of subsistence.

Provided further, That of the amount herein appropriated not exceeding $15,000 may be used for extraordinary expenses of transportation of West Point cades to Washington, D. C., to attend inaugural ceremonies, and return, which sum shall be immediately available.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, it is understood that when the committee resumes consideration of the bill tomorrow, this paragraph is subject to amendment.

Mr. DENT. Oh, yes, Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, before the motion of the gentleman from Alabama is put, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a schedule of general information in respect to the means of defense of the country.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 20783, the Army appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 20451, an omnibus pension bill, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table an omnibus pension bill, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference. Is there objection?

There was no objection. The SPEAKER announced the following conferees: Mr. Sher-WOOD, Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri, and Mr. LANGLEY.

PORTO RICAN BILL.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 9533, to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Porto Rican bill, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman for an opportunity to move to concur in some of the Senate amendments.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman that there are some amendments that the House, I am sure, will accept, but we have thought it best to disagree to them all. I will say to the gentleman that if I am one of the conferees I shall be very glad to talk with him about any matter in which he is interested.

Mr. LONDON. I am particularly interested in the amendment relating to the extension of the franchise.

Mr. JONES. There will be some dispute over that, but I know the conferees will be very glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman kindly renew his request to-morrow?

Mr. JONES. Oh, I hope the gentleman will not object. . We want to get the bill printed to-night.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER announced the following conferees: Mr. Jones, Mr. Garrett, and Mr. Towner.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask, further, that the bill be printed with the Senate amendments numbered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CLAIMS UNDER BOWMAN AND TUCKER ACTS.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I present for printing under the rules a conference report upon the bill (S. 1878) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman presents a conference report for printing under the rules.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing two editorials from the Morris (Ill.) Herald.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD upon the public-building bill and upon the Sisal Trust.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 2543. An act for the relief of the State of Kentucky;

S. 1068. An act relating to desert-land entries; and S. 1697. An act to declare Ollala Slough, in Lincoln County, Oreg., nonnavigable.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report on the bill H. R. 18453, the Indian appropriation bill, and ask that it be printed under the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 18453) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918.

The SPEAKER. Ordered printed under the rule.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the bill H. R. 18984.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the migratory-bird law.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 a. m. to-morrow

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, Mr. IGOE was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Horace McMellon (H. R. 24039, 62d Cong.), no adverse report having been made thereon.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand at recess until 8 o'clock to-night, the evening session to be only for the consideration of unobjected bills on the Private Calendar, beginning where we left off the last time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the House stand at recess until 8 o'clock, to run not later than 10.30, for the consideration of uncontested bills on the Private Calendar

Mr. KITCHIN. I accept the amendment.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask whether a bill would be considered in the event previous objection had been made and was now withdrawn?

Mr. KITCHIN. I was not here the last time and I do not know where they left off on the calendar. The probability is they will get through with the bills not reached and then go

Mr. VARE. Here is an illustration: I was absent the last meeting, and Mr. Cox, of Indiana, objected to a bill which I had and I am hopeful that he will see the merits of the proposition and withdraw his objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. We all hope so.

Mr. VARE. I mean in the event of his doing so will that bill be considered to-night?

Mr. KITCHIN. The calendar will be taken up where we left off and we will go through the calendar and then if there is any time they will go back.

Mr. Speaker, there are two classes of bills on the private calendar that have had no show at all, a few that were between the place reached the other night and the bills which were reported at the present session of Congress. Then

Mr. MANN. We will reach those to-night if we have the time, Mr. MILLER of Delaware. We start off with No. 422 and that is right before the military bills.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. BOOHER. I object.
Mr. BURNETT. The gentleman objects to what?
Mr. BOOHER. To the request of the gentleman from North

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is to move to adjourn.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the House, under its previous order, adjourned to meet to-morrow, Wednesday, February 21, 1917, at 11 o'clock

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of Kennebec River, Me., Parker Head Harbor and Channel (H. Doc. No. 2071); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication of the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation under the title "Fortifications," Panama Canal (H. Doc. No. 2072); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication of the Secretary of State submitting an estimate for inclusion in the general deficiency bill (H. Doc. No. 2073); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication of the Secretary of Labor submitting estimates of appropriations required for additional expenses in enforcing the laws regulating immigration from May 1, 1917. to June 30, 1918 (H. Doc. No. 2074); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of Commerce submitting an estimate of appropriation for printing charts, Coast and Geodetic Survey (H. Doc. No. 2075); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. STERLING, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 17496) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to transfer and convey to the Commissioners of Lincoln Park, of Chicago, Ill., the riparian rights of the United States, as the owner of land fronting on Lake Michigan and occupied as the site of the United States marine hospital in Chicago, Ill., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1511), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. Mr. SLAYDEN, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 16606) providing for a memorial to Miss Clara Barton in the building being erected for the use of the American National Red Cross, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 1512); to which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII.

Mr. SHERWOOD, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill (S. 8113) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors, reported the same without amendment, ac-companied by a report (No. 1510), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. TILSON: A bill (H. R. 20996) to regulate and control the manufacture, sale, and use of weights and measures and of weighing and measuring devices; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. NELSON: A bill (H. R. 20997) to increase limit of cost for the proposed new Federal building and the site therefor; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. LINDBERGH: A bill (H. R. 20998) to provide for an advisory referendum vote before a declaration of war by Congress; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FARR: A bill (H. R. 20999) for the relief of retired commissioned warrant officers detailed on active duty; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CANDLER of Mississippi: A bill (H. R. 21000) for the relief of persons who are blind, exempting them from resi-dence in entering public lands; to the Committee on the Public

By Mr. RAKER: A bill (H. R. 21001) to amend an act entitled "An act to parole United States prisoners, and for other purposes," approved June 25, 1910, as amended by an act approved January 23, 1913; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DAVIS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 21002) to authorize the Director of the Bureau of the Census, under certain conditions, to prepare and distribute blank ballots and to receive and count marked ballots and report to Congress the result of an advisory vote; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RICKETTS: A bill (H. R. 21007) providing for pensions to certain enlisted men, soldiers, and officers who served in the Civil War and the War with Mexico; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DENT: Resolution (H. Res. 516) providing for the consideration of an amendment to H. R. 20783; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. GLASS: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 76) authorizing the printing of volume I of the latest annual report of the Comptroller of the Currency; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. HULBERT: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of New York, favoring the appropriation of $1,395,275 for transferring the quarantine establishment from the State of New York to the United States Government; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. GOULD: Memorial of the State Legislature of New York favoring the passage of H. R. 20080, migratory-bird treaty act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, favoring the prohibition of liquor advertisements in the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DICKINSON: A bill (H. R. 21003) granting a pension to John W. Owings; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 21004) granting an increase of pension to Esau Hartsell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 21005) for the relief of James W. Mastin; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FREEMAN: A bill (H. R. 21006) granting an increase of pension to Nancy Ann Wilson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial of sundry citizens of St. Louis, Mo., commending the President on the stand he took relative to the German situation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also (by request), petition of socialists of Lockport, N. Y., urging Congress to prohibit Americans and American ships from the war zone; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. By Mr. CAREW: Petition of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, opposing the increase in the present tax on life-insurance funds as proposed in the "excess-profits" bill now pending; to the Committee on Ways and Means. By Mr. DOOLING: Memorial of the Republican County Committee of the County of New York, approving universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DOOLITTLE: Petition of 100 citizens of Climax, Kans., protesting against compulsory military service; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. EAGAN: Petition of New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations, New Brunswick, N. J., protesting against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Farmers National Congress, United States of America, in Madison, Wis., protesting against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means

Also, petition of General Manager of the Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N. J., favoring the Webb bill; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Wine and Spirit Importers' Society of the United States, against bill to exclude liquor advertisements from the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Cincinnati Branch, American Union, against militarism; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FESS: Petitions of 293 publications of the State of Ohio, asking for the passage of a bill to bar liquor advertising from the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post

By Mr. FULLER: Petitions of various citizens of Illinois, opposed to war and favoring a referendum before any declaration of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for excluding liquor advertisements from the mails and to prohibit shipment of liquor into dry territory; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Petitions of citizens of Boston and Dorchester, Mass., favoring a retirement law and an increase of salary for letter carriers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of members of the Massachusetts Branch of the League to Enforce Peace, relative to the adoption of the league's proposals by the United States; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of F. L. Dunne, Boston, Mass., opposing a referendum vote before a declaration of war; to the Committee on

Foreign Affairs

By Mr. HINDS: Petitions of the Kennebec Journal and 47 other newspapers in the State of Maine, favoring the exclusion of liquor advertising and soliciting from the United States mails except when addressed to licensed liquor dealers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH: Memorial of James E. Meyers and 244 other citizens of Belmont County, Ohio, opposing compulsory military training in any form; to the Committee on

Military Affairs

By Mr. HULBERT: Memorial of the Republican County Committee of the County of New York, favoring universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Republican County Committee of the County of New York, approving the action taken by the President to uphold our rights as a sovereign nation; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LAFEAN: Memorial adopted by Boston Post Office Clerks' Association, relative to House bill 17806; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of Philadelphia Produce Exchange, opposing House bill 20573; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LINTHICUM; Petition of J. H. Hopkins, Berkeley

Avenue, Baltimore, Md., opposing a referendum before a declaration of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Mount Airy and Baltimore, Md., favoring a referendum vote before a declaration of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Baltimore Trust Co., Baltimore, Md., opposing the Kitchin bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means. Also, petition of Independent Citizens' Union, of Baltimore, Md., favoring passage of Poindexter amendment to appropriation bill, relative to office of postmasters; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Swindell Bros., of Baltimore, Md., against bill authorizing banks to charge collection fees; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Strouse & Bros., of Baltimore, Md., opposing repeal of Federal reserve act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens and societies of the State of Maryland, favoring passage of the migratory bird treaty act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MADDEN: Petition of sundry citizens and voters of Chicago, Ill., favoring universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MORIN: Memorial of Oakland Board of Trade, D. A. Jones, secretary, urging the necessity of the early designation, construction, and maintenance of a system of national highways, to be built and maintained by the National Government; to the Committee on Roads.

By Mr. NELSON: Petitions of 50 people of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Platteville, and 200 people of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Madison, Wis., favoring a national constitutional prohibition amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROWE: Petition of Charles J. Joachine, Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing the law to increase the taxes of life insurance; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Educators' Conservation Society, opposing the Shields-Adamson and Ferris-Myers waterpower bills as now drawn; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of John E. Brady, Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing the District prohibition bill without a referendum vote; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of B. K. Dietrich, Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the migratory-bird treaty act; to the Committee on Foreign Af-

Also, petition of Dr. James Cole Hancock, Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the migratory-bird treaty act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs

By Mr. SCHALL: Memorial of Operative Plasterers' International Association, of Minneapolis, No. 65, in re foreign relations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of Brotherhood of Railway Postal Clerks, Local No. 5, of Minneapolis, Minn., in re foreign relations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of Northwestern Lodge, No. 82, B. of L. F. and E., in re House bill 19730; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce

By Mr. TIMBERLAKE: Petitions of 100 people of the Baptist Church, Fort Morgan, Colo., and 38 people of the Hanover Union Sabbath School, Hanover, Colo., favoring a national constitutional prohibition amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TINKHAM: Memorial of members of the convention of New England Electrical, Civil, and Mechanical Engineers, Boston, Mass., supporting the President in the hope that our rights may be obtained by peaceful means; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of board of directors of the Springfield Board of Trade, urging the introduction of legislation which will enable the Interstate Commerce Commission of the United States to legally grant permission for the continued operation of the Sound steamship lines by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad system; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Haws Avenue Men's Bible Class, of Norristown, Pa., favoring passage of prohibition legislation; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of George W. Shade and 87 other citizens of Telford, Pa., announcing their opposition to the United States entering into a state of war and demanding that a declaration of war be referred to a referendum of the citizens; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Mrs. J. Benninghoff, F. W. Zandel, jr., and 55 other citizens of McKinley, Montgomery County, Pa., praying for the passage of Senate joint resolution 55; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota: Petitions of Jacob Kren and 101 citizens of Wishek; P. J. Moen and others, of Flora; Christ Roth and 31 others, of Danzig; P. Goldade and 45 others, of Berwick; and Shell Butte Voters' League, all of North Dakota, asking for referendum on question of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 21, 1917.

(Legislative day of Tuesday, February 20, 1917.)

The Senate reassembled at 10.30 o'clock a. m., on the expira-

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll. The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Oliver Overman Page Penrose Pittman Ransdell Reed Robinson Shennard Bryan Catron Chamberlain Clapp Colt Culberson Hollis Husting James Johnson, S. Dak. Jones Smoot Sterling Swanson Thomas Thompson Townsend Wadsworth Walsh Weeks Kenyon
La Foliette
Lane
Lea, Tenn.
Martine, N. J.
Myers
Norris Culberson Cummins Curtis Dillingham Fernald Fletcher Gronna Sheppard Sherman Simmons Smith, Ga. Weeks Williams Works

Mr. HOLLIS. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is confined to his home by

The VICE PRESIDENT. Forty-seven Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum present. The Secretary will call the roll of absentees.

The Secretary called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. Brady, Mr. Owen, and Mr. Smith of South Carolina answered to their names when called.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I desire to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] through illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to announce the absence of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Harding] on account of illness. He has a general pair with the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Under-WOOD ]

I also desire to announce that the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger] is unavoidably absent and is paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN].

I will also state that my colleague [Mr. SUTHERLAND] is unavoidably absent.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I have been requested to announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] is detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

UNNEUTRAL ATTITUDE OF THE PRESS.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I desire to call attention to the fact that there has been much discussion, especially of late, relative to the alleged unneutral attitude of the press of the country in its publication of various editorial comments concerning the international situation, especially between the United States and Germany. I have had many letters of pro-test from American citizens of German birth and descent protesting against what they assert is a distortion of the truth. I have this morning received a letter from one of the leading Germans of the United States, Mr. Carl E. Schmidt, of Detroit, Mich., a high-grade, greatly influential, and intelligent man and a patriotic American citizen. He sets forth the case so clearly that I ask permission to have his letter printed in the RECORD in full.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The letter referred to is as follows:

CARL E. SCHMIDT & Co. (INC.), Detroit, Mich., February 18, 1917.

Hon. CHARLES ELROY TOWNSEND, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR TOWNSEND: On behalf of the German-Americans of the State of Michigan and of the Nation at large I am taking the liberty of filing for them a protest against existing conditions which, they have become convinced, are rapidly and without reason drawing this country closer to the great war.

I refer to the continual flood of false statement and the misrepresentation of news which is being sent broadcast about the country. The printing now and then of some false report might be passed over unnoticed, but I must call your attention to the fact that neither mistake nor accident can be blamed for the present campaign of newspaper misrepresentation. As you are well aware of the conditions, I, of course, assume you know this without my calling your attention to it. Should you have by any chance in the press of your work there in Washington overlooked or remained unaware of this dangerous condition, I take the liberty of calling your attention to the Congressional Record, pages 2947 and 2948, recording the remarks of Mr. Callaway calling attention to the "newspaper conspiracy," as it has been termed by some papers, and reciting the activities of the J. P. Morgan interests, the steel, shipbuilding, and powder interests and others in planning a control of the policy of the daily press of the United States.

I believe that you are aware of the Nation, and I wish to inform you that I am receiving each day a constantly growing flow of letters from German-Americans throughout the country, in which these writers express their grave concern and indicate a rising wrath at the present condition of publicity affairs being allowed to continue without any apparent effort on the part of any in authority to correct affairs.

I am writing to Senator Smith and to other members of the Michigan delegation, and am saying to them, as I say to you, that I will not further humiliate honest and earnest German-American citizens by making any declaration of their loyalty. They have been insulted when their loyalty has been questioned. But I will say that, like all other real and unbiased Americans, the German-American object to seeing this country drawn into, or even closer to, the war, through some dishonest and dastardly inspiration, and that they feel it their right and their duty to protest and to criticize.

Were we confronted by but isolated instances of misrepresentation in the news columns, we would make no protest; but there is something sinister in the methodical and efficient manner in which the present news campaign of the Nation is being conducted. And the brains behind this propaganda are not content with seizing upon all news items furnished by leading men of blased attitude, but go further and distort and misrepresent every move or comment made by the President, by his official family, and by the remainder of official Washington.

I believe that you fully realize this, and that you can bring it to the attention of the Government, the fact that all of this is intensely irritating to the German-American people.

I point out to you that it is extremely difficult to attempt to make the German-Americans and all other loyal citizens see that the administration would suffer any loss of dignity were some official action to be taken to put an end to this apparent scheme to arouse the country against Germany.

In a row you have the Gerard incident, the Whitlock incident, the incident of the Amer against Germany.

In a row you have the Gerard incident, the Whitlock incident, the incident of the American sallors held prisoners in Germany, and the holding up of American consuls in Germany. All of this, day by day, has been sent in full throughout the country and published in all parts of the land. In each case the explanation has shown that Germany has continued to act in a friendly manner, but in each case the explanation has been dismissed with a scant few lines being sent over the news wires, and the provoked feeling aroused by the long first reports of affronts and insults have not been soothed by the explanations.

has continued to act in a friendly manner, but in each case the expanation has been dismissed with a scant few lines being sent over the news wires, and the provoked feeling aroused by the long first reports of affronts and insuits have not been soothed by the explanation of the control of the country united in the face of war. The officeholder must do as much to prevent war as the private citizen is expected to do. It must not be expected that the private citizen is to sit silent and inactive while he sees the men he has chosen to represent him ignoring means that could and should be taken to bring about a better and a safer condition.

Like all other good and loyal citizens my people, the German-Americans, will ever be prompt and keen to resent insult to this Nation, but like the others of the really patriotic type they object to seeing this Nation become influenced and unconsciously steered toward war through the machinations of some group of men who are neither Americans at heart nor honestly interested in the future welfare of this country.

Country.

Thanking you for giving this communication your serious consideration, and trusting that you will be able to call these facts to the attention of those in power, I beg to remain,

Very truly, yours,

CARL E. SCHMIDT.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 32) to pay the expenses incurred by the committee attending and arranging for the funeral of the late Admiral George Dewey.

The message also announced that the House disagrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20451) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and had appointed Mr. Sherwood, Mr. Russell of Missouri, and Mr. Langley managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House disagrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19300) making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and had appointed Mr. Flood, Mr. Cline, and Mr. Cooper of Wisconsin managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House disagrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9533) to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and had appointed Mr. Jones, Mr. GARRETT, and Mr. Towner managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

S. 40. An act to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations;

S. 1068. An act relating to desert-land entries;

S. 1697. An act to declare Ollala Slough, in Lincoln County, Oreg., nonnavigable;

2543. An act for the relief of the State of Kentucky

S. 7796. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and convey to the Great Northern Railway Co. certain lands in the State of Montana for division terminal yards and other railway purposes, and for other purposes;

S. 8079. An act to amend the first and seventh paragraphs of section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended by the act of April 9, 1906; S. J. Res. 157. Joint resolution giving authority to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make special regula-tions for the occasion of the reunion of the Confederate Veterans' Association, to be held in the District of Columbia in the year 1917, and for other purposes incident to said encampment; and

S. J. Res. 205. Joint resolution authorizing the removal of the statue of Admiral Dupont, in Dupont Circle, in the city of Washington, D. C., and the erection of a memorial to Admiral Dupont in place thereof.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I move that the Senator from South Carolina to have the conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, for the purpose of allowing the Senator from South Carolina to have the conference report named by him considered, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and he lays the conference report referred to before

The Senate proceeded to consider the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19359) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill what has been done with regard to the increase of clerks' salaries?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, the Senator will recall that the Senate agreed to incorporate in the bill, while it was pending in the Senate, what was known as the Smoot amendment. When the bill went to conference, the House conferees, of course, insisted on the original House text in reference to a horizontal raise of pay. When the conferees had the bill under consideration, it was agreed that the conferees on the part of the House should have an opportunity to secure further instructions in regard to this matter. We were informed subsequently that the question came up on a vote in the House as between the Smoot amendment and the original House provision, and that, on a roll call, a majority of 85 voted for the original House provision. We then undertook to ascertain as near as might be what compromise could be reached. After investigation by the House conferees and after consultation with various Members of the House, they thought they could put through such a provision as has been incorporated in the conference report, providing an increase of 10 per cent for those receiving salaries of $1,000 and less, and an increase of 5 per cent to those receiving above $1,000, but not including those receiving more than $1,500. The original House provision granted a 10 per cent increase of pay to those receiving up to $1,200 and 5 per cent increase of pay to those receiving from $1,200 up to and including $1,800. I have had a table made in order to present as clearly as might be to Senators just what would be the relative cost of the various proposals.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, I desire to make a brief statement. I know the Senator has the figures, and I want the Senate to understand the matter. As I said here upon the floor when the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill was under consideration, the increase in the amount appropriated because of this provision would be in the neighborhood of $30,000,000.

Mr. President, the action of the Senate on this matter in this conference report will be a test. Of course, if the Senate is in favor of the provision adopted by the conferees in the report on the Agricultural appropriation bill, as it is now here, a similar provision will have to go into every appropriation bill, including the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; and we desire to know the will of the Senate.

The legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill is now in conference. The sundry civil bill, appropriating in the neighborhood of $156,000,000, will be here next week, and another deficiency bill amounting to $50,000,000 will also be here next week, making $200,000,000, approximately, in those two bills. In addition to that, the naval appropriation bill will aggregate in the neighborhood of $500,000,000; and then we will have to consider the Army appropriation bill, carrying I do not know how much.

The question for the Senate to determine is whether it wants to stand by its action on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and also on the Agricultural appropriation bill, or whether it will recede from its action and agree to the provision as contained in the pending conference report. If the Senate agrees to the present provision the conferees on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill will feel compelled, following the expression of the will of the Senate, to compromise on such a provision as is contained in the pending conference report. I will ask the Senator from South Carolina how much such a provision, if put on all the appropriation bills, would increase the appropriations? I understand he has the figures

Mr. SMOOT. I can tell the Senator.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I had the department work out the figures as to the relative cost of the three propositions the original House bill, the so-called Smoot amendment, and the conference report

Mr. SMOOT. That is, if put on all appropriation bills?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes; if put on all appropriation bills. It covers all the Government employees. Under the House provision, approximately-because it is a mere approximation, but as nearly accurate as they can get it-under the original House provision $25,600,000 increase in the pay of clerks will be imposed on the Government; under the so-called Smoot amendment, $13,193,000; under the conferees' agreement on the Agricultural bill, $22,999,000, or, in round numbers, $23,000,000.

Mr. OVERMAN. So that there is about $10,000,000 difference between the Smoot amendment as adopted by the Senate and the conferees' report?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. And the conferees' report;

Mr. OVERMAN. The question, then, is whether the Senate is willing to increase our appropriation $23,000,000, or $13,000,000 by the adoption of the Smoot amendment? Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, what was the aggregate of the House bill?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Twenty-five million six hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. KENYON. And the Smoot amendment is about $13,000,000? Mr. SMOOT. Thirteen million one hundred and ninety-three thousand dollars, and the conference report $22,990,000, as I

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Twenty-two million nine hundred and ninety-nine thousand dollars, the statistician

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, what is the difference between the House item—that is, the item inserted by the House in the legislative bill—and that agreed on in conference touching the Agricultural bill?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The increase in the House bill was twenty-five million-

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand the aggregate difference, but how is that difference arrived at? What is the difference between the provisions?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The provision of the original House bill was 10 per cent up to and including $1,000; then 5 per cent for the entire balance up to and including $1,800. The conferees' report on the Agricultural bill was 10 per cent from $1,000 down, including $1,000, and 5 per cent up to fifteen hundred dollars.

Mr. ROBINSON. Up to $1,500? Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. And the Smoot amendment is what? The Smoot amendment is 15 per cent up to and including $480, 10 per cent above $480 up to and including $1,000, and that is all.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me for a brief statement, I think the Senator from North Carolina has stated that whatever conclusion is reached touching the Agricultural bill ought to be effectuated in the other appropriation bills. The Senate inserted in the District of Columbia appropriation bill the so-called Smoot amendment; the legislative bill carries the Smoot amendment; the Agricultural bill carried it when it left the Senate; and if this conference report on the Agricultural bill is ratified by the Senate and by the House, that ought to be understood as concluding the whole matter.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think it would be an instruction on the part of the Senate to the conferees on each appropriation bill that the sentiment of the Senate is for the conferees' report here, instead of the Smoot amendment. The conferees on the legislative appropriation bill, the District of Columbia appropriation bill, and others, feel that the Senate has instructed them on the Smoot amendment, and they propose to stand by the action of the Senate unless the Senate should change its mind and agree to a further increase of $10,000,000, as this conference report provides. It is a question whether we will make the increase $13,000,000, as the Smoot amendment provides, or $23,000,000, as the conferees provide, or the House amendment, which is $25,000,000 and something. I speak in round numbers. There is the difference-$13,000,000, $23,000,000, and $25,000,000.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I want to state, in justification of the action of the Agricultural Committee, that we recognized the saving in the so-called Smoot amend-ment. We on this side were practically committed to no increase at all; that was my understanding—that as nearly as possible we would not make any increase in pay at all.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator let me ask him a question right there? I want to know from the Senator who has charge of this bill and who is chairman of the con-ference committee on the part of the Senate whether, when you agreed to this amendment, you took into consideration the fact that if this amendment should be agreed to it would be incorporated in every other appropriation bill that is to come before the Senate?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No; we were simply legislating for this bill. It was brought to the attention of the conferees, however, that it was absolutely useless to stand for the brought clearly to a roll call, the House provision and the Smoot amendment, and upon a roll call the previous action of the House was sustained by 85 majority. Then the conferees asked the Members of the House to ascertain just what could be done. We had to get these conference reports out. We had to do the best we could. They went back and informed us of the agreement here

I want to state that there was no question as to this action on the part of the conferees of the Agricultural Committee affecting and being the standard by which all of the other appropriation committees would be governed. As I say, we had the question under advisement here as to the House provision, and the result was the adoption of the Smoot amendment. It is my opinion that some compromise between the two, perhaps, will have to be reached. As chairman of the conference committee on the part of the Senate on the Agricultural bill I do not know, I am not in a position to say, whether or not, if this matter be sent back to the conferees, any better terms can be made so far as the Treasury is concerned. It seems to me, however, that if we are to make this action the standard by which all the other appropriation bills will be governed in conference, perhaps it would be wisdom on the part of the Senate to let us take another trial at it. I think perhaps that would be the proper thing to do.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I signed this conference report, but am opposed to its adoption and shall vote against it. I did not understand what would be its effect. The increased pay to Government employees was figured out for us, and it was claimed that the change would be a reduction of the amount provided by the Smoot amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. And it was so stated on the floor of the House. Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The reduction to 10 per cent increase from $500 down it was claimed would save more than the 5 per cent increase from $1,000 up to $1,500 would add. I agreed to it solely upon the ground that the change from the Senate action did not increase the total amount,

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Under which amendment, the Smoot amendment or the original House provision?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. From the Smoot amendment. My understanding was that by cutting down to 10 per cent the increase on $500 or less more would be saved than would be paid out by a 5 per cent increase from $1,000 to $1,500.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. You mean from $1,000 down? Mr. SMITH of Georgia. No; I mean just what I said; to bring the increase on salaries below $500 down to 10 per cent instead of 15 per cent would save more than the increase of 5 per cent from $1,000 to $1,500 would cost. My understanding was that the total result of our change from the Smoot amendment on the Agricultural appropriation bill would be a decrease of the appropriation, and upon that ground alone I signed the conference report, having in view the effect of the change on this bill alone and not the effect on any other bill.

Now, I am opposed to any increase beyond the Smoot amendment. I am opposed to the Smoot increase, but I suppose it is useless to hope that a less increase will be made. I am under no circumstances willing to vote for this additional increase of $10,000,000. The Smoot amendment meets the House halfway. If an agreement can not be reached without further increase, I hope the bill will fail of passage. That is my view on it.

I am opposed to the Smoot increase and utterly opposed to any increase beyond the Smoot amendment. We have not the money. We are here now with a revenue bill, trying to raise money. Any of us who look at the expenses ahead of us must realize that we have just begun to raise the additional money we will require, and adding $23,000,000 to these ordinary salaries, now higher than similar work pays the citizen out of office, I regard under the present circumstances as utterly inexcusable.

Mr. OVERMAN. May I interrupt the Senator?
Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes.
Mr. OVERMAN. With our present revenue bill and appropriations, as I said a while ago, to the amount of $156,000,000 coming over in the sundry civil appropriation bill and $50,-000,000 in the deficiency appropriation bill, will we not have to have another revenue bill to cover the expenses?

Mr. STONE. And $150,000,000 of emergency appropriations?
Mr. OVERMAN. And $150,000,000, I am told, of emergency funds besides. Where are we going to get the money? The present revenue bill now before us will not raise enough money to pay all these expenditures. We proposed to give $10,000,000, and it seems to me the House ought to be willing to accept it.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I think the Senate ought to stop at the Smoot amendment and not go up a single dollar. If we stop at it and the House does not yield, no increase will be given Smoot amendment; that the House had voted on the two issues to any Government employees. I can not vote to yield to save the bill. I am not at all sure that an extra session is objec-

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, the inconsistency of the United States Senate in dealing with some of these money questions is to me perfectly amazing; and the attitude of the Senator from Georgia is about the most amazing of all of them. It has only been a few days since, through the continued efforts of the Senator from Georgia, we passed a bill providing for vocational education in the States, which means an expenditure, in the beginning, of millions and millions of dollars. At the last session of Congress we passed a law involving the initial expenditure of $85,000,000 to build reads in the States. ture of $85,000,000 to build roads in the States. We are expending hundreds of millions of dollars for preparedness for war; and in the meantime there are bread riots in the city of New York. We are proposing to spend probably half a million of dollars to inaugurate the President of the United States, $35,000 of that amount to be appropriated out of the Public Treasury; and here we are to-day higgling over the expenditure of some $10,000,000, or it may be $20,000,000, to pay some of the employees of the Government reasonable and living

Mr. President, there is not a Senator here who does not know that a very large number of the employees of the Government are not receiving salaries enough to supply them with the ordi-nary necessaries of life. I think while we are throwing away money for improper and illegitimate purposes we might at least be just—not generous but just—to the employees who are receiving these smaller salaries for serving the Government.

I voted for the Smoot amendment. It did not go as far as I thought it should go. I think the amounts of the employees who are receiving the smaller salaries should be increased more than 5 or 10 per cent, because that amounts to a very small sum with the small salaries that they are receiving.

For myself I have grown exceedingly tired of these efforts to economize along lines of this kind where the Congress of the United States is extravagant to the furtherest extreme in the expenditure of money-I think for improper and illegitimate pur-

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, there is a great deal in the position just outlined by the Senator from California. I voted against all of the measures which he specified and presume I shall continue to add to my unpopularity in this body by voting against similar ones in the future. I voted against the Smoot amendment. I did not believe, in the first place, that increases of salaries constitute the method of meeting the situation confronting the civil employees, for those who control supplies of food can raise their prices and will raise their prices much more rapidly than the Government can raise the salaries of employees. The proper method of dealing with that question is to take those who are engrossing the food of the Nation by the throat and compel them to disgorge and to dissolve their nefarious conspiracies, if they exist. I do not like to see rioting in cities, food riots in free America least of all, but I can perceive in the disturbances of the metropolitan city of the country the first movement toward a relief to which all people are entitled, rich or poor, with regard to the necessities of life.

Mr. President, we are expending and we have expended money in the most riotous and extravagant manner, for which Republicans as well as Democrats are and have been responsible. Members upon the other side have had as much to do with this evil as the Members upon this side; and they have followed their proposals for appropriations and accompanied them as well by denunciations of the Democratic Party for its extravagance without offering to join in any movement whatever looking to a decrease of expenditures.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President—

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the Senator.
Mr. WORKS. I want the Senator to understand that I was not making this a political issue at all. I was not charging it up against the Democratic Party.

Mr. THOMAS. I hope the Senator will understand I had no reference to him whatever in my last statement. The Senators to whom I have referred of course understand what I mean. and it is they and the attitude which they have occupied on the subject to which my criticism is directed.

Mr. President, last year we voted nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars for preparedness, fully half a billion dollars more than in my judgment was necessary or justified under the circumstances. We also passed a revenue bill. then that that revenue bill was the precursor of a series of similar bills increasing the taxes of the American people for these extraordinary expenditures and that those who believed in their necessity and advocated their enactment should be among the first to economize in every other direction.

The appropriation bills for Army and Navy purposes for this fiscal period will make those of last year look like a mere bagatelle. I understand that the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs will to-day report a bill making appropriations of $531,000,000 for naval purposes. There are 531 Members of the two Houses. That is a million apiece for each of us. Next year it will be a thousand millions, even assuming that our relations with foreign countries are no more serious then than they are now. It is as true now as ever that he who dances must pay the piper. I think it was Sidney Smith who said more than a century ago that "high taxes were the inevitable consequences of too great a love of glory," a remark just as true now as it was then.

The report of the chairman of the Committee on Finance yesterday called attention to the fact that we have sufficient revenues for what are termed the ordinary expenses of the Government. I should call many of them extraordinary, but of course they are permanent and must be so considered until legislation to remove them shall have been enacted. I think it is necessary, under the circumstances, that we should save wherever it is possible. If anything is needed to emphasize to the wage earner in the employ of the Government the necessity of economy, it is the fact that his legitimate demands can not be now met because we are too busily engaged in making huge appropriations which will result in equally large expenditures by the Government for the benefit of those who are purveyors to its Army and Navy needs.

I should like to see some evidence of a desire to economize in those directions. I do not believe that because we are excited or because conditions which are confronting us may be serious, because it is the part of wisdom to prepare for a possible, to say nothing of a probable, great national emergency, we should at once begin by the inauguration of such a scheme of reckless appropriations as will in all probability be enacted by this Congress.

With no desire to reflect upon anyone, I have not a particle of doubt a majority of the Senators on both sides of the Chamber, who probably, together with myself, will instruct the conferees who propany, together with myself, whi instruct the conferes to "stand pat" on the Smoot amendment, bill or no bill, will nevertheless vote $531,000,000 for naval purposes, and God knows how many hundreds of millions for Army purposes, and upon the whip and stress and spur of a supposed necessity that if the Union is to be saved and this Republic shall endure these moneys shall be expended and expended immediately.

The raising of taxes, Mr. President, is not very pleasant. Men do not like to pay them and legislatures do not like to levy them upon too many people who can vote, because the political consequences might prove to be subsequently embarrassing.

We have a revenue bill which will be considered by the Senate to-day. Those whom it affects do not like it. The consolation I get out of it is that most of those concerned have been most clamorous for extreme preparedness. Of course, that does not justify the application of an inequitable and an improper method of raising revenue to them.

I wish that every dollar expended by the Government could be raised by some form of direct taxation. I should like to see some kind of direct tax for national purposes imposed upon every man in this country who earns a dollar. I should like to see the infamous system of indirect taxation swept from existence, because the scheme hypnotizes and chloroforms those who pay it into an indifference of the manner of its expenditure. I should like to see every appropriation made for a congressional district or for something in that district or State paid from the revenues of the Government raised from the people of that State or district, because I know of no other way in which or by which the mind of the average individual will be aroused to the extravagance of the Nation or to the necessity of organizing the taxpayers. Everything else is organized. Every tax eater in the country is organized, particularly where pensions and appropriations for public buildings and rivers and harbors that are not needed and similar extravagances are to disfigure our legislation. I propose at some time to offer a bill for the pensioning of taxpayers with the hope that perhaps some such inducement will result in their organizing and looking after their own interests. I despair of any other expedient for the Consequently, Mr. President, this report may in some of the views which it has aroused be productive of economic benefit.

I am glad to hear from the Senator from Georgia that he prefers no bill at all to an Agricultural bill carrying this added expenditure, and I say so with no feeling of hostility to those who are to be the beneficiaries either of the Smoot amendment or the House requirement. Of course, it looks prima facie ridiculous that we should be spending time here in an effort to save $10,000,000 when next week we are going to vote $531,000,000 for a particular purpose and some $300,000,000 for another purpose, all said to be absolutely necessary because of the critical condition of our international affairs, and $200,-000,000 for still another purpose, as the Senator from North Carolina suggests. Mr. President, unless we save in small things we shall not save at all, and because we are extravagant in large things is no reason why we should not be frugal in small things, in $10,000,000 lumps, as the Senator suggests to me. Of course, millions to an American Congress in these days are as pennies to the average individual. A million dollars is so insignificant in a congressional appropriation that it is scarcely entitled to consideration even as an item of economy.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, in behalf of myself as a member of the conference committee I wish to say that when the compromise proposed was agreed to I had not up to that time had the comparative amount under the three propositions put in such form as to be thoroughly intelligible. By adopting the provision for an increase of 10 per cent on salaries from $1,000 down, in place of 10 per cent on salaries below $1,200, and for a 5 per cent increase on salaries from $1,000 up to $1,500, instead of 5 per cent up to $1,800, I was under the impression that it would be a very radical and material reduction, approximating the total of the Smoot amendment; but when these figures were submitted to me as coming from the statistician of the department I was amazed. In justification of the committee, however, I repeat that the conferees on the part of the House stated emphatically that so far as the Smoot amendment was concerned it would not be adopted by the House, and the House ratified its previous action by a vote of 85 majority on a roll call, as expressive of the sentiment of the House in reference to the proposed House increase.

If the Senate sees fit to send this report back to conference, I should like to have an expression of the sentiment of the Senate reached in some way here, as to whether or not it is the sense of this body that the conferees on the part of the Senate shall stand for the Smoot amendment or for something lower, but nothing above it.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President-

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. BRYAN. On what bill was it that the other House showed by a majority of 85 that it insisted upon the House provision?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I do not know under just what conditions the vote was taken.

Mr. BRYAN. My information is that there never was a yeaand-nay vote on the proposition.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The statement was made to the conferees on the part of the Senate that such a vote had been taken.

Mr. OVERMAN. If the Senator from South Carolina will allow me, I will state that the vote referred to was not on the Agricultural appropriation bill, but was on the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I did not say the vote was on this bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. No; the Senator did not so state; but I was trying to inform the Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN] that the vote as to which the Senator from South Carolina referred, as I understand, was taken on another appropriation bill, to wit, the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. BRYAN. Was that a yea-and-nay vote?

Mr. OVERMAN. That is what I understood.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It was a yea-and-nay vote, and disclosed 85 majority confirming the previous action of the other House

Mr. OVERMAN. But we are not governed by what the other House does

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. But we are face to face with the fact that the House is now standing for the extreme measure, as we consider it, of the original House provision, and a compromise between the two was what we agreed to. It was a saving of approximately $3,000,000 from the original House proposition, and a loss of $10,000,000 as compared with the Smoot amendment.

I want in this connection to say—
Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The Senator from South Carolina does not understand that there would be that loss? We did or understand it in that way at all.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I said a moment ago that I thought it was practically a division, a half-and-half proposition. An understanding was had on the part of the majority in the Senate-I so understood it-that we were to have at this time no increases, unless the increases were worked out along the line of necessity, equity, and justice, and were made scientifically. It was not so done; it was merely a horizontal increase on the part of the other House. As we did not have the time nor the means at command to work out what was righteous, it was understood here that we were not going to stand for any increase at all; but when the test came Senators voted for an increase in these salaries. The majority was so overwhelming that I, as acting chairman of the committee on the part of the Senate, agreed to this proposal.

Now, I wish to say, in conclusion, that if the Senate instructs us to take this matter back to conference, and if it is the will of the majority of the Senate that we stand by the Smoot amendment, as a matter of course we will accept no compromise, and will stand by the Smoot amendment. I am pleading for is that we have a distinct understanding as to what we are going to stand for. If it is the sense of this body that this is to be the standard by which all the other appropriation bills are to be governed in reference to the salaries of employees, let us understand it; and, so far as I am concerned, as one of the conferees, I will stay by that action.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President-

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WORKS. Will the Senator be good enough to state just what sort of increases would result from the proposed compromise as compared with the Smoot amendment?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The increase would be about $10,000,000 over the Smoot amendment and about $3,000,000 decrease from the proposed House provision.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Do I understand that that statement applies to this one bill alone?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No; to the whole Government service

Mr. TOWNSEND. To all of the appropriation bills?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. As to all the Government employees. Under the proposition of the House it is $25,-000,000-for convenience I will use round numbers; under the Smoot amendment $13,000,000 will be required for all the Government employees, and under the proposed conference agreement it will be $23,000,000. The odd numbers would make about $3,000,000 saving over the original House proposition.

I hope now that the action of the Senate will be so definite and clear cut that the conferees on the part of the Senate can give their ultimatum in the next conference, if one is ordered.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the conference report and ask for a further

Mr. SMOOT and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah,

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just a word of explanation.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I desire to say just a word or two in support of my motion, as I had the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not think the Senator's motion is in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. The question is on agreeing to the confer-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. There is no motion pending.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The question is on agreeing to the conference report

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is the pending question.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Utah.

Mr. NORRIS. I thought the Senator from Utah took his

Mr. SMOOT. I took my seat, I will say to the Senator from Nebraska, only because I thought the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] wanted to make a statement.

Mr. President, I wish to say that the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill as it passed the Senate carried the so-called Smoot amendment in place of the House provision. That bill is now in conference, and the conferees on that bill thought that it would be very much better from a parliamentary standpoint to allow the Senate to pass first upon the conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill, as that contained a compromise between the so-called Smoot amendment and the House provision.

The conferees of the House on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill take the position that they have been instructed by the House to stand by the House provision and no other, and the only way that the Senate can express itself as to which amendment it desires to support, or whether the Senate is willing to support the compromise provided in the conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill, is for it to act upon the pending conference report first, and whatever position the Senate takes to-day upon this report I assume the conferees on the part of the Senate on the legislative bill, and also on the other regular appropriation bills, will consider it as an instruction from the Senate.

855, 499

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. WORKS. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah what effect this compromise has upon the increase for the lower-grade employees?

Mr. SMOOT. The compromise, as provided in the conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill, has the effect of decreasing by 5 per cent the increase proposed to be allowed under the so-called Smoot amendment to those receiving salaries of $480 or less. The 5 per cent increase upon such salaries amounts to $533,000. The increase allowed the very employees of the Government that we undertook to assist, and who need the greatest assistance, as, no doubt, every Senator will admit, has been cut from 15 per cent to 10 per cent, and the proposed compromise increases by 5 per cent the salaries of those receiving from $1,000 up to $1,500. I will say to the Senator from California that that increase of 5 per cent in the salaries of those receiving $1,000 to $1,500, as provided in the compromise, amounts to $9,263,313.

Mr. STERLING. May I ask the Senator from Utah if that amount covers the increase to the employees in all the several departments?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; in all the departments of the Government. It includes not only the employees paid under lumpsum appropriations but those who are provided for specifically by their salaries being named in the bill.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President—
Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator.
Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the Senator as to the situation arising out of this condition of affairs: A good many messengers and clerks of committees are paid now, I think, $1,200 a year, and the provision would result in its final operation in an increase in the salaries of those employees of $60 per year.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; $60 to those receiving $1,200 and $75 to those receiving $1,500.

Mr. KENYON. So that we would really be voting an increase to our own employees.

Mr. SMOOT. If the compromise is agreed to, we will be voting a 5 per cent increase to all of our messengers and all of our clerks who receive $1,500 and under.

Mr. KENYON. The 5 per cent would apply to those receiving

$1,000 up to $1,500?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; and for those receiving less than $1,000 the increase will be 10 per cent.

Mr. CLARK. What is the whole schedule?

The Senator from Wyoming asks me what the whole schedule is. I presume he means the amount that will be involved in each of the propositions?

Mr. CLARK. I mean each of the propositions.

The schedules run in this way: Under the so-Mr. SMOOT. called Smoot amendment all employees receiving $480 or less are increased 15 per cent.

Mr. CLARK. I understand about the Smoot amendment. refer especially to the compromise suggested by the conference

Mr. SMOOT. The compromise amendment proposes a 10 per cent increase to all Government employees receiving a thousand dollars and under and 5 per cent increase to all those receiving more than a thousand and up to and including fifteen hundred dollars. The original House provision increased 10 per cent those receiving up to and including $1,200 and 5 per cent those receiving above $1,200 and not more than $1,800.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, if the Senator from Utah will allow me, I overlooked a moment ago a very instructive table that was sent down by the Agricultural Department which will enable Senators to see just how this proposed compromise will operate; and, if the Senator will allow me, I will read some of the figures as to the number of employees and amounts they would receive under the compromise as applied to the Agricultural Department.

Mr. SMOOT. Under the Agricultural appropriation bill only? Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes; under the Agricultural appropriation bill only.

There are 4,856 employees receiving over $1,000 and up to and including $1,500 per annum. The total aggregate of pay they receive, without any increase, is $5,950,652. Under the 5 per cent increase their pay would require an additional appropriation of $297,528.

Now, there are 4,498 employees receiving $1,000 or less, their present pay aggregating $3,454,290; and the total additional ment by a large vote as a finality, in what shape would they amount required, if a 10 per cent increase is allowed to them, would be $345,429. For these two classes of employees the total increase in the department would be $642,957.

I should like to have this table incorporated in the RECORD. The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table referred to is as follows:

Information requested by conferees. $297, 528 345, 429 642, 957 Total amount required ___ SMOOT AMENDMENT, 3,772 employees receiving over $480 and up to and including $1,000 per annum, aggregating... $3,171,480 Total additional required if 10 per cent increase is allowed...... $317, 148 allowed

726 employees receiving $480 per annum or less, aggregating

Total additional required if 15 per cent increase is allowed 282, 810 42, 421 359, 569 Total amount required_____ ORIGINAL HOUSE PROVISION. 5,362 employees receiving $1,200 to $1,800 per annum, inclusive, aggregating______ $7,630,483 Total additional required if 5 per cent increase is $381, 524 4, 739, 752 473, 975

Total amount required __

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President— Mr. SMOOT. I desire to say a word in answer to the Senator from South Carolina, and then I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. CLARK. Very well.
Mr. SMOOT. I presume, Mr. President, the figures that have been given by the Senator are correct; but I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the Agricultural Department has the lowest percentage of employees receiving salaries of $1,200 and above of any department of the Government. have a table here showing exactly the percentages in the various departments of salaries paid, beginning with a thousand dollars up

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Therefore a less total aggregate would be required in the Agricultural Department than perhaps in any other department of the Government.

Mr. SMOOT. Than in any of the other appropriation bills. Mr. CLARK. I desire to ask the Senator from Utah, a member of the conference committee, a question that is somewhat practical in its effect, I think. I do not know whether it is a proper question to ask or to be answered, but we have been informed by the chairman of the conference committee that the House conferees virtually think they have received instructions from the House upon this particular amendment, running through all the appropriation bills?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No; what they did was to go back to the House and confer with various Members, and then during that time a vote was taken on this item in connection with the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. CLARK. That is what I referred to. There was an expression of the House by a vote on this very proposition, although given on a different bill?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes; they were of the opinion that the Smoot amendment was practically hopeless.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think I ought to make a correction there. The vote taken on the Indian appropriation bill was as to the original House amendment, and the House stood by that. There has been no compromise made on any bill, except the Agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. But the question came before the House.

Mr. CLARK. It all goes to the same end.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It is the same thing.

Mr. CLARK. That was an expression of the House, as I understand, upon this proposition of salary increases

Mr. SMOOT. And that is the only expression the other House has given.

Mr. CLARK. That is the only expression they have given. Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That is right. Mr. CLARK. And that comes pretty near being final, it Mr. CLARK. And that comes pretty near being final, it seems to me. I want to ask the members of the conference committee, if the Senate should insist upon the Smoot amend-be, not only as to this bill, but as to all the other great appropriation bills?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It would simply mean—Mr. CLARK. Just a moment. The Senator from Georgia says he would rather this bill would fail than that it should carry this compromise. I assume, therefore, he would rather all bills would fail than to carry the compromise, because certainly he would not want an unjust raising of salaries. It seems to me that it is a pretty serious proposition.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I will answer the Senator. the Smoot amendment was a compromise. I think that was a substantial compromise between those who were opposed to paying anything and those who yielded to that extent; and I have not any question but that if we will stand firm it will be adopted.

Mr. CLARK. My question was not directed to whether or not it was a compromise, or the justice or injustice of it, but to the legislative situation that we might be up against if we gave a vote against this conference report. For one I would rather yield than to have these great appropriation bills fail. The Senator from Georgia, on the other hand, says he would rather have them fail than to yield. I think there is more at stake than $10,000,000.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Of course, Mr. President, if the Senate should finally reach that conclusion, the Senator from Georgia would be overruled. I was only expressing an indi-I do not think we have gotten to the place where we ought to yield, and we did not mean to yield on this appropriation bill. It so happened that the number of emappropriation bill. It so happened that the number of em-ployees between $1,000 and $1,500 in the Agricultural Depart-ment was very small, and the argument made to us which induced me to sign this report was that by giving up the Smoot amendment and making it 10 per cent up to $1,000 and 5 per cent from $1,000 to $1,500 we would reduce the amount. I signed it upon that agreement alone. Now, I believe that if you would send us back on this conference, the chances are that we will bring you something nearer the Smoot amendment.

Mr. CLARK. Do I understand that the Senator, as a member of the conference committee, wants the report which they have made disagreed to?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I do. I am going to vote to disagree to it, and I offered a motion to disagree to it, and the Chair held that it was out of order-I do not know why. There has been no motion to agree to the conference report. Senator from South Carolina called attention to it and moved

Mr. CLARK. Well, I have nothing more to say. I supposed that the conferees came in with a report that they wanted agreed to. It is a novel thing to have conferees ask for the rejection of a report which they have made.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The Senator from South Carolina. as I understand, joins me in desiring to have this conference report disagreed to, because it has an effect upon other conferences that we did not understand and did not contemplate; and we want to be sent back to conference in order that we may not be an embarrassment to the other committees. We must adopt the same rule as to all. It would not be fair to accept one plan of increase in the Agricultural Department and not adopt the same plan in other departments. It should be the same every-

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that of course that is what the conferees on the part of the appropriation bills that are acted upon by the Appropriation Committee are waiting for, and they agreed to follow that plan.

Now, Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator from Wyo-

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President-

Mr. SMOOT. Just a moment, and then I will yield. I want to say to the Senator from Wyoming that I have every reason to believe that if the Smoot amendment is agreed to in the Senate the House will agree to that amendment; and it is betraying no confidence when I say that two of the conferees on the part of the House voted for the Smoot amendment. When a compromise was under consideration in the House it was stated on the floor of the House that the compromise amendment in the Agricultural appropriation bill would not cost the Government as much as the Smoot amendment.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Precisely. Mr. SMOOT. When I was asked the question by one of the House Members I said: "I do not know; but," I said, "I will House Members 1 said: "I do not know, but, I said, I win spend this evening in finding out."

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If the Senator from Utah will yield to me, the conferees on the part of the House are of the same opinion. They were not seeking to raise it. We simply hap-pened to have a schedule where it worked out as a decrease, and amendment.

we did not have the other schedules; and we did not mean to put up a standard that was to cause an increase beyond the Smoot amendment.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, my chief concern in this matter is for the little fellow who is trying to live and to support his family on starvation wages. Therefore the objection I have to the compromise is that it increases the salaries of the higher-up employees at the expense of the lower ones, to which I seriously object. I am not so much concerned about the increase in the amount to be appropriated if the wages attempted to be fixed are reasonable and just. I do not think that ought to count for very much, but I do feel that if anything at all is done, it should be done in the case of these people who are receiving the very small salaries.

Mr. SMOOT. I fully agree with the Senator from California, and I was going to close my remarks by calling the attention of the conferees to this fact: If we reject this report now, and it goes back to conference, I hope that any agreement reached will provide that all salaries of $480 and under shall be increased 15 per cent, as provided by the Smoot amendment. I do hope our conferees will not allow that increase to be reduced. I want to say to the Senator from South Carolina, having the bill in charge, that the statement has been made that nearly all of the employees who receive $480 per annum and less were boys and girls. Such is not the case, as I can show by Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator one question? I should like to know if this compromise, or the amendment of the Senator from Utah, covered such cases as the waiters in the Senate restaurant, who receive the large salary of $1 a day?

Mr. SMOOT. It will cover them to the extent of the percentage

Mr. KENYON. Will it increase their compensation?

Mr. SMOOT. My amendment would increase their compensation 15 per cent.

Mr. KENYON. It Mr. SMOOT. Yes. It would increase it 15 cents a day?

As I was saying, Mr. President, all that is saved in cutting the 5 per cent off of the salaries of the employees receiving $480 and under amounts to only $533,000. I hope that the conferees will insist upon those low salaries at least receiving the increase of 15 per cent. If the Senate now votes to reject the report, I think the conferees ought to take it for granted that the Senate insists upon the Smoot amendment as far as the increase in salaries of the lower grades is concerned-

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, as chairman of the conferees on the part of the Senate, I wish to say that if this report is disagreed to I think the members of the conference committee on the part of the Senate will understand that it is tantamount to an instruction to stand for the Smoot amendment. I shall so interpret it. In this connection, I want to say that the Senator from Georgia has made a motion to disagree to the report. I called for the consideration of the conference report. I do not feel it to be my duty to try to influence the Senate one way or another. I have simply stated the facts; and if the Senate see fit to reject it, I shall consider it an instruction to stand by the previous action of the Senate in the adoption of the Smoot amendment. It is up to them now, with the facts before them, to vote as they see fit, and determine whether they will vote down the conference report or agree to it.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I am not going to discuss this proposition. The Senator from California [Mr. Works] has largely expressed my views with reference to that. I would vote for a larger increase than that provided in either the House or Senate bill, but if I can not get that I want to see the lowerpaid employees given at least 15 per cent increase. But I wanted to ask the chairman of the committee with reference to one or two other amendments and find out what the conference has done.

Amendment 79 is a very important amendment, to my notion. It was presented by the Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN], and has reference to this shipping condition. Does the Senator remember what action the conferees took with reference to that?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes. The conferees struck out the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida, and reinstated the so-called Mann amendment; and then, as supple-mentary to it, the conferees agreed on the proposition that the Senate had put in with reference to giving the Agricultural Department the power to subpœna witnesses and call for books and papers, on the statement of the Agricultural Department that the very matter that the Senator from Florida had incorporated was now within their powers and emphasized under the Manu

Mr. JONES. I do not know what the Mann amendment is. Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I can turn to it in just a

Mr. JONES. The amendment to which I am referring is on page 79 of the bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I recall the amendment. It is with regard to having certificates issued by the duly authorized Federal officers as to the condition of vegetables and other stuff when received at markets. The so-called Mann amendment which we agreed to, on page 79-and it happens to be amendment No. 79-is as follows:

To make investigation relating to the production, transportation, storage, preparation, marketing, manufacture, and distribution of agricultural food products, including the extent, manner, and methods of any manipulation of the markets or control of the visible supply of such food products or any of them by any individuals, groups, associations, combinations, or corporations, $50,000.

Mr. JONES. That is what is known as the Mann amendment? Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That is the Mann amendment.

Mr. JONES. Of course, that was a part of the original bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. JONES. I just want to say this, Mr. President: I doubt if we can accomplish, under that, what we want to accomplish under the amendment put in by the Senate; and I think that if this report goes back to the conferees that matter should be looked over very carefully, and something to make certain the authority of the department to do what is sought to be done by the Senate amendment should be incorporated in whatever is reported. The whole matter is in conference. The Senate struck out that provision in the original bill and inserted this other one, and they did it for the purpose of getting the whole matter in conference. It is a matter of such very great importance that I trust the bill will go back to conference, and that the conferees of the Senate will insist upon having some provision put in here so as to make certain the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to do what little ought to be done there, and that will be of more substantial benefit to the shippers than almost all these other provisions that you have in here. The shippers to the leading markets of the country need some assistance along the line of the Bryan amendment, and they need it now. It will work harm to no one, but it will bring protection to those who need it and can not get it in any other

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I think the conferees on the part of the Senate were thoroughly in sympathy with this amendment; but the condition arose that the Agricultural Department had made a proposition, and that the conferees on the part of the Senate were insisting that we clothe the Agricultural Department with court powers to subpœna witnesses, call for the production of books and papers, and, in other words, invest them with the same power that the Federal Trade Commission has, and the Tariff Commission; and we absolutely refused. Then they insisted on the $50,000 carried by the Mann amendment; and the compromise was to strike out the Bryan amendment with the $25,000 appropriation and agree to the Mann amendment, with the other modifying amendment farther on in the bill giving them the power to call for books and papers. But I think the conferees can work out and reframe in the bill the very feature that is incorporated here, perhaps not with the specific provision, but providing that this specific work shall be done out of the appropriations already made,

Mr. JONES. I hope, at any rate, that that much will be done. If we can not get the specific appropriation of $25,000 I hope that the substance of this language will be put under the $50,000 item that was in the House bill. I hope that will be done.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I think that can be accomplished, because the conferees on the part of the Senate were thoroughly impressed with the idea that this is the most important thing in reference to handling that character of foodstuffs that has been incorporated in the bill at all.

Mr. JONES. I think so, too. Now, just a word about one or two other amendments about which, perhaps, the Senator

On page 26, amendments 25 and 26 increase the appropriation for the purchase of seeds by $4,000, with a view to having this $4,000 used in forage demonstrations in the State of Washington.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes. Mr. JONES. Can the Senator tell me what was done with reference to that?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The Agricultural Department informed us that the language was a little prejudicial, but that, if we would leave the $4,000 in, they would see that it was expended in the State of Washington.

Mr. JONES. And that was agreed to?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That was agreed to:

Mr. JONES. That is very good. Now, on page 25, amendment 24 increased the amount for horticultural investigations from sixty-two thousand and odd dollars to $65,240. with a view to taking care of the necessities of the bulb farm at Bellingham, Wash. Can the Senator tell me what the conferees did with reference to that?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I do not recall. Let me

read the item:

For horticultural investigations, including the study of producing, handling, and shipping truck and related crops, including potatoes, and the study of landscape and vegetable gardening, floriculture, and related subjects, $65,240.

I do not recall just what was done with reference to that.

Mr. JONES. I will examine the conference report and find out what was done. I hope that was agreed to, but if it was not, I feel the conferees did the best they could.

can not hold all the Senate put on.

Mr. President, as far as the so-called Smoot Mr. BRYAN. amendment is concerned and the demand of the employees in the Government service, I think we ought to send it back to conference, and we ought to do it by a yea-and-nay vote, because think the House believes the Senate has been playing with this question; that we have not taken any positive action upon which we propose to stand. They have a right to feel that way about it, because, when the matter first came to the Senate, having considered it in the committee, the Democrats agreed to strike it out and not to have any increase, under the belief that these employees are already being paid more in proportion than anybody else earned in like work.

Then, in the Senate, after three or four roll calls, the Smoot amendment was adopted and adhered to, and it was followed on several other bills. But when this bill went into conference the Senate conferees agreed to a change, under the idea that it was a decrease in the amount involved, and entered into a different plan. The impression created upon my mind by the House conferees is that the House does not know what the Senate will do, and they do not think that the Senate has any set policy which it proposes to follow out.

On the legislative appropriation bill two of the conferees voted in the House for the Smoot amendment. The RECORD shows that, so I am informed It ought to be an easy matter on the legislative bill to come back into the Senate with a recommendation that the House shall recede and allow the Smoot amendment to stand. Of course, it will not be right to do that if on this bill the Senate is going to set up a different policy and a different method of payment, paying different amounts.

I think on the whole we ought to express ourselves and say we propose to stand by our amendment, and I believe the House will yield.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] referred to an amendment which was adopted in the Senate, on page 391. which I offered, "for the purpose of enabling the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate and certify to shippers conditions as to the soundness in which fruits and vegetables arrive in great markets of this country." There is a provision in the bill as passed by the House, stricken out, which is amendment No. 79. It has, if at all, a very remote relation to the amendment adopted in the Senate. It provides for an investigation; it does not provide for any action to be taken. The amendment I offered looks not to an investigation but it looks toward action-it looks toward relief to the shippers throughout this country.

As I understand it, in all the great cities there is an agent of the Department of Agriculture. If the shipper could know that there was somebody to whom he could appeal when a commission merchant claims his carload of fruit or vegetables arrived at that market in bad condition, he could protect himself against any unjust treatment by a commission merchant. It would not be necessary to call upon any representative of the Department of Agriculture in any except very exceptional cases, because the minute it is understood that there is a representative of the Agricultural Department who can contradict the false report of the consignee of the fruit, the consignee is not going to take the position that the fruit or vegetables arrived in a bad condition.

I deliberately put in the amendment that the investigation should be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture might prescribe. He can make the shipper pay the whole of the costs, and it is perfectly proper that he should do so. Nobody would complain about that. No investigation that any Secretary or that anybody can make will take the place of the provision that the certificate issued by the department shall be received in court as prima facie evidence of the truth contained in the statement. It is the most valuable thing to my mind in the whole bill. It means something. They have been trying to work out a plan for years as to how this thing can be done, and I am rather surprised that the conference committee think it is connected in any substantial way with the so-called Mann amendment, which merely provides for an investigation as to monopolies. This is not concerned with mo-The Mann amendment provides for an investigation to see if anybody is trying to control the prices of agricultural products. The amendment which I offered has nothing to do The purpose it has in view is to find out whether fruits and vegetables arrive in a sound condition, and that one of the gentlemen paid by this Government in these great markets shall issue a certificate upon the mere request of the shipper. How any head of a department can object to that I can not see; and whether he objects to it or not, I think Congress ought to do that act of justice to the shippers of fruits and vegetables all over the country.

I hope when the matter goes back to conference it will be given more extended consideration, so that the conferees will understand that is not in any degree tied up with, and that its fate ought not to depend upon, the decision as to a mere provision to investigate the storage conditions relating to the distribution of agricultural products. These people can distribute their own products; they have no trouble about that; but they sometimes do have very serious trouble which means the loss of a year's work, because somebody claims that their fruits or vegetables arrived in bad condition when they arrived in good condition. The chances are that it will be some real benefit to shippers and it will not be dependent upon an investigation. Investigations are not going to do much good. That is a matter which affects the consumer more than the producer. It seems to me, since this matter is in conference, this very department of all the departments ought to welcome the opportunity to do this service. I do hope when it goes back into conference the Senate conferees will insist on the amendment or upon one that means the same thing. If this language is not sufficient to suit the Secretary of Agriculture or any member of the conference, change it; I have no pride of opinion about the language; but I have a very deep concern in seeing something done along this line.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the acting chairman of the committee having the bill in charge a question. I understand that the amendment with relation to the employees of stand that the amendment with relation to the malls of the Agrithe General Education Board being on the rolls of the Agri-the General Education Board being on the rolls of the Agricultural Department was stricken from the bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It was.

Mr. KENYON. On what ground?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Upon the absolute, positive statement on the part of the Department of Agriculture that the matter complained of in the amendment has been abrogated since 1914.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Florida that the amendment proposed by him is a very important one, and I do not think it has been taken care of as suggested by some of the members of the committee. Those of us who live several hundred miles away from market realize the importance of the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida. In a part of the country like mine, where we have to take vegetables to the terminal markets, a distance of several hundred miles, we very often find that we get very small prices for our products; we do not get the market prices at all; and I was in hope, as I said before the bill passed this body, that the committee of conference would see fit to keep that amendment in the bill.

However, I rose to ask the acting chairman of the committee about another amendment, if I may have his attention; or perhaps the Senator from Georgia can give me the information.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I beg pardon. Mr. GRONNA. I wish to ask the acting chairman of the committee what became of amendment No. 48. Did the Senate conferees recede or did the House conferees recede? found on page 59 of the bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Will the Senator read the amendment'

Mr. GRONNA. It is the item for investigating the food habits of North American birds and mammals in relation to agriculture, horticulture, and forestry, including experiments and demonstrations. Amendment No. 48 is the insertion after the word "demonstrations" of the words "upon the lands of the United States." Was that language inserted by the Senate stricken out?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That language was stricken out in conference.

Mr. GRONNA. I am very glad to hear that, because I have a letter from Mr. T. C. Cooper, who is director of our agricultural experiment station, and he expresses a wish that it should be stricken out; and there is a good deal of good and efficient work being done under this provision.

May I ask the Senator another question? What became of amendment No. 82, found on page 80 of the bill? It provides for an appropriation of $25,000 to install a small experimental flour mill and other apparatus and chemical and baking laboratories in the city of Washington for the purpose of aiding the Secretary of Agriculture in establishing standards of quality and condition of wheat and other grains.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That amendment was stricken out. We were largely influenced by the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture that the language of the bill in reference to grain grading, establishing standards looking to its real market value, was sufficient to enable him to do this work, without any specific legislation defining the method by which he should do it; that under the bill without this amendment he could make these tests wherever he saw fit; and that the very point raised here would be ascertained through methods that appealed to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. GRONNA. I am very much surprised to hear the Senator make that statement, because I have talked with the Secretary of Agriculture. I talked with him over the telephone, and I asked him if, in his opinion, he thought the department had the authority to install this machinery if necessary. understanding is correct, he was of the opinion that he did not have such authority. In other words, he stated that he recognized that this amendment has real merit, but the only trouble was that the appropriation of $106,000 was too small, and by taking the $25,000 out of the $106,000 appropriation there would be a shortage of funds for other work which had already been mapped out. May I ask the Senator if the Secretary of Agriculture appeared before the committee of conference?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. He did not; and I think it nothing but justice to the conference committee at this point to say that there will be inserted in the RECORD the information from the department in reference to this amendment, so that there can be no question as to the facts the conferees had to go upon in striking out the amendment. I will not undertake to say whether the statement was signed by the Secretary of Agriculture or whether it came down in the list of things that the department approved and disapproved of and the reasons there-I will have the clerk of the committee look it up as to this particular item and insert the statement in the Record, so that the action of the committee may be justified, in so far as the department is concerned.

Mr. GRONNA. May I ask the Senator another question? Does he refer to the unsigned memorandum which was handed me a few days ago? Is that the information which the Senator wishes to print?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I suspect that is the information.

Mr. GRONNA. I will say to the Senator that is simply a memorandum not signed by anybody. Does the Senator know that it came from the Agricultural Department at all?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I would be obliged to investigate the records so as to get the matter entirely straight. I wish to say that the Senate conferees were rather in sympathy, and of course were bound to sustain the action of the Senate in incorporating it unless subsequent facts were brought to their attention that justified any adverse action. My memory now is that the Secretary of Agriculture or the department claimed that the text of the bill other than this specific language is amply large to take care of this specific matter. The Senator from Georgia prompts me to say that it was claimed it was already being done in conjunction with certain flouring mills.

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator will pardon me, I will give him some information. I want to say to him and to the committee that the Secretary of Agriculture has said to me that the only way he can do this work now will be to cooperate with the agricultural college of my State. That does not go to show that he has ample authority to do this work and to buy the material provided for in my amendment.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Will the Senator yield to me?
Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.
Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I am satisfied the conference report is going to be sent back, and if the Senator will get that information definitely put in writing and let me have it on the conference committee it will give me a great deal of pleasure to bring it up and see what can be done.

Mr. GRONNA. I shall be very glad to do that. I am very glad to have the Senator say that. I will say further—
Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I was very much impressed with the Senator's view on this subject, and only finally yielded when it was insisted by those who seemed to know that there is ample opportunity for it already. If the Senator will give me the details in writing on the subject, I will be glad to have them.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I think it is only sufficient for the Senator from North Dakota to get the statement he makes as coming from the Secretary of Agriculture. Just let the Secretary of Agriculture inform the conferees that he is in sympathy with this amendment, and I am sure the conferees on the part of the Senate will insist upon it.

Mr. GRONNA. I will be very glad to furnish that information, I will say to the Senator, and with that understanding I do not care to delay the Senate much longer. details to show you people from the South that in the North while we do not have the boll weevil we have what we call the bold evil, which forms itself into associations and operates in that way very effectively. If any of you know anything about wheat you know that a kernel of wheat has on the outside first what we call the epidermal cells. The bold evil does not care for that epidermal cell because that is the bran, but the cells next to that-which is the glutinous or aleurone cellsthat is the portion of the grain that this bold evil desires, and that is where it gets its food and its sustenance. There are still other cells in the wheat. There are the endosperm or albumen cells, commonly known as the starch cells. This bold evil does not seem to care so much for the starch cells, because when we have a poor crop, a crop like we had last year, the wheat does not have so much starch in the grain, but it has the same amount of gluten.

I explained on the floor of the Senate a few days ago that wheat weighing 37 pounds to the measured bushel contains very frequently as much gluten to the bushel by weight as does heavy-weight grain. I do not want you people in the South to forget these facts. We do not have the little pest which you have in the South, and which we in the North have been willing to contribute for its eradication-and I always vote for it, as you know, in committee; I do not think you are getting any too much—but when we are asking for $25,000 to make a test that will save millions of dollars to our farmers in a single year I hope that you will at least consider our proposition.

Mr. President, I want to say in conclusion that the Secretary of Agriculture said to me he is entirely in sympathy with my proposition. A man who knows anything about wheat and about flour and how it is made knows that you can not by a physical test ascertain the real value of wheat. You can only do it in a scientific way when you have a milling laboratory, a baking laboratory, and a chemical laboratory. In that way only can the percentages of the different qualities of grain ascertained. It means a great deal to us, and I had intended to take up some time of the Senate this afternoon to go into the matter fully, so that Senators who do not raise wheat might have the information which I have; but seeing that the members of the committee are kind enough to me, and not only to me but to the farmers, to let this matter go back to conference for consideration, I shall not now take any more of the time of the Senate. The number of the amendment is 82, and it is found on page 80 of the bill. I ask that this amendment go back with the remainder of the contested items, and that the Senate conferees insist on the amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I had not intended to take up any time on this question until it appeared that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] was not defending this conference report with his usual vigor; and since he has several times made the statement that he wanted to get the sentiment of the Senate, it seemed to me that I ought not to permit my silence to be construed as opposition to the conference report. I realize, I think, that the conference report is going to be rejected, and yet I had hoped that it would not be.

The principal contention is in reference to the difference as to salaries, and I favor the conference compromise, because it will do more good to more people than will the so-called Smoot amendment that we put into the bill in the Senate.

I agree in the main with what the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Thomas] and the Senator from California [Mr. Works] have said. I believe as it can be said of the Senator from Colorado so it can be said of me that, as a rule, I have been opposed to increases of salaries and to other large appropriations; but, Mr. President, I can not quite realize how some of these people under present conditions can possibly live and support their wives and children, if they have wives and children, and afford them the ordinary comforts of life. The cost of living has been going up at such a tremendous rate that all those who are dependent upon salaries, unless they are very large salaries, are face to face with want and suffering. I know that the appropriations of this Congress and of the last Congress have been great; and, like the Senator from Colorado, I have been opposed to most of the great appropriations; but I have been amazed and dumfounded to see the Senate, without the blinking of an eye, pass an appropriation of hundreds of millions of dollars and then stagger and stumble when it comes to appropriating the money that will pay the people who are doing the work and who are receiving salaries which every man knows from his own experience, particularly in this Capital City, are inade-quate and insufficient to pay the usual running expenses of an ordinary-sized family.

Mr. President, I have before me here a copy of a newspaper of last evening, and I find on the first page, in the first column, an account of a bread riot. In great headlines it reads:

WOMEN STORM NEW YORK CITY HALL IN BREAD RIOT—THREE HUNDRED CRY FOR FOOD BEFORE OFFICE OF MAYOR MITCHEL—POLICE RESERVES CALLED—TROUBLE THREATENED WHEN "SWEET MARIE" GANG IS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY.

NEW YORK, February 20.

Crying "We want bread!" "We want bread!" more than 300 women, bareheaded, scantily clad—their warmest garments being shawls thrown about their shoulders—stormed up the steps of the city hall here to-day demanding relief from Mayor Mitchel for the high cost of food.

Some declared their families were starving.

Most of the women carried babies in their arms, their faces showing the pinch of hunger.

The women were headed by Mrs. Ida Harris, president of the Mothers' Vigilance League, and Marie Ganz, known as "Sweet Marie." They came from the tenement district, where push-cart peddlers have been steadily raising prices until the women declared they are now utterly unable to feed their families.

"WAYE BERAD!" TURKE GRY

" WANT BREAD!" THEIR CRY.

"We are starving?" "We want bread!" was the constant cry raised by the women as they surged about the entrance to city hall.

At noon a delegation of women had gathered in front of police head-quarters demanding to see Police Commissioner Woods.

At the same time the police received word that 2,000 additional women were forming in Rutgers Square to march to city hall.

Walking quietly across City Hall Park the women were at the very steps of the building before they were noticed. They swept up the steps en masse. The doors were banged shut in their faces, and wild cries and imprecations followed.

RESERVES CALLED OUT.

A swarm of police reserves and plain-clothes men appeared. They drove the women down from the steps. Marie Ganz then mounted the steps and addressed the women.

She urged the women to remain in the street, and especially to do nothing that would give the police an excuse to arrest them. With this the crowd quieted and "Sweet Marie" and Mrs. Harris were admitted to the building as representatives of the protesting women.

A serious outbreak was threatened when Marie Ganz was arrested after the main body of women had been dispersed. The crowd in City Hall Park by this time numbered thousands—

Mr. President, I have read only a portion of the article. These women, moved by hunger and the love of their children their babies-were crying for bread in the great city of New York, the great metropolis of the country, at a time when we are told we are enjoying the greatest prosperity in the history of the Nation.

Mr. President, in that connection, I wish to state that a Member of this body told me yesterday that just a few days ago a friend of his in the city of New York, who has just come from there to this city, told him that in the great hotels—the high-priced hotels—of New York City it was impossible to get a room; that they had waiting lists, and that the prices were away up. That only illustrates that there are two classes—one away down and the other away up. The Senator said that his friend told him that he was visited by two friends, and he invited them to have a drink. He had to pay $5 for a table-merely for a table at which to sit down-and that then, when he ordered three cocktails for himself and his two friends, he had to pay 50 cents a cocktail—$6.50 for three cocktails! And, Mr. President, that does not take into consideration the tip that I presume was necessary for the waiter, for I assume that it was necessary to pay 50 cents, or perhaps a dollar, to keep the waiter from spitting in the cocktails.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARDWICK in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator. Mr. SHEPPARD. I wish to ask the Senator, in this connection, if it is not a humiliating fact that, while women and children are crying for bread in the city of New York, an immense amount of grain, to the value of more than $100,000,000 annually, is being worse than wasted by being converted into intoxicating liquor? Instead of being converted into the staff of life, this grain is being made into the staff of death.

Mr. NORRIS. I agree with the Senator. I wanted to use this illustration, Mr. President, for the purpose of conveying an idea which I wish to get before the Senate: The men who frequent the high-priced hotels and pay for high-priced drinks do not mind the cost; the men who are paying 50 cents for a cocktail and $5 for a table at which to drink it do not feel the price, although they probably feel the cocktail. That only illustrates that we have a class of people whom the high cost of living does not affect.

The same newspaper—and one can take any other newspaper and get the same kind of information-from which I read a while ago about the riot for bread, and about women carrying babies, scantily clad, shivering with cold, crying from hunger, demanding food, devotes a whole page to accounts of great society events in this Capital City.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. NORRIS. I do not care to yield just now. I will yield a little later The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska declines to vield. Mr. NORRIS. I desire to quote something additional from this newspaper. I am not finding fault, Mr. President, with these society events; I am not complaining about them, and I am not going to read the names; but I desire to illustrate the point that there is a large class of people who are suffering for the necessaries of life, while there is another class of people who are not affected by the high cost of living; but we must in some way, at some time, somewhere take care of the people who are suffering for the want of food and shelter. In this paper there are noted in flaming headlines dinners given in honor of high officials of the Government, accounts of large numbers of society people assembled at various dinners. There are four or five columns of such matter. Here is an account of a dinner given just in advance of a great ball, and

The hunt ball will open at 10 o'clock, when there will be general dancing in the main ballroom until 11. At that hour the guests will be requested, at the sound of the bugle, to clear the center of the room for the pageant. Immediately following the pageant will be a grand march, when the costumes will be judged and prizes awarded. The jury on costumes will include * * * During the grand march there will be general singing of the old English hunting song "Drink, Puppy, Drink."

This is high society—high life—while thousands of God's poor women, scantily clad—in that respect they are similar to their sisters in polite society-with hungry babies at their breasts, are storming the city hall in our great metropolis demanding bread.

The remnants that are carried out in the garbage buckets from these dinners and from the tables of the overrich would feed the hungry, starving millions who in the midst of luxury are crying for food.

Mr. President, so every day I might go on through columns and pages of every newspaper. I have no objection to that. I do not cite these instances as showing anything particularly evil, but to show that we are in this country confronted with a condition which, in my judgment, must be remedied.

The high cost of living first affects those who are the poorest. As the cost of living increases it enlarges the class affected. It As the cost of high energiases it charges the class affected. The keeps on going up and up and increasing the numbers who are affected by it. The man who has a salary now of from five hundred to fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars a year begins to feel the effects of the high cost of living. The high cost of living goes a little higher, and it takes in the man in the $3,000 class, then the man in the $5,000 class, and so on. The man who has an income of $100,000 does not know that the cost of living has increased. He has not the right viewpoint. I am not complaining that he is not patriotic, for he may be a philanthropist; but he has not felt the want of sufficient clothing or of food, and he has not noticed it in those who are dependent upon him for support. He has not shivered from cold or felt the pinch of hunger. As I have said, he may be patriotic and just as good as the man who is poorer; but there must be some time a realization that this increase in the cost of living can not continue without in the end bringing ruin, even to those who are the most prosperous and not directly affected by it. But we have been making more millionaires during the last 3 years than during any 50 years of our history. This operation has induring any 50 years of our history. This operation has in-creased the cost of living manyfold, and thereby made many people destitute who were prosperous before. Those who have vast fortunes must be taxed to pay the increased salaries of those who do the work.

Mr. President, I picked up a Baltimore paper of this morning, which has whole pages showing enormous prosperity in some lines, and yet on the front page it says in flaming headlines:

Housewives in revolt-Soaring prices for food cause riot in New York. And then there is an item in this Baltimore paper, under a Chicago date line, stating it was announced to-day that there was going to be an investigation by the Federal Government in regard to the high prices of food. The people who are moder-ately poor are all suffering to-day. Yet take that same paper and turn to the society columns and you will find that in Baltimore the same thing is going on that is going on here and everywhere else. There are glowing accounts of luxurious dinners in high society. The same is true every day in every city.

Mr. President, this particular conference report has to do with those who are affected by the high cost of living. Many of the people affected, perhaps the largest number—at least the largest in any one city-live in the city of Washington. No matter how much we may desire to economize, it seems to me that here is a place where we can not economize. We must meet the condition as it exists. I concede, Mr. President, that it is not a settlement of the difficulty. It is only temporary; it is just an excuse at relief; it applies only to one fiscal year. I suppose that is done on the theory that we may get back to earth by the time the year expires, and that we may be again upon a reasonable basis of living; but in the midst of great crops, I understand—I have seen it so stated several times in the newspapers, although I can not corroborate it, of coursewe are paying more for potatoes in the city of Washington than is being paid for them in Berlin.

Why, Mr. President, to the people who are affected by this increase it is almost essential to them to have it in order to be able to live. It will not give relief to many of them. I would rather issue bonds to help the suffering poor who are toiling and working than I would issue bonds to build a great battleship or to equip a great army. Everybody wants to be economical. I take it that we would all like to get through with nomical. I take it that we would all like to get through with as little public expenditure as possible, but there are some things we can not evade, and this is one of them.

Why, Mr. President, if we are to go on in the way we are going, ultimately we will come to revolution. Those who are hungry and can not make a living are increasing in numbers by thousands as the cost of living ascends the scale.

Cold and hunger know no reason. Such conditions brought on the French Revolution. Taxes are always burdensome, and I would be glad if I could relieve everybody from taxes, but closely connected with the high cost of living is the question of Those who are barely able to make enough to live and keep their families, if their taxes are increased, are put from one side of this line to the other. So, whether we will it or not, Mr. President, taxes of all kinds must be paid by those who can pay them. When you tax a man up to such a height that the taxes are greater than his property, you have made it a physical impossibility for him to pay, and the same thing is true of a nation.

It seems to me we ought to adopt this conference report as far as the salary dispute is concerned at least, because, while it does not give full relief, it does give some. It is only temporary.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President—
Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Iowa.
Mr. KENYON. The conference report, however, will not give relief to any material extent to those drawing very small salaries. The Smoot amendment gives more relief to those drawing the four and five and six hundred dollar salaries than the conference report. Does not the Senator believe that if we are compelled to choose, it is better to increase by a greater proportion the salaries of those who receive the small sums I have mentioned than those who receive the $1,200 salaries?

Now, a person receiving a $1,200 salary can get along. He is not going to suffer, but these employees of the Government receiving $480 and $500 and $600 a year simply can not live. That seems to be the difference between the conference report and the Smoot amendment. That is the way it strikes me.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I heard the Senator from Iowa ask the chairman of the conference committee, for instance, about the waiters down here getting $30 a month, but they get their board.

Mr. KENYON. They only get one meal a day.
Mr. NORRIS. Well, that is about all I get.
Mr. KENYON. I think they get what the Senator leaves on the plate.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, they get more than I do, even then.

Mr. KENYON. The Senator must have a good deal of hash in his house, then.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I think there is something in what the Senator from Iowa says; the one amendment does not increase those low salaries as much as the other, but in the aggregate it helps a great many more people than the Smoot amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does t braska yield to the Senator from Illinois? Does the Senator from Ne-

Mr. NORRIS. In just a moment. Let me finish replying to the inquiry of the Senator from Iowa. The Senator refers to some one getting $1,200 a year as being in better condition than the man who gets $480; but you will find, as a rule, that those who are getting $480 a year are able, on account of the peculiar nature of the work they do, to do something else. It does not take all their time.

Take the janitors, for instance, in the Senate Office Building. They can work there only at certain hours, and only a short number of hours, and they have most of the time to do some-thing else. The waiters in these restaurants get their board, and that is a very big item; but the man with five children and a wife on $1,200 in the city of Washington, we all know, must They can not in this city at the present time get the necessaries of life. It is an impossibility to do it. It can not be done.

Now, I think their salaries ought to be increased. I know it is not striking at the fundamental cause of the difficulty; but we are not going to be able to strike at the fundamental cause of the difficulty, at least during this session, and probably not during the next, so that we ought to give them some immediate relief. That is what this amendment does. It distributes among the people who are working for the Government $10,000,-000 more than the other amendment, all going to low-salaried people when you take into consideration the places where they have to live and the high cost of living.

Under ordinary circumstances $1,200 in some places might be a good salary, but it is not in Washington, and I do not suppose it is in New York City. The man on such a salary who has a family is driven into bankruptcy if he has sickness in his family. From his meager income under present conditions he can not have the necessaries of life. You can not buy in this city the food, you can not have meat, you can not have potatoes, you can not get bread, you can not clothe the family at the prices you have to pay and keep them in school on that salary.

I now yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I wish to ask what the Senator thinks of the Government employee who is now receiving $5,000 per annum, like the secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and whom by a pending bill that was taken up yesterday it is proposed to increase 50 per cent and give him $7,500, while persons in the condition that the Senator is describing, with small salaries, go unrelieved?

Mr. NORRIS. I will say to the Senator that I do not agree with that kind of legislation; and I do not mean to claim, now, that the particular official whom the Senator mentions is not earning and would not earn the increased salary. But under present conditions, with the country practically bankrupt, it seems to me we ought not to increase salaries of any kind, except where the salaries are so small that men can not live and support their families on them.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska further yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. NORRIS. I do.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am in entire accord with the Senator, and under proper conditions would favor increasing the salary of a skilled official; but under the present conditions, is not the Senator simply taking the bread line, the actual support?

Mr. NORRIS. That is the line that I want to help, and that is the reason I believe we ought to adopt the conference report. Senators oppose it on the ground of expense, and I concede that that has a great influence on me. Under ordinary circumstances that argument would be sufficient to control my vote; but it can not control my vote when it seems to me that these people who are doing the work under the present salaries and under the present high cost of living can not possibly make both ends meet. It is one thing, it seems to me, that we ought to do, regardless of the effort that it takes to do it. These people must live. However hard it may be, and however necessary it may be to increase the taxes, unless in some way we remedy or somebody remedies the high cost of living, we must pay these prices in order that the people who do the work of this Government can live and support their families.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. NORRIS. I do.

Mr. WATSON. The Senator spoke a while

Mr. WATSON. The Senator spoke a while ago of the fundamental cause of the high cost of living. What is it?

Mr. NORRIS. Well, the Senator has asked me, of course, as everybody knows, a very difficult question to answer. I have my ideas about it. I prefer not to discuss it now, because we know we can not get relief for it, at least in this bill. I think there are a great many things that enter into it. Some of them, in my judgment, are only temporary; others are more permanent. But I do not want to take up the time of the Senate now in discussing that question when I know we could not reach any conclusion on it.

Mr. WATSON. These people who are working in Government positions are in no worse situation than those who are receiving

Mr. NORRIS. That is right.

Mr. WATSON. And therefore, while we ought to relieve them, we will relieve only a small portion of those who are in need.

Mr. NORRIS. I admit that. The Senator is correct. Even if we do this, we only relieve a very small part, and we only relieve that part in a small degree.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I think there ought to be a larger number of Senators here when we vote on the report. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

runnincut.	THECHCOCK	MEISON	Smith, Mitch.
Beckham	Hollis	Norris	Smith, S. C.
Borah -	Husting	Oliver	Smoot
Brandegee	James	Overman	Sterling
Bryan	Johnson, S. Dak.	Page	Swanson
Catron	Jones	Penrose	Thomas
Chamberlain	Kenyon	Pittman	Thompson
Clark	Kern	Poindexter	Tillman
Colt	Kirby	Ransdell	Underwood
Culberson	Lea. Tenn.	Robinson	Vardaman
Curtis	Lee, Md.	Shafroth	Wadsworth
Fall	Lodge	Sheppard	Watson
Fernald	McCumber	Sherman	Williams
Fletcher	McLean	Simmons	Williams
Gronna	Martin, Va.	Smith, Ga.
Hardwick	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Md.
THRIUWICK	martine, iv. d.	Emilia, Dia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. SMOOT. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Those in favor of adopting the conference report will, when their names are called, vote "yea"; those opposed will vote "nay." The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

I transfer my pair Mr. COLT (when his name was called). with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] to the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND] and vote

Mr. FALL (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CHILTON]. I do not see that Senator present and I withhold my vote.

Mr. GRONNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. Johnson]. As I do not see that Senator in the Chamber I withhold my vote for the present.

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). I ask if the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. SIMMONS. I transfer my pair with that Senator to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and vote "nay."

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Goff] to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] and vote "nay." Mr. UNDERWOOD (when his name was called). general pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING]. He is absent on account of sickness. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore] and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. OVERMAN (after having voted in the negative). that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Warren], with whom I have a general pair, is absent. I transfer my pair to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Harding] on account of illness, and also the unavoidable absence of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger].

Mr. GRONNA. I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. Johnson]. Being unable to get a transfer, I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. Sauls-BURY] is absent on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. ASHURST. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. SMITH of Arizona] is now absent and has been absent from the Senate for nearly a month by reason of illness. I will let this announcement stand to cover all roll calls.

Mr. WALSH. I wish to announce the absence of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] on account of illness. He is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Colt].

I also announce the absence of the Senator from West Virginia

[Mr. Chilton] on account of illness in his family.

The result was announced-yeas 4, nays 72, as follows:

	YEA	18-4.
Catron	Norris	Poindexter	Sherman
	NAY	S-72.
Ashurs: Rankhead Beckham Borah Brady Brandegee Bryan Chamberlain Clark Colt Culberson Cummins Curtis Dillingham du Pont Fernald Fletcher Hardwick	Hollis Hughes Hughes Husting James Johnson, S. Dak. Jones Kenyon Kern Kirby La Follette Lane Lea. Tenn. Lee. Md. Lippitt Lodge McLean Martin, Va. Martine, N. J.	Myers Nelson O'Gorman Oliver Overman Owen Page Penrose Pittman Pomerene Ransdell Reed Robinson Shafroth Sheppard Simmons Smith, Ga. Smith, Md.	f mith, Mich. Smith, S. C. Smoot Sterling Stone Swanson Thomas Thompson Tillman Townsend Underwood Vardaman Wadsworth Walsh Watson Weeks Williams Works
	NOT VO	TING-20.	HOR.
Broussard Chilton Clapp Fall Gallinger	Goff Gore Gronna Harding Hitchcock	Johnson, Me. Lewis McCumber Newlands Phelan	Saulsbury Shields Smith, Ariz. Sutherland Warren

So the conference report was rejected.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I move that the Senate further insist upon its amendments, and ask for a further conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. SMITH of South Carolina, Mr. SMITH of Georgia, and Mr. WARREN conferees on the part of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on Friday evening at 8 o'clock the Senate may take up Senate bill 8259, making certain amendments to the Federal reserve act, which are of particular importance at this time, in view of possible complications of the Government.

Mr. SIMMONS. I feel constrained at this time to object. After I confer with the Senator from Oklahoma it may be that we may make some adjustment later on.

Mr. OWEN. I withdraw the request.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON DECEASED REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. KERN. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CHILTON] gave notice that on Saturday, the 24th instant, he would ask the Senate to take action touching the life, character, and public services of the late Representative WILLIAM G. BROWN and the late Representative H. H. Moss, of West Virginia. Later the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] gave notice that he would ask the Senate on the same day to take action regarding the death of the late Representative FINLEY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will pardon the Chair, it is desired that he shall ask that the service also include memorial addresses upon the late Representative TRIBBLE, of Georgia.

Mr. KERN. I will also include memorial addresses on the late Representative TRIBBLE, of Georgia. The Senators I named asked me to request unanimous consent that the Senate meet on Sunday, the 25th instant, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, to consider resolutions on the death of these deceased Representa-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. JONES. What was the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request was that the Senate hold memorial services for certain deceased Members of the House of Representatives on Sunday, the 25th, at 2 o'clock p. m. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE REVENUE.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that the unfinished business be laid before the Senate and proceeded with.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide increased revenues to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extensions of fortifications, and for other purposes.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am under the impression that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Sherman] had not completed his remarks when we took a recess last evening.

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator from Illinois yield to me?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir. Mr. PENROSE. I desire to submit a report from the minority of the Finance Committee on the pending bill, which I have not been able to put in more promptly on account of the absence from the Senate of some of the members of the minority. As the report is not very long I ask to have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield for that purpose?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Secre-

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President—
Mr. PENROSE. I ask to have it read. I know the Senator wants to object, but I prefer to have it read.

Mr. SIMMONS. I was going to ask the Senator if he would not be content to have it printed in the RECORD.

Mr. PENROSE. No; I would rather have it rend. It is a valuable document. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read it. The Secretary read as follows:

[S. Rept. 1039, pt. 2, 64th Cong., 2d sess.]

The Secretary read as follows:

[S. Rept. 1039, pt. 2, 64th Cong., 2d sess.]

Mr. Pennosa, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following views of the minority:

The undersigned minority members of the Committee in the preparation and consideration of this bill and were only given opportunity at a perfunctory session of the committee to record their disapproval of it. Hearings, so called, were held, to which the minority members of the committee were not invited officially; and persons whose interests the bill affects vitally were not called to testify. These "hearings" are valueless to the committee and to the country.

The minority members profest against those methods as well as against the bill itself.

That additional revenue is necessary can not be gainsaid; that it would be necessary, notwithstanding three previous attempts of the Democratic Party to bolster the Underwood tariff law by direct taxation, was foretold by Republicans only last summer. The wild, reckless extravagance of the Democratic Party was then brought to the attention of the country, and the inadequacy of relief measures pointed out. Military and naval preparedness is not alone responsible for this present emergency. Appropriations exceeding the actual necessary domestic needs and demands of the Government, if economically administered, are largely responsible for it. There has been no fiscal situation, not created by the short-sighted policies of the Democratic Party, that could not have been met adequately by the imposition of duties upon the flood of foreign-made goods imported into this country since the enactment of the Underwood tariff law. But the Democratic Party, in the light of recent experience and in the face of an empty Treasury, persists in ignoring the indirect, historic, and easy method of collecting revenue at the customhouses and continues to saddle direct taxes upon an already burdened people.

That these additional tremendous taxes are largely responsible for the high cost of living we have no doubt. The aver

The responsibility for present consists.

The minority members of the Finance Committee have repeatedly called attention to the unscientific methods of the majority party in their mismanagement of the country's finances. Trusting doggedly to their tariff policy, refusing blindly to admit the failure of the Underwood law to produce revenue in the face of unprecedented imports, the majority through pride of opinion continues to draw upon the substance of our own people rather than recede from its erroneous position and resort to the Republican method of raising revenue indirectly upon imports.

and resort to the Republican method of raising revenue indirectly uponimports.

Estimates of receipts and expenditures and statements of the present and prospective condition of the Treasury, as given in the report of the majority are confusing and misleading. This, however, is to be expected when the daily Treasury statement continues to show a net balance in the general fund, when in fact there is a deficit of approximately $50,000,000. There is no balance in the general fund; what purports to be a balance consists of liabilities.

There are no reliable estimates. We know in a general way only that the Treasury is in dire straits. Since the Book of Estimates was submitted in December supplemental estimates keep coming in. Congress must guess at the Treasury's true condition to-day and next year. No figures upon which it is asked to formulate revenue legislation intelligently are even fairly within many millions of remaining authoritative reasonably long.

The estimates of the amounts to be raised by the additional taxation in this bill are guesswork. They are arbitrary. No basis is given for the estimated reveneu from the profits tax, because there is none to give.

The pending bill not only disregards the opportunity for raising revenue from imports, which aggregated $2,391,716,335 in value during the last calendar year, but it takes no account of the future industrial preparedness of the United States against the invasion of European-made goods which is bound to come after the war. In this, as in its predecessors, this bill fails to safeguard the industries of the United States

European-made goods which is bound to come after the war. In this, as in its predecessors, this bill falls to safeguard the industries of the United States.

Of this bill we will say as we have said of other like revenue bills which have ignored sound economic principles and the "American system" of protection, that it will be inadequate to meet the demands upon the Treasury by reason of wasteful appropriations; and not until the Democratic Party makes a serious attempt instead of pretense at economy and recognizes its utter inability adequately to finance the Government without adopting the natural and economically sound method of raising revenue by protective-tariff duties will that party be able to escape the just condemnation of an overtaxed but long suffering people.

able to escape the just condemnation of an overtaxed but long suffering people.

We believe the estimates of revenue under existing law will be less by $100,000,000; that the disbursements this fiscal year and for 1918 will exceed the estimates; that the dencits both years will aggregate in excess of $500,000,000; that this bill, together with existing direct-taxation laws, will be fastened upon the people permanently unless relief be had by restoration of import duties that will yield $200,000,000 more revenue annually and at the same time conserve our productive energies, both of capital and labor.

Boies Penrose. H. C. Lodge. Porter J. McCumber. Reed Smoot. Jacob H. Gallinger. Clarence D. Clark.

Mr. UNDERWOOD obtained the floor.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VARDAMAN in the chair).
Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do. Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that instead of asking for a night session I shall ask that the Senate continue in session until 8 o'clock, with the understandingwhich I have reason to believe has the approval of the other side of the Chamber-that between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock a point of no quorum will not be made unless it is proposed to vote either upon the bill or upon some amendment thereto.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. Does not the Senator understand also that between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock there shall be no vote

Mr. SIMMONS. Well, we might find ourselves in the position of no business being before the Senate, and then we would have to adjourn, unless it was proposed to take a vote. In that case the point of no quorum could be made, under the understanding, and we could not vote unless we had a quorum.

Mr. SMOOT. Just so the Senator understands, then, that if such a condition arises there will be no violation of the understanding by calling for a quorum.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not know whether the Senator from Utah has mentioned this phase of the matter or not; but I suggest to the Senator from North Carolina that the understanding, I assume, includes the idea that this bill will not be laid aside between those hours so that other measures can come up for consideration.

Mr. SIMMONS. That would necessarily be a part of the understanding.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, one more question.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?
Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. PENROSE. I understand that at the hour of 8 o'clock the Senate will take a recess until 10.30 o'clock to-morrow morning. Is that the purpose of the chairman?

Mr. SIMMONS. That is my purpose—to ask for a recess at that time until 10.30 to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senate understand the proposition made by the Senator from North Carolina? If it does, the Chair will not put it to the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE, Does there have to be unanimous consent? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that that be the order of the Senate.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am not asking unanimous consent. I hardly think it would be proper to do that. I am just stating it as an understanding that I assume will be regarded as binding upon

Mr. PENROSE. As I understand, Mr. President, the chairman of the Finance Committee has the leadership of the majority in the conduct of the business of the Senate, and he has announced his purpose to ask the Senate to remain in session until 8 o'clock

Mr. SIMMONS. That is all.

Mr. PENROSE. And then that he will ask to take a recess until half past 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is all I meant to say.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And the Senate consents to that, or understands that.

Mr. SIMMONS. I meant to say, if the Senator will pardon me, that I had decided to pursue this course, with the assurance that the point of no quorum would not be made between 6 and 8 o'clock, unless it was proposed to take up some new business, or proposed to vote upon this bill or some amendment to this bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course, unless it is agreed to as a matter of unanimous consent, that is simply a declaration of intention on the part of the Senator.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is all that I meant that it should be. Mr. BRANDEGEE. Anybody who wants to raise the point of no quorum this evening can do it.

Mr. SIMMONS. Undoubtedly that is true.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senate agrees to that, or rather understands the matter, the Senator from Alabama will proceed.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do. Mr. KENYON. The Senator from Alabama is about to address the Senate upon a very important part of this bill, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Fernald	McCumber	Smith, Ga.
Bankhead	Fletcher	McLean	Smith, Md.
Beckham	Gronna.	Martin, Va.	Smith, S. C.
Borah	Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Smoot
Brady	Husting	Newlands	Sterling
Brandegee	James	Norris	Stone
Chamberlain	Johnson, Me.	O'Gorman	Thomas
Clapp	Johnson, S. Dak.	Oliver	Thompson
Clark	Kenvon	Overman	Tillman
Colt	Kirby	Owen	Underwood
Culberson	La Follette	Page	Vardaman
Cummins	Lane	Penrose	Wadsworth
Curtis	Lea, Tenn.	Shafroth	Walsh
Dillingham	Lee, Md.	Sheppard	Warren
du Pont	Lewis	Sherman	Watson
Fall	Linnitt	Simmone

Mr. VARDAMAN. I desire to announce the absence of the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Shields] on account of sickness

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey in the chair). Sixty-three Senators have responded to their mames. A quorum is present.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I desire to address my remarks to one portion of this bill at this time. The Senate Committee on Finance has adopted an amendment to the House bill to change the law relating to the tax on oleomargarine and provide a new system of taxation. I shall not take up the time of the Senate to have that portion of the bill read at this time; but in order that it may show as a part of my remarks I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that course will be pursued.

The matter referred to is as follows:

TITLE V .- MARGARINE TAX.

TITLE V.—MARGARINE TAX.

Sec. 500. That in lieu of the taxes now imposed by law upon the substances, mixtures, or compounds heretofore known as oleomargarine, and which shall hereafter be known and designated as margarine, or its equivalent descriptive word, when manufactured for export to a foreign country, there shall be levied, collected, and pald a tax at the rate of 2 cents per pound, to be paid by the manufacturer thereof, which tax shall be represented by internal-revenue stamp or stamps so affixed to the respective "manufacturers' original packages," hereinafter provided for, as to seal them securely, so that said packages may not be opened without destroying the stamp or stamps affixed thereto; and it shall be unlawful for any dealer, knowingly and willfully, to break said stamps, or to knowingly have in his possession such packages upon which said stamps have been broken or otherwise defaced: Provided, That margarine may be packed in any form required and removed from the place of manufacture under such regulations as are now or may hereafter be prescribed for export to foreign countries, or for consumption upon vessels plying between ports of the United States and those of foreign countries, or for the use of the United States Government, without the payment of tax thereon or affixing stamps thereto.

Sec. 501. All margarine shall be packed by the manufacturers thereof in separate sanitary "manufacturers' original packages" of one-fourth, one-half, 1, 2, 3, 5, or 10 pounds each, except as provided in section 400 of this act; and said "manufacturers' original packages" shall be packed in "shipping packages" containing not less than 10 pounds each, upon each of which shall be plainly branded, stamped, or printed the word "margarine" and a label as follows: "Notice.—The manufacturer of the margarine herein contained has complied with all the requirements of the law. Every dealer is cautioned not to break or deface the 'manufacturers' original packages' herein contained or the revenue stamp or stamps thereon." Upon each of "manufacturers' original packages" shall be plainly branded, stamped, or printed the word "margarine," together with a caution notice as follows: "Notice.—Every person is cautioned not to use either this package or the stamp or stamps thereon again, or to remove the contents of this package without destroying the stamp, under the penalty of the law in such cases."

without destroying the stamp, under the penalty of the law in such cases."

Sec. 502. That in lieu of the special taxes or licenses now imposed by law upon manufacturers of, and dealers in, oleomargarine, there shall be, and are hereby, imposed annually special taxes as follows: Manufacturers of margarine shall each pay $600; wholesale dealers in margarine shall pay $60; retail dealers in margarine shall each pay $6.

Sec. 503. Margarine is here declared to be a food product; and, except as modified or repealed by this act, all the provisions of the existing laws relating to this product heretofore designated as oleomargarine shall continue in full force and effect, and all the general provisions of the internal-revenue statutes for the assessment and collection of taxes and licenses, and for seizures, forfeitures, and punishments for violations thereof, are hereby extended and made to apply to this food product, the taxes imposed by this act, and the persons upon whom imposed. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is hereby authorized and required to make all needful rules and regulations to carry this act into effect. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to after, amend, or repeal the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, known as the meat food inspection act, nor the provisions of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended known as the meat food and true act.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. To state briefly what will be accomplished by the amendment proposed by the Senate committee to the House bill, I wish to state that in 1902 a law was passed taxing oleomargarine. Under that law oleomargarine that is colored artificially is taxed 10 cents a pound. Oleomargarine that is not colored, but is sold without the artificial color, is taxed one-fourth of I cent a pound. The law requires that it shall be packed in certain packages, but not identified as oleomargarine particularly in those packages, except in so far as the package denotes that there is colored oleomargarine or white oleomargarine in the package.

The proposal in this bill is to adopt a uniform tax. In lieu of the taxes now imposed by law it proposes to levy a tax of 2 cents a pound on oleomargarine, whether it is colored or un-colored. This change in taxation, so far as my investigation shows, will lead to a reduction in the cost of oleomargarine to the consumer and at the same time increase the revenue derived from the tax.

At the present time the revenue derived from oleomargarine, colored and uncolored, and also the special tax levied on manufacturers of oleomargarine and dealers in oleomargarine, amounts to a little less than $1,500,000 under the present law; but if the law is changed and a uniform tax is levied it is estimated by the Treasury Department that in the next year the revenues will increase to $5,000,000; in other words, that there will be a net increase for the next year of something like three and a half million dollars by reason of this change. That three and a half million dollars by reason of this change. is as far as the Treasury estimate goes; but, in my judgment, the tax will gradually increase until I believe that ultimately the Government can expect a revenue of from seven to ten million dollars growing out of this tax.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President-The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do. Mr. CUMMINS. Is the estimate just given based upon a production for the next year of the same number of pounds as rere produced in the last year?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is based upon the production and withdrawals of oleomargarine tax paid at the two rates during the first six months of the current fiscal year.

That is one purpose of this amendment. Another purpose of the amendment is to eliminate fraud. Probably there never has been on the statute books an internal-revenue law that has been productive of more fraud against the Government than the oleomargarine tax.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue in his 1911 report says:

It is confidently believed that the eleomargarine law is at this time corrupting and debauching more taxpayers and affords the opportunity for greater fraud upon the public than any other statute with which the internal-Revenue Bureau has to deal.

Again, in his report for 1913, he says:

Considerable comment has, in the past, been made in the matter of the production of illicit spirits and the consequent loss to the Government of taxes on that product, and while it is true that the Government sustains quite a loss on this account, it is not to be compared with the loss that may be and has been sustained in the illicit traffic in oleomargarine. In any of the three or four large cities of the country the Government, unless the illicit traffic in the manufacture and sale of eleomargarine is controlled, will lose more taxes from this source than would be lost in the way of taxes on distilled spirits illicitly produced in all the Southern States.

The frauds in the main were not committed by men who were legitimately engaged in the production of eleomargarine, but by men who bought uncolored oleomargarine and colored it and then sold that colored oleomargarine as butter, or by butter manufacturers who purchased oleomargarine, mixed it with their butter, and sold it to the public as butter.

The amendment that the Senate committee presents seeks to eliminate the fraud by having one uniform tax and license rate for the manufacture and the sale of oleomargarine. But more than that, it seeks to eliminate the question of selling oleomargarine as butter as a fraud on the consumer by providing that oleomargarine shall be sold in packages not exceeding 10 pounds in weight and not less than one-quarter of a pound in weight, ranging between those two extremes, in sanitary wrappers, with the Government revenue stamp fastening the wrappers, with the dovernment revenue stamp is accuming the wrapper together, so that to open the wrapper you have to break the stamp, and providing that the package can not be sold after the stamp is broken. In other words, if this amendment is adopted you must hereafter sell oleomargarine in a sealed package with the revenue stamp on it, and if you dare sell it after that stamp is broken you lay yourself liable to the pains and penalties of the law.

More than that, each package must have printed in large letters the fact that it is margarine or oleomargarine. The amendment changes the name. In this country to-day the product is known as oleomargarine. In most foreign countries it is known as margarine. This amendment seeks to change the name to margarine to facilitate our foreign trade in the product and make the name conform to that used in foreign countries. That is only a change of name. These original packages must be marked distinctively as margarine.

You may say that a package may be broken and that after it is broken the oleomargarine may be taken out and sold to the consumer as butter. That is true; a man may violate the law in that respect; but that is also true in reference to a box of cigars, a package of cigarettes, or practically any other commodity on which is placed an internal-revenue stamp. You can open your box of cigars, take out the tax-paid cigars, put in place of them cigars that are not tax paid, and violate the law if you want to; but this law will protect the purchaser from frauds to an extent so much greater than the present law that the two cases are not comparable.

Most of the frauds that have grown under the present law come up in a manner I will describe, and some of them have gone to the extent of millions of dollars. In one case a butter or creamery company was penalized by the Government of the United States to the extent of a million and a half dollars for the fraud it committed in coloring eleomargarine to sell as

Now, how did they do it? Under the law they can manufacture white oleomargarine for a quarter of a cent a pound and colored oleomargarine for 10 cents a pound. There is a license that must be taken out by a wholesale dealer in colored oleo-margarine and a different license by one who sells white or uncolored oleomargarine. The dealer takes out both licenses and then buys a tub of colored oleomargarine and, it may be, and then buys a the of colored colored again. He uses the elec-margarine out of the colored tub and sells it to his customers either as colored eleomargarine or as butter. When it gives out, coming to the bottom of the tub, he carries it to the back part of the store where his tubs of white oleomargarine are and transfers the oleomargarine from the tub of white oleomargarine into the tub that is labeled colored oleomargarine, and then he mixes about 10 or 15 cents' worth of coloring matter in the tub, takes a paddle, stirs it around a while, and he has colored oleomargarine. He takes it back and puts it on his counter and continues to sell it. The Treasury Department has found that it has been almost impossible to catch up with this class of fraud.

Now, as to the coloring matter: There is nothing deleterious in the coloring matter. The same coloring matter is used to color eleomargarine that is used to color butter. body knows, creamery butter in June ought to be a bright yellow color, because the cows are out on pasture eating green grass, which produces that color. When the cows are stabled in the wintertime butter is white or nearly white, and as public tastes or public desires require a colored butter the dairyman mixes a vegetable coloring matter which costs a few cents with his tub of butter and hands on to the consumer the same colored butter in December that he had in June.

The Department of Agriculture have investigated the matter. They have stated that the coloring matter that is used is a vegetable coloring matter, not deleterious to health and not harmful. Now, the same coloring matter that they color oleomargarine with is the coloring matter that they color butter with. So there is nothing deleterious to health in the proposition.

But there is another way that they commit these frauds, or have committed them in the past; that is, by some of the great creameries of the country, men who are engaged in the business of selling creamery or dairy butter, buying white oleomargarine and coloring it, sometimes mixing it with their butter and sometimes not, and passing it on to the public as butter, defrauding the public and defrauding the Government of its tax. That has been going on for many years.

The Senate committee in reporting this amendment is attempting to do two very meritorious things. One is to treble the amount of revenue that will be raised from this source and at the same time cheapen the cost of colored oleomargarine to the consumer, because when the consumer buys honest colored oleomargarine he pays the tax to the Government; when he buys dishonest colored oleomargarine he pays the tax to the thief; the consumer does not get the benefit of it in any direction, but this amendment decreases the tax on colored from 10 to 2 cents, effecting that much saving to the consumer. The committee proposes to eliminate that fraud and to increase over threefold the amount of revenue that the Government of the United States will derive from this article, and at the same time to a very large extent prevent men who are selling oleomargarine from committing a fraud on the public by selling it That is the purpose of this amendment.

There is nothing new in this suggestion. I introduced the amendment, and the committee adopted it; but I do not claim credit for working out the amendment. The amendment has been suggested by the Treasury Department, by every Commissioner of Internal Revenue, for the last decade without exception, and it has been recommended by every Secretary of the Treasury in his annual report for the last decade. It is true the present Secretary of the Treasury has recently changed his mind about it, but his commissioner has not. I will read and comment on his letter in reference to this bill in a few moments. This amendment has been prepared along the line that has been recommended by Republican Commissioners of Internal Revenue and by Democratic Commissioners of Internal Revenue for more than 10 years for the purpose of eliminating fraud and increasing the revenue.

I wish to call attention to some of the recommendations on this question by the Secretary of the Treasury. I send to the desk and ask the Secretary to read from the report of the Secretary of the Treasury for 1916 on this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, 1916.

(Page 107.)

Oleomargarine: A majority of the cases reported during 1916 involved illicit manufacturers, who purchased the white product, added artificial coloration thereto, and afterwards disposed of it in many instances as creamery butter, in evasion of the stamp tax of 10 cents per penud.

* * It is evident that as long as the double rate of taxation remains in force frauds upon the revenues and the public will continue, despite the efforts made to suppress them. A thorough and careful revision of this law to make it in fact a revenue measure and at the same time provide the strongest possible remedies for protection against fraud is again recommended for your consideration.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask the Secretary to read the report of the Secretary of the Treasury for 1915 on this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as

The Secretary read as follows:

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, 1915.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, 1915.

(Page 139.)

Oleomargarine: One case was discovered during the current year where the amount out of which the Government had been defrauded reached a total of $1,503,203.30, which sum represented the tax on the product manufactured for a period of six years that these frauds had continued undetected, all of the product in this case having been placed on the market as butter without payment of any tax. * * * Notwithstanding these results, growing out of the thorough and sweeping investigations and vigorous efforts to enforce the law, it only emphasizes the incentive to fraud under the present cleomargarine statutes and the need of amendatory legislation to correct these faults, and at the same time afford adequate protection to the revenues and to the public. It is again recommended that the present law be amended by repealing those provisions imposing a double rate of tax on the product and special taxes on dealers, and substituting therefor a flat rate per pound and single rates of special taxes upon wholesale and retail dealers, with provision for individual or original packages of certain sizes fixed by the law, each of which shall bear the tax-paid stamps, marks, and brands so as to clearly identify the character of the product to the purchaser.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It will appear from the reading of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury last year that the amendment that is reported by the committee conforms in every detail to the suggestions made by the Secretary of the Treasury and his recommendations in reference to the matter.

I also have here excerpts from the report of the Commissioners of Internal Revenue for 1909, 1912, and 1913, and of the Secretary of the Treasury for 1911, in accord with what has already been read from the desk. I will not take up the time of the Senate in asking that they be read, but will send them to the desk and ask unanimous consent that they may be inserted at this point as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, 1911.

(Page 453.)

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, 1911.

(Page 453.)

Oleomargarine: Continued efforts, to enforce this law serve but to disclose the situation more clearly. The present law imposes two rates of taxation—one forty times as great as the other, " " the rate being determined by whether or not the product is artificially colored. " " Under the law the oleomargarine is permitted to be packed by the manufacturers and sold in large firkins or tubs containing about 60 pounds, with a stamp on the outside showing proper tax payment. The retail dealer would buy a small number of tubs of artificially colored oleomargarine, tax paid, at 10 cents a pound. He would then proceed to buy large numbers of tubs tax paid at one-fourth cent a pound. He would pay the special tax as a dealer in colored oleomargarine. The stamp on the tub does not have to be destroyed until the tub is empty, and the courts have held that tub is not empty as long as any merchantable oleomargarine remains therein. The retail dealer, therefore, would sell from his tubs of the colored product, and in general the product would be sold as butter, and when a certain number of tubs would be nearly empty the dealer would remove them, together with a corresponding number of tubs tax paid at the lower rate, to some place in his private residence or other place securely guarded, and there simply mix a little coloring (p. 454) matter in the white goods, refull the tubs in which had been colored oleomargarine, destroy the stamps on the tubs emptied of their white contents, take the refilled tubs back to his place of business, and continue selling therefrom. " " Great difficulty has been experienced in securing convictions even where the facts of manipulation have been undisputed. " " By the simple process above enumerated the retail dealer with equipment of the very simplest kind and with the minimum of labor and trifling expense and practical immunity from detection " " can add 93 cents to every pound thus manipulated, and by furnishing this to his customers

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, 1909.

(Page 85.)

(Page 85.)

Oleomargarine: There was actually found on the market approximately 1,250,000 pounds of eleomargarine withdrawn from manufactories and tax paid at one-fourth cent per pound, which was discovered to have been illicitly artificially colored and therefore taxable at 10 cents per pound * * * (p. 86). All available members of the field force especially qualified for the work were detailed for duty in connection with the detection and punishment of violations of the eleomargarine law. * * * Notwithstanding this activity it has been found that the number of violations is steadily increasing. Several material defects in the law have been brought out by various court decisions. These defects, together with the incentive to fraud on account of the difference in the rates of stamp and special taxes imposed for the manufacture and sale of the colored and uncolored product and the ease with which illicitly colored goods can be produced and disposed of, render remedial legislation imperative.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, 1912.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, 1912.

(Page 18.)

Oleomargarine: Attention has been called heretofore to the necessity of remedial legislation to strengthen the administrative features of this law; * * and it is hoped that at this session Congress will make the necessary revision of these laws.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, 1913.

(Page 15.)

(Page 15.)

Oleomargarine: The present oleomargarine law is not satisfactory, either from an administrative or revenue standpoint, and should be so amended as to remedy it in both respects (p. 16). A law imposing a flat tax of a nominal rate without any differentiation based upon coloration, with provision for individual stamped or original packages of certain sizes adequately marked and branded, and safeguarded by the proper penalties, would, in my opinion, be easier of enforcement and yield greater revenues than the present law and with less expense to the Government.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now, Mr. President, we come down to the present Secretary of the Treasury and the recommenda-tions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. As I stated awhile ago, the uniform recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for more than a decade has been in favor of this law down to February 8, 1917. When this amendment was introduced it was referred by the committee to the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement. He changed his mind on this subject, and I would not be candid with the Senate after reading the statement the Secretary of the Treasury has made heretofore in reference to this matter if I did not present to the Senate at this time his last letter on the subject. I leave it to the judgment of those who hear the letters read to determine whether the long line of recommendation that has been made in the past was correct or the reversal of the last two or three days is correct. Here is his last letter:

FEBRUARY 8, 1917.

It is addressed to Hon. F. M. SIMMONS, United States Senate-

My Dear Senator: I have your request of the 3d instant for a report on the amendment to H. R. 20573—

The pending bill-changing the rate of tax on oleomargarine. I send you herewith a memorandum from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who for several years has recommended the amendment of the oleomargarine law along these lines. In transmitting this report, however, I wish to point out very clearly that I am not in accord with the views of the commissioner on this subject.

While the proposed amendment probably would be easier of administration than the present act, I feel quite confident that a material reduction of this character in the tax on artificially colored oleomargarine may offer an opportunity for and be an incentive to large frauds on the part of unscrupulous dealers, who could remove the article from the original packages and sell it as butter.

Of course, in last year's report the Secretary advised the Congress that the only way to prevent these frauds was to seal up the original packages with a Government stamp on them.

In addition to this, the lower tax would make it very easy for hotel ad boarding-house keepers to serve artificially colored oleomargarine

There is nothing to keep them from doing it now. They can go out in a dark room, take a paddle and 10 cents worth of coloring material and mix it in, as many of them do.

Consequently, it seems certain to me that the consuming public will be more likely to be imposed upon with artificially colored oleomargarine as genuine butter, under this proposed new form of taxation, than under the present law. There can be no objection to the sale of oleomargarine as such, but I think that every possible precaution should be taken to prevent the defrauding of the public through its sale, or use, under the guise of butter. I am of the opinion that the present law, imposing a high tax on artificially colored oleomargarine, thereby discouraging the coloration of the product as far as possible, is preferable to the suggested amendment.

Faithfully, yours,

Mr. Preseident, I held in my head a letter which I will ask to.

Mr. President, I hold in my hand a letter which I will ask to have printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so

The letter referred to is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 4, 1916.

Hon. CLAUDE KITCHIN,
Chairman Committee on Ways and Means,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Chairman Committee on Ways and Means,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Kitchin: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 28th ultimo requesting certain further information concerning the operations of the present oleomargarine law and the frauds referred to in my annual report and that of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the fiscal year 1915, and additional data relative to ingredients used in the manufacture of this product.

Your questions are answered seriatum, as follows:

1. All the product of the butter manufacturer referred to on page 139 of my report for 1915, who was discovered to have defrauded the Government out of $1,503,203,30 in taxes, was placed on the market as butter without the payment of any tax, except that portion of the product seized by the Government upon the discovery of these frauds. This quantity amounted to approximately 250,000 pounds, which was subsequently tax paid at 10 cents per pound as colored oleomargarine, branded, etc., before being allowed to be placed on the market. It is such frauds as these, and those consisting of the incorporation of abnormal quantities of water or foreign substances like potato starch, flour, etc., which I had in mind as the basis for the opinion that Federal inspection of butter factories would prevent frauds and adulteration of this food product.

2. The illicit coloration of white oleomargarine and sale of the product in fraud of the revenues and as butter is principally engaged in by pretended dealers in butter who have qualified by payment of special tax as dealers in oleomargarine. It has been found that usually these persons do handle butter as well as oleomargarine, and frequently they are engaged in a general butter and poultry business.

A large number of these moonshiners use as a part of their rade name terms calculated to induce the belief that they are butter dealers, the words "Eigin," "Creamery," "Butter," and "Dairy" being most frequently used for this purpose.

There is no method of approxi

3. It is the opinion of those charged with the enforcement of the oleomargarine law that any law which establishes a color standard or prohibits the manufacture of this product of any shade of yellow would be difficult of enforcement, and instead of lessening the frauds would tend to increase them.

This opinion is substantially corroborated by the fact that in practically all cases of illicit coloration or moonshining, it has been found that the pure-white product of certain manufacturers is that principally used in such traffic.

4. In the enforcement of the adulterated-butter law it has been disclosed that the principal forms of adulteration consist of the incorporation of abnormal moisture, ranging anywhere from 15 to 45 per cent, the addition of foreign substances, such as potato starch, and of foreign fats. Where foreign fats are added to butter the product is removed from the classification of adulterated butter to that of oleomargarine.

5. The total number of pounds of milk and cream used in oleomargarine, as shown in my letter of January 25, represents the entire quantity of these two materials used in churning the oleomargarine and only a small percentage of each is actually incorporated in the product.

6. The total number of pounds of salt included in these tables represents the quantity used in the manufacture of oleomargarine, and not that actually incorporated in the product, there being a considerable loss of materials, including salt, in the process of manufacture, as will be observed by noting the difference between the totals of all ingredients used and the amount of finished oleomargarine of the difference.

The percentages of salt and moisture in eleomargarine of the different grades of the several manufacturers as determined by the official chemist of the Internal-Revenue Bureau vary according to grade and manufacturer, and upon test of samples was found as follows:

Oleomargarine.

Per cent	Per cent	Per cent	Per cent
moisture.	salt.	moisture.	salt.
12. 20	2.60	10. 22	4. 07
11. 86	2.34	9. 32	4. 07
11. 14	2.89	9. 37	1. 93
9. 01	2.59	9. 71	3. 03
9. 15	1.99	11. 04	3. 92
8. 86	2.08	11. 52	3. 24
8. 65	1.47	8. 50	2. 78
10. 47	3.75	14. 88	2. 23

Average per cent moisture, 10.36; average per cent salt, 2.81

These constituents also vary in butter according to the manufacturer, the grade, the time of year when produced. Tests of samples by the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, during 1911 showed an average of 13.90 per cent moisture, 2.51 per cent sait, which figures were practically corroborated by analyses of the internal-revenue chemist of 261 samples from different States.

Analyses of samples of butter suspected of containing 16 per cent or more of moisture sent in by field officers showed the following results:

Butter.

Per cent	Per cent	Per cent
moisture.	salt.	moisture.
17.91	5. 59	17.02	3.41
17.42	4. 50	14.79	2.01
18.96	8. 48	13.85	0.78
18.31	6. 25	13.51	1.13
19.93	6. 33	14.95	0.00
16.72	3. 48	13.23	1.50

Average per cent moisture, 16.32; average per cent salt, 3.62,

Average per cent moisture, 16.32; average per cent salt, 3.62.

7. I can not state definitely the countries from which we import the sesame, soya bean, and coconut oils used in oleomargarine, but it is undoubtedly true that none of these are produced in this country, except possibly a very small quantity which is expressed from imported materials.

Sesame seed, from which the oil of this name is derived, are grown in East India, Java, Slam, Tonkin China, Japan, and countries bordering on the Mediterranean. The cultivation of sesame has been introduced in the Southern States of this country and this industry is reported to be on the increase.

You may possibly obtain some information concerning this industry from the Department of Agriculture.

8. Soya bean is the seed of a plant similar to the pea, extensively grown in China, Korea, Japan, Formosa, and Indo China, and the oil used in oleomargarine is either obtained from these countries or expressed from the imported seeds. I understand that soya bean is grown to some extent in the United States, but principally as a forage crop.

crop.

Coconut oil is obtained from copra, the dry white meat of the coconut, grown in the tropical coast lines of all countries, but the principal sources of this product for commercial purposes is the southern Pacific islands, South America, and Africa.

There are two kinds of mustard-seed oil, one from black mustard and the other from the white mustard. The edible mustard-seed oil is obtained from the black mustard and is a by-product, the principal oil from these seeds being the volatile oil of mustard used for pharmaccutical purposes. The oil from white mustard is not used for edible purposes, but only for lubricating and illuminating purposes. The black mustard is grown in middle and southern Europe, and so far as I am aware is not raised in the United States to any extent for commercial uses.

The imported peanut oil used by oleomargarine manufacturers comes from Holland, France, and Germany.

I am inclosing herewith for your further information tabulated statements of ingredients used in each class of oleomargarine and the percentages thereof, with the combined totals and percentages of the two classes referred to in my letter of January 25.

Respectfully,

W. G. McAddoo, Secretary.

W. G. McAdoo, Secretary,

Statement showing the quantity of the various materials entering into the manufacture of olcomargarine free from artificial coloration, taxed at the rate of one-quarter cent per pound, and artificially colored olcomargarine, taxed at 10 cents per pound, also total of both classes, during the fiscal year 1915, together with the percentages of the various materials used.

Material.	Free from artificial coloration, taxed at 1 cent per pound.		Artificially colored, taxed at 10 cents per pound.		Total of both classes.
	Pounds.	Per cent.	Pounds.	Per cent.	Pounds.	Per cent
Oleo oil. Neutral lard. Cottonseed oil. Salt. Milk. Peannt oil. Butter. Cream. Sesame oil. Soya-bean oil. Mustard-seed oil. Oleo stearine. Coconut oil. Edible tallow. Glucose. Sirup. Powdered milk. Color. Mutton oil. Vanilla. Beef stock. Marrow oil.	53, 265, 875 23, 497, 351 24, 473, 742 10, 911, 920 38, 759, 147 2, 781, 010 4, 692, 519 2, 728, 349 64, 697, 368, 269 519, 943 1, 643, 049 292, 564 279, 830 13, 231 2, 770 2, 780 2, 780 11, 863	32.48 14.3 14.68 6.64 24.8 1.63 2.8 1.7 04 22 31 1 1.18 .17 .08 .0001 .0001 .0001 .0001 .0002	2,348,299 1,407,026 2,082,348 637,600 1,806,089 69,360 1,883 73,531 295 121,645 7,673 35,420 33,265 39,090 16,960	27. 29 16. 1 24. 3 7. 33 20. 7 .79 .21 .84 .0033 1. 4 .088 .4 .4006 .19	55, 615, 174 24, 904, 377 26, 556, 909 11, 549, 520 11, 549, 520 40, 565, 236 2, 820, 370 4, 694, 402 2, 801, 889 64, 697 368, 564 519, 943 31, 764, 694 300, 237 315, 250 33, 285 52, 321 16, 960 2, 770 2, 770 2, 770 2, 770 5, 900 11, 863	32 14.3 15.3 6.67 23.4 1.6 2.71 1.62 .04 .21 .31 1.01 .17 .17 .17 .013 .000 .001 .0001 .0001 .002
Total	164, 311, 728	100.9684	8,681,563	100. 2731	172, 993, 291	99. 5712

Statement showing the quantity of the various materials entering into the manufacture of olcomargarine free from artificial coloration, taxed at the rate of one-fourth cent per pound, and artificially colored cloomargarine, taxed at 10 cents per pound, also total of both classes, during the fiscal year 1914, together with the percentages of the various materials used.

Materia_:	Free from coloration 2 cent per	n, taxed at		ly colored, at 10 cents and.	Total of both classes.
	Pounds.	Per cent.	Pounds.	Per cent.	Pounds.	Per cent.
Oleo oil.  Neutral lard. Cottonseed oil. Salt. Milk. Pennut oil. Butter. Cream. Sesame oil. Soya-bean oil. Mustard-seed oil. Oleo stearine Coconut oil. Edible tallow. Glucose. Sugar. Sirup. Corn oil. Powdered milk. Color	5,815	34. 234 13. 37 13. 25 6. 72 22. 02 2. 4 3. 7 1. 8 45 43 28 9 16 .16 .003 .0004 .0004	2, 151, 577 1, 253, 291 1, 362, 495 567, 389 1, 495, 784 106, 581 4, 198 85, 489 243 166, 777 15, 329 5, 270 119, 620	29, 29 17.1 18.59 7.7 20, 4 1.4 .05 1.1 .003 .002 1.4 2.7 .07 1.6	57, 549, 130 23, 287, 935 23, 206, 341 11, 652, 950 37, 779, 378 4, 214, 149 6, 122, 932 3, 339, 227 746, 303 715, 318 493, 312 1, 667, 544 322, 138 271, 545 119, 620 79, 800 5, 815 1, 940 70 13, 444	. 22
Total	164, 348, 454	99, 91744	7,287,797	99. 090	171, 636, 251	99. 2726

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 26, 1916.

Washington, January 25, 1916.

Hon. CLAUDE KITCHIN,
Chalman Committee on Ways and Means,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Kitchin: I have received your letter of the 18th instant requesting statistics concerning the production and withdrawal of elemargarine during the fiscal years 1914-15 and of the ingredients used in the manufacture of this product, and if proper an expression of my views on the question as to whether reasonable Federal inspection of butter factories would lessen the frauds upon the revenues referred to in my report and that of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

Complying with your request, there is embodied herein a table giving the figures desired by you:

	Pounds, 1914.	Pounds, 1915.
Artifically colored product Notartifically colored product Tax paid, at 10 cents, domestic use Tax paid, at 10 cents, for domestic use Colored product exported free of tax. Uncolored product exported free of tax, use United States. Uncolored product withdrawn free of tax, use United States States	6, 384, 222 137, 637, 057, 3, 831, 706 137, 747, 982 2, 121, 162 22, 540 469, 340 110, 020	7,595,141 138,214,907 3,753,012 187,693,610 3,081,356 31,172 734,030

Tax manufication	mand .	200	olcomargarine.
Indreaments	ALSSEDEL Y	tot.	owennaraavane.

	The second second second second	The second second second
Oleo oll	57, 549, 130	55, 615, 174
Neutraliard
Neutraliaru	23, 287, 035	24,904,377
Cottonseed oil	23, 206, 341	26, 556, 090
Salt	11, 652, 050	11,549,520
Arm.
Milk	37, 779, 378	40, 585, 236
Peanut oil	4, 214, 149	2,850,370
Butter	6, 122, 932	4,694,402
2
Cream	3,359,227	2,801,880
Sesame oil	746, 303	64,697
Soya-bean oil	715,318	368, 564
Doya-Dean Oliver	110,010
Mustard-seed oil	493, 312	519,943
Oleo stearine	1,697,544	1,764,694
Coconut oil.	322,138	300, 237
Coconia on
Edible tallow	271,545	315, 250
Glucose	119,620	33, 265
Sugar	79,860	00,000
		*********
Sirup	5,815	52,321
Corn oil	1,040
		30 000
	13, 444	16,960
Powdered milk	70	327
Mutton oil.		2,707
Vanilla
Beefstock		5,090
Marrowoil	NAME OF TAXABLE PARTY.	11,863
		11,000
	THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF THE	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR

Note.—The above table represents the total of all ingredients used in the production of both the colored and the uncolored oleomargarine, but every manufacturer did not use each ingredient specified, as the formulas of ingredients and the percentages thereof vary with each particular manufacturer and are changed by them from time to time.

Manufacturers do not differentiate in their monthly reports between imported and domestic peanut oil and it is impossible to state what percentage of this oil was of domestic production, but it may be stated that all of the sesame, soya bean, and coconut oils reported used are of imported material.

There is no method of ascertaining the amount of the respective ingredients enumerated used in moonshine oleomargarine, for the reason that this illicit traffic consists principally in the addition of artificial coloration to the white or uncolored oleomargarine produced and tax paid at one-fourth cent by duly qualified manufacturers after receipt of the goods by the dealers and others engaged in such practice.

It would be impossible without great labor to give any figures showing shipments of oleomargarine of the two classes into the various States, and even should such figures be compiled they would not be accurate for the reason that goods shipped by manufacturers to wholesale dealers in one State may be subsequently reshipped by such dealers to other jobbers and retail dealers in other States, who in turn redistribute same over several States.

There was no oleomargarine imported into this country during the past two years.

It is my opinion that effective Federal inspection of butter factories

There was no elemargarine imported into this country during the past two years.

It is my opinion that effective Federal inspection of butter factories would prevent the incorporation of abnormal moisture, foreign substances, and foreign fats it this food product, and would to this extent prevent frauds upon the revenues, which the investigations and discoveries of the past three years have shown to exist to a certain extent in this country, and such inspection would also afford a protection to the public against any adulterated, impure, or unwholescme tion to the public against any additional to the product.

It would be well for Congress to establish a standard for butter based upon the fat content for the various classes of butter commercially known in this country.

I am having prepared a detailed tabulated statement showing the totals of the respective ingredients used in each of the two classes of oleomargarine and the percentages of such ingredients to the whole quantity of materials utilized in this industry, and will furnish this as soon as completed, if you so desire.

Sincerely,

WM. G. McAdoo, Secretary.

Senate in reading the entire letter at this time; it will appear in the RECORD. The letter is dated February 4, 1916, addressed to the Hon. CLAUDE KITCHIN, chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., and it is written by Hon. W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury. In this letter to Mr. Kitchin on this question, acknowledging the receipt of the letter from him in reference to this oleomargarine question and answering it, makes this statement, among other things:

The illicit coloration of white oleomargarine and also of the product in fraud of the revenues and as butter is principally engaged in by pretended dealers in butter who have qualified by payment of special tax as dealers in oleomargarine. It has been found that usually these persons do handle butter as well as oleomargarine, and frequently they are engaged in a general butter and poultry business.

Sustaining what I said awhile ago, that the frauds which have been committed in this respect have been largely committed by the so-called butter men and not by men legitimately engaged in the manufacture of oleomargarine. But the Secretary of the Treasury a little farther down in the letter goes on

It is the opinion of those charged with the enforcement of the elec-margarine laws that any law which establishes a color standard or prohibits the manufacture of this product of any shade of yellow would be difficult of enforcement, and instead of lessening the frauds would tend to increase them.

This opinion is substantially corroborated by the fact that in prac-tically all cases of illicit coloration or moonshining it has been found that the pure white product of certain manufacturers is that principally used in such traffic.

In other words, in his letter to Mr. KITCHIN, the Secretary of the Treasury states the way to eliminate these frauds is to have a single standard of color for taxation, not a double standard of taxation based upon color.

Mr. VARDAMAN. What is the date of that letter?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. This letter is dated February 4, 1916. I will have the entire letter printed in the RECORD.

Mr. VARDAMAN. What is the date of the other letter? Mr. UNDERWOOD. February 8, 1917. Mr. President, in submitting the letter of February 8, 1917, the Secretary transmitted the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on this subject, which I desire to have read at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 7, 1917.

(Memorandum on amendment proposed by Mr. Underwood to the bill H. R. 20573.)

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: In compliance with your request I have the honor to submit herewith report upon an "amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. Undrewood to the bill (H. R. 20573) to provide increased revenue to defray the expenses of the increased appropriations for the Army and Navy and the extensions of fortifications, and for other purposes," which was referred to you by the Committee on Finance, United States Senate, for your recommendation thereon.

This is intended to amend the present statutes relating to oleomargarine by changing the name to "margarine" and to impose a flat rate of tax of 2 cents per pound upon all of this product in lieu of the taxes at the rate of 10 cents per pound on oleomargarine having artificial coloration that causes it to look like butter of a shade of yellow, and one-fourth of 1 cent per pound on the product free from artificial coloration, and special taxes at the rate of $60 and $6 per annum upon wholesale and retail dealers, respectively, instead of special taxes at the rate of $480 and $200 per annum, and $48 and $6 per annum upon wholesale and retail dealers in the artificially colored and the uncolored product, respectively, now imposed by the law, and providing for the packing of margarine in separate sanitary packages of the sizes specified therein, properly marked and branded, and with the tax-paid stamps so affixed as to seal the packages to identify the product to the purchaser, such packages to be packed in shipping packages which are also marked and branded with the true name of the product therein contained.

Should this amendment be enacted into law, it would remove the tax-paid stamps so affixed as to seal the packages to identify the product to the purchaser, such packages to be packed in shipping packages which are also marked and branded with the true name of the product therein contained.

Should this amendment be enacted into law, it would remove the greatest incentives to fraud and violations of the present law and the obstacles to its effective enforcement, and would also increase the revenues and afford greater protection to the public against deception and fraud, with a decrease in the cost of administration.

It is my opinion and that of all officers of this bureau having experience in the enforcement of the present law that the greatest incentive to fraud lies in the dual rate of fax imposed upon oleomargarine on the basis of a color distinction; that of 10 cents per pound on the colored being forty times greater than the tax of one-fourth cent per pound on the uncolored product.

A large portion of the violations of this law which have been discovered in the past four years referred to in my annual reports consisted of the illicit coloration of white oleomargarine, taxed at one-fourth cent, by dealers who desired to get a yellow-colored product without the payment of the additional cost of 93 cents per pound, which would have been required had the goods been colored by the original manufacturer and tax paid at the rate of 10 cents.

With practically no expense and by the simple process of adding artificial coloring matter to a 60-pound tub of uncolored oleomargarine, the total tax on which amounts to only 15 cents, the dealers converted into a product in greater demand and at the same time saved $5.85 on each tub, even where it was sold at retail as oleomargarine at the price which would have been charged by the manufacturer for the colored goods tax paid at 10 cents per pound.

In a large number of cases of dealers discovered to have illicitly colored the white oleomargarine, the goods were afterwards sold as colored oleomargarine, which would indicate that the p to the public.

Based upon the production and withdrawals of oleomargarine tax paid at the two rates during the first six months of the current fiscal year, it is estimated that under this amendment the collections, including special taxes of manufacturers and dealers, would amount to approximately $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, as against $1,500,000 which it is estimated will be collected under the present law, or an increase of $3,500,000 in the total collections from this source.

This amendment embodies the essentials of the made by me and remodies the essentials of the collections from the production of the collection of the collections from the production of the collection of the collectio this source.

This amendment embodies the essentials of the recommendations made by me and my predecessors for changes in the present elemangarine law in respect to a flat rate of tax and the manner of packing, marking, branding, and stamping the product.

In view of these facts and after careful consideration of the language of the proposed amendment, it is my opinion that its adoption and passage would bring about the most important changes needed in the present law, and I would therefore recommend such action.

Respectfully,

W. A. OSBORN.

W. A. OSBORN, Commissioner Internal Revenue.

Hon. WILLIAM G. McADOO, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, this letter of Commissioner Osborn makes the case clear and complete. Although every Commissioner of Internal Revenue for a number of years has made this recommendation, no commissioner since this law was first placed on the statute books has been so successful in running down fraud and in penalizing the fraudulent dealer in oleomargarine as has the present commissioner who signs that letter. Knowing the facts, knowing the frauds that have been committed on the Government and the frauds that have been committed on the people, he recommends to his chief what his chief always recommended up to a few hours ago.

Strange to say, we find this anomaly: The men who are actually engaged in manufacturing oleomargarine, who are in the business, are not objecting to paying this honest tax of 2 cents on what oleomargarine they make; they are not objecting to putting it into a package and stamping it "margarine," so that the public may know what it is; they are not objecting that it must be sold in the original package, so that the consumer of oleomargarine may know what he is buying as an honest product. No. Then where does the opposition to this provision come from? It is pretended that it comes from the dairy interests, but it does not. It comes from a Creamery Trust, who keeps its paid agents around the halls of this Capitol to secure legislation in their interest.

Where did the majority of the frauds come from which were perpetrated under this double system of taxation? A large portion of them came from men who are in the creamery busi-The men who committed the frauds under the old law want the old law maintained on the statute books. They say they do not want a fraud committed on the American people by having oleomargarine sold to them as butter, and yet they are willing to keep a law on the statute books that allows the sale of oleomargarine with a tax of a quarter of a cent a pound, if it is white, knowing that any man can take it into his back office and with 10 or 15 cents' worth of vegetable coloring matter make a great quantity of it colored oleomargarine, and palm it off on the public for either colored oleomargarine or for butter.

They say that they are trying to protect the honest dairy interests by the maintenance of this law. No honest man can look the proposition in the face without questioning the honesty of those who make it. Men who have already perpetrated these frauds under this law are begging to keep the law on the statute books under which they have been able to perpetrate frauds in the past.

Mr. President-Mr. LANE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. UNDERWOOD, I do.

Mr. LANE. If the Senator will permit me, I wish to say that I think there is a third class that have no interest in the dairy business, nor yet in the manufacture of oleomargarine, who object to the use of oleomargarine as an equivalent to The Senator no doubt has studied that very carefully. Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not objecting to that class. That is the class that I want to speak for.

Mr. LANE. Then I would ask the Senator— Mr. UNDERWOOD. But I want to lay this predicate first.

Mr. LANE. But the predicate is based on a false foundation, Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, and it will lead him nowhere, unless he does get on a firm foundation and founds his predicate upon it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, as to the predicate I am laying. the Senator from Oregon may not be far-sighted enough or have his eyes open enough, or he may not have been in the Hall long enough to have heard the papers that I have had read from the desk; but Secretary of the Treasury after Secretary has proclaimed that these frauds have been committed against the Government, and they have named the perpetrators of the frauds in the documents I have had read.

Mr. LANE. That was not the point that I was making or that I was trying to make. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator, but I merely wish to briefly say for his information-and he can check it up, if he will-that butter and oleomargarine are two entirely different substances. Some of the ingredients in oleomargarine you can use to grease your boots with, but it is not so digestible nor has it the nutritive value that butter The one is an oily substance and the other is largely an acid substance, which makes the finest boot grease in the world and is about the poorest food. That is the point I am trying to make, and I shall elaborate it when I get a chance.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am sure that my friend from Oregon is basing his opposition to this bill-

Mr. LANE. I do not know as yet whether or not I am opposed to it. I may vote for it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But the statement he makes is the basis of the opposition of the men who have opposed this legislation for last 15 years in ignorance of the facts in the case.

Mr. LANE. I will take that up with the Senator later.
Mr. UNDERWOOD. Let me send some documents on that proposition to the desk. I should like to enlighten the Senator from Oregon on this subject. I suppose that we can in the main rely on the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture in reference to pure-food products and their use. I send to the desk Agriculture for 1912 on this question, and ask that it be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

[From the annual report of the Department of Agriculture, 1912.]

[From the annual report of the Department of Agriculture, 1912.] Even without inspection many creameries maintain a good standard of sanitation and produce high-grade, wholesome butter, but this can not be said of creameries in general. Cream is frequently shipped great distances to creameries to be made into butter and is often received in such a flithy and putrid state as to be thoroughly unfit to enter into the composition of a food product. Investigations have shown that 61 per cent out of 1.554 lots of cream received at creameries and buying stations was of third grade—that is, dirty, decomposed, or very sour. * * * As disease-producing germs are known to survive for long periods in butter, and as butter is eaten in the raw state, this product when made under such conditions as prevail in the majority of creameries can not be said to be wholesome and free from danger to human health. * * *

Mr. LANE. In respect to that statement, I quite agree with it. I do not think either one of them are proper food for that matter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am leading up to what I desire to say. I am not through yet, if the Senator will allow me, and I am sure I can enlighten him greatly on the food value of these products. I will ask the Secretary to finish the reading.

The Secretary read as follows:

The Secretary read as follows:

In other words, millions of gallons of cream that has been allowed to stand in the barn, in the cellar, or in the woodshed until it is sour or decomposed is sent to the creamery and without even being pasteurized is made into butter. * * * Aside from the danger of pathogenic infection, consumers should not be expected to eat products from an insanitary place and made from material that is unclean and decomposed (p. 314).

It seems an anomaly that oleomargarine should be prepared under Government inspection, thus protecting the consumer against unwholesomeness * * while no such benefits are afforded in the case of butter. From the standpoint of the consumer there is just as much need for inspection of one as of the other. * * * Each is a wholesome and legitimate article of food when properly prepared and sold for exactly what it is (p. 316).

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wish also to call the attention of the

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wish also to call the attention of the Senate to the following statement in reference to the methods of Government inspection of oleomargarine to protect the consumer, which is taken from the publication entitled "Committee on Agriculture, United States House of Representatives, 1912, Information Regarding Oleomargarine, Showing Activities of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture," etc.

Oleomargarine is a meat food product and is therefore subject to the provisions of the meat-inspection amendment. Under this statute all meats and meat food products prepared for sale in interstate and foreign commerce are inspected by inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Industry. This inspection begins with live cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, and is followed by post-mortem inspection at the time of slaughter, and by inspection of the ingredients of meat food products derived from carcasses of the four animals in every stage of preparation of the finished products for shipment. Whenever oleomargarine or animal fats intended for use in its manufacture are found on inspection to be unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food they are condemned and destroyed. When oleomargarine is found on inspection, "U. S. inspected and passed," is placed thereon. The shipment of oleomargarine in interstate and fit for food the mark of inspection, "U. S. inspected and passed," is placed thereon. The shipment of oleomargarine in interstate and foreign commerce which has not been marked "Inspected and passed" is prohibited. * The entry into an establishment where inspection is maintained is forbidden of any oleomargarine and other meat food preducts which have been processed except under Government supervision. * The Bureau of Animal Industry decides what coloring matters may be used in coloring oleomargarine and also examines trade labels used in connection therewith. No harmful colors are allowed in oleomargarine, and no trade labels are permitted which contain statements conveying false indications of origin or quality (p. 5).

And to the following which is taken from the "Hearings on

And to the following which is taken from the "Hearings on bills relating to oleomargarine, 1910":

Dr. Charles A. Crampton, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, testifies that oleomargarine is a wholesome food product, and is on a par with butter in point of healthfulness (p. 67).

He says that of all the samples that have been subjected to an investigation by his bureau they have never at any time found any unhealthy or unwholesome or unnutritious substance in oleomargarine (p. 65).

Now, Mr. President, along this same line I wish to call to the attention of the Senate the fact that the creamery butter which is sold to the people of this country is not inspected by the Government and is not manufactured under the pure-food laws of this country. As the Secretary of Agriculture says in his report, it is sometimes allowed to remain on the back steps or in a stable for a week, with the can open possibly, with flies and filth and dirt germs coming into contact with it, and then it is hauled to a dairy or a creamery, mixed in with other milk, and brought out as butter, and distributed through the country.

I do not mean to say that that applies to all creameries. No. Undoubtedly there are some excellent creameries in this country that are properly conducted, where the sanitation is good, but when the laws of health—I do not mean the laws on the statute books, but the health laws of nature—are so frequently violated that it is necessary for the Secretary of Agriculture to call attention to the fact in his report, it can not be contended that all creamery butter is a pure and undefiled food product.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. UNDERWOOD, I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. If there is so much of the creamery butter that is vile and unfit for consumption, and if, as a matter of fact, oleomargarine is always so well inspected and pure and wholesome, why is it that the manufacturers of oleomargarine hold with such persistency to their right to color their product in imitation of butter? Why do they not leave it in its natural color, so that those who wish to get the pure product oleomargarine will not be fooled into getting some of this creamery

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will come to that in a moment. But will the Senator inform me why the butter people themselves insist on coloring butter six months of the year instead of leaving it in its natural color, which is white?

Mr. McCUMBER. The difference is this: One of them colors butter to be butter, while the other colors oleomargarine so that it may be passed off upon the market as butter. I would not care a continental for the colored butter, as a matter of fact, I think the light winter butter, as a rule, is better than June butter flavored with garlic, and so forth; but, in any event, one coloring is for the purpose of producing what they desire to produce, something that appears like June butter. It is not colored to imitate oleomargarine, while the other is colored, and colored only to deceive. If the natural color of butter were blue instead of yellow, you would find the manufacturers of oleomargarine just as persistent in their idea to color their oleomargarine blue.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I am surprised at the statement that my good friend has just made, because every one who is conversant with the facts in reference to butter raised in the Northern States knows that butter is more nearly white a greater part of the time than it is yellow. It would be going a long way to say that the natural color of butter is yellow instead of white. But, more than that, oleomargarine is not always white. One of the very complaints of the creamery people against oleomargarine is that it is sometimes yellow, without being artificially colored yellow, and they do not want the oleomargarine manufacturers to make it yellow, even if it is not colored artificially; in other words, when they use a certain degree of vegetable oil, cottonseed oil, or peanut oil in the manufacture of oleomargarine, the color is naturally yellow, not artificially yellow, and the butter people want to prevent oleomargarine from having its natural color of yellow. A bill has been introduced to that effect and is pending in one of the Houses of Congress to-day. No, Mr. President; butter is not uniformly white, nor is it yellow. Its color depends upon the season. Oleomargarine is not uniformly white, nor is it yellow; its color depends on the materials used in its manufacture; but the reason that the butter man wants to color his butter yellow is because the public taste desires a table fat colored yellow. The majority of men, when they sit at their breakfast table, want to see a yellow-colored product on their table, and naturally that is the market that the oleomargarine man wants to sell his product in and for the same purposes.

There is not any contest about this. Oleomargarine, if I prefer it, has just as much right to come to my breakfast table colored, if it comes there honestly as oleomargarine and is sold to me for the purposes that I use butter for, as butter is entitled to be there colored. Nobody has a right to penalize one good food product as against another; but I say the clean food product is the oleomargarine, because it is inspected by the Government, The beef is inspected before it is slaughtered; the fats are inspected when they come to the manufacturer; and the oleomargarine is inspected when it leaves the manufacturer; and when it has the Government label of inspection on it the public are assured of an honest, clean food product on their table that does not come from the creameries of this country.

Mr. PAGE. Mr. President—

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Just a moment. I have a document here on my table-I can not put my hand on it at this moment, but I will refer to it in the RECORD-in which it has been stated by eminent authority in this country that 10 per cent, I believe, of the fatal tuberculosis among children 16 years of age and under comes from dairy products carried into the homes of this country, to the tables of this country, to the children of this country, without inspection by the Government; and yet the Butter Trust, the men who would put a price on food, insist that under the law we shall give them the sole right of way to invade the homes of this country with what is sometimes an impure and oftentimes a dangerous food product, to infect the children of this country and endanger their lives; and they stand here before the Congress to-day, with their paid representatives in the Halls of Congress, to prevent an honest food law from being written on the statute books of the country by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. PAGE. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. PAGE. The Senator has remarked at least twice that the opposition to this measure comes from a Butter Trust. Now, he could not live, as I do, in a State that makes butter without knowing that that statement is largely incorrect. could not live in a State like Vermont and receive, as I have received, protest after protest, and protest after protest, against this effort to allow the Beef Trust to impose upon the public by selling oleomargarine as butter, without knowing that it is not correct to say that the dairy industry generally is not bitterly opposed to this measure.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, in spite of the opinion of my good friend from Vermont-and he is my good friend, and I have great respect for his opinion-I maintain what I have said. I do not come from Vermont and do not know the conditions that surround the Senator from Vermont, but I maintain what I have said. I am not contending that the dairy interests of the Senator's State are not protesting to him against the passage of this proposed law, but I do say that the dairy interests of his State are not the ones that are benefited by it. The creameries are the ones that are benefited by it. It is the creamery organization that really fights the production of oleomargarine; it is not the dairy farmer. I will come to that in a moment. Who has made the profit under the present law-the dairy farmer by the increased cost of his product, or the creamery that has fixed the prices for the American public? Of course, I know how easy it is to send in petitions and telegrams. Naturally enough, the dairy farmer who sells his milk to the creamery has not studied this question. He does not know the analysis of oleomargarine. He does not know the effect on his market. He does not know that he is paying the price at home himself, and he has sent the Senator these telegrams; I have no doubt about that; but they have been machine-made telegrams.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. THOMAS. I have been doing little else in the last three or four days but receive telegrams and letters upon this subject; and they are all, with a few exceptions, expressed in identical language.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly.
Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President-

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no doubt that the telegrams to my good friend from Vermont all come practically in the same

Mr. BRANDEGEE and Mr. PAGE addressed the Chair. The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. PAGE. Mr. President, may I be allowed to say that when we want some one to protect our dairy interests—
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair inquired whether the Senator from Alabama yielded to the Senator from Connecticut. Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I addressed my remarks to the Senator from Vermont, I yield to him first. I will yield to the Senator from Connecticut in a moment.

Mr. PAGE. I hardly think it fair, Mr. President, that the Senator from Alabama—representing, as I suppose he does, interests that are very important to his people—should ask to be counted as the attorney and spokesman of the dairy interests of Vermont. We have an idea that we have an industry there the dairy industry-that is valuable to us. We do not believe that the makers of an imitation of butter should be permitted to come into the market and fraudulently sell it as butter, as I believe will be done if this measure passes.

It is not in the interest of the poor man that you are passing this bill. If you pass it, oleomargarine is likely to go from 20 cents, where it is to-day, up to 25 or 30, while butter will probably go from 40 cents, where it is to-day, down to 35 or 30. The prices will approach each other very closely. It certainly is not in the dairying interests that this bill is being pushed, and my good friend the Senator from Alabama is not being fair to the dairying interests of the country in making his statements.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I disclaim any effort on my part, Mr. President, to hold a commission from the constituents of my good friend, and I am not speaking in behalf of the dairy interests. I hope that when I get through my constituency and my friends in the Senate will realize that I am not speaking in behalf of any special interest. When I get through with this speech I hope it will be understood that I am speaking for the rights of the American people who are being penalized by the legislation that is on the statute books to-day, who are being defrauded of the right to buy an honest food product by the legislation that is on the statute books to-day. I am not at-tempting, so far as I am concerned in advocating this legislation, to have oleomargarine sold as butter-no! The very purpose of this amendment-and the purpose is sustained by every Commissioner of Internal Revenue who has spoken on the subject, Democratic and Republican alike-is to eliminate frauds and make them sell oleomargarine as oleomargarine and butter as That is the purpose of this legislation. butter.

Mr. PAGE and Mr. STONE addressed the Chair. Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. PAGE. I should like to ask the Senator if he has received any telegrams or letters from any dairy State, or from anyone representing the dairy interests, in favor of his amendment?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Or the general agricultural interests?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think I have from any dairy interests, but I have letters from such States as Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan favoring this amendment. I disclaim any desire or intention of trying to represent the dairy interests. I am merely stating here that this amendment is not against the dairy interests and is not intended to be against the dairy interests. It is not against their interest to have honest competition. They are having competition behind closed doors to-day. The dairy interests of your State are having fraudulent competition, pulling down the value of their product because an insidious fraud is growing up against them through the sale of oleomargarine as butter. What I am seeking to do is to require that all oleomargarine be sold as oleomargarine and not as butter; and I say that is to their interest.

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield to me?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. LIPPITT. In answer to the question of the Senator from Vermont, I should like to say that I have on my desk a telegram from the Housewives' League, urging the passage of this amendment, showing that there are some consumers, anyway, who are in favor of it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly.

I yield now to the Senator from Connecticut, if he desires to ask me a question, and apologize for not yielding a minute ago.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, referring to the Senator's statement that whoever profited by the present tax it was not the dairy farmer, but the Senator thought it was the creamery, is it not a fact that very largely over the country the creameries are owned by the dairy farmers themselves?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not know how largely that is so, but I do recognize the fact that in some cases that is true. In other cases it is not true, but I have not statistics to enable me to state to what extent the creameries are owned by farmers and to what extent they are not.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Neither have I, but I am told by Senators who come from agricultural States that it is very largely and almost exclusively so in the case of their States.

Mr. McCUMBER. Probably five-sixths of them are cooperative creameries, owned by the farmers themselves.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not able to speak on that subject; but the Senator from Oregon had invited me into the controversy as to whether oleomargarine was fit to eat or fit to polish boots with, and I am just discussing the question as to whether butter is fit to eat; and I will come to oleomargarine a little

Mr. STONE. Mr. President— Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. STONE. If the Senator will permit me, he stated that oleomargarine was, generally speaking, a purer and more wholesome food than butter

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did.

Mr. STONE. Due to the fact that oleomargarine was subject to a very complete inspection. Then he stated that a very large extent of the creamery butter-I think he said something over 60 per cent

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no; the Senator is mistaken. I gave no percentage. The percentage was stated by the Secretary of

Mr. STONE. Well, the Senator had it read, and I assume he indorsed it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do; I indorsed it. The statement was that investigations have shown that 61 per cent out of 1,554 lots of cream received at creameries was dirty, decomposed, or

Mr. O'GORMAN. Sixty-one per cent of what-the samples of Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; cream.

Mr. STONE. It is to be presumed that they were selected as average samples

Mr. UNDERWOOD.

Mr. STONE. Now, I should like to know the opinion of the Senator as to whether the sale of foul and diseased butter would be prevented and lessened by opening up this new field of competition—that is to say, placing oleomargarine in the field as a competitor for butter? That is one question. The other is, if it be true that a large part of the creamery butter sold to the consumers of the country is diseased, and therefore dangerous to the health of the people, ought it not also to be subject to inspection? There is an evil, if it exists—as the Senator says it does-that could be prevented by subjecting the product of the creameries to the same inspection as that to which the product of the manufacturer of oleomargarine is

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator is eminently correct. I was in the House of Representatives when this law was enacted. I did not vote for it. I voted against it. I voted for what was then known as the Wadsworth substitute, and the Wadsworth substitute, except as to the amount of taxation, is substantially the proposition that is being offered to the Senate by the Finance Committee to-day. But at that time a proposition was made in the House of Representatives to inspect fraudulent butter, and it was defeated by the same dairy interests that succeeded in passing this bill. The same interests that have steed to defeat and destroy cleaner graving have steed in have stood to defeat and destroy oleomargarine have stood in the Halls of the Congress of the United States fighting an inspection of their own product.

Mr. PAGE. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. PAGE. I do not think, Mr. President, that I ought to sit here and have the general cleanliness of butter, as it is made in my State, called in question as the Senator from Alabama is doing. He says it is vile stuff. I want to say to him that in the State of Vermont we are every year improving the quality of our butter and we are fast eliminating tuberculosis from our cattle. The State subjects itself every year to an immense tax in order that all cows afflicted with tuberculosis may be promptly slaughtered. When the Senator says that butter generally is vile stuff, he insults the intelligence of the American people who eat butter. It is not true.

Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. President, I am sure the Secretary of Agriculture did not mean any offense against my good friend from Vermont or against his constituents. In the first place, he did not say anything about Vermont. Knowing my friend, I am sure that the butter interests of Vermont stand far above the general butter interests of this country; but I have not made this charge. The Secretary of a great department of this Government has stated that in the selection of 1,500 samples to test, 61 per cent of them were vile stuff and unfit for food. Now, that statement did not come from me. I am not making the charge. I am laying before the Senate of the United States an official statement of this Government.

Mr. PAGE. But is not that statement several years old? Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will ask the Secretary to read the date of that statement.

Mr. PAGE. It was 1912, as I remember. The VICE PRESIDENT. The statement has gone to the Reporters' office.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not recall the date of it.
Mr. PAGE. If the Senator will allow me, I do not want to interrupt him, but I suppose we are seeking for light here.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. PAGE. If the Senator will permit me, I desire to make one more statement. I come from a State where its largest interest is agriculture, and especially dairying. We have long since ceased to produce wool to any great extent. We do not produce cattle for beef to any considerable extent. We are emphatically a dairying State. Every morning after the cows are milked the milk is put in a clean, close container, and be-fore noon, as a rule, the teams come around and take that milk to the creamery. Our creameries are models of cleanliness; and Vermont butter—and I believe the same statement is true of butter from Michigan and other dairying States-is just as clean and sweet and wholesome as it can be made. Year by year we are striving, in butter as we are in sugar, to make it more pure, to make it more wholesome.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Of course, what the Secretary of Agriculture said will apply to the whole United States, and I have no doubt that his statement is true; but I have no doubt also that so far as Vermont is concerned, with the efforts that are being made there now to have a good, clean food product in the butter that is being produced in Vermont for the consumption of the American people, in a few years they will produce a butter product that in its purity and health-giving qualities and freedom from germs will be equal to good oleomargarine.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan and Mr. LEE of Maryland addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield, and to whom?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The Senator from Alabama has given to Vermont a clean bill of health, and I should like to know if there is any reason why he can not extend that courtesy to

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Knowing the distinguished Senator from Michigan, I say without hesitation that I am satisfied that if not to-day, surely by to-morrow, the butter of that State will equal the oleomargarine of the State.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Now, one question more, if I may be permitted. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] has called attention to the fact that these protests against the so-called Underwood amendment, numerous as they were, have come to him in practically the same language.

I want to say to the Senator from Alabama that I have received two protests against the Underwood amendment. One came from the president of the Michigan State Grange, an organization representing practically every farmer in the State of Michigan; and the other came from the president of the National Dairy Association, who was formerly president of the National Grange, and who is intimately related to the agricul-tural interests of my State; and both with the same vigor and earnestness protest against this amendment. I voice their sentiments and believe that they have a right to be heard.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, undoubtedly.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The proposition now advocated by the Senator from Alabama is not new to either him or me. I think we were both in the House of Representatives when this law was passed. I regarded it then as a wholesome and helpful law, and I do now, and I am sorry to see that my honored friend from Alabama still retains his ancient prejudice against this proposition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama

now yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do. Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President, I will state that I have understood that a few years ago there was quite a con-troversy between schools of authority as to whether bovine tuberculosis was communicable to the human race. That question was under discussion a very few years ago, the German school that discovered the tubercular bacillus taking the position that it was not communicable if of bovine origin. Now, I do not know how that controversy has been settled, but I am interested in this butter question, because I use a good deal of it, as everybody does; and I should like to ask the Senator if he has any information, scientific or otherwise, to show that bovine tuberculosis is communicable through butter to the human family?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have some authority in my hand which comes from eminent physicians, and I shall be glad to read it to the Senator.

In the hearings before the House Committee on Rules on House resolution 137, on April 11, 1916, Dr. Edward C. Schroeder, on page 23, testified:

The New York health office estimates that 9 to 10 per cent of the fatal tuberculosis among children 16 years of age and under is due to bovine tubercular bacilli.

On page 26 he says:

The importance of bovine tuberculosis to the human family does not rest on what happens to adults, but it does rest on the frequency with which children are attacked; and the data, as I showed a few minutes ago, justifies us in assuming or estimating that the number of children who die in the United States because of bovine tuberculosis is large, and the fatal cases do not include all the suffering that comes from bovine tuberculosis, because the majority of children who contract the disease recover after much suffering and after having caused those interested in them a great deal of anxiety.

In the same hearing Dr. Mohler, on page 32, testified:

The figures for tuberculosis in beef breeds would be around 1 per cent, while about 9 or 10 per cent would be the amount of the dairy breeds, estimated for the entire country.

In other words, of the tubercular disease only about 1 per cent, this doctor testified, is found in beef cattle, and 9 or 10 per cent in dairy cattle.

In the same hearing Dr. Melvin, Chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, testified, on page 13, that he had made a considerable study of the dairy conditions in the United States, and in his opinion it was very desirable that there should be a Government inspection of dairies, because a large percentage of the dairy products that are consumed by the American people are unfit for food.

Now, this does not come from me. It comes from the Chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, and I think that chief was appointed under a Republican administration. I do not know what his personal politics are, but he was not appointed under my party, and my party is not responsible for him; and yet he says in a public hearing that a large percentage of the dairy products that are consumed by the American people are unfit for food. And so I might go on indefinitely, showing the dangers that confront the American people every day because they are forced to consume a dairy product that is uninspected; and the Congress of the United States would endeavor to prevent them from having a cheaper food product that is clean and pure and free from disease and inspected by the Government of the United States.

In view of that, Mr. President, I desire to send to the desk a statement from Bulletin No. 469 of the Department of Agriculture on the subject of oleomargarine, and have it read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

[From United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin No. 469: Fats and their economical use in the home.]

Fats and their economical use in the home.]

Oleomargarine: (p. 12) The principal fats used in its manufacture in the United States are oleo oil, neutral lard * * *, and cottonseed and other oils * * *. These are mixed in such proportions as will give the final product a melting point very near that of butter * * * In the preparation of high-grade oleomargarine varying quantities of butter are also added * * * It has an energy value of about 3,500 calories per pound. (p. 8) The food value of butter is due largely to the energy it furnishes, which is about 3,500 calories per pound.

* * It is a common practice to add vegetable coloring matter, especially during the winter months, to intensify the natural color.

* * * (p. 16) The price of table fats depends largely upon their flavor and to a less extent on color * * *. Prejudice often exerts an influence on the selection of fats as well as other food materials, and these prejudices are often curious.

Prof. L. V. Allyn, of Westfield, Mass., says:

Prof. L. V. Allyn, of Westfield, Mass., says:

Cottonseed oil is an excellent food product and has practically the same food value as olive oil.

Dr. William Brady says:

Peanut oil is as nourishing as olive oil. Food value for food value, peanuts are cheaper than bread.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama

yield to the Senator from North Dakota?
Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.
Mr. McCUMBER. As the Senator has just presented this, and one of the ingredients of oleomargarine is stated to be neutral lard, I think probably it would be well for him to explain what neutral lard is. Wherein does it differ from any other kind of lard?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that neutral lard is oil pressed from the leaf fat of the pig and is odorless and taste-Oleo oil is the oil pressed from the leaf fat of beef.

I also send to the desk a document that I desire to have read that has the approval of the Senate on this subject. It is Senate Document No. 141, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, in reference to the adulteration of food products, which gives the statements of eminent witnesses as to the food value and the purity of oleomargarine.

The Secretary read as follows:

[From Senate Document No. 141, Fifty-sixth Congress, second session, Adulteration of food products.]

Oleomargarine: Dr. Wiley testifies that from a nutritive point of view all the fats and oils used as food have nearly the same value as heat producers. * * The beef fat of oleomargarine has a slightly higher heat value; but the butter fat is a little more easy of digestion, so that there is practically no difference in the value of the two fats in the human economy. Cottonseed oil has practically the same heat value as eleomargarine, and is probably a little easier of digestion.

there is practically no difference in the value of the two fats in the human economy. Cottonseed oil has practically the same heat value as eleomargarine, and is probably a little easier of digestion. * * * * (p. 46).

Mr. Marc Delafontaine regards oleomargarine as substantially similar to butter in its chemical constituents, but not identical with butter. He thinks it equally wholesome. The manufacturers are bound to use the very best grades of fats or else the article will not sell. Anything inferior would be either rancid or bad to the taste. * * * (p. 47).

Extract from the Scientific American: "In everyday life butter is very essential. Its free use by sufferers from wasting diseases is to be encouraged to the utmost, in so far as it can be borne. All this seems very simple; but, unfortunately, an excess of butter diet, even in a healthy organism, is likely to give rise to butyric dyspepsia, and butyric fermentation is set up largely through the presence of a ferment, a residum left by the buttermilk. Considering the foregoing, it seems strange that oleomargarine has not been thought of as a palatable and suitable article of diet for those suffering from wasting diseases. It is free from all objections, despite the idle and malicious tales spread by parties interested in securing higher prices for inferior and unwholesome products. Were the truth fully realized by all classes, bad butter would find no market; but, unfortunately, the majority of the people have no comprehensive idea as to what oleomargarine practically is. The resulting product, as a matter of fact, is a better and purer butter than nine-tenths of the dairy product that is marketed, and one that is far more easily preserved. There are a large number also who imagine that oleomargarine is made from any old scraps of grease, regardless of age or cleanliness, which is quite the reverse of the fact; indeed, a good 'oleo' can only be had by employing the very best and freshest of fat. This 'artificial butter' is as purely wholesome and has a hig

Mr. McCUMBER. I will say to the Senator that on page 173 of the hearing there is a full description of what is meant by neutral lard. In other words, it is the lard from the leaf of the hog as distinguished from that portion which is taken from the outer portion of the intestines, which goes under the name of lard also

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is the statement I have just covered.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President-

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the Senator. Mr. LEE of Maryland. With reference to the report cited from the Agricultural Department, that refers apparently to a rather old specimen of butter—1912, five years ago. We can not raise peanuts and cotton seed in Maryland by reason of climatic conditions, and we must stick to dairy products or import the equivalent. I would be interested in knowing whether the Agricultural Department has pursued further this very interesting line of suggestion, apparently so vital to human life, and would inquire of the Senator from Alabama whether or not he has anything of a more recent character? extended and almost universal application of the tuberculin test to dairy cattle, the application of interstate rules with reference to the transportation of tubercular cattle in interstate commerce, and other improvements in sanitation greatly improved conditions since 1912?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have already called the attention of the Senate to the statements of those in charge of the Government bureaus in touch with the conditions in the dairy industry, made before the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives during their investigation of the sanitary condition of dairies, on April 11, 1916, and to the statements of these same officials made before the Committee on Agriculture on December 6 and 7, 1916, in which they stated that the conditions com-plained of previously by the Department of Agriculture were practically unimproved. And if the Senator wishes the very latest information I will call his attention to the statement released for publication in the papers February 12, 1917, by the Office of Information of the United States Department of Agriculture on the control of hog tuberculosis, in which it is said, speaking of tuberculosis in hogs, that:

In the case of hogs from certain localities, especially some of the dairying sections, over 25 per cent, or one out of four hogs slaughtered, had the disease. * * * The two principal ways of preventing hogs from becoming tubercular are by keeping them away from tubercular cattle, and by cooking or pasteurizing all skim milk and cooking all garbage before it is fed to the hogs. * * * Raw milk of any kind from a creamery is particularly dangerous for hogs, because if there is but one tubercular herd on the creamery route the milk from this herd may affect all the skim milk collected at the factory. This explains why tuberculosis is most common in hogs in dairy regions where milk is taken to a central creamery and raw skim milk brought back to the farm from the general stock.

If the conditions in the dairy industry to-day are such that the Department of Agriculture issues a bulletin stating that the use of product from the creameries is dangerous to hogs, it hardly appears possible that the conditions should have greatly improved over those described in the report of the Secretary of Agriculture in 1912, and emphasizes the need of the people for a wholesome, well-inspected substitute. That there is greater danger to human beings in the butter than to hogs in the skim milk is shown by a statement made by Prof. H. A. Harding, of the University of Illinois, speaking at the Minneapolis Convention of Butter Makers, as reported in the Chicago Dairy Produce of November 28, 1916, which says (p. 20):

The germ life in the butter is simply the result of the germ life in the cream. * * * It has been demonstrated beyond any room for doubt that the action of the centrifugal separator tends to concentrate the germs of bovine tuberculests in the cream so that they pass over into the butter. Careful studies have shown that they will remain alive in butter for three months or more under storage conditions. Butter made from raw cream is open to a very serious indictment from the standpoint of the public health.

Mr. President, there can not be any question, if you will look the fact fairly in the face, that not by reason of my opinion or your opinion but from the findings of the governmental departments themselves, from the statements of the most emi-nent scientists who are in this country, we can come to but one conclusion, and that is that butter is often bad, unhealthful, filled with death-dealing germs, and sold to the American public without pure-food inspection; that eleomargarine by the same authorities is shown to be clean, pure, and without germs, inspected by the Government, and the public health protected when the public consumes oleomargarine. Now, there is the difference. There is where they stand. The heat units of one are equal to the heat units of the other. The benefit of health of the one upbuilding the system is equal to the benefits of the other.

But where do we find ourselves? We find that through a systematic lobby that was begun more than a decade ago certain interests in this country have insisted that they had the right to use the taxing power to tax one industry out of existence for the benefit of another.

Mr. THOMAS. Both legitimate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Both legitimate industries, both entitled to furnish the American people with a food product of this country. I can not see, Mr. President, how a man who holds allegiance to the faith and principles of the Democratic Party for one moment can bring himself to the position of voting to use the taxing power of this great Government for the purpose of destroying one food product in order to make a more extended market and a higher price for another food product.

That is what this law is intended for that is on the statute books. That was the purpose of the law proclaimed by the men who originally enacted it. That is the reason why men stand on the floor of the Senate and say that it is a fraud to color another food product yellow because they want to color butter yellow. It is not that they are satisfied that men shall only buy butter as butter and oleomargarine as oleomargarine, but that they want to make oleomargarine distasteful to the human eye and distasteful to the human stomach so that the American public will not consume it. In other words, you want to proclaim to the American people that you stand for the doctrine that the rich man may have his artificially colored Elgin butter on his breakfast table a bright yellow because the color suits his eye and his digestion. The poor man who is struggling for his daily bread must eat white butter or white oleomargarine, and you want to make it as distasteful to him as you can by calling it lard and drive him either to deprive himself and his family of an honest, clean food product or to pay the exorbitant prices, which you are trying to fix by law, by driving competition out of the market.

Mr. President-Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the Senator from Colorado. Mr. THOMAS. May I ask the Senator if it is not true that the price of butter is fixed for the entire country by two or three men in the city of Elgin, Ill.?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have heard that statement often made and I believe it is true. I am not sufficiently informed as to the butter industry myself to state it as an absolute fact, but my understanding is that in Elgin they fix the market price, and that the price of butter throughout the country is reflected from the Elgin market; and it is probably fixed by a few men.

Mr. THOMAS. If the Senator will allow me, such was the statement in the New York World last December or early in January and I have not seen it disputed.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now, that is all there is in this proposition. There is an earnest effort in this amendment to protect the honest dairyman against dishonest competition. There is an earnest effort in this amendment to prevent frauds on the honest dairyman by having oleomargarine sold as butter, because it proposes that every package that is seld to the ultimate consumer must be marked "Margarine," with a revenue stamp on it that can not be broken until it goes into the hands of the ultimate consumer. Your department, your Bureau of Internal Revenue, has stated that that is the best way to protect the butter against fraud. Both Democratic and Republican Commissioners of Internal Revenue have stated that to protect this law against fraud, to make men sell oleomargarine as oleomargarine, the best way is to make them wrap it in original packages with a revenue stamp on it. But that is not what you want. That is not what the Creamery Trust wants. No; they are not trying to make oleomargarine to be sold as oleomargarine and butter as butter. They are trying to drive oleomargarine out of the market so that they can get more exorbitant prices for their butter.

My information is when this law was enacted good butter was selling in this country between 18 and 24 cents a pound, and to-day the average price of good butter in this country is 45 cents a pound. Of course, those are wholesale prices

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. You do not attribute it all to the

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not attribute it all to the law, but the law is helpful. The advocates of butter would not keep the law on the statute books if they did not think it was helpful. But I find this: Butter coming from the creamery increased nearly double. In 1906, shortly after the law was passed, there were 572 creameries in this country, and the price per pound for butter fat was 23.35 cents. In 1915 there were 920 creameries, and the price per pound for butter fat was 29.61 cents. In other words, butter fat increased from 23.35 cents to 29.61 cents, or a little over 6 cents per pound, and butter increased from 24 cents to 45 cents wholesale, or an increase of 21 cents a pound. I just say that by way of illustration, to show that our dairy interests the farmers back at home-are not the men who are getting the benefit of this increase, but it is the creameries, where, as it has been suggested this evening, a few men fix the price of butter to the American public, and then turn around and fix the price of butter fat that they buy from the American farmer.

This is not a farmers' fight. The American farmer is as much interested in cattle as he is in dairy products. There are not more than 7 per cent of the farmers of the United States who are interested in dairy products as a business of selling them, and 93 per cent of them are not interested in making their living out of dairy products, but they are interested in beef on the out of dairy products, but they are interested in beef on the hoof, they are interested in vegetable oils that are produced in this country. So this is not a farmers' fight. The farmers in your State, in my State, and in the average State are more largely interested in the products that go into oleomargarine than they are in the products that go into butter. But that is not the question.

If I stood here only to advocate the rights of some particular interest, I would surrender the floor; I would not contend for one minute for this amendment. I am contending for this amendment because it is an honest expression of law to protect the American people against fraud; it is an honest law to protect the Government against fraud. More than that, it is an honest effort to reduce the high price of living.

I have heard but little else in the last few months in the Senate and in the press but the high cost of living to the American people, the high prices of food products. We find to-day in the Washington market that butter is selling for something like 50 cents a pound, and oleomargarine is selling for but 28 cents a

Mr. WADSWORTH. Is that colored oleomargarine?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is the naturally colored oleomargarine. It is the best oleomargarine. By that I do not mean that one is impure and that the other is not, but the best and the worst is dependent on the proportions of the different in-gredients that go into the oleomargarine. To illustrate, vegetable ofls (peanut and cottonseed) are just as wholesome and nutritious as butter, but the market prices of these refined oils is only about one-third the price of butter, therefore if the oleomargarine contains a high percentage of the vegetable oils it can be sold much cheaper than when it contains a higher percentage of butter. It is all pure, but the lower grade of elecmargarine can be bought in Washington to-day for 20 cents pound.

What I am contending for is that the great masses of the American people, if they so desire, may have an honest right to buy oleomargarine instead of butter, and have it on their tables instead of butter, because it is cheaper. If they want to do it you should not prevent them from doing it by law and you should not carry on the statute books of this country a double tax that holds out an inducement for the dishonest grocery man and dishonest dealer to take white oleomargarine into their back rooms, there to color it, and to pass it off on the public as butter and at butter prices as they are doing throughout the country

You know that frauds exist, and I know they exist. One single concern is penalized, as shown by the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, to the extent of nearly a million and a half dollars for the frauds committed in this way. Do you not know that they are broadcast throughout this land? Do you not know that these same dishonest dealers are reaching into the pockets of your own constituencies and selling them oleomargarine for butter, thus not only defrauding the Government of its tax but defrauding your constituency of the difference in price between oleomargarine and butter? If you adopt this amendment they can not do that.

The Government itself says that this is the best way to protect the American people against these frauds; and simply because you have a petition from the dairy interests, who do not want the law changed or who think they do not want the law changed, must you turn your backs on thousands of your constituents who constitute the consuming masses of the American people? Half the people of the United States to-day practically live in the towns and in the cities. They are not engaged in agriculture; they are not engaged in raising food products. Every day the pyramid of prices is rising higher and higher; every day the man who is working on a small salary sees want coming closer and closer to his front door because of the pyramiding prices of agricultural products; and yet your Government tells you that dishonest dealers in the United States are defrauding that same constituency by selling them oleomargarine for butter; and because you have got a petition from the so-called dairy interests of this country you turn your back on your constituency; you say, "Yes, we will vote to give you higher salaries, but we will not protect your pockets from being picked by thieves." That is what this question resolves itself into. It is a question of the honest administration of the law.

I respect the dairy interests and the farming interests. They are in my State as they are in yours. Thousands upon thouand of honest, good men are engaged in the business; but, though they are engaged in the business, all they have a right to demand of the Government of the United States is an honest protection of their business. The Government of the United States says that this is the best way to give them that honest protection. They have no right to come into the Halls of the Congress of the United States and say that they can use the Congress of the United States and say that they can use the taxing power of the Government not for the purpose of replenishing the Treasury but for the purpose of trying to drive an honest food product out of the market, in order that they may make the product of their own farms and their own labor pyramid the higher.

Oh, I do not believe in the Senate of the United States vot-of the local feature in the Schate of the Chitech States voting under compulsion; voting because some special interest stands at the door and holds us up and demands our vote.

There is a right and a wrong to every question; there is a right and a wrong side to this question. If the statements of the Government officials that this amendment is the best way to protect the American public against fraud be true, then it is right to vote for it. If the American people are suffering from high prices, then it is wrong to penalize them further by putting a 10 per cent tax on an honest food product.

If, however, you want to summon before the United States Senate the American voter and count the numbers so as to determine on which side it is safer for you to vote, let me read something on this question:

[Extracts from report of proceedings of the thirtieth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, held at St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 14 to 26, inclusive, 1910.]

Resolution 71.

Resolution 71.

Whereas oleomargarine is conceded by chemists and food experts to be a wholesome food product; and Whereas existing laws discriminate against this wholesome food product through a tax of 10 cents a pound when artificially colored, the only purpose of which is to make it appear palatable; and Whereas artificial coloring matter is permitted in butter and other dairy products, which clearly establishes a discrimination; and Whereas the discriminatory tax placed upon oleomargarine must be paid in the main by the poorer classes of people, and has a tendency to increase the price of butter; and Whereas the placing of a tax of 10 cents per pound on colored oleomargarine has rather increased than decreased violations of law: Therefore be it

Resolved, by the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled, That Congress be petitioned to so amend the oleomargarine law that a tax not exceeding 2 cents per pound be placed upon the product, whether colored or uncolored, and that a license fee not exceeding $6 per year be placed upon the retailer for the privilege of vending oleomargarine, and that the product be packed in $1, 1, 2, and 3 pound packages only, and that the product be sold only in original tax-paid packages.

The committee recommended concurrence in the resolution.

The motion to concur in the report of the committee was carried.

Mr. President, the substance of that resolution has not only been agreed to by the Federation of Labor, which holds within its membership a larger number of voters in this country than are engaged in the business of dairying, but it is indorsed by a large number of associations throughout the United States, and I ask that those indorsements may be printed in the RECORD at this point without taking the time of the Senate to read them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The indorsements referred to are as follows:

ALABAMA.

Alabama Cottonseed Crushers' Association, Commercial Club of Florence, Commercial Club of Montgomery, Commercial and Industrial Association of Selma, International Association of Machinists of Birmingham, Civic Improvement Club of Troy, and Council of Jewish Women, Selma.

ARKANSAS.

Business Men's Club, and others, of Augusta; Ashdown Commercial Club, of Ashdown; Cotton Plant commercial Club, Cotton Plant; citizens of Altheimer, Arkansas City, Bearden, Crossett, Des Arc, Dumas, Dermott, De Witt, England, Eudora, Fordyee, Hamburg, Lake Village, Mulberry, McGhee, Newport, Portland, Rison, Searcy, Star City, Sherrill, Stephens, Waldo, and Walnut Ridge; citizens and business men of Forest City; Fort Smith Commercial League, Hope Progressive League, Business Men's League of Arkansas, Helena Chamber of Commerce, Helena Board of Trade, Retail Merchants' Association of Jonesboro, Little Rock Board of Trade, Txapayers and citizens of Mississippi County, Ark., Marianna Commercial Club, Merchants' Association of Magnolia, Morrillton Board of Trade, Pine Bluff Board of Trade, citizens of Paris and vicinity, Woman's Study Club of Bentonville, Ouakesup Club of Hot Springs, Retail Merchants' Association of Brinkley, and Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, Cotton Belt Lodge 7, Pine Bluff.

CALIFORNIA.

Operative Plasterers' International Association of the United States and Canada, Pasadena; San Francisco Woman's Cluo; Reading Club of Pacific Beach; San Diego Society for the Prevention and Study of Tuberculosis; California Federation of Women's Clubs, Pacific Beach; Retail Grocers and Merchants' Association of San Francisco; and La Jolla Woman's Club, of La Jolla.

COLORADO.

Colorado Springs and Pueblo Stereotypers' Union, No. 67; International Association of Steam and Hot-Water Fitters and Helpers of America, of Denver; Journeymen Stonecutters' Association of North America, of Denver: United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters, and Steam Fitters' Helpers, of Pueblo; Cigar Makers' Union 129, of Denver; Retail Grocers' Association of Denver; Denver Photo-Engravers' Union, 18; Lithographers' Association of Denver; Woman's Club of Carpenteria; Woman's Club of Colorado Springs; and Order of Railway Conductors of Denver.

CONNECTICUT.

United Hatters of North America, of South Norwalk, Local No. 15; International Association of Machinists of Ansonia; Baltic Mule Spinners' Association of Baltic; New Haven Trades Council; Willimantic Woman's Club; Pattern Makers' Association of Bridgeport; and Brotherhood of Railway Workers Lodge, 186, Hartford.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

International Steel and Copper Plate Printers' Union of North America; International Association of Machinists; Washington Photo-Engravers' Union; Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners; Journeymen Stonecutters' Association of North America; Allied Printing Trades Council; International Brotherhood of Bookbinders; Printing Pressmen's Union, No. 1; Emerson Five-Foot Study of Club of Brookland; Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, 239; Fattern Makers' Association of Washington, D. C.; District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs; Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor; Musicians' Protective Association, 161; Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis; and Barbers' Local, 305.

FLORIDA.

Cumberland Sound Lodge, No. 303, B. P. C. of A., Jacksonville; Woman's Club of Jacksonville; and Friday Literary Club of Braden-

GEORGIA.

GEORGIA.

Savannah Chamber of Commerce, Chamber of Commerce of McRae, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Chamber of Commerce of Augusta, Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia, Trades and Labor Assembly of Waycross, International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers of Forest City, Pattern Makers' Association of Savannah, Typographical Union of Atlanta, Trades and Labor Assembly of Columbus, International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers of Savannah, Trades and Labor Assembly of Savannah, Federation of Women's Clubs of Atlanta, and Woman's Club of Woodbury.

ILLINOIS.

ILLINOIS.

Rockford Merchants and Business Men's Association; United Trades and Labor Council of Streator; Progressive Lodge, No. 440, International Association of Machinists, Rockford; United Brotherhood of Leather Workers on Horse Goods, Brotherhood No. 55; Local No. 82, Machine Operators, Rock Island Arsenal; Amalgamated Woodworkers' International Union, No. 4, of Chicago; Chicago Brotherhood of Freight Handlers; International Association of Machinists of Bloomington; Rockford Grocers' Association of Rockford; Harmony Lodge, No. 584, International Association of Machinists, Moline; Local No. 401, International Union of Steam Engineers; Musicians' Protective Union of Eighr; Trades and Labor Assembly of Bloomington; Wabash Lodge of International Association of Machinists of Mount Carmel; Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass Molders, Brass and Silver Workers' Union of Rock Island; International Association of Steam Engineers of Chicago; Federal Labor Union of Kewanee, No. 6925; Coopers' International Union of North America, of Alton, No. 41; International Brotherhood of Roofers, Comp., Damp and Waterproof Workers of the United States and Canada, Chicago; Typographical Union of Waukegan; International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Charleston; Portland Commercial Association, of Oglesby; Quincy. Typographical Union, No. 59; National Association of Retail Grocers of Springfield; International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers of Chicago, No. 122, Energy Union; United Mine Workers of America of Girard, No. 694; Study Club of Forrest; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, of Evanston; Switchmen's Union of Chicago, No. 58; International Brotherhood of Teamsters of Aurora; Nineteenth Century Club, of Oak Park; Shakespeare Club, of Fairbury; Lake Vlew Woman's Club, of Chicago; Woman's Club of Kankakee; International Molders' Conference Board of Chicago; Merchants' Association of Peoria; Merchants' Protective Association of Litchfield; Retail Association of Peoria; United Grocers and Butchers' Association of Chicago; citizens of South Chicago; Business Men's Association of Lacksonville; Retail Grocers' Association of Joilet; International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Chicago, No. 50; Tri-City Central Trades Council, Granite City; Cement Workers and Helpers' Union, No. 8, of Springfield; Bartenders' Protective and Benevolent Association, No. 5, of Springfield; Bartenders' Protective and Benevolent Association, No. 117, of Belleville; International Molders' Union of Harvey, No. 153; Stove Mounters and Steel Range Workers' International Union of Quincy; International Association of Car Workers of Chicago, No. 50, Burnside Lodge; National Association of Machinists, No. 237, of Mount Carmel; Woman Teachers' Club, Peoria; United Association of Journeymen Plumbers, Gas Fitters, etc., No. 161, of Quincy; South Chicago Business Men's Association of East St. Louis; Retail Grocers' Association of Springfield; Central Labor Council of Bloomington; Domestic Art Club of Benton; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, No. 194, of Chicago; Tuesday Club of Chicago; Bolt and Nut Workers' Union, No. 306, of Chicago; and Stove Mounters and Steel Range Workers' IDAHO.

Century Club of Nampa.

INDIANA.

INDIANA.

Federation of Labor, No. 12868, of Bedford; Enterprise Lodge, Local No. 1, of Elwood; Retail Grocers' Association of Indianapolis; Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders of America of Peru; Central Labor Union of Boonville; International Association of Steam, Hot Water, and Power Pipe Fitters and Helpers of Fort Wayne; International Union of Steam Engineers of Fort Wayne; International Union of Steam Engineers of Fort Wayne; International Union of Molders of Muncie; Metal Polishers and Brass Workers of Elkhart, Local No. 335; Trades and Labor Assembly of Logansport; International Union of Brewery Workmen of Ievansville; Central Labor Union of Elkhart; Cigar Makers' Union, No. 379, of Rochester; Goshen Union of Elkhart; Cigar Makers' Union, No. 379, of Rochester; Goshen Union of Anderson; Crescendo Club, of Alexandria; Argonaut Club, of Bloomfeld; Brewery Workers' Union, No. 78, of Logansport; Clio Literary Club, of Warsaw; Machinists' Local Union, No. 181, of La Fayette; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, No. 133, of Indianapolis; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Elkhart; Woman's Club of Elkhart; Cary Club, of Milton; Pattern Makers' Association of Indianapolis; and Federation of Musicians of Hammond.

United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Gas Fitters, etc., No. 66, of Dubuque; Live Stock Exchange of Sioux City; Hand-In-Hand Lodge, No. 183, Brotherhood of Rallway Trainmen, of Clinton; Burlington Retail Grocers' Association; International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Fort Dodge; Columbian Club, of Cherokee; Pierian Club, of Logan; Lake Park Woman's Club, of Lake Park; Woman's Club of Emmettsburg; Brotherhood of Rallway Carmen of Valley Junction, No. 301 Lodge; Bakers and Confectionery Union, No. 226, of Keokuk; Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance, No. 263, of Cedar Rapids; Twentieth Century Club of Livermore; Twentieth Century Club of Gliman; Woman's Club of Guthrie Center; Retail Grocers' Association of Clinton; Marle Mitchell Club, of Mason City; Nineteenth Century Club of Bedford; Child Study Club of Mason City; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Lodge No. 547, of Des Moines; Retail Grocers' Association of Cedar Rapids; and Mutual Improvement Club of Hawarden.

KANSAS.

KANSAS.

Blue Rapids Local Union No. 12825; International Association of Machinists of Topeka; United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters, and Steam Fitters' Helpers of Topeka; Bakery and Confectionery Workers of Topeka; Woman's Quotation and Book Club of Almena; Pleasant Hour Club of Paola; Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of Pittsburg; Kansas Equal Suffrage Association, of Enterprise; Retail Grocers' Association of Topeka; and Philamathean Club of Leavenworth.

Louisville Commercial Club; Louisville Board of Trade; United Brotherhood of Leather Workers on Horse Goods, Louisville; Coopers International Union, of Owensboro; Pride Lodge, No. 502. Brotherhood of Locomotive Fireman and Enginemen of Louisville; United Trades and Labor Assembly of Louisville; Cigar Makers' Union of America of Louisville; citizens of Paducah; Woman's Club of Owensboro; International Molders' Union, No. 16, of Louisville; Brotherhood of Railway Mail Clerks of Covington; and Trades and Labor Assembly of Newport.

LOUISIANA. New Orleans Board of Trade (Ltd.): New Orleans Progressive Union; New Orleans Cotton Exchange; and International Association of Ma-chinists of New Orleans. MAINE.

Woman's Literary Union of Auburn; Weavers' Union 703, of Brunswick; and Art and Literature Club of Auburn. MARYLAND.

Musical Union of Baltimore, No. 40, and International Brotherhood of Bookbinders of Baltimore.

of Bookbinders of Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS.

International Union of Steam Engineers of Boston; Central Labor Union of Chicopee; Central Trades Council of Chicopee; Musicians' Association of Lynn; Massachusetts Branch, Federation of Labor, of Boston; Revere Woman's Club; History Club of Springfield; Popular Authors' Literary Club of Winthrop; Journeymen Barbers' Union 518, of Leominster; Cooper International Union of Boston; Pants Makers' Union, No. 173, of Boston; Trades and Labor Council of Lowell; Granite Cutters' International Association of America, Cape Ann Branch, Gloucester and Rockport, and Pigeon Cove; Retail Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Association of Boston; Boston Retail Grocers' Association; and Lawrence Woman's Club, of Lawrence.

MICHIGAN.

International Longshoremen's Association of Bay City: Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association of Detroit; International Longshoremen's Association of Manistee; Metal Trades Council of Detroit; Metal Polishers, Buffers, and Platers' Union, No. 1, of Detroit; Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, No. 210, Ann Arbor; Cigar Makers' Union, Battle Creek, No. 205; Federation of Labor of Detroit; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen of Traverse City; Muskegon Woman's Club: Lansing Typographical Union; J. M. Mott, South Haven; Cigar Makers' Local Union of Three Rivers; Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of Marquette; citizens of Saginaw, Traverse City, Battle Creek, Ann Arbor, Kalamazoo, Lansing, and Detroit; Woman's Club of Menominee; Retail Grocers' Association of Jackson; Edelweis Club, of Saginaw; Woman's League, Battle Creek; Detroit Ciothing Cutters' Union, No. 60, Detroit; Cigar Makers' Union 314, of Jackson; Woman's Club of Charlotte; Cigar Makers' International Union of America, No. 457, Joseph; and Grand International Auxiliary, No. 13, Brotherhood of Lecomotive Engineers, Saginaw.

MINNESOTA.

MINNESOTA.

MINNESOTA.

Local No. 20, Operative Plasters' International Association, of St. Paul; Journeymen Plumbers and Gas Fitters of Minneapolis; Iron Molders' Union No. 226, of Brainerd; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers Union No. 61, of St. Paul; Trades and Labor Council of St. Cloud; Monday Club of Le Sueur; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen of Two Harbors, No. 401; Saturday Club of Duluth; Retail Grocers' Association of Duluth; St. Paul Colony of New England Women; Paving Cutters' International Union, No. 15, of Sandstone; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Lodge No. 483, Crookston; Travel Class of Albert Lea; Retail Grocers' Association of Minneapolis; Brotherhood of Raliway Trainmen, No. 510, Winona; and Ceramic, Mosalc, and Encaustic Tile Layers and Helpers' International Union, No. 19, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

MISSISSIPPI.

West Point Board of Trade; Vicksburg Cotton Exchange; Vicksburg Board of Trade; Natchez Chamber of Commerce; Meridian Board of Trade; Jackson Board of Trade; Hazelhurst Board of Trade; Greenville Cotton Exchange; Business Men of Como, Panola County; and Clarksdale Business League.

MISSOURI.

Cement Workers' Union, Local 36, Kansas City; Joplin Trades Assembly; Kansas City International Association of Machinists; Coopers' International Union of St. Louis, No. 3; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, of Springfield; American Federation of Labor, of St. Louis; Journeyemen Stonecutters of St. Louis; Cigar Makers' Union 102, of Kansas City; United States History Class, of St. Louis; Culture Club of Edina; Retail Grocers' Association of St. Louis; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, No. 17, of Stanley; Journeymen Tailors' Local Union No. 16, of Sedalia; United Garment Workers of America, of St. Louis; Tuesday Literary Club, of St. Louis; International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers' Union 433, Springfield; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, Union 126, Joplin; Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association of St. Louis; and Beer Bottlers' Local Union 187, St. Louis.

MONTANA.

MONTANA.

Roundup Central Trades and Labor Council; Great Falls Typographical Union, No. 256; Anaconda Typographical Union; and Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, No. 111, Billings.

NEBRASKA.

National Live Stock Exchange, of Omaha; Omaha Retail Butchers' Protective Association; Local Union No. 109, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, of Omaha; Order of Railway Conductors, of Grand Island; Nebraska Retailers' Association, of Tilden; and International Union of Steam Engineers, Local 38, of Omaha.

Washoe Building Trades Council, Reno.

NEVADA. NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Central Labor Union of Portsmouth; Paving Cutters' Union of the United States and Canada, No. 3, Milford; International Union of Steam Engineers, No. 150, of Portsmouth; North Conway Weman's Club; and Fortnightly Club, of Keene.

NEW JERSEY.

Folders' Protective Association, of Passaic; Silk Weavers' Protective and Benevolent Association, of Paterson; Hudson County (N. J.) Butchers' Association; Sylvanua Apgar, of Milford; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, Branch 14, of Woodbury; Local Union No. 1532, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Camden; Woman's Club of Cliffside Park, Grantwood; International Association of Machinists, of Trenton; Painters' Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, Local Union No. 20, Westfield; Village Improvement Association, of Cranford; and Wednesday Morning Club, of Cranford.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK.

Central Labor Union of Batavia; residents of Utica; International Wood Carvers' Association of Buffalo; Business League of New York City; New York Produce Exchange, of New York City; Federal Labor Union No. 11200, Canastota; Federal Labor Union No. 7479, of Niagara Falls; Buffalo International Longshoremen's Association; Central Labor Union of Lancaster and Depew; Central Labor Council of Jamestown; Local No. 105, United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters, and Steam Fitters' Helpers of the United States and Canada, of Schenectady; Central Trades and Labor Assembly, of Watertown; International Union of the United Brewerymen, of Rochester; Journeymen Horseshoers' Union, of Buffalo; Musicians' Protective Association, No. 317, Hoosick Falls; Local No. 317, American Federation of Musicians, Hoosick Falls; Trades and Labor Assembly of Onelda; Order of Raliway Conductors, No. 117, of Mechanicsville; Stove Mounters and Steel Range Workers' International Union, No. 39, of Rochester; Order of Raliway Conductors, No. 154, of Binghamton; Cigar Makers' Local, No. 483, of Gloversville; Coal Teamsters and Handlers' Local Union, No. 352, of Albany; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, Local Union, No. 1006, of New York City; Knit Goods Cutters, No. 499, of Cohoes; Ice Wagon Drivers and Helpers' Union, of Rochester; Troy Typographical Union, No. 52; International Association of Machinists, No. 556, of Brooklyn; Troy Musical Association, No. 13; Retail Grocers' Association of Rensselaer; Central Labor Union of Hudson; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of Binghamton; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of Auburn; Central Trades and Labor Council of Olean; Albany Mothers' Club; Nurses' Association, of Buffalo; Carriage, Wagon, and Automobile Workers Union, No. 169, of Utica; Twentieth Century Club, of Richmond Hill; International Molders' Union, of Watertown; Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York; International Union of Steam Engineers, No. 56, of Brooklyn; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Corinth; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, No. 718, of Port Jervis; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, No. 421, of Buffalo; Business Men's Association, of Cohoes; Typographical Union No. 282, of 3inghamton; Peeksill Trades and Labor Council; Orders of Railway Conductors, No. 176, of Corning; and Plumbers and Steam Fitters' Local No. 18, of Rochester.

NORTH CAROLINA. Chamber of Commerce of Newbern; North Carolina Cotton Seed Crushers' Association; Central Labor Union of Raleigh; Merchants' Association of Raleigh; International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders of America, 329, Rocky Mount; and Woman's Club of Kinston.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Current Events Club, of Bismarck; Book and Thimble Club, Williston; and Woman's Club of Sykeston.

Current Events Club of Sykeston.

OH10.

Chamber of Commerce of Dayton; Central Labor Union of Akron; National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, of Salem; International Association of Machinists, of Piqua; Trades and Labor Assembly of Piqua; Cleveland Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers International Union; East Liverpool Trades and Labor Council; Sandusky Trades and Labor Assembly; Cleveland Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America; International Association of Machinists, of Springfield; Trades Council of Coshocton; Iron Molders Union, No. 205, Newark; National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, of Steubenville; Jefferson County Trades and Labor Association, of Steubenville; Jefferson County Trades and Labor Association, of Steubenville; Jefferson County Trades and Labor Morkers on Horse Goods, Marietta; Central Trades and Labor Coopers' International Union of North America, of Sandusky; United Brotherhood of Leather Workers on Horse Goods, Marietta; Central Trades and Labor Association of Coshocton; United Association of Journeymen Plumbers, Columbus; International Union of Steam Engineers, of Lorain; Penick & Son and nine other grocers, of Wooster; Trades and Labor Assembly of Springfield; Electrotypers' Union, No. 31, Cincinnati; German-American Typographia Union of Clacinnati; Iron Moulders' Union of Cloumbus, 145; International Moulders' Union, of Hamilton; Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, of Toledo; Rrotherhood of Painters and Decorators, of Columbus; Trades and Labor Assembly of Cleveland; Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of America, of Valley Junction; Lima Trades and Labor Assembly, Lima; International Moulders' Union, 30, of North America, of Cleveland; Protherhood of Railway Carmen of America, of Valley Junction; Lima Trades and Labor Assembly, Lima; International Moulders' Union, of Cleveland; Protherhood of Painters, of Wellsville; 170; Pattern Makers' Association of Bookbinders, of Columbus; International Moulders' Union, No. 283, of Hamilton; Carpenters and Joiners' Union of Hamilton; Shakespe OHIO.

OKLAHOMA.

Commercial Club of Wynnewood; Purcell Commercial Club; Purcell Cotton Seed Oil Mill; Citizens of Lincoln County; Chamber of Commerce of Lawton, Comanche County; Elk City Commercial Club; American Federation of Musicians, of Ardmore; Carpenters and Joiners of America, No. 1028, Ardmore; and Retailers' Association of Chickasha. OREGON.

Portland Musicians' Mutual Class; Multnomah Typographical Union, No. 58, Portland; and Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Roseburg Lodge 542, Roseburg.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Retail Butchers Melting Co., Allegheny County; Retail Butchers and Meat Dealers' Protective Association of Allegheny County; Operative Plasterers' International Association of Wilkinsburg; Royersford and Spring City Trades Council of Spring City; International Association of Machinists of Washington, 555; Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, 130. New Castle; Order of Railway Telegraphers of Emporium; International Printing Pressmen's Union of Scranton, 119; Trades Union Assembly of Wilkinsburg; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Royersford; United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters, and Steam Fitters Helpers of Bradford, No. 207; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Butler, Branch 83; American Federation of Musicians, Erie; International Union of Slate Workers of Bangor, 106; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Sheffield, 47; Iron City Lodge No. 179, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Ormsby Lodge 465, Brotherhood of Locomotive Enginemen and Trainmen, Pittsburgh; Cigar Makers' Union No. 242, York: Local No. 95, International Union of Steam Engineers: Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Medaylle; United Labor League of Sharon; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of Erie; Trades and Labor Council of Oil City; International Association of Carworkers, Lodge No. 50; of Clearfield;

Typographical Union No. 2 of Philadelphia; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Jeanette; International Molders' Union. 34, of Scranton; Journeymen Painters' Union No. 530, of New Brighton; Sewing Club of Punxsutawney; Pleasant Hour Club of Waynesburg; International Union of Steam Engineers of Pittsburgh; Journeymen Barbers' Union 248 of Dubois; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Brackenridge, 95; Musiclans' Protective Association of Chester; Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh; Local 120, Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Clarion; Lithographers International Protective and Benevolent Association, Pittsburgh; Rogersford and Spruce City Trades Council; Operative Plasterers' International Association, 18, Pittsburgh; Pittsburgh Musical Society; Order of Railway Conductors of Pittsburgh; Pittsburgh Musical Electrotypers Union 79, Franklin; Chester Federation of Labor; Order of Railway Conductors of Erie; Hair Spinners Union, Philadelphia; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of Carbondale; Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of Scranton; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineen of Pitcairn; Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters' Local 403, Chester; International Molders' Union of North America, 270, Pittsburgh; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, 376, Lehighton; Switchmen's Union of North America, 38, Erie; Merchants' Protective Association of Pittston; Retail Grocers' Association of New Castle; Epoch Club of Pittsburgh; Grand International Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Altoona; Brotherhood of Slate Workers of Bangor; Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers of North America, Pittsburgh; and Women's Club of Wilkinsburg. RHODE ISLAND.

West Side Republican and Social Club, Central Falls; Pattern Makers' Association of Providence; Thimble Club of Providence; International Association of Machinists of Providence, Lodge 147; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, No. 15, of Pawtucket; Providence Division 57, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Woonsocket Central Labor Union of Rhode Island; Retail Grocers and Market Men's Association of Providence; Carpenters' District Council of Providence; and Rhode Island Retail Grocers and Market Men's Association of Providence.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Merchants' Association of Greenwood; Strothers & Tiny, of Greenwood; Merchants of Seneca; Greenwood Business League; South Carolina Cotton Seed Crushers' Association; Dillon Chamber of Commerce; and Columbia Chamber of Commerce.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Progressive Study Club, of Revillo, and Saturday Literary Club, of Brookings.

TENNESSEE.

Business Men of Dyersburg, Dyer County; Business Men's Club of Memphis; Memphis Merchants' Exchange; Workingmen's Civic League of Memphis; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Altonpark; Trades and Labor Council of Memphis; Tennessee Federation of Womep's Clubs of Memphis; International Association of Machinists of Memphis; and Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of Chattanooga.

Retail Merchants' Association of Bryan; Texas Corn Growers' Association; Dallas Chamber of Commerce; Farmers' Cotton Oil Co. of Farmersville; Farmersville Commercial Club; Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas; Houston Cotton Exchange Board of Trades McKinney Commercial Club; Faculty of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas; Wills Point Cotton Oil Co.; Texas Cotton Growers' Association; Galveston International Association of Longshoremen; Screw Men's Benevolent Association of Galveston; Dock and Marine Council of Galveston; Trades and Labor Council of Marshall; International Boiler Makers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America, of Fort Worth; American Federation of Musicians of Houston; Federal Labor Union of Houston, No. 12909; Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of Houston, No. 697; Fort Houston Lodge of International Association of Mechanics, Palestine; Waxahachie Department Club; Texas Federation of Women's Clubs; Cattle Raisers' Association of Fort Worth; San Antonio Typographical Union, No. 172; Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Palestine; Central Labor Union of El Paso; American History Club of Austin; Galveston Typographical Union; Woman's Club of San Antonio; Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders of America, Smithville; Railway Mail Association, Women's Auxiliary, Denison; International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, No. 475, Smithville; National Expeller Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, Fort Worth; Retail Merchants' Protective Association of Denison; International Union of the United Brewery Workmen of America, Local No. 157, Dallas; and Order of Railway Conductors, Division No. 256, Smithville.

Federation of Labor, Salt Lake City; Amalgamated Sheet Metal International Alliance, Salt Lake City; Retail Merchants' Association of Ogden; and Ladies' Literary Club of Ogden.

VERMONT.

Bellows Falls, Local No. 5. United Brotherhood of Paper Makers of America, and Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen of Bellows Falls. VIRGINIA.

Musicians' Protective Association of Norfolk; Norfolk Typographical Union, No. 32; Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs of Roanoke; Central Labor Union, Newport News; Richmond Typographical Union, No. 90; and Pattern Makers' Association of Newport News. WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON.

International Union of Steam Engineers of Everett; International Association of Machinists of Port Townsend, No. 151; International Longshoremen's Association of Raymond; Olympia Typographical Union, No. 142; Whatcom Co. Growers' Association, of Bellingham; Bakers and Confectionery Workers International Union of America, Tacoma, No. 126; Woman's Club of Everett; and Grocers' Association of Spokane.

Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of Bluefield. No. 9: Glass Bottle Blowers' Association. No. 77, of Fairmont; Retail Business Men's Association of Wheeling; and Business Men's Association of Charles-town. WEST VIRGINIA.

WISCONSIN.

WISCONSIN.

Licensed Tugmen's Protective Association, No. 8, Milwaukee; Central Labor Council, Ashland; Racine Trades and Labor Council; Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders of America, Lodge No. 485, of Green Bay; Journeymen Plumbers, Local Union 75, Milwaukee; Kenosha Trades and Labor Council; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Co., Milwaukee; Central Labor Union of Wausaw; Shingle Weavers' Union of Marinette; Coopers' International Union of North America, Local 35; Economic Club of Neenah and Menasha; Antigo Division 462, Order of Railway Conductors; Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Gateway City Lodge, No. 176, La Crosse; La Crosse Woman's Club; Journeymen Tailors' Union of Ashland; No. 138 Plasterers' Protective and Benevolent Association, Milwaukee; Retail Grocers' Association of Milwaukee; Retail Grocers' Protective Association of Superior; Woman's Club of Kenosha; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of Superior, No. 557; Cigarmakers' Local Union 186, Madison; International Association of Steam, Hot Water, and Power Pipe Fitters and Repairers of Milwaukee, No. 83; International Longshoremen's Association of Green Bay; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Chequamegon Bay; Woman's Club of Sheboygan; Monday Night Club, of Waupaca; Retail Merchants' Association of Racine; Fortnightly Club, of Oconomowoc; Woman's Club of Monroe; Retail Merchants' Association of Oshkosh; and Cigarmakers' Union 135, Appleton. WYOMING.

Art Club, of Sheridan.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. So that, if we are to determine this question, Mr. President, on the basis of numbers or on the basis of votes, the dairy interests of the United States must expect to stand up and battle the great consuming masses of the American public.

It is true that for more than a decade they have "got off ith the goods." They threatened the Congress of the United with the goods." States 15 years ago, and the Congress yielded and passed the present law to enable them to exact tribute from the consuming masses of the American public; aye, more, not from the rich man's larder; no, for the rich man eats Eigin butter and pays 45 and 50 and 60 cents a pound for it. It is not a matter of great consequence to him or to his children what the cost may be of the butter that appears on his table. He does not desire to consume oleomargarine; but it is a vital question to the man who is working in the foundry or the furnace or the store, the man in a department who is receiving $600 or $1,200 a year, with a family to support and children to raise, whether his table fat shall cost him 24 cents a pound or whether it shall cost him 50 cents a pound; and yet Senators stand here ready, because they have been summoned by a special interest among their constituency, to say that to please that special interest they will penalize the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow by levying a tax on an honest food product that he consumes

Mr. DILLINGHAM. Mr. President-

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the Senator.
Mr. DILLINGHAM. I do not think I quite understand the Senator's argument. I do not see where any difficulty exists at the present time whereby the poor man whom the Senator mentions is unable to secure his oleomargarine. The amendment reported by the committee provides for a 2-cent tax, where now the tax is only one-fourth of 1 cent per pound. I will ask the Senator to make clear his proposition.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am trying to explain that; and the Government of the United States, through the department, has been trying to make that plain. Poor people are more sensitive and resentful of the idea of using a white table fat than any other class of people. Therefore, rather than buy white oleo-margarine, they patronize those butter dealers who handle a low-grade artificially colored butter, and who also illicitly color white oleomargarine and sell it for butter. They, therefore, by their prejudice and ignorance of the consequences, supply their families with these contaminated foods because they are made pleasing to the eye. No more cruel fraud than this is practiced upon the American poor. Instead of being permitted to buy a cheap, wholesome, well-inspected food, made pleasing to the eye, they are compelled to buy a low-grade, filthy, disease-infected butter or to buy oleomargarine which, though made in a sanitary manner under Federal inspection, is endangered with contamination by illicit coloration in foul cellars or garrets, and for which they pay butter prices. Of course the poor man does not go to the factory and buy a tub of oleomargarine. He has not the money to do that, and does not know how to do that, but he goes to a corner grocery and he buys a half pound or 2 pounds of butter or oleomargarine, and when he goes to the grocery the Government of the United States has advised the Senate of the United States that many of these men are not selling oleomargarine as oleomargarine, but they are committing a fraud on the people by taking it into their back offices, to do is to make them wrap every package up in a separate piece of paper, with a Government stamp on it, and then they will not be able to sell it as butter. Mr. DILLINGHAM. Will the Senator allow me to make an

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.
Mr. DILLINGHAM. Why, if the Government has found this condition, have they not prosecuted these people?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They have.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. To what extent?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. In the year 1915 alone, 2,777 violations of the oleomargarine iaw were detected, practically all of which were by pretended butter makers or dealers who are uninspected.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. Let me put the question in a little different form. If the Senator's argument is to be received as he is stating it, it would convey the impression that it is utterly impossible for the laboring man of this country to enter any store where oleomargarine is sold and purchase it in an uncolored condition.

Oh, no.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. DILLINGHAM. Now, is that true? Does the Senator make that contention?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do not make that argument. I do not say it is impossible to go into any store and purchase it, but I say that the workingmen of this country are not informed. The men who commit the fraud on them are informed, and the Treasury Department have told you that they are informed. Treasury Department have told you that they are intorned. They have committed frauds to the extent where one concern was penalized by the Government within this administration to the extent of $1,500,000 for frauds committed on these people. Then to say that they are not committing frauds is like the man who blinds his eyes and says he can not see. The frauds are here. The Treasury Department says here is the way to the frauds these frauds not by having a different color system. eliminate these frauds—not by having a different color system, but by having a uniform color system and a package container that marks it as oleomargarine.

When you come down to the other question, the poor man who eats oleomargarine is just as much entitled to eat oleomar-garine colored yellow as the rich man is entitled to eat butter colored yellow; and yet, under the law, you would say to the poor man, "You must feed your stomach with a white fat," and to the rich man, who has the money to buy Elgin butter, "You can have it colored to suit the eye and please your digestion."

Now, that is what you are doing.

I do not suppose there is any man who is willing to stand on the floor of this Senate and really come out and justify the proposition of taxing any food product 10 cents per pound in this country.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, the Senator just used a word. I think, inadvertently, when he said that a man had a right to gratify his tastes as to color and digestion. Does the Senator claim—I assume, of course, that he does not—that the colored oleomargarine is any more digestible than the uncolored?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I do claim this—that it depends on a man's eye and a man's thoughts. There is no question that your digestion is affected by your eyesight; and I have no doubt that if the Senator will think about it he will agree with me.

Mr. CLAPP. Why, I have seen blind men who ate and got along, and apparently had good, well-ordered digestive apparatus.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is true; and sometimes the blind men were very fortunate that they could not see. If they had been able to see, they might have been compelled to starve. But there is no question about it, you can not disguise the fact, that the color of certain food products makes them sell; and one class of men are here before Congress asking you to use the taxing power to give them the right to color their product so that it will sell, and use the taxing power to take away from another honest man the right to color his product so that it will sell.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly. Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator has explained how the man of modest means does not ordinarily buy in tub quantities; but is there any reason why any man who wants to buy half a pound of margarine or a pound, or 2 pounds, can not buy the white product, and buy a tablet with it that will cost 5 or 10 cents, and color it himself?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is true; he can if he knows how, and it can be explained to him; but that does not eliminate the fraud. If he knows it is oleomargarine, and knows that he can get 5 or 10 cents' worth of coloring matter, he can take it and color it; but what we are trying to do is to eliminate fraud. The fraud is committed by the fellow who is trying to palm off oleomargarine as butter; and, strange to say, the very men who do not want competition with oleomargarine are the men who have committed the frauds, to a large extent; not entirely.

Mr. FLETCHER. If the Senator's amendment is adopted then all margarine that will be offered on the market will undoubtedly be colored. Will not, therefore, the possibilities of palming off margarine for butter, after this law is enacted, be greater than they are at the present time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not if you believe what the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has said in every report that he has made for years, in which he said that just the opposite is true. The Senator comes from a State that makes tobacco. They require the manufacturer of tobacco in your State to put it in a bex, and to put a stamp around that bex that shall not be broken, and the box shall not be sold after the stamp is broken; and that is the way they protect the tobacco business against frauds. The Secretary of the Treasury in his reports, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for years, have recommended that the same thing be done with oleomargarine, and that is what the committee is proposing to do with oleomargarine in this amendment-exactly the same thing-to protect it against

In the hearings on oleomargarine, before the House Committee on Agriculture, in 1910, Mr. George L. Flanders, then assistant commissioner of agriculture of the State of New York, president of the National Dairy Union and also president of the Association of National State Dairy and Food Departments, when asked if the householders—not the boardinghouse keeper or the hotel keeper, but the householders—would be protected by the proposed stamp-sealed package, answered: "Yes; the person who did the purchasing at the store would be protected."

And I may add that while millions and millions of pounds of margarine have been sold for butter, it seems to have been in a certain sense a harmless fraud. The newspapers and magazines have been searched in vain for a single complaint by a consumer on account of this substitution, and no physician seems ever to have charged that disease was transmitted to any consumer by margarine.

Mr. LODGE, Mr. President—

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I find there is but one European country that does not allow oleomargarine to be colored yellow. All the balance of them do allow it to be colored. There is no separate tax on it because of its color; and Denmark, which is the greatest butter-producing country in the world, or was before this war came on, was also the greatest producer and consumer of oleomargarine.

Another thing that you find is that in the dairy States of the country you find more oleomargarine sold than you do in the nondairy States of the country. You will not find, in proportion to population, nearly as much oleomargarine sold in Florida as you will find in Michigan, and Florida is not a dairy State while Michigan is.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Denmark, per capita, exports more butter than any country in the world; and my recollection is that, per capita, it consumes more oleomargarine than any

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator is correct about that.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President—
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.
Mr. LODGE. The Senator said a few moments ago that one firm had been penalized to the extent of a million and a half dollars for frauds in selling oleomargarine as butter. What was the nature of the business of the firm, or corporation, or whatever it was?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They were in the creamery business and sold every pound of their product as butter. The statement is contained in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury. It was in the neighborhood of one million five hundred and some odd thousand dollars.

Mr. LODGE. I did not hear it read; but it seemed to me such an extraordinarily large fine that I was curious to know what the business was that was equal to the fine.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They were engaged in selling butter to the American people and were mixing foreign fats with their butter and selling it as butter. The American Government discovered it and made them come across and pay the fine.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Was it not largely a question of color?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, of course it was. That is just exactly where they committed the fraud, and no law requiring oleomargarine to be white, as the Secretary of the Treasury has said, would have prevented this fraud.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. They committed the fraud by coloring the oleomargarine in the similitude of butter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They committed the fraud by getting foreign fats into their uninspected butter factory and mixing it with their butter, which technically made it oleomargarine, but it should have been called adulterated butter.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And coloring it. Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; but by mixing it up with their butter and selling it to the American people as butter. where they committed the fraud; and that fraud is being committed on the American people every day.

Mr. President, I have here some statements as to the world's sales of oleomargarine and a memorandum as to the foreign oleomargarine laws that I think may be of interest, and I ask to have it printed in the RECORD at this place in connection with my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that order will be made.

The matter referred to is as follows:

World's sales oleomargarine, January, 1915.

Countries.	Our previous figure.	Production.1
Germany (158 factories)  Annual production estimated by a margarine paper, "Der Landhasthof," May 27, 1914.	Pounds. 500, 000, 000	Pounds. 550, 000, 000
Consumption, 8 pounds per capita.  England (10 to 12 factories).  Annual sales astimated on information of various manufacturers, brokers, etc., that one half of the English consumption was imported and the other half made in England, 80 per cent of it by the Monsted Co., who are said to make 150,000,000 pounds yearly. Consumption, 83	375,000,000	220,000,000 pounds per capita.  Holland (10 factories).  Annual production. Estimate made basis 85 per cent English export, 15 per cent local consumption. Consumption, 20 pounds per capita.	220,000,000	286,000,900
United States (32 manufacturers)	140,000,000	140,000,000
Denmark (16 factories).  Annual production, Danish Government report, 1911. Consumption, 32.6 pounds per capita.	69, 600, 000	110,000,000
France (12 factories)	40,000,000	40,000,000
Belgium (10 factories).  Annual production estimated on Government figures for 4 months of present year.	24,000,000	24,000,000
Newfoundland	3,600,000	3,600,000
Norway.  Production 1912 (lessexport), 25,715 metric tons, as per Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce bulletin, by E. W. Thompson, or 333 pounds per capits. Consumption 332 pounds per capits.	56,500,000	66,000,000
Sweden  Production 1913 estimated 20,000 metric tons, as above, or 7 pounds per capits. Consumption 7 pounds per capits.	41,000,000	44,000,000
Austria-Hungary.  According Vienna reports Sept. 22, 1914, says no Government record of production, but esti- mated consumption yearly.	33,000,000
	1,505,100,000

<sup>1</sup>U.S. Department of Commerce Bulletin No. 89, Special Agents Series. No figures for Russia, Italy, Central or South American countries

The table of production and consumption of this article in the various countries shows that the United States, with a population greater than any except Russia, has the lowest per capita consumption, while Denmark, which is primarily a dairy country, whose butter establishes the standard by which the butters of all other countries are graded or compared, has the second largest per capita consumption, with 32-do pounds, of any country in the world. Only Norway, with 33-d pounds per capita, exceeds Denmark.

MEMORANDUM OF FOREIGN OLEOMARGARINE LAWS.

ENGLAND.

Permits artificial coloration of margarine (oleomargarine). Limits butter fat to 10 per cent. Limits moisture to 16 per cent. Requires retailer to use wrapper marked "Margarine" for re-HOLLAND.

(1) Permits artificial coloration.
(2) Requires word "Margarine" shown on both package displayed for sale and each sale to be wrapped in the wrapper so marked.

RELGIUM.

(1) Permits artificial coloration.
(2) Levies Government tax of 5 francs per 100 kilos or one-half cent per pound.
(3) Establishes 82 per cent fat standard.

- (4) Requires use of one-half per cent each sesame oil and potato flour. Sesame oil is to make it chemically easy to distinguish margarine from butter.
   (5) Requires retail dealer to properly mark packages.

FRANCE.

(1) Prohibits artificial coloration of oleomargarine.
(2) Does not permit its sale in stores selling butter.
(3) Requires retail dealers to display their signs and properly mark their packages.

GERMANY.

(1) Permits artificial coloration.
(2) Requires use of 10 per cent sesame oil.
(3) Requires manufacturers' packages to have red streak 2 centimeters large on containers with height up to 35 centimeters and at least 5 centimeters on higher containers.
(4) Requires retail dealers to properly mark and label packages as "Margarine."
(5) Mixing butter with margarine is not allowed.
(6) Prohibits handling or manufacturing of margarine in places where butter and cheese are made or handled.
(7) Location of manufacturers must be made known to authorities and information regarding materials, methods, etc., furnished when required.

equired.

(8) Seilers not allowed to put up margarine in butter shapes.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

Permits artificial coloration.

Requires use of certain per cent of sesame oil.

Prohibits manufacture in creamery where butter is made.

Margarine manufacturer under government inspection.

Margarine must be packed in containers whose length is twice

(5) Margarine must be purchased their width.

(6) Requires manufacturers and retailers' packages be labeled or marked "Margarine."

(7) Requires dealers to display signs when they sell oleomargarine.

DENMARK.

(1) Permits artificial coloration of margarine up to a certain standard established by the government.
(2) Requires the use of a certain percentage of sesame oil, and stipulates that a red band shall be placed around the outside of each original shipping package and that the package shall be plainly marked "Margarine."

garine."

In all of these countries, with the exception of France, margarine is permitted to be artificially colored and sold in original packages properly branded as "Margarine," but no countries except Belgium and the United States imposes a tax upon this food product.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My amendment proposed to go further for the protection of the people than any other country in the world, by requiring margarine to be put in small sanitary packages fully labeled and sealed with the Government seal, which it shall be unlawful for any dealer to break. I am sorry to have taken up so much of the time of the Senate; but I feel that one of the most important amendments or clauses of the bill is this amendment. It is true that you may be taxing the American people several hundred million dollars in this bill for the maintenance of the Government. It is true that you may be issuing several hundred million dollars of bonds in this bill to take care of the obligations of the Government, and that the increased taxation growing out of this amendment amounts to only three and one-half million dollars. It looks infinitesimal, possibly, when you compare it with immense burden of taxes that you are levying in other items in this bill, but it is not. The most important item to the people of this country in the bill now pending before the United States Senate is this amendment to require an honest administration of the food laws of your country, and to enable the great masses of the American people to get an honest food product without being compelled to pay a tax of 10 cents a pound to the Government of the United States in order to boost the business of men who are growing rich out of dairy products to-day-dairy products that are pyramided until they have doubled in value in the last decade.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.
Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I have a little statement here that it seems to me should be incorporated in the Senator's address at this particular time, giving a statement of what the law permits in England and other countries.

In England the law permits the artificial coloring of margarine.

In Holland, a great dairy country, the law permits the artificial coloring, requiring the word "Margarine" to be shown upon the packages plainly.

In Belgium the law permits artificial coloring and levies a tax of half a cent a pound.

France prohibits the artificial coloring of margarine. requires retail dealers to display margarine signs, and to mark their packages properly.

In Germany the law permits artificial coloring. In Norway the law permits artificial coloring. In Sweden, the law permits artificial coloring.

In Denmark, the law permits artificial coloring of margarine. So that all those great countries permit the artificial coloring of margarine.

As to the matter of coloring, we all know, as has been said here to-day—every farmer knows—that in June we can have rich, nice colored butter; but in the wintertime, when the cows are fed largely on hay and silage and straw, more or less, and other foods, the butter is white. I will say, too, that a man's appetite and his digestion are very much regulated by that which is pleasing to the eye. We buy a little annatto, as it is called, which is a vegetable product of the carrot-utterly harmless, the doctors tell us-and it is mingled and mixed with the butter, and makes it look far better, and does not interfere with its digestion or assimilation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is all I desire to say upon the

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I only want to take a few minutes at this time in the discussion of this subject. right in the very beginning of the discussion we ought to learn, if we can, who are the real parties in interest in support of this amendment, and who are the parties who are opposing it.

After listening to the argument of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood], one would assume that no one is interested in this matter except the Elgin creameries or some of these larger institutions. I have here a brief entitled "A reply to protests and statements of the National Dairy Union against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill." Now, this is answered by whom? First, by the Inter-state Cotton-Seed Crushers' Association. This is one of the forces that is behind this movement-a force that desires to palm off on the American people cottonseed oil for butter fat.

What is the next one? The next one is the American National Livestock Association, dealers in beef cattle, the beef cattle being sold to the great Beef Trust. Now, of course, they may get some slight benefit from this amendment, as it may create a greater demand for tallow to be sold for butter. I agree with the Senator from Alabama that the farmer will not get a great deal of benefit out of the increased price of beef because of the amount of tallow in the beef that could be sold at a better price; but the Beef Trust undoubtedly would secure considerable advantage.

It might be well, right here, that we should understand the constituents of oleomargarine. I take their brief, and in that they indicate the number of pounds of each article that were used in the United States during the year 1915. There were of oleo oil and stearin-that is made practically from what we on the farm would call beef tallow-57,379,868 pounds. There were used of vegetable oil, and you might just as well have said cottonseed oil, for that is what it means, 30,359,664 pounds. There was used neutral lard, and so far as that is concerned you might just as well have left the word "neutral" out, as it is used only to indicate that they are using only the oil extracted from the crude fat. They also explain that they are taking the leaf lard instead of the intestinal lard-that is, the fat around the intestines, which is stripped off and is also converted into lard. I do not know that one part of the lard is any purer than the other, but it undoubtedly looks a little better, as it comes out in a large flat leaf from the animal; but, after all, it is hog fat; it is hog lard, and nothing else; and there were 24,904,377 pounds of that used.

Then, again, they used 4,694,402 pounds of butter. They are using butter. For what purpose? To color it? To give it flavor? What is the purpose of using the butter? Are they using butter that costs 45 cents a pound to mix with lard that cost 4 cents a pound for the purpose of coloring, or is it for the purpose of giving a butter flavor? If they are using it, are they using the higher priced butter or are they using the lower and cheaper kind of butter, the very butter that the Senator was explaining that was filled with tuberculosis, and so forth? The cheaper butter, the dangerous butter that he was speaking of, I am informed, is the very butter that is used in mixing in the manufacture of oleomargarine.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Does the Senator state that as a fact? Mr. McCUMBER. I state that as the information I received when I was chairman of the Committee on Manufactures. I when I was charman of the Committee on Mandactures. I have not got it here. I could show that the butter that was used was the cheaper grade of butter.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Does that include rancid or bad butter?

Mr. McCUMBER. Butter may be rancid and it may not be very fair. We go down here every day to the restaurant and we get butter that is decidedly rancid sometimes, and absolutely unfit to eat; and yet at the same time we are paying good big butter prices for it. The mere fact of its being slightly rancid does not, I understand, make it necessarily unhealthful.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is a rather surprising statement. I should like to have it enlarged upon.

Mr. McCUMBER. It certainly is not as good. I do not be lieve the Senator would like it as well, whether or not he would agree with this test. I do not think the Senator who has been dining here for some time will have any complaint to make that he has lost his health by using the butter that is furnished in the Senate restaurant, and yet he knows as well as I do that a great quantity of somewhat rancid, old butter, has been used there.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The thing that surprises me is the Senator's statement that rancid butter is not necessarily deleterious to health. I had always thought otherwise.

Mr. McCUMBER. I think if you will make a chemical examination of it you will not find in slightly rancid butter any very deleterious substances. Certainly it is far less deleterious than any kind of hog fat, whether such fat comes from leaf lard or where it comes from. We have heard a great deal to-day about the healthfulness of oleomargarine. Go to any physician who will prescribe a diet for you for a weak stomach and see if he will not exclude from your diet all kinds of rich pastry shortened with lard. I will ask you if he will not eliminate from your diet the fat products of the hog entirely, Will he not ask you to abstain from the use of both lard and tallow? I have never heard yet of any physician designating tallow as being especially healthful.

May I interrupt the Senator? Mr. PAGE.

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. PAGE. I have before me Food Inspection and Analysis, by Lynch, published by Wiley & Sons, and on page 542 there is given the percentage of neutral lard which enters into the production of oleomargarine, or did at the time of the publication of this book some six or seven years ago. Oleo oil, 20 to 25 per cent. They give the range from the minimum to the maximum. Neutral lard, 40 to 45 per cent.

Mr. McCUMBER. In other words, we are consuming a product nearly one-half of which is nothing more than lard, using it for butter and claiming that it is just as healthy and just as good as butter.

Mr. PAGE. As answering further what the Senator says in regard to butter, the statement here is that butter enters to the extent of 10 to 25 per cent and milk and cream from 5 to 20 per cent in the better grades of oleomargarine. For no other purpose than to give it the flavor of butter, 25 per cent of butter enters in and 30 per cent of milk.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President—
Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator.
Mr. CURTIS. I wish to know what is the per cent of cotton-

Mr. PAGE. The per cent of cottonseed oil has increased very largely in the last few years. I think it is taking the place now of other materials, because they have found that cottonseed oil in certain conditions gives a little of the yellowish color to oleomargarine.

Mr. McCUMBER. Replying to the Senator from Kansas, I will say that the very first page of this report gives the ingredients used in the year 1915 in oleomargarine, and I assume those figures give the proportionate quantity of each ingredient that is used. In round numbers, we find the use of stearin 57,000,000 pounds to 30,000,000 pounds of cottonseed oil, 24,000,000 pounds of neutral lard, and 4,000,000 pounds of butter. I think that would give about two-fifths made up of

Mr. President, there is not a single dairyman I know of who wishes to prevent the sale of oleomargarine. I have received a great many letters from all over the country, and I have never yet found one where the writer desired to put the manufacturer of eleomargarine out of business. All they are asking for in this case is that oleomargarine shall be sold as such. They are not interested in what form it may be sold by the manufacturer to the commission firm, and then sold to the wholesalers, and then sold to the retailers. What they are interested in is the form in which it is delivered to the man who sits down at his table, and he is the one after all who will determine the number of pounds of oleomargarine that will be used. They want to have the man who sits at the table decide for himself whether he wishes oleomargarine or whether he wishes butter; therefore they want the margarine to have its own distinctive color. Let me say to the Senator from Alabama, who claims that the American people and the Federation of Labor want eleomargarine, that there is a very easy and simple test to determine that fact. Let him go to any boarding house in this city or any other city where laborers board. Let him then set a plate of let him put on the table another plate and mark that Chicago oleomargarine. He will find out very quickly whether or not the American people want to consume oleomargarine. pound of oleomargarine would remain there for six months, and it would not be touched, but your plate of butter would have to be refilled very many times.

The whole truth of the matter is this: The American people do not want the oleomargarine. They do not want to be deceived into purchasing it. They are willing that you should sell it, if you will sell it for what it actually is—eleomargarine. Now, how can you do that? I know you make a great play here about coloring it, so that it may be made more presentable. The whole truth is that you want to color it because it is easier to defraud the consumer than it otherwise would be. If you wish to avoid all objection from dairymen, all you have to do is this, and I will guarantee that practically all the dairymen will indorse you if you do it: Simply provide that no oleomargarine shall be colored in imitation of butter. Then you can buy it as oleomargarine. You can eliminate your tax entirely and let it be sold in the country upon its own merits. I feel quite certain that we will not buy it if we know what it is. But if you think the people do want it, just unmask it, and then try to sell it.

The American people eat uncolored butter. Most of the butter that you receive in the wintertime is not colored. We are not bothering ourselves whether the butter is white or whether it As a matter of fact, in some of the very best and freshest butter, unsalted butter, that we get in the wintertime there is no coloring matter, and it is always fresh and always good. There may be those who have a particular taste or liking for the golden yellow butter. Then let them color it yellow. No one ever colors it yellow for the purpose of selling it as oleomargarine. Of that you can be absolutely certain. On the other hand, no one ever colored eleomargarine except for the sole and only purpose of foisting it off on somebody else as butter, and therein lies the difference. One coloring is not intended to deceive, the other is so intended.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. That may be all very well. I have never sold 10 pounds of butter in my life, and I have been a farmer all my life. We have eaten up the butter we have made. But almost universally winter butter is white, That would depend on the feed, the straw if you choose, or dry hay, or ensilage, bran, and other foods. The lack of grass takes away the coloring. Yet, as I said before, farmers will color it up; it enriches it and makes it look nicer. There are many people who use it just white and do not care, but it is pleasanter to the eye and hence generally more palatable when yellow. As to the Senator's remark, if he will permit, where he said there was no harm in eating rancid butter, I do not think—

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I did not say there was no harm in it.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. What did the Senator say? Mr. McCUMBER. I said we were often using butter in our Senate restaurant that was a little rancid and I did not think was hurting anyone. Of course, butter can be so old and spoiled that it is not fit for food.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I thought the Senator said that it was not interfering with general health. The fact is I have heard doctors say it contains an acid which produces disorders of the stomach that are alarmingly dangerous. I would advise the Senator to look out for rancid butter.

I feel on this butter question if a man wants to eat butterine, as they call it, or oleomargarine or margarine, let him buy it. I say it would be a crime and a wrong for us to surround the manufacture of margarine with such laws as would make it practically unobtainable to the average man. Butter is 50 cents a pound, and there are thousands of workingmen throughout the land who can not have it. Oleomargarine is not a harmful diet; it is healthful and generally beneficial. I care not what it is marked, if it is not poisonous. A little while ago I read from an article showing that every country abroad but France permitted coloring it and allowed it to be sold on the market, though always plainly marked as "Margarine."

Mr. McCUMBER. I think the Senator is mistaken there.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I think this is a wrong time for us to shut out eleomargarine or margarine, as it is called, by any process of legislation.

Mr. McCUMBER. I think the Senator is mistaken. Here s a report which states that France, Germany, and Denmark, all three of them, prohibit the coloring of oleomargarine.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. That is a very funny thing. read into the RECORD a few moments ago-

Mr. McCUMBER. I heard it. Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. From a trade magazine giving the features of legislation and stating that the coloring of butter on the dining table and mark it Elgin butter; and then loleomargarine was permitted in every one of those countries except France, and France did not absolutely prevent the use or sale of margarine, but it did prevent the coloring; that it was permitted in England, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, and all of them. So I can not understand how our authorities are so widely divergent.

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question? Do I understand the Senator from New Jersey to prefer oleomargarine to butter?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Oh! Like yourself I am fond of good things, none are too good for me. I get the best I can get wherever I get the opportunity; but there are thousands who are not blessed with a liberal purse, thousands who struggle for their daily bread. When we read of the thousands in New York City who can not get even bread without the butter, I am willing to give everybody the privilege to get what he pays for. I do not want him to be defrauded.

Mr. PENROSE. May I ask the Senator one more question? Does the Senator pretend to say that the healthful and invigorating product of the dairy is to be compared with the oleomargarine product which I read here is composed as follows:

Neutral, or No. 1, oleo oil is made from the following:

Gaul fat, ruffle fat, gaul piece of gut end, briskets trimmed from the bed pickings, crotch trimming from the bed pickings, pannch trimmings, pluck trimmings, reed trimmings, heart casing fats.

No. 2 or second-grade oils:

Gut ends—small fat, chipped fat, which is taken off the middle guts, machine fat, which is taken off round gut by the fatting machines, heart trimmings, pluck trimmings, miscellaneous bed pickings of the second grade, kidney fat, clean trimmings from cattle, which are being cut up for canning or sausage, skimmings from scrap vat of No. 1 oil.

No. 3 or third-grade oil:

Head fat, fat trimmed from cattle heads when checking, plucked sweet-bread trimming, liver trimmings, bladder trimmings, fat from chilled beef tongues when they are trimmed, miscellaneous fats from other departments which are kept clean, the first washings from the oleo press cloths before soda has been used, scrap vat skimmings from the second-grade oil.

And so on, giving the component parts of a great number of them. Does the Senator prefer those trimmings to butter?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I will answer your question. You have emphasized them and picked them out in the most nauseous way. I know of no country—
Mr. PENROSE. I make no comments on them. I am reading from

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I know of no State in the Union in which good living is better maintained and better advanced than up among the Dutch of Pennsylvania. If you want wanced than up among the Dutch of Fennsylvania. If you want me to answer, I will do so. I heard the Senator read about the gut fat, the brisket fat, and a myriad of other things. Very many times I have spent most delightful days and many hours in various places in Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvanians are a most hospitable and liberal people, with all of the goody-goodies and the things that come from animal creation—pork and beef of all kinds; and a predominating food there—in fact, it is sought after; it is put in dainty packages and marked "Philadelphia sausage"—is made of the pickings of gut fat and the fat from the main gut, the brisket fat, and all those horrible things that the Sonaten has beauty things that the Senator has brought to our attention.

If the Senate wants an evidence of the splendid quality of the gut fat, the brisket fat, and all the other ruffled guts, and evidence of what they will do for mankind, for the building of magnificent men and glorious and beautiful women of the country side. I refer you to the Apollo of Pennsylvania—the Senator try side, I refer you to the Apollo of Pennsylvania-the Senator from Pennsylvania. [Laughter.] Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I do not eat these products.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I do. Mr. PENROSE. The Senator from New Jersey is a splendid physical specimen, and perhaps he has attained these stalwart proportions by using No. 3 grade fat, fat trimmed from cattle heads when checking, plucked sweetbread trimming, liver trim-mings, bladder trimmings, fat from chilled beef tongues when they are trimmed, miscellaneous fats from other departments which are kept clean, the first washings from the oleo press cloths before soda has been used, scrap vat skimmings from the second-grade oil, and so forth.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, I do not know. I have eaten some of those head things which I hear the Senator talk-I have eaten headcheese and I have eaten liverwurst up there in Pennsylvania. They have a hospitable habit, you know, all around at the little halfway houses on the country roads—you know all about it, for you and I have traveled up through that country and we dropped in for rest and for resuscitation, and both of us are fond on occasions of eating a little liverwurst, a little headcheese, a little bologna, or a little frankfurter. We eat all those things. They require to be well taken care of, and so do butter and milk.

I know of nothing that will take up the odors of a cellar or of a milk room more readily than will milk. The very atmosphere, the surroundings, are taken up by milk as a sponge would suck up water. There is no commodity that has to be treated more delicately or more carefully than milk. It is perfectly natural that in a thousand instances it should be subjected to disease germs and to a million other things. It requires care to keep milk pure as well as any other food product. I love good milk; I love good butter; I love good living; and I enjoy, as the Senator does, the best. Let our Bureau of Public Health guard the purity of our food products and our Congress guard against fraud upon the people.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, after listening to this little side issue for awhile, let us return to the real facts in the case. I am sorry that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE] has left after having made such an eloquent argument, because when he was pleading for the poor people who can not afford to buy butter, and who, therefore, are so desirous of purchasing oleomargarine, it seemed to me he was a bit inconsistent, because we are perfectly willing that they should go on with the present law and purchase oleomargarine with only onequarter of 1 cent per pound tax. The proposed amendment that is before us levies a tax of 2 cents a pound. The whole trouble lies in the fact that you do not want to sell the elec-margarine for eleomargarine, but you wish to sell it for butter. If the American people are so poor that they can not pay the farmer an honest price for his butter; I think it is about time that they laid aside their fastidious—their artistic—taste and bought uncolored oleomargarine instead of paying 10 cents per pound to get it colored a yellow or butter color. Those poor people do not pay 10 cents per pound to color their winter Those poor butter.

Where is the demand for oleomargarine? We are applying our proposed protective legislation at the wrong end. tell you where it is consumed. It is consumed in your thirdclass boarding houses and in your hotels; in your restaurants; it is consumed in your logging camps; it is consumed where men hire other men and furnish them their food; and in ninetynine cases out of one hundred it is consumed by people who do not know that they are consuming oleomargarine.

It may be just as healthful as is the other product, but it is a fraud upon the people who would prefer butter. I will take butter in preference to oleomargarine, and if my taste for butter is a depraved taste, please allow me the privilege of pandering to that depraved taste of mine and of buying butter, and do not color your oleomargarine so as to get something better off on me when I am willing to go right along in my old way of buying and consuming butter in preference to deodorized lard and beef tallow. I never saw any beef tallow that I liked very well. I do not care how you flavor it or what you mix it with. I do not want to eat it as butter; and I assert right here—and I know I am borne out by every specialist in the country—that neither lard nor beef stearine is as easily assimilated as is butter fat; and I prefer butter fat, whether it is better or worse.

Mr. President, the agriculturists compose one class that always sell their products for just exactly what they are. It may not be the very best product, but it always leaves their hands with the stamp of truth upon it. If the farmer sells rancid butter, he only gets a rancid-butter price for it. If he sells pure and the best butter, he will get a good price for it. If he sells that which is fit only for axle grease, he will only get an axlegrease price for it. But your renovator can afterwards purchase the rancid butter; he can deodorize it. And he can purchase your hog fat; he can deodorize that, and can compel the man who always sells a thing upon its merits and for exactly what it is to come in competition with his spurious product. In the contest for favor truth will always win in a fair field; but against a masked lie its chances, at the best, are only even.

That is the objection that the farmer or the dairyman has to colored oleomargarine. If they will not put a lying mask upon oleomargarine, if they will provide all the way through, from the time it leaves the Beef Trust in Chicago until it is upon the table, some kind of a stamp that will say to the ultimate consumer, the eater, "This is oleomargarine," we will be perfectly willing to have eliminated every penny of taxation on it. The oleomargarine manufacturers do not want to do that. They would rather pay 2 cents a pound, they would rather pay 5 cents a pound, they would rather pay 7 cents a pound and have the privilege of foisting a lie upon the American people and selling something for butter which is not butter.

This provision will result in no less a fraud than that which has been perpetrated upon the American public for years. Why, Mr. President, a few years ago if you had gone to one of our great cities you could have seen a great brick building, on the side of which were enormous letters running the full length of the building, and spelling the words "Pure Vermont maple sirup." Then we passed a pure-food bill, and the moment that that pure-food bill was enacted down came that sign, and in the place of it was another sign, reading, "Karo, the best sirup in the world." I could have taken you to the Northwest and have shown you other very important manufactures of maple sirup. It may be that the sirup which they produced was actually a better product than Vermont maple sirup; perhaps it was more easily assimilated; perhaps its flavor was just as good; but it was a fraud on the consumer; it was a fraud upon every man who produced genuine maple strup in the United States. We eliminated that fraud; and then, on account of the coloring of oleomargarine, we began to eliminate the fraud that was perpetrated against the American public in selling it as butter. But we could find only one method in 1902 which would accomplish that purpose, and that was to so tax the colored product as to make it unprofitable to put it in competition with We allowed the manufacturers of oleomargarine to sell it, under a proper label and with the mask torn off of it, for whatever they could get for it, and allowed the public to con-

Now, Mr. President, by every principle of national justice it seems to me that the farmer who sells a product for what it really is ought to have a field of fair and open competition. If he is compelled to compete with this product, if the product of the hog and of beef is to be placed in competition with pure butter, he ought to know that he is competing with something that is sailing under its true colors.

It is charged that the present law is deceptive, that while it purports to be a law for the purpose of increasing revenue, as a matter of fact it is a law which has been enacted for the purpose of destroying an industry. I want to deny that right here. It is not for the purpose of destroying the industry of the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, but it is intended for the sole purpose of protecting the public against a fraud perpetrated upon them by the sale of a product that looks like butter for butter.

The man who practices the fraud, it seems to me, Mr. President, of selling a low grade of hog fat with a little suet for butter can not be heard to complain if the character of the weapon used against him to prevent this fraud is not entirely fair. He can meet it in a fair way, and that is by saying: "I will not color my oleomargarine in imitation of butter; I will not attempt to sell it as butter; I will not allow it to deceive anyone." If he will do that, there will be no legislation, against oleomargarine.

and no necessity for any legislation, against oleomargarine.

If there is any other way than by this method of taxation that we can reach that product upon the table, let the manufacturer of oleomargarine point that way out to us, and we will adopt it and free him entirely from any character of tax. But, I repeat, we do not care so much whether the wholesaler or the retailer or the keeper of the hotel buys the article as oleomargarine, what we want to know is that we, who consume it and are consuming it with the belief that we are consuming butter, shall not be deceived. If you will protect us in that, the manufacturer can take his oleomargarine and sell it in any way he sees fit. It is up to those, Mr. President, who employ coloring matter to deceive the public to show in what other way we can protect the final consumer. It is the coloring matter that enables the manufacturers of oleomargarine to perpetrate and to perpetuate this fraud.

Mr. President, the demand for their goods depends entirely upon the amount consumed in the household and boarding places; and in all of the legislation which they have proposed, they are very careful, indeed, not to propose anything that will protect the householder or boarder, or anything that will protect the final consumer. If they wish to avoid this tax, let them cease counterfeiting butter. That is all we ask. The natural cease counterfeiting butter. color of butter is yellow; and, if you make it more yellow, you do not deceive anyone with the idea that you are selling them anything but butter. The natural color of oleomargarine is white; in other words, it is the color of tallow or the color of lard, and it will be detected upon any table immediately, not only by the color, but by the grain, if in its natural state. All we are asking is, that it be left in that condition so that it will not deceive anyone.

I have heretofore stated, Mr. President, that if the manufacturers of oleomargarine believed that they could sell their product any better by coloring it blue, they would do so. not coloring it yellow because it is more presentable; it might be just as beautiful if it were a pale sea-shell pink, and would look just as well upon the table. They do not want to color it pink because, then, it would not deceive anyone; it would look just as nice upon the table if it were a baby blue color; but they do not want to color it blue because, as I have said, it would deceive no one; and therefore they purpose to continue the fraud that they have been attempting upon the public ever since the manufacture of this product began,

Mr. President, it was stated here a short time ago that all of the European countries, or at least all those named, allowed and permitted oleomargarine to be colored. That is not true, according to the latest statement I have here in a protest. Germany France, and Belgium require oleomargarine to be sold in separate stores. They will not even allow it to be sold in the same store where butter is sold. Germany and France prohibit the coloring of oleomargarine in imitation of butter. It may be colored in any other way. More oleomargarine, it was stated, is sold per capita in Denmark than in any other country, and yet Denmark does prohibit the coloring of oleomargarine in imitation of butter.

Mr. President, I suppose if one should argue here for a month it would make very little change in the action of Senators. Every Senator knows how he intends to vote on this subject. I only ask that they protect the American farmers against fraud; that is all. Conceive of any kind of legislation you see fit to protect them against the sale of oleomargarine for butter, and we will consent to eliminate any character of tax upon oleomargarine; but we know that you and your companies will never consent in the world, of their own volition, to refrain from color-ing their oleomargarine in such a manner that they can perpetrate a fraud upon the American people.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. BORAH. Is the law as it is now on the statute books satisfactory to the Senator?

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; it certainly is, so far as it goes.
Mr. PENROSE. Does the Senator mean to the farmers? Mr. BORAH. Yes. Mr. PENROSE. The law needs reenforcing.

Mr. McCUMBER. I mean it is satisfactory in this respect: If it were in my power—and I do not know but that we have the power—I should like to go further and say that no oleomargarine could be used upon a table in a public eating house without being marked on the table as such. Then let these people who say that oleomargarine is so much more healthful than butter use it, and they will not be deceived in eating butter when they want to get oleomargarine. I believe that we would like to strengthen the present law to that extent.

Mr. BORAH. In what respect is the man who sits down at the table at the present time protected?

Mr. McCUMBER. He is not protected.
Mr. BORAH. That is what I understood. Then the law can not be satisfactory

Mr. McCUMBER. No; I say, it is satisfactory so far as it goes. It does not go as far as I should like to have it go.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Well, he is protected to this extent—that if this oleomargarine is in the similitude of butter the person who imposes it upon him of course is liable.

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, he certainly is protected to a great extent, because the far greater quantity, if the statistics are at all true, is sold and consumed in its uncolored state. If we did not have that law of course it would all be colored; and the moment this law passes every pound of oleomargarine will be colored, and it will be put in competition with the farmers' product

Mr. BORAH. The Senator means, if the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama is adopted.

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. With the exception, of course, that under this amendment the Senator from Alabama proposes to put it in a separate package, which package will be appropriately labeled.

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; but that can be taken into the hotel, into the boarding house, and with one of those little butter rollers that they use they can cut out a little piece of butter and then roll it in the form of a globe, destroy its label, and serve on the table as butter.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do not think it will protect the consumer

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, it protects him only to the extent that it protects them at the source, in a less amount of the colored oleomargarine going onto the market,

Mr. CLAPP. The revenue stamp does not go to the table, under the Senator's amendment.

Mr. McCUMBER. No; it does not. Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I am reasonably familiar with this oleomargarine question, and I have taken quite an active interest in it in this body for over 20 years.

Before proceeding with the few remarks which I intend to make to the Senate, I should like to answer the inquiry of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Boran] as to whether or not the law as it stands to-day is satisfactory to the dairy interests. I say it is not satisfactory, because it should be strengthened if its original purpose is to be carried out and these interests protected from the only thing they complain about, and that is fraudulent and deceptive competition. The law has become to some extent inadequate because methods have been devised, as I understand, of coloring the component parts which enter into oleomargarine, so that when they get into the final composition the article becomes colored in imitation of butter. So that the effort to confine the sale of oleomargarine to the uncolored article has to some extent failed; and all those who are interested in protecting these vast dairy interests over who are interested in protecting these vast dairy interests over the United States, involving many million dollars and giving employment to thousands of men, women, and children, ought earnestly to cooperate to strengthen the law instead of breaking it down completely, as would be the result if the Underwood amendment should become a law.

When the Grout bill was pending before this body in 1902, Mr. President, I received thousands of resolutions from the granges of Pennsylvania using the passage of that measure granges of Pennsylvania urging the passage of that measure, which, according to my recollection, passed this body by only one or two majority. It was a hard contest, fought between the same elements that are engaged in the present controversy one advocating the pending amendment, the other opposing it. The elements represented by the aggregation designated as the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' Association and the American National Live Stock Association were as active then as they are to-day in trying to promote the sale of oleomar-garine without restrictions. Notwithstanding the potent forces which they could summon to their aid, the Senate and the House passed the Grout law, representing an effort from the organized bodies of the agricultural people of the country extending over many years, and culminating in this notable

Then followed, or ran along concurrently, legislation in the different States, all aimed to regulate oleomargarine in its sale in so far as it entered into fraudulent competition with the product of the dairy, until most of the States in the Union have legislative enactments looking toward carrying out the purposes of the Grout bill; and these State enactments will be quite largely interfered with, if not broken down, should the pending amendment pass the Congress.

I have here a letter from the dairy and food commissioner of Pennsylvania in which he says that the deputy attorney general went over the second section, known as section No. 401, very carefully, and says that it is a dangerous provision to be enacted into a Federal law, as the very clever way in which the separate sanitary manufacturer's original package is woven into separate santary manufacturer's original package is woven into the proposed measure may permit colored oleomargarine to be shipped into a State and sold by a retail dealer under the original package, even though the law of the State in which it is sold specifically prohibits the sale of colored oleomargarine, and would have the effect of destroying the State laws of all such States which prohibit the sale of oleomargarine if it looks like or resembles butter of any shade of yellow.

The argument is made, Mr. President, that this amendment is desirable for two reasons: First, it will be a revenue producer. That statement I seriously question. If it does not come any nearer to the estimates of revenue than have the other predictions of our Democratic friends in regard to the direct-tax bills which they have advocated in the last few years, I think it quite safe to subtract from the estimate 50 or 60 per cent; and as a revenue producer, how can the gentlemen who are advo-cating it do so with any consistency when they are deliberately and directly taxing consumption? Their whole doctrine, under the present regime, has been to show up the horrible results of a tax on consumption; and yet here is a deliberate and avowed attempt to raise seven or ten million dollars, as it is claimed, by a tax on a necessary article of diet of the vast army of wage earners. It seems to me, Mr. President, that the proposition is absolutely inconsistent with all the tax theories advocated in the Senate and House in the last Congress and in the present one.

If they want to benefit the wage earner, who stands aghast at the rapidly soaring cost of living, why tax oleomargarine at all? Why not get the comparatively small sum of seven or eight million dollars by inventing a new name for some form of tax and putting it on the corporations? Why put it on an essential article in the diet of the wage earner? For no other reason, Mr. President, than to promote the sale of oleomargarine.

No one objects to the sale of oleomargarine, but they do object to the fraudulent sale of it—to the sale of oleomargarine as butter. I know people—we all do—who are in a position to buy either the dairy article or the product of the cotton field and the slaughter house who have told me they preferred oleomargarine; but when it is sold the consumer is entitled to know what he is getting and not have that idealistic appeal made to his eye to which the Senator from Alabama referred by which he gets the impression that he is eating butter when he is eating oleomargarine.
Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Thomas in the chair). Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. PENROSE. Yes, sir. Mr. GRONNA. Speaking about the cost of butter and oleomargarine

Mr. PENROSE. I am coming to that point now. Mr. GRONNA. I was going to suggest, could this amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama have any other effect than to increase the price of oleomargarine?

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I was about to reach that The argument in the reply to protests and statements of the National Dairy Union made by the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' Association and the American National Live Stock Association is not sound. If you are going to permit oleomargarine, by reason of reducing the tax to 2 cents from 10 on the colored article, to be sold for butter, because the average consumer will not know the difference, as the Senator from North Dakota has suggested, the price is bound to go up, because it is in fraudulent competition with butter.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, if the Senator from Pennsylvania will permit me, I should just like to show, by referring to some figures here, how much additional it will cost the consumer.

Mr. PENROSE. I should be glad to have it done. It will cost him 20 or 80 cents more, I expect.

Mr. STERLING. Out of the total number of pounds of oleomargarine, 152,509,912, made in 1916, the Underwood amendment would increase the tax from one-fourth of a cent to 2 cents on 145,760,978 pounds, as against a reduction from 10 cents to 2 cents on only 3,403,287 pounds of the colored elec-margarine, which paid the 10-cent tax. This is an increase to the consumer on the uncolored product of $2,550,817 annually in taxes alone, provided the output remains the same.

Mr. GRONNA. Of course, that is small compared with the increased cost.

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.
Mr. PENROSE. Then, Mr. President—and I thank the Senator for calling my attention to this phase of it—not only does this amendment take, according to the claim of its proponents, from seven to ten million dollars in taxes from the wage earner, but it takes the many millions more represented by the increased cost of the article, which may be twenty or thirty million dollars more. I do not know how it would add up; maybe fifty millions, It is deliberately proposed here to tax an article of diet of the oppressed wage earner, not knowing how he is going to get through the year with the high cost of living, and take out of him in taxes and increased cost of the article fifty or sixty or seventy million dollars annually, for the benefit of the Inter-state Cottonseed Crushers' Association, located in Texas and other Southern States, and the American National Live Stock Association, somewhere in Chicago.

But, Mr. President, it is said that this is in the interest of the oppressed laboring man who is unable or unwilling to pay for the pure and nutritive article of the dairy, and is content to eat these by-products and cottonseed-oil mixtures as a substitute. I have here a statement from the president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature and a Socialist. I have not always agreed with him. I ask the Secretary to read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

OBJECTION SOLELY ECONOMIC.

For the past six years or the last three legislative sessions of Pennsylvania, I opposed all proposed legislation which aimed to legalize the coloring of imitation butter by manufacturers or dealers. My objections are not based on any thought that the coloring matter is unhealthful or that imitation butter is not fit for human consumption. My objection is solely an economic one. At present imitation butter, in its natural state, sells from 18 to 22 cents a pound in Pennsylvania, while the genuine dairy product costs 36 cents a pound. The purer the imitation is the whiter it is. If the manufacturers and dealers in the imitation article were permitted to color their product, the imitation would be complete, so much so that nothing short of an analysis would reveal its component parts.

PRICE WILL SOAR.

The imitation article, therefore, like any other imitation which closely resembles the genuine, comes in direct competition with it. Once we allow it to be colored, its price will begin to soar dangerously close to the real article, and, as a consequence, the consumer who is now buying oleomargarine, or butterine, for 20 cents a pound will pay the advanced price. I can see but two reasons why some dealers and manufacturers want a law giving them the right to color in imitation of butter their product; one is to charge more for their product and the other is to give them a monopoly of the butter market.

market.

Let oleomargarine and butterine and all other substitutes stand on their own feet and sell for what they are and not for what their manufacturers can make people believe they are.

"I wish I lived in Reading," said one senator after reading this, "so I could buy good country butter for 36 cents a pound."

C. F.

Mr. PENROSE. I think that fairly represents the attitude of organized labor on this question. I have generally found the officials of these organizations pretty quick and alert to grasp the true nature of any question so far, at least, as it bears on their own interests. The president of the State Federation in Pennsylvania is evidently clearly persuaded as to the point raised by the Senator from North Dakota and the Senator from South Dakota that this legislation will not benefit the workingman but will result in his paying the tax and paying a much larger price for the article, because it will rise in price when it comes into competition with butter because it will look like butter. They are not going to be led astray by any specious argument of that kind simply to permit a comparatively small number of producers of articles entering into competition with oleomargarine to extort millions from the consumers as the result of the operation of this amendment.

As I said, Mr. President, I have taken a deep interest in this I was active in the debate here in the matter for 20 years. Senate on the Grout bill, and it is not a new problem with me. I have followed the legislation in Harrisburg, in my own State, to carry out the original purpose and to strengthen it and to protect the great dairy interests of that State from fraudulent competition. I have never found the farmer to object to how much oleomargarine was sold or not to acquiesce cheerfully if anyone, like my friend the Senator from New Jersey, eats all he wants of it, but they do object and have a right to object to having it sold in competition with the product of the dairy and on the pretense that it is the product of the dairy and on the claim that it has a food value equal to the product of the dairy, which every medical man and chemist and expert and analyst knows is another phase of the fraud.

I have followed very closely in my own State the efforts to enforce the State laws and the national laws in connection with the sale of oleomargarine. I know how they have been combated and obstructed at every turn by the oleomargine interests, so that sometimes those interested have given up in despair, thinking that the task of fighting corruption and obstruction in every form was almost too great to be carried on. But success has finally attended their efforts, at least in Pennsylvania, and I believe that now the laws are honestly enforced and are free from the scandals which 20 years ago attached to all phases of the effort to regulate the sale of oleomargarine.

I do not think, Mr. President, we ought to underrate the fact that the dairy interests of the country will be most seriously menaced by any legislation of the kind proposed, and I do not think we ought to fail to have a realization of how vast in a monetary sense are these agricultural interests. In these days of great cities and enormous industrial establishments and the concentration of population we are apt to forget the fact that after all the old and common saying is now as true as ever, that the farming interests are the backbone of the country. If we look at the monetary value of their products they compare favorably with the products from the mine and mills in value. They give employment to a vast army of men, women, and children in healthful occupations, and they live an independent life in the open air and constitute in my opinion the best element of our citizenship. I only refer to my own State by way of illustration, to that great State which I suppose the average Senator supposes is merely a chain of cities and towns filled with industrial plants and wage earners. among the first dozen agricultural States in the Union, and in some agricultural staples it even is among the first two or three.

The county of Lancaster in Pennsylvania, about 100 miles from Philadelphia, which almost every Senator passes through on his way to the West when he goes through Pennsylvania, has been for 50 years in every decennial census the richest agricultural county in the value of its products of any county in the United States, and it holds that supremacy, greatly to the pride of the sturdy Pennsylvania farmers who inhabit the

I have not the figures showing the extent of the dairy in-one of the speeches I made on the Grout bill 13 years ago, in which the figures are given and of course they have increased very much since then. In 1890, and I am only going back one census, the income to the people of Pennsylvania in a single year from butter alone amounted to between $16,000,000 and $18,000,000, and the milk product, estimated at 8 cents per gallon, the then price, represented about $35,000,000 additional.

I said in the speech I desire to quote from again-

This immense sum of money is a new product each year, adding this much to the actual wealth of the State annually, and has the advantage of being distributed throughout all of the farm homes of the Commonwealth, going to the support of more than 1,000,000 people who are engaged in agriculture, enabling them to maintain themselves in comparative comfort.

I still quote:

If this industry were to be destroyed the loss to the agricultural people of the State would be a calamity, particularly because much of the material that is used in the feeding of these dairy cattle would, if the industry were destroyed, be left on the farmers' hands valueless; and if the butter output were to be supplanted by some other substance, the depreciation in the value of milch cows throughout Pennsylvania would amount to many million dollars, and would involve as well the partial or total loss of the stabling and creamery buildings that are now in use in the prosecution of this industry. A large number of our people also would be thrown out of employment.

I should like to quote further my remarks on the Grout bill. I said:

This occupation is suited to the strength and attainments of men, women, and children-

That is, I was referring to the dairy interests-and, unlike most of the other departments of farm operations, it is continuous throughout the entire year, glving employment to the occupants of farm homes through the winter months, or at a time when other farm duties are suspended. The cutting off of this industry would leave a large part of our population in comparative idleness during a considerable portion of the year. Every farmer, therefore, or owner of a cow is directly interested in whatever will affect the dairy industry injuriously; or, in other words, that will make the conditions such that the cost of producing a pound of butter will be greater than the article can be sold for in the market.

The inevitable consequence will be to drive out the butter-making industry from the country, because of its unprofitable character, which, as I have shown, would be a great annual loss to the State, and would result in the still further depopulation of the country districts by destroying an industry which is doing more to sustain agriculture in the Eastern States than any other single line of farm production.

I want to quote again from the speech I made on the Grout bill, and I do so not out of any egotism but merely to bring out the fact that for 20 years I have been close to this situation and made a study of it.

and made a study of it.

If the oleomargarine manufacturer gave employment to persons equal in number to those now engaged in the production of butter, and if the profits of the business were distributed among this large number of our population, there would not be the same objections to its unrestrained sale that there is under present conditions, in which a single manufacturing establishment, employing from 15 to 20 persons, is capable of an output greater than that of a hundred thousand farmers, and the profits of their business, instead of being distributed among all of these families, would go into the pockets of one or two already rich individuals or corporations.

A little later on I said, and it is as strong a principle with me to-day as it was 20 years ago:

The protection of American industry is a well-accepted principle, at least by the political organization to which I belong, and I would be doing violence to my political convictions, as well as injury to the great farming constituency which I represent, if I did not use my utmost endeavors to secure the passage of this bill—

That is, the Grout bill-which protects farming people in their occupation and at the same time does no injustice to any other person or business.

That same remark that I believe in the policy of protection to American industry applies to-day, when I am unwilling to sit here silent or to fail to do all in my power to resist the adoption of the pending amendment to the revenue bill, which, in my opinion would break down completely the restraints and restrictions now surrounding the sale of oleomargarine, made to prevent it from entering into fraudulent competition with butter. Further, I said:

We have been legislating for the protection of manufacturers for many years, and this is right. It is equally proper that the General Government should protect the farming industry upon the same principle and for the same purpose, namely, the benefiting of American labor and the establishment of comfortable homes for all of our people.

Mr. President, the farmer in this matter only asks for what will have to be conceded by any candid man to be entirely equitable, just, and fair. He comes to this body to object to a bill which will permit an article inferior in nutritive value and in every other value to enter into fraudulent competition with his own product. There is not a manufacturer who produces any article of consumption who would not feel equally justified in coming to Congress or to the State legislature to ask for protection against fraudulent competition. Our statute books are filled with laws aimed to prevent just this kind of terests in Pennsylvania in the last census. I hold in my hand | fraudulent competition which the farmer complains of.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey in the chair). Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. PENROSE. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut. Mr. BRANDEGEE. I wish to ask the Senator from North Carolina if he would have any objection to making a unanimous consent agreement that not later than 8 o'clock this evening the Senate will take a recess until 10.30 to-morrow and that no vote may be taken this evening. There is no quorum here and I do not want to suggest the absence of a quorum. If that agreement could be made we can run along until 8 o'clock.

Mr. PENROSE. That is all understood.

BRANDEGEE. With the understanding that no vote shall be taken; that is all.

Mr. SIMMONS. That in effect would nullify the agreement and we would have practically no session from now on.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Does the Senator mean this evening?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. How much of a session does the Senator think we are having now?

Mr. SIMMONS. We are not having very much now, but this is about the situation, if the Senator will pardon me.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I will not even ask the Senator to explain it if he does not agree with me. I do not want to waste

Mr. WARREN. I suppose the Senator from North Carolina does not expect a final vote on any part of the bill to-night.

Mr. SIMMONS. It was simply agreed that we would go on and debate it, and I think if Senators leave we ought to bring them back. This is about the situation, if the Senator will I announced that we would have night sessions in order to expedite the business of the session that is now approaching an end. We tried it last night and there was some protest against it. Senators came to me and said, "Can we not enter into an agreement to adjourn or take a recess at 8 o'clock? Senators will stay here and we will make progress." Now, Senators are not here, thus making agreed to that. the scheme to hold a continuous session until 8 o'clock a failure. I propose if Senators do not come back within a reasonable time to send for them.

Mr. WARREN. Several Senators went home to dinner with the expectation of coming back.

I think they will come back. Mr. SIMMONS.

Mr. BRANDEGEE, Before 8 o'clock?

Mr. WARREN. Yes. Mr. BRANDEGEE. I could not get home and get my dinner in that time. While the other Senators are getting their dinners a process of legislation is going on here.

Mr. SIMMONS. I made the arrangement, I will say to the Senator, upon suggestions that came from the other side of the Chamber in order to keep a sufficient number of Senators here to go on with the bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I make no protest at all.

Mr. SIMMONS. I did not expect Senators to go away this evening unless they were forced to leave and I do not wish to bring them back unless I am forced to do it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator does not want to be placed, and I am sure I do not want to place him, in that situation; but it is an imposition to pretend that this is a serious session of the Senate. All I want is that there shall be no vote taken; that the Senate is not going to have a serious session with the idea of taking a vote when anybody stops talking; but the Senator from North Carolina, I understand, is going to demand a quorum. If that is so, I have nothing further to say.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the debate does not go on and the proceedings go to the extent of breaking the agreement, I shall have no other recourse.

Mr. PENROSE. I suggest that the Senator from Connecticut listen to the remaining remarks I wish to make, and then it may be the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] will illuminate the subject.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have been very much entertained by the Senator's remarks. I cordially agree with his attitude. My only complaint is that more Senators are not here to take advantage of the opportunity.

Mr. PENROSE. That is unfortunate.
Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not want to embarrass Senators by making the suggestion now of the absence of a quorum, and I do not do so, but I do not think the Senator's declaration of intention which he made this morning has resulted very successfully.

Mr. SIMMONS. If I had persisted in having a night session, with the understanding that Senators would be brought back here as we brought them here last night, I think we would have had a successful meeting to-night; but I yielded to the suggestion that this was the better course, and thought I would try it out. I do not know how it is going to result; but I think we ought to go on for the present.

Mr. PENROSE. If the Senator from Connecticut will permit me to follow the current of my argument for a little while,

I will be glad to proceed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I will permit it, until it occurs to me to suggest the absence of a quorum, but not longer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsyl-

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Chair understands that I have not yet suggested the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understands.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But I am likely to do so at any minute.
Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. PENROSE. I do.

Mr. FLETCHER. I simply wish to say that there is a bill on the Calendar which is of immediate interest to the people of my State. It is general legislation, but, at the same time, it is of very great importance right now to the people who are engaged in drainage projects down there. It simply permits a right of way for a canal across a little piece of Government land, and I should like very much to get that bill passed by unanimous consent. It could only be done, of course, by unanimous consent; but, if it is not passed now, it will be too late to get it through during this Congress.

I do not believe there will be any ob-Mr. BRANDEGEE.

jection to that bill.

Mr. FLETCHER. Will the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Simmons] allow that bill to be taken up now? It will not occupy, I am sure, five minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Chair may be permitted to make a statement, he thinks he recalls very well that the Senator from North Carolina made the proposition that the session be continued until 8 o'clock to-night instead of having a night session, with the tacit understanding, at least, that there was to be no vote taken or no question of a quorum raised.

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not think my request would interfere with that at all.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If that was the understanding, it was very "tacit," indeed.
Mr. PENROSE. The understanding was rather informal, but I rather think it should be observed, Mr. President.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has stated his important to the chair has stated before the chair and the chair and the chair has stated before the chair and the chair pression of the matter and agrees with the Senator from Penn-

Mr. SIMMONS. It. was the understanding that the session this afternoon would be devoted to the pending revenue bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That was the Chair's under-

Mr. SIMMONS. Then I can not consent to lay that bill aside to take up any other measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair at the time the suggestion was made, but that is his understanding of the matter.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Florida [Mr. Fletcher] that from my trips to Florida I am quite familiar with the canal proposition to which he has referred. I should like greatly to see the canal built and I will help him in any way to get the bill considered, so far as my limited power goes, to-morrow or at some time when it will be Mr. FLETCHER. I do not think there is any objection to

Mr. PENROSE. I would be perfectly willing now to yield to the Senator, except for the fact that there was an understanding that we would not consider anything this evening but the revenue bill, as I understand.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, it will be impossible, in view of the statement I made this morning, for me to consent to any other bill being considered except the pending revenue bill. I would do so if I could. It is not a matter in which I am interested particularly, but it is a question of my keeping faith with the Senate; that is all.

Mr. PENROSE. The Senator from North Carolina will perhaps yield five minutes to-morrow to have the bill passed.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will yield to the Senator from Florida

just as soon as I can.

Mr. FLETCHER. But the difficulty is that, unless it is passed now, it may not be passed at all.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, if unanimous consent is going to be given for the consideration of any other bill, if we are going to interfere with the program, then I shall have to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of what is known as the Key bill, providing pensions for widows of Spanish-American War soldiers, and that measure would awaken debate.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I withdraw the request I

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania will proceed.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, an effort has been made to show that eleomargarine is as good as butter from the point of view of food value, if not of taste. I consider that as absolutely a statement that can not be sustained and as an additional fraudulent element when this article enters into competition with butter.

I had a good-humored colloquy a little while ago with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE], who seemed to have a partiality for the oleomargarine article, or, if not a partiality, an entire willingness to eat it when he could not get anything else. I desire to quote from a statement concerning-

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri will state his point of order.

Mr. STONE. I wish to say that the Senator is speaking in such a low tone of voice that we can not hear him.

Mr. PENROSE. I do not hear the Senator from Missouri, [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE. We can not hear the Senator from Pennsylvania over here

Mr. PENROSE. Very well, Mr. President. It is always an inspiration to me when the Senator from Missouri is present and paying me the honor and compliment of listening to my

I read some time ago a list of the articles entering into the three grades of oleomargarine-No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3-and that is followed on the next page of this little pamphlet that I hold in my hand by an analysis in weight and percentages of oleo oil, of neutral oil, of labor, of the salt, the neutral lard, and the different articles entering into these grades; and without consuming the time of the Senate at this hour, I will ask to have that analysis printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that course will be pursued.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Formula for and cost of high-grade oleomergarine

Material and quantities.	Cost per pound.	Total cost.
526 pounds No. 1 oleo oil. 475 pounds No. 1 neutral oil. 50 gallons 30 per cent cream. 300 pounds creamery butter. Labor and package. Salt and color.	$0.0875 .08125 .42 .28 .01	$45. 19 38. 57 30. 24 84. 00 15. 00 1. 00
Total		214.00

This formula will yield 1,500 pounds of butterine, therefore cost per pound is $0.1426. Formula for and cost of medium grade olcomargarine

	Material and quantities.	Cost per pound.	Total cost.
525 pounds No. 1 oleo off. 475 pounds No. 1 neutral lard. 40 gallons 30 per cent cream. Labor and package.		$0.0875 .08125 .42 .01	$45. 19 30. 57 40. 32 12. 00 1. 00
Total			137.08

This formula will yield 1,200 pounds of oleomargarine. Therefore the cost is $0.1142

Formula for and cost of low-grade oleomargarine.

Material and quantities.	Cost per pound.	Total cost.
350 pounds No. 2 oleo oil. 250 pounds cottonseed oil. 450 pounds neutral lard. 60 gallons 2½ per cent milk. Labor and package. Salt and color.	$0.08 .04 .08125 1.12	$28.00 10.00 36.54 7.20 12.00 1.00
Total		94.74

1 Per gallon.

This formula will yield 1,200 pounds of oleomargarine. 7 producing and packing for shipment will be $0.0789 per pound. Therefore, the cost of

Mr. PENROSE. I can not persuade myself, Mr. President, that the product of cottonseed and the paunch trimmings from the slaughterhouse can have a nutritive value equal to that of the pure article of butter; and statistics seem to indicate, beyond any question, that they have not. I have here a statement of the food value of butter, showing some important facts, and proving that butter fat contains the vital elements necessary to life and growth, not found in other animal or vegetable fats and oils. Reference is made particularly to experiments carried on by F. B. Osborne, of the Connecticut Experiment Station, Dr. Mendel, of Yale, and E. B. McCollum, of the Wisconsin Experiment Station, as being peculiarly interesting, and proving beyond a doubt the real value of butter—that is, that butter fat not only yields energy and heat, as do other fats, but that it contains something more vital than other fats, a principle which, like proteids, supplies the elements necessary for growth and life itself.

Then the statement goes on to recite experiments with animals, showing that when they were fed on mixtures composed of chemically pure protein, starch, fat, sugar, and various salts they got along splendidly for the first three months, and then they lost appetite and fell off in growth and finally died. After numerous repetitions of this nature the investigators found that when milk was added to the ration the animals began to regain a normal condition, to thrive, and grow to maturity. Many changes were made in their diet to make it more palatable, changes in salts used, and the kinds and amounts of sugar, but always with the same result-growth ceased at the age of about four months. It was in an attempt to increase the palatability of the diet by substituting pure butter fat for lard, which had been used as the fat in the rations, that the experimenters found these new facts, for the animals immediately began to grow just as when milk was fed. It was evident that butter fat supplies something necessary for growth which lard can not supply.

Other experiments were carried on to determine whether other fats from the animal or vegetable kingdom would produce the same effect as had butter fat. Experiments with tallow, olive oil, corn oil, cottonseed oil, and peanut oil proved futile, while the fat of eggs and fat extracted from the cells of pig's kidneys produced the same effect as did butter fat. Thus it seems evident that the fats obtained from the living protoplasm of the animal have the property of inducing growth after growth has ceased. Thus far no plant fat has been found to possess this power.

In this connection reference is made as follows: I do not quote it literally and so the language can be taken as my own. If records of experiments on man were available it is reasonable to suppose that results fully as striking would be obtained. In this connection the editor of Hoard's Dairyman recalls two instances in which two public institutions had, in the interest of so-called economy, substituted eleomargarine for butter in the diet of the inmates. It was noted that when oleo was used the inmates were not in as good physical condition and that physicians were in greater demand than before. When the oleo was replaced by butter it was reported that the health of the inmates was materially improved.

I will ask, Mr. President, to have printed as part of my remarks a statement by the special emergency committee representing the dairy interests in reply to the statement of the oleo interests to the farmers' protest.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it will be printed as requested.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE UNDERWOOD OLEOMARGARINE AMENDMENT TO THE REVENUE BILL. The alleged "reply" of the oleo interests to the farmers' protest justifies the conclusion that the main arguments of the farmers' protest are unanswerable.

[By the special emergency committee representing the dairy interests.]

Members of the Senate have no doubt received the 36-page "reply" of the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' Association to the "protest" of the dalry interests against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill.

The statements made in this alleged "reply" prove the correctness of the position taken in the protest, that "such legislation, if attempted at all, should be considered in a separate bill and fought out on its merits after the most exhaustive hearings and public discussion." cussion cussion."

In this honorable, democratic manner we are ready to meet the representatives of the cottonseed crushers, and their allies, the Beef Trust, strip the mask from their misleading statements, and expose to the Congress, and the people of the country, the sinister purpose behind this eleventh-hour effort to secure legislation that would not have the ghost of a show if attempted in an open manner, subject to the acid test of pittless publicity.

This alleged "reply" to our protest is an insult to Senators, inasmuch as it assumes that they are either uninformed on the real issues involved in the butter and oleomargarine controversy, or that they lack the intelligence to see through the misstatements and sophistries of this "reply."

The opening statement of this "reply" is an attempt to show, by implication, that the National Dairy Union stands alone in its opposition to the Underwood amendment, and that our protest does not voice the sentiment of farmers generally. Senators are, no doubt, already in receipt of unmistakable evidence of the opposition of the Farmers' National Congress, representing agricultural interests in every State in the Union; the National Grange, covering every State in the North; and we present herewith resolutions adopted by the national executive committee of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America, the largest farmers' organization of the South.

In presenting this resolution of the farmers' union, it will be interesting for Senators to know that the day before it was adopted Mr. C. W. Asheroft, chairman of the legislative committee of the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' Association, appeared before this farmers' union executive committee and labored long and strenuously to get their indorsement of the Underwood amendment. The resolution presented herewith shows that they stand with the dairy interests for a square deal.

Our protest was prepared on less than 24 hours' notice. In pre-deal.

Our protest was prepared on less than 24 hours' notice. In presenting it we stated that it was hurriedly prepared and not as perfect as we could wish. This "reply," however, in the way it has avoided the real points in issue, and devoted its attention to minor questions and mere implications that our statements are incorrect, justifies the conclusion that our opponents find our main arguments unanswerable.

After carefully reading the alleged "reply," we reaffirm with increased insistence the arguments, as presented in our "protest," why the Underwood amendment should not be made a part of the revenue bill, and in the name of the united farmers of the country we ask Senators to vote it out of the bill.

Mr. PENROSE. There are estimated to be 4,500,000 farmers in this country. The farmers of this country had no intimation that legislation so detrimental to the dairy interests would be attempted at this time. I know from protests from agricultural bodies, from the granges of Pennsylvania, and from telegrams that have been coming to me in the last few days, all to the same effect, that they were not prepared for this assault upon the Grout law, that they were greatly surprised, and were all wanting to know if something could not be done to delay action until the granges or the other organized agricultural bodies in Pennsylvania, and all over the United States, could be put to work passing resolutions and making their protests. Of course, I had to tell them that, as one of the minority here, I had been kept in the dark regarding this bill until the last few days, that I had not been consulted about it in any way, and that, as Congress would adjourn on the 4th of March, it was evidently impossible to delay the measure without defeating it entirely; and if those resolutions and communications from those 4,500,000 dairy farmers of this country, Mr. President, should come to this body, as they will come at another session if a bill similar to this be attempted to be passed, I feel quite confident that there would be very few votes at either end of the Capitol in favor of legislation of this kind.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. PENROSE. I do.

Mr. LEWIS. Will the Senator allow me to assure him that the provision was not in the bill originally; that the bill did not carry it; that the bill was not permitted to carry it; but that it is an amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood] as a separate amendment to the bill, and that it does not have the approval of all on this side of the Chamber? For myself, for instance, I represent, I may say to my able friend, probably the largest district in which the packing interest is located in the United States, and I assure my able friend that I can not support this amendment, as I can not see justice in it to the people generally.

I only rose to call the able Senator's attention to the fact that his remarks might leave the inference that this provision was in the bill as presented by the Democratic majority. know he would not purposely misrepresent the facts at all, but want to assure him that it was not in the bill but was only tendered as an amendment by the Senator from Alabama as a personal and independent amendment of his own.

Mr. PENROSE. Well, I am greatly pleased to hear the words of the Senator from Illinois, that he will be against the amendment. I only meant to say that the amendment was the work of the majority of the Democratic majority, as is quite evident, because otherwise it would not be in the bill. I assume that a large part of the minority of the Democratic majority were opposed to this oleomargarine amendment, and when the yeas and nays shall be called, as they will be, upon it they would be likely to vote against it, giving me good reason to en-tertain the hope that ultimately this amendment can be defeated, as I sincerely hope it may be.

Reference has been made, Mr. President, to the laws of other countries. Every country where eleomargarine is sold or manufactured has certain restrictive measures controlling its sale and manufacture. Fraud and deception seem to have followed in the wake of this product. France, where the product originated during the France-Prussian War, has had to amend its laws twice to protect the public against fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. The laws in many of the European countries are different from ours because of the fact that they do not place a direct tax on oleomargarine, but do prohibit it from being colored yellow in imitation of butter. They also require that it be sold in separate stores where butter can not be handled. Heavy penalties are assessed for violation of the law. If such a law were enacted by our Government, a tax on oleomargarine would not be necessary. Germany, France, and Belgium require oleomargarine to be sold in separate stores. Germany and France prohibit the coloring of the product in imitation of butter. More oleomargarine is sold per capita in Denmark than in any other country. Denmark prohibits the coloring in imitation of butter, but permits it to be sold in the regular stores the same as we do in this country. It is sold, however, in a different shaped package, the package being oblong.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, may I inquire kindly and mildly from the Senator from what the Senator is reading?

Mr. PENROSE. I am quoting from the protest of the dairy interests of the United States against the Underwood oleomargarine amendment to the revenue bill, House bill 20573.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What is the name of the dairy association? Mr. PENROSE. This pamphlet appears to contain the views of Dr. H. E. Stockbridge, president of the Farmers' National Congress and editor of the Southern Ruralist, and other individuals whose names are signed to it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. My curlosity is satisfied. Mr. PENROSE. It appears that the Southern Ruralist, I will state for the further information of the Senator from Mississippi, is published at Atlanta, Ga., and I think it would be of interest for me to call the attention of the Senate to a few paragraphs from an editorial appearing in the publication on February 1, in which Dr. Stockbridge says:

We recently mentioned the official recommendation of Secretary McAdoo that Congress prohibit the coloring of oleomargarine in imitation of butter, and levy a tax of one cent per pound on the uncolored product. A single subscriber objects to this course in the supposed interest of the consumer.

This reminds us that it is just six years since the last organized assault of manufacturers was made upon the present law. Had this contributor been a reader of the Ruralist at that time he would realize the inherent weakness of his argument. Every point he raises was fully discussed at that time and every assertion refuted. The course of the Ruralist was one of the recognized important factors in preventing contemplated congressional action at that time.

Then he goes on to say:

Color in oleo is wholly artificial. Its only purpose is to deceive, and the direct object of this deception is to increase sales or raise prices. To-day dairy butter sells at perhaps 40 cents and oleo without color at about 20 cents. Remove the restrictions upon color and the immediate tendency would be for the difference in price between the genuine and the imitation butter to disappear. The much commiserated poor consumer would then pay about double the present price for an article no better, but merely so colored that only the expert chemist can distinguish the real from the spurious.

This gentleman goes on to say:

The cottonseed oil interests of the South have joined hands with the packers' trust for our undoing. Their servility is easily explained. Cottonseed oil is used in several packing-house products—soap and hogless tonseed oil is used in several packing-house products—soap and hogless lard.

The real interest of these oil-mill men has never been with the farmer. Last spring when the whole real South was striving for diversification and reduction of cotton acreage, the president of the Interstate Seed Crushers' Association delivered public addresses to farmers' organizations against crop reduction. He argued that the larger the cotton crop the greater the export, and that large export would discourage production of foreign cotton to compete with our own product.

Few farmers were misled. They knew that the real object of the oil men was cheap seed.

Mr. President, there are many objections to the pending revenue bill from my point of view, and from the point of view of the economic school in which I have been reared, and in which I still believe; but it seems to me that this amendment, calculated to destroy all the safeguards of the Grout law, permitting the untrammeled sale of oleomargarine in dishonest competition with butter, the product of the great dairy interests of the country, is perhaps the worst feature among many features, all of which are objectionable.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, my understanding of this parliamentary situation may not be entirely clear. recollection, however, is that the Senate was to remain in session until 8 o'clock this evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that was the understanding

Mr. WADSWORTH. And I believe there is an understanding, somewhat in the nature of a gentleman's agreement, that, though it shall remain in session until 8, between the hours of 6 and 8 nothing shall be done except to listen to addresses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That was the Chair's understanding.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

WADSWORTH, I do.

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not understand the agreement in that way at all. We expected, of course, to have discussion tonight; but it was a part of the understanding that if a vote was reached the vote could be had. There is nothing to prevent a vote being had; and in that contingency, of course, a quorum can be called for.

Mr. PENROSE. As I understood it-I do not think there is much mystery about it; it was discussed between Senators on both sides—the thought was that most Senators preferred remaining here until 8 o'clock rather than coming back.

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President— Mr. PENROSE. The impression was-

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the Senator from Pennsyl-

Mr. PENROSE. I beg the Senator's pardon. I thought he had yielded. As I was a party to the understanding, or one of the parties to it, I thought perhaps I could throw a little light on it. The thought was that it would give an opportunity to dispose of some of these speeches. It was distinctly understood that if we came to any question involving a vote, or if the debate ceased, then the chairman of the Finance Committee would suggest the absence of a grown the Finance Committee would suggest the absence of a quorum, and we would have a full Senate before we voted.

Mr. SIMMONS. Exactly.

Mr. PENROSE. And if we are to vote now he will raise the question of a quorum, and when we get it we will vote.

Mr. SIMMONS. Exactly. Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Pr.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Mississippi?
Mr. WADSWORTH. I do.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I simply desire to express the hope that no one will demand a quorum while the Senator from Pennsylvania is speaking and that we may be permitted to go ahead until 8 o'clock in the amicable, friendly, nice, and cordial way in which we have been proceeding up to date.

Mr. PENROSE. For the information of the Senator from Mississippi, I will state that I am through with my remarks on the oleomargarine amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania has concluded his remarks. Mr. PENROSE. I have concluded my remarks on the oleomargarine question. I appreciate the cordial thoughtfulness of the Senator, however.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh! I thought the Senator from New York was trying to interrupt the Senator from Pennsylvania by calling for a quorum, and I did not intend to stand it if I could help it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I think I understand the situation now. It is now a quarter of 7, Mr. President, and apparently, if the speaking ceases upon this amendment, or anything to do with the revenue bill, it will then become the duty of some Member of the Senate present to call for a quorum and endeavor to get a quorum of the Senators here before 8 o'clock.

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator pardon me on that point? think there are other Senators coming back here who may

I think there are other Senators coming back here who may be willing to speak before 8 o'clock. Other Senators have told me they were going out to get a little dinner and coming back.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I have been wondering where my duty lay—whether to speak briefly, and in the event of nobody else speaking to witness an effort to bring fifty-odd Senators back here before 8 o'clock, or whether I should attempt to discuss this matter oute fully and thereby relieve the large number of this matter quite fully and thereby relieve the large number of absent Senators from the hardship of being dragged from their dinner tables and brought here.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I do.
Mr. SIMMONS. I will say to the Senator that I had hoped that the discussion would go on and that we would get through with some of the speeches that were to be made upon the bill so that we would have some general discussion before we began I had hoped to utilize these two hours in getting as many of those speeches behind us as possible; but if the Senator from New York does not wish to speak, and nobody else wishes to speak, I suppose the Chair would announce that the question is upon the amendment, and we would have a vote, in which event, of course, the point of no quorum would be made, and that would bring the Senators back.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I thought that was the situation, Mr.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I think we ought to adjourn. There are only 10 Senators on the floor, and it is nearly

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut moves that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask for the yeas and nays. Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, as I understand, the Senator from Connecticut did not move that the Senate adjourn.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the Senator from Connecticut to make a motion of that kind. Mr. HUGHES. The Chair clearly misunderstood the Sen-we ought to adjourn, but he certainly did not move it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Very well. The Senator from New York has the floor. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I did not ask the Senator from New York to yield to me. I merely said I thought we ought to adjourn, and I still think so. I have made no motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair misunderstood the

Mr. PENROSE. I suggest that the Senator from Connecticut refrain from thinking out loud, Mr. President.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, in advance of the remarks that I expect to make upon the pending amendment I send to the desk a resolution adopted by the Manufacturers & Business Men's Association of the City of New York, which has to do with the pending revenue measure, and ask that it be read by the Secretary and printed as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read as follows:

BROOKLYN, N. Y., February 7, 1917.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., February 7, 1917.

Whereas the Congress of the United States is now considering a bill known as House bill 20573, imposing what is known as the tax on so-called excess profits of corporations and copartnerships; and Whereas the Manufacturers & Business Men's Association of New York heartly approves the making of all necessary provisions to adequately meet every emergency, but believes that every scheme of taxation should be so framed that the burden of taxation shall, as far as possible, rest equally upon all of our citizens, and the present tax affects only a very limited number of our people, and is therefore unfair and unjust, and will adversely affect the business prosperity of the country: Now, therefore, be it

perity of the country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this association strongly oppose the tax proposed in House bill 20573 and recommends in place of such tax stamp taxes on checks, stock transfers, bills of lading, and the like, to the end that the necessary amount of revenue may be raised by a tax broadly and easily borne by the entire business interests of the country.

Resolved, That the secretary be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward a copy of the preamble and resolutions as above to the United States Senators from the State of New York and to the House of Representatives, to be made a part of the Congressional Record.

THE MANUFACTURERS & BUSINESS MEN'S

ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK,

JAMES T. HOLLE, Secretary.

Mr. WADSWORTH Mr. President like soverel other Sone

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, like several other Senators, I have listened with a good deal of interest to the discussion of this feature of the bill as it came from the Committee on Finance, which has to do with the amendment of the law imposing taxes upon the production of the article known as oleomargarine.

At the outset of my comments, permit me to say that I have not been very seriously frightened by the dragging aside of the curtain by more than one Senator in an effort to display a chamber of horrors. I can not say that I am in entire sympathy with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood] in the intimations which he made here this afternoon to the effect that a very considerable percentage of butter was unhealthful and dangerous to those who dared consume it. There is a good deal of exaggeration indulged in by so-called "experts" who report to a trembling public that some article of food is so villainously adulterated, so crowded with germs and bacilli, that no one should touch it unless it bears some certificate upon its face to show that that same expert has examined it and certified to its purity.

I am not particularly frightened by the communication or report from the Department of Agriculture to the effect that out of one thousand or more samples of cream something like 61 per cent were found to be unhealthful and dangerous. depends upon where the samples were taken, and the manner of making the test. One can prove almost anything in this world with respect to the unhealthful qualities of certain foods by being perfectly willing that they should be proved un-

I am not very frightened, either, about the dangers to the public health from vast quantities of rancid butter that some people have alleged are flooding the markets and the grocery shops. I suppose that occasionally, but I believe it is on very rare occasions, human beings are made ill by eating impure butter: but my impression is that those occasions are so few as to amount practically to an inconsiderable element of this problem of pure food.

On the other hand, I am not particularly frightened, either, by the chamber of horrors displayed with respect to oleomargarine. We have heard it called hog fat and deodorized lard and axle grease and various other hard names calculated to frighten people to death and give them the impression that they must not eat it under any circumstances whatsoever.

I do not know whether I am any more competent to testify upon these matters than anybody else. I have eaten a good deal of butter in my time, and I have eaten a good deal of oleomargarine.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the Senator. Mr. WARREN. Speaking of a chamber of horrors, the Senater probably knews of instances, and many of them, al-though he is young in years yet, and certainly those of us who are further advanced in years remember the old way of making butter, and keeping cows in stables, and milking the cows early in the morning by the light of candles, and the same at night in those old-fashioned, impure stables, where even at best the milk, before it was made into butter, had the taste of the stable, which was more easily detected in the butter. I know that in almost any of those old farm buildings, and in some of the later ones, while those immediate impurities may not be poisonous, may not kill, yet conditions remain much the same. I doubt whether one out of twenty of the people who eat butter, if they saw some of the stables and some of the products that probably the Senator himself has seen and that I certainly have seen, would ever eat butter. Nevertheless, it is usually considered not only a good product but a palatable one, and since the introduction of modern methods and modern creamerles we have had clean, pure, good butter.

I think the Senator knows that, as far as butter is con-cerned, it is the most susceptible of taking up odors and tastes of any product we have; and I think it rather out of place to undertake to claim that butter is always immaculate and that that all its surroundings are always immaculate. It may be that lard may be taken from other places than out of the leaf lard of the hog; but, for instance, we eat chickens, and we know what some parts of the food of chickens are. We eat oysters, and the less said about the matter of their food the better. So that I think, while I am glad to have the Senator's viewpoint, the chamber of horrors, if he proposes to indulge it, can be carried to a certain extent in butter making under some conditions.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I suppose that is true. realize, of course, that butter is susceptible to becoming what is known, I believe, as the host of germs and also of odors. I imagine it is well known if butter is put in the ice chest next to onions it comes out smelling of onions. I suppose if all the public were taken by the hand and led to places where some butter is made and the process displayed to them in a dramatic manner some of the public would be shocked. I am not defending all butter, but I simply meant to indicate that I think some of the attacks made here upon the floor this afternoon against that article were uttered in a somewhat exaggerated way. So do I believe that the attacks upon and definitions attached to oleomargarine which have been uttered here this afternoon have been vastly exaggerated and rest upon what I feel justified in describing a complete ignorance of the facts.

Mr. President, the American people, and I think all civilized will always prefer to eat butter. They will always prefer it to oleomargarine, and they will eat it in far greater quantities so long as they have the price to pay for it.

Mr. WARREN. Will the Senator again kindly yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator is absolutely right about that in certain conditions.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes; I was going to qualify my statement.

Mr. WARREN. I do not know that the Senator has done what I have done. I have always preferred good butter to eat when I could get it. My life has been that of a farmer, and I am interested in making butter and always have been, and am also interested in the other parts of the animal, that is to say, the beef; but I have been in outside camps away from town where in the particular cabin there was one room where all the food supplies were, and a good many things not food supplies. When butter might be brought in which was at first palatable a short time after it was brought in would not be palatable if left there, while on the other hand oleo-margarine would hold its form and hold its taste and be palatable, although it might be kept for a week or two weeks. In such a case the Senator I think would agree with me that oleomargarine is preferable.

Then, of course, when it comes down to the cost of living, Then, of course, when it comes down to the cost of hving, that is a problem which I think both sides of the Chamber in this crisis—I call it a crisis as to prices of food products—ought to be considered. We ought to give the cheapest possible figure upon good sustaining food to those who are suffering because of the high cost of living, which perhaps has not been kept level even as to the cost of labor. In other words, workingmen may not have been increased in compensation as the food products have day by day been increased at the corporation. food products have day by day been increased at the corner grocery.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator is precisely right. I say that, other things being equal, the average person will always prefer butter and will always eat butter as long as he has the price to pay for it. Of course, when butter reaches a price of 50 cents a pound a good many people are debarred from eating it. They simply can not afford to buy it and they must go without it; they must go without anything of the kind unless there is something to take its place.

The Senator from Wyoming has referred to outside camps and the value of oleomargarine in surroundings of that sort. myself have had some experience in that respect. In the State of Florida upon one occasion, having planned a trip away, we will say, from the haunts of civilization, in a climate quite warm and moist and soft, it became necessary to decide how we would do our cooking, and we purchased oleomargarine instead of butter, for the reason that oleomargarine lasts longer in a good condition than butter does in a hot climate, and it is, furthermore, equally palatable. It is therefore of particular value in tropical or subtropical climates. It is of value upon the cattle ranches of the West for the same reason. The outfit wagon goes many miles away from headquarters and may not return for two or three weeks, and it can not afford to take along with it many perishable supplies. Every workingman-and the cowboys are the hardest-worked men on earth, I believe—needs butter fat or animal fat as a part of his diet. So many outfit wagons carry oleomargarine instead of butter, because oleomargarine keeps and is satisfactory to the men who have to consume it. I could cite many cases where eleomargarine is exceedingly valuable.

Mr. PENROSE. Conceding all that, and no one concedes it more cheerfully than I do-I have traveled a good deal in the West-does the Senator from New York think that oleomargarine should be permitted to be sold in imitation of butter, so that the consumer does not know whether he is eating oleomargarine or butter?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Most certainly I do not.

Mr. PENROSE. That is the whole contention.
Mr. WADSWORTH. That is why I am supporting this amendment, for to-day oleomargarine is sold as butter in a fraudulent manuer.

Mr. PENROSE. How does this amendment prevent it? Mr. WADSWORTH. Because it limits the size of the package in which the oleomargarine shall be sold.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. It must be plainly marked.

Mr. PENROSE. I am glad to be enlightened on that point.

It did not seem to me that the package proposition would pre-

Mr. WADSWORTH. I think it well to bear in mind that very little of the fraudulent practice of selling oleomargarine for butter, at butter prices, is perpetrated by the manufacturer. He turns out his product in amounts and quantities and sizes to suit his own convenience and the convenience of the retailers or jobbers whom he supplies. Under the law as it reads to-day there is no limitation whatsoever placed upon the bulk or weight or size of the package of oleomargarine when it leaves the factory door. It can be packed in a tub containing 60 pounds. If it is uncolored it pays but one-quarter of a cent a pound tax to the Federal Government.

The manufacturer of oleomargarine can manufacture it uncolored and pay one-quarter of a cent a pound tax and sell it to the retailer or the jobber at a profit and his connection with the transaction thereupon ends. But the manipulations to which the oleomargarine is thereafter subjected are somewhat interesting, for there being no limitation whatsoever upon the size of the package, it is entirely possible that it will pay the recipient of that package to color it himself, and that is what is done upon a more or less large scale to-day.

The 50 or 60 pound tub of oleomargarine finally reaches the grocer, we will say, as an illustration of how this business can be done. He puts it in his cellar or in the back of his shop where no one can see it. He can buy for 10 cents a little bottle of coloring matter that will color the whole mass in imitation of butter. Incidentally I have yet to hear any Senator describe to me the color of butter. However, the grocer can color this oleomargarine and imitate the color of butter as it is known to the particular customer who comes in the next day. customer comes in and asks for a pound of creamery butter and how much it is he is told it is 45 cents a pound. "All right," he says, "I will take a pound of creamery butter." The grocer goes to the back of his shop or down into his cellar and dips out a pound of oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter, brings it up and puts it in a little cardboard box, and sells it to the customer.

That is one example of how the fraud is perpetrated and there is nothing in the present law that is effective to stop it. In fact the present law is an invitation to that practice, for if the oleomargarine was colored before it left the factory it would have to pay the 10 cents a pound tax under the existing law. So therefore the existing law is an invitation to the manufacturer to manufacture it without coloring matter and let the retailer or the jobber handle it as he pleases, he having avoided all responsibility, and between the retailer and the jobber on the one hand and the customer who buys it at retail upon the other there occurs the fraudulent practice.

One Secretary of the Treasury after another in report after report has told the Congress of the United States that that is the fact, substantially. One Commissioner of Internal Revenue after another has reported that it after another has reported that it is almost impossible to enforce the present law with any degree of uniformity and has described how the failure to limit the package makes it possible and profitable to color oleomargarine fraudulently and sell it at the butter price.

Mr. President, there has been a sort of experience meeting here this afternoon, and Senators have told what sort of States they live in and represent. Permit me to say, sir, that I in part represent the greatest dairy State in the Union, for the dairy production of the State of New York leads that of all States. Certainly I would be one of the last Members of the Senate to support any bill in this body which would make it easier to violate the law against the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine as butter at a butter price. My own judgment has been for years that the present law is a failure. There were some Members when it originally passed who predicted that it would be. The State of New York has had some little experience in its efforts to prevent the fraudulent sale of this product as butter at the butter price.

Mr. WARREN. If the Senate will allow me, I was a Member of the Senate when the 10 cents a pound tax, or fine, on colored oleomargarine was debated and urged. I was absent when the final vote was taken because a very sad errand took me away from here to Massachusetts and from there home, But I was of the opinion then and so stated, perhaps not on this floor but to those with whom I talked, that the result of it would be a fraud from the first; that it would not help the consumer, and it would not help the butter maker to any appreciable extent.

Dairy and butter making is, in my opinion, the one industry in agriculture that is going forward by leaps and bounds, and I am sincerely glad of it. We have only to look to the number in the census of milch cows. The people are eating more and more the products of the dairy. But, to put it on its legiti-mate standing, there is a market for butter continuous and always, and we could not make oleomargarine enough in the world to take away the butter market nor to seriously injure the butter market.

We have a tremendous market and the prices to-day show that we need butter cows and more of them. On the other hand we color butter the greater part of the year to make it not, perhaps, more palatable to the tongue, but more agreeable to the eye. We take this old lardy-looking winter butter and color it. That is legitimate. It is not only legitimate but necessary to be clean and neat and wholesome about the making of butter. Now, why not with every other product give the same facilities? Those who eat oleomargarine may have as good an eye as those who may eat butter, and they are entitled to have it colored with the same material. If it is deleterious in one it is in both, but in my judgment it is deleterious to

It seems to me that the whole problem comes down to treating each absolutely aright and alike in its manufacture, and then as the Senator has so well said, and I think he is right in saying it, this amendment will protect the butter makers, that is to say, it will be sold in small packages as oleomargarine and eaten as oleomargarine. That is the Senator's contention as I understand it. He thinks that the making of oleomargarine is just exactly as legitimate as the making of butter.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Entirely so.
Mr. WARREN. So do I, but this fraud is brought about by the over-avarice of some people, by the 10-cent tax which is nothing more nor less than a fine put on in an offensive way, and has an offensive appearance to any one except those who think they may be benefited financially by it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator from Wyoming expresses with perfect clearness some of the idens I have had in mind. It must be assumed, I think, by this time that both these articles of food are healthy; that one will always be a little cheaper than the other; and by the same token the other will always be in greater demand amongst the public. The task and function of a legislative body is to so contrive the law as to force the sale of each upon its own merits and under its own name and trade-mark.

I was about to say, Mr. President, that the State of New York has made some experiments in a legislative way in an offert to prevent the fraudulent sale of this article. While I was in the legislature a bill was passed through both houses and received the signature of the governor which provided, and this is to the best of my recollection, that oleomargarine might be sold in the State of New York only in certain sized packages. If I remember it, the largest package was only to be 5 pounds, and no package larger than that would be permitted to be sold. It was provided that they must be original packages when they are sold. The sale of the package in a broken condition was declared illegal. A provision was also made in that statute, as I remember it, that any restaurant or hotel or public place which sold the product upon its tables or served it to its customers must have a sign in a reasonably conspicuous place stating that

That law has been upon the statute books for six years, I think, in practically those terms. I am not absolutely certain of my recollection of the details. There was not the slightest complaint from any of the dairymen of the State, and it is the greatest dairy State in the Union. There was not the slightest complaint from any of the manufacturers of oleomargarine. In fact, they had no objection whatever and never have had to having this article sold upon its own merits and under its own To the best of my recollection and knowledge there has never been a criticism or protest against the operation of that law from that day to this. The result is that in the State the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine for butter at the butter price has been reduced to a minimum. This bill proposes to do somewhat the same thing.

The Senator from Wyoming has remarked very truthfully that coloring matter is introduced into oleomargarine for the same reason that it is introduced into butter; that is, to make the product more pleasing to the eye. A large percentage of the commercial butter sold in the United States is colored with exactly the same coloring matter as is used from time to time in oleomargarine. Of course a much larger percentage of butter is colored in the winter time than in the summer time, for the reason that the average consumer of that product likes to think or believe that the butter he is eating bears the same appearance to his eye in January that it does in June. It is a sort of a tradition, a hobby, a fashion, a habit for the great majority of people to like their butter fairly yellow. It is true that in some communities that fashion varies. It is interesting to note how one big city will differ in its habits in that way from another big city.

The people of Philagelphia like their butter apparently somewhat whiter, and we have often heard—I have no doubt that nearly all the Senators have heard—of "Philadelphia" butter. It is made for the Philadelphia market, because, for some reason or other, many Philadelphians like butter somewhat white.

May I say also, in enlarging upon that, that this peculiarity of taste is not confined to butter. I once visited a very large chicken farm in New Jersey, the proprietor of which sells eggs to the city markets. Of course everyone familiar with the appearance of an egg remembers that some eggs have a brown tinge or shade on the outside of the shell and that some are white. The chicken raiser, whose chickens produced the eggs, sells the brown eggs to Philadelphia and sells all of the white eggs to New York. If he should cross the operation, he would lose money on every shipment he made. For some reason or other the people of Philadelphia like the brown-colored eggs, or the market there prefers eggs of that shade. New York prefers white eggs

Mr. WARREN. And, as to the white butter, is it not generally unsalted butter which is sold in the white form?

WADSWORTH. The unsalted condition goes along with the lack of color, but it is not due to the lack of color.

Mr. WARREN. I understand that.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Nor is the lack of salt due to the lack of color. The tastes go together. The average man who likes near-white butter also likes it without salt or with very little

Mr. WARREN. Which, of course, implies that the butter is in a condition where it must meet very early consumption. Although the color may not make a difference as to the keeping qualities of butter, the absence of salt has a decided effect on its keeping qualities.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is a guarantee of its freshness. Mr. WARREN. It would indicate that the butter had been made within a few days.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The so-called fashionable restaurants and high-priced hotels are apt to put white butter on the table, or near-white butter, with very little salt in it, so as to assure their customers, largely through the absence of salt, that the butter is fresh. That is all.

Mr. WARREN. Along that same line, those who want fresh butter for their restaurants and hotels are not any more in fear of, and probably not so much in fear of, oleomargarine as they are of renovated butter—that is, remade butter—and of qualities of butter that are other than fresh, and which are sold at various places, of course, at a reduced price.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is entirely true. The two substances are so exactly alike that, of course, fraudulent practices are very easy unless the laws are so framed as to make them difficult. Probably we shall never entirely get rid of the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine; but, for one, I have hoped for 10 years that we could reduce it below the present practice, for to-day pleomargarine, under the law, is sold very often and in comparatively large quantities for butter, and at the butter price.

I very well remember the agitation that led to the passage of the Grout bill. I remember very well following the hearings on the bill in the House committee. I remember very well having heard it discussed far and wide over the country and in the part of the country where I live amongst the farmers. There can be no question whatsoever that at that time a tremendous wave of sentiment was aroused all over the country amongst all farmers who had any remote relation to the dairy industry, and the belief instilled in their minds was that if the Grout law did not pass the dairy industry would be ruined; that If the coloring of oleomargarine was not penalized to such an extent as to make it impossible, butter would be driven from the market. That condition was based upon what was going on at that time; and yet, strange to say, Mr. Presiin spite of the alleged threat to the butter industry, which it was said existed at that very time butter was selling at the highest price in the history of the trade, and it has never gone down in price since in relation to the prices of oleomargarine. It has always sold for more than oleomargarine, and it will always sell for more.

In my humble judgment, oleomargarine will never come, and never can come, into direct competition with butter except it be sold fraudulently. If it is sold honestly for what it is, no matter whether it is colored or not, it will never compete with butter in the places where butter brings its high price.

There have been occasions when oleomargarine has been substituted for butter, and the consumers have been informed of it in advance, but they are very few and far between. I have in mind an incident that occurred in one of the great national homes for disabled volunteer soldiers. For many years there had been grave complaint amongst the soldiers living at the home against the quality of the butter served to them, and the management tried and tried again by purchasing its butter from different creameries and making every effort to get the very best to satisfy the old veterans who lived at the home, to the number of something over 2,000 or 2,500. It proved exceedingly difficult to get such a great supply of butter to one institution and to have it of a uniform grade in quality and purity every day in the year; and the complaints, rather than being de-creased, as the result of the efforts of the management, con-tinued as before. Finally, the management announced to the soldiers in the home that for a stated period-we will say for a week or 10 days-oleomargarine would be served upon the tables, and that at the end of that test period a vote would be taken amongst the soldiers at the home and they would be permitted to decide which they wanted. The test was made, the vote was taken, and, by a large majority, the soldiers voted to eat oleomargarine; and they are eating it yet, eating it for what it is, not being deceived at all, for the whole thing was done in the open light of day.

That is not an indictment against butter. It merely illustrates that under certain circumstances, when the product has to be purchased in very large quantities and with a constant demand for it upon a large scale, as in a great institution of that sort, it is exceedingly difficult to secure butter of uniform grade and quality. In that case, upon the express wishes of the men who were to eat it, resort was finally had to oleomargarine. The one advantage that that product has in the market is that it is uniform in character. You buy it from one factory for a period of six months, and every day in the six months every pound you get is exactly like every other pound. That is the only advantage that oleomargarine has in the trade when it comes into contact with butter; but that, in my judgment, is not sufficient, and never will be sufficient, to crowd butter out of the market or to injure the dairy industry.

The thing that injures the dairy industry is the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine. So bold have those sales become upon some occasions, so skillfully have some of the purveyors of oleomargarine become, and so successful have they been in fooling the people with it and in extracting the butter price for it, that actually I have heard of an occasion where oleomargarine, labeled and colored as butter, has taken the first prize for creamery butter at a county fair. [Laughter.] That is where the dairy industry is injured, and under the existing law that practice is invited, for there is nothing to prevent me or anyone else buying all the uncolored oleomargarine I want, skillfully coloring it behind closed doors, and selling it or exhibiting it for creamery butter at the creamery-butter price.

I verily believe that we will never reduce this fraudulent practice to a minimum until we provide that the product shall not be put into interstate commerce or sold anywhere in packages exceeding a certain weight or size; and, Mr. President, where I to have my way about this matter, I would suggest that the amendment that comes from the Finance Committee of the Senate be altered so that it would not permit a package as large as 10 pounds to be sold. I think that is too large. I think it ought to be limited to 5 pounds. get down to that point in the size of the package at which it will not pay anybody to buy a number of packages and dump the contents together and color them artificially and fraudulently, then you prevent fraud; and it has occurred to me that a 10-pound package is somewhat too large and might still invite and make profitable fraudulent coloring.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey. Mr. HUGHES. I do not want to be facetious, but I have been wondering which side of this amendment the Senator is on. Mr. WADSWORTH. I am in favor of the amendment.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator is in favor of the amendment. I thought when the Senator began his address that he was opposed to it, and that is the reason I asked the question. Subsequently I began to suspect that he was in favor of the amendment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I am sorry it took so long to make my convictions clear.

Mr. HUGHES. It is not the Senator's fault; it is my own. As I have said, I had no intention of trying to be facetious at the Senator's expense.

I agree with the Senator that perhaps it would be better that this amendment limited the size of the package to 1 pound. I think that would make against successful fraud, but the position that the butter men take is that they are not interested in whether we prevent margarine makers from defrauding the cus-They insist practically that margarine must not be There would be just as much objection on the part of colored. the dairy interests to the amendment suggested by the Senator from New York as there would be to the Underwood amendment in its present shape. I even suggested to their representatives that we might provide that no hotel keeper or restaurant keeper should handle both butter and margarine, but that he must display in a prominent place in his dining room or his office the fact that he used margarine, and that under the law he could not use butter, but they said they did not care about that sort of a provision. In other words, they do not want the margarine men to have the privilege of making their product look like Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey has struck very close to the truth underlying the passage of the Grout bill.

Mr. HUGHES. They are absolutely frank about it, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. WADSWORTH. They are very frank about it. They claim that the insertion of coloring matter in a perfectly healthy article of food such as oleomargarine should be unlawful and a crime, while the insertion of the same coloring matter in another perfectly healthy article of food is an inci-dental virtue. [Laughter.] That is all. We might as well dental virtue. [Laughter.] That is all. Some contend that oleomargarine face things as they are. Some contend that oleoms should never be colored under any circumstances. who so contend know that it can not be sold under such circumstances with freedom or readiness, and that is one of the reasons why they contend for it; for human prejudice and tastes and habits are such that, if there was laid upon this desk some oleomargarine that was white or near white, without any coloring matter in it, and there was placed alongside of it oleomargarine that was colored in imitation of butter, and a man stepped up to the desk and was told that both of those products were oleomargarine, he would choose the yellow oleomargarine. He might, indeed, be willing to pay a little more for it, because, for some reason or other, people like their butter or their oleomargarine, whichever it be, of a yellow color. If that were not the fact there would not be a large percentage of butter colored to-day, nor would oleomargarine have been singled out as the one product that must not be colored with the same matter that colors butter. By prohibiting the coloring, they hoped to prevent or largely restrict the sale of margarine, even on its merits.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.
Mr. LEWIS. I recognize the fact that the Senator from New York has had personal experience in the matter of dairying and farming; but I must confess to him that I have always labored under the idea that the yellow coloring of butter was natural to the butter as it came from the churn.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Only for about three or four months of the year is butter naturally yellow. In temperate climes, such as Illinois and New York, that period comprises the months of June, July, and August, or May, June, and July. When you pass the middle of the summer, the butter begins to get paler, until, when December arrives, it is almost white; and so from the middle of August on the butter makers begin putting in a little more coloring, so that the year round it shall assume and have the same color—the June color.

Mr. LEWIS. Do I gather from the Senator that the yellow coloring of butter as we usually see it is generally artificial and not natural?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Fully 80 or 90 per cent of the yellow butter we see the year round has coloring matter in it.

Mr. LEWIS. I remember as a boy in the South, where I was reared, I would go out to what we called the negro quarter, where they would churn, using a little wooden instrument with a top to it through the center of which a pole of some kind ran, and it was my joy to be permitted to jiggle it up and down, and I remember, when the top was lifted off, seeing little lumps or what impressed my mind as a little boy as looking like little yellow worms on the surface of the contents of the churn. That was in the State of Georgia, and I presume that that must have occurred in the summer time, for, as I gather from the Senator's remarks, if it had been in September or November the Senator's idea is that these little particles would not have been yellow.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, it depends entirely upon

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, it depends entirely upon the condition of the pasture. If in Georgia the pastures are green and lush in September, the butter will be yellow. If the grass is ripe and brown, the butter will be paler; and when winter comes on and the cows are fed on grain and hay, the butter will be nearly white.

Mr. LEWIS. I think I now understand what previously I did not understand. The Senator means to imply or have me understand, then, that the yellow color in butter is due to the season of the year in a particular section of the country, whether in Georgia, New York, or Illinois, depending on the condition of the grass and whether it is green?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Exactly so.

Mr. LEWIS. I catch the Senator's meaning that the color of the butter is yellow so long as the grass is naturally green. Is that a safe statement?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is. So. Mr. President, a discussion of the injection of coloring matter into butter and oleomargarine leads to the conclusion that the coloring matter is injected into both articles for the same purpose—to please the eye of the customer.

It has been suggested here, I think, perhaps in conversation if not upon the floor in open debate, that if it is desired that oleomargarine shall have its own color, as it is alleged that butter has its own color—although I do not know what that color is, as it varies from white to orange—that if oleomargarine is to have its own color, provision might be made in the law that it should be colored blue or pink. Of course, everyone knows that no one would buy it if it had the different colors of the rainbow. No more would any Senator in his right mind consent to buy a suit of clothes of red and yellow stripes. If the law provided that every suit of clothes that was half wool and half cotton, called shoddy, must be red and yellow, they simply would not purchase them.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me? I think in one of the foreign countries—I can not now just give the country—the law demands that oleomargarine shall have a narrow red streak running through the little package or block in order to define definitely that it is oleomargarine.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That would appear to be a very practical method of enforcing the identification of the article.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Yes. That is all there is of it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. But, Mr. President, the whole problem comes down to the ability of a law to accomplish what is asked of it, or what is expected of it. The present law has failed, and has failed for years. It is not protecting the very men who wanted it enacted in the first place. It is not only the consumer who buys oleomargarine and pays the butter price that suffers, it is the man that produces butter on the farm. When any considerable quantity of oleomargarine is sold for butter, the man on the farm who is producing butter and trying to make a living by doing it is being defrauded and handicapped just that much. That is what this law is doing, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and three Secretaries of the Treasury in effect say so.

say so.

I am not at all surprised at the effect of this law, for it was apparent to a good many people when it was placed upon the statute books that that is what would happen, and it has happened; nor am I surprised that Senators are in receipt of telegrams and petitions from dairymen and officials of agricultural societies protesting against the enactment of this amendment. This law, as it stands to-day, was the favorite and the great This law, as it status today, was the laterite and the great object of an enormous organization of dairymen and farmers. They have a pride in it. Many of them would hate to admit that it was a failure, as the officials who try to enforce it have said that it is. Many of them have not heard that it is a failure. Butter has been going up in price ever since this law was placed upon the statute books, and the butter maker upon the farm has not felt himself as yet injured by this fraudulent competition that has been going on. He has been injured, however; and had prices of butter stayed level, or had they sagged down, had we not had prosperous times, particularly since the outbreak of the European war, the average butter maker upon the farms and in the creameries would have been looking around to find out what was competing fraudulently with his product: and he would have found that oleomargarine was competing with it fraudulently under the very law that he asked to be placed upon the statute books 13 years ago.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, right in line with that, does not the Senator believe that there has been no time in the history of dairying within the remembrance of Senators here now when there has been such an increase in the number of cows and dairy products as there has been, you may say, since the law was passed putting on this 10-cent tax; not because of it, perhaps, but notwithstanding it?

As the Senator says, we have had great prosperity; but the fact is that the dairying interests, the number of cows, and so forth, have far exceeded the other lines of agriculture. The total number of cattle has hardly increased at all, and yet the number of cows has doubled.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator is exactly right; and as I said before, in my humble judgment, oleomargarine, when sold under its own name and on its own merits, will rever successfully compete with butter. It simply fills in a gap that butter can not fill. It fills in the gap that exists so far as butter supply and the possibilities of using butter are concerned upon the ranch, in the mine, in the camp, and in the congested districts of our great cities, where there dwell hundreds of thousands of people who can not afford to pay 50 cents a pound for butter, or 40 cents a pound for butter, or 35 cents a pound for butter. If they can not get something else, they have got to go without. That is where oleomargarine comes in; and when it does come in, in an atmosphere and surroundings of that sort, it does not crowd out butter. Butter is not there at all.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I will.

Mr. WARREN. As there is not a great deal of time left, and as the Senator has so fully expressed my belief in this matter now before us—the effect for good or evil—I want to say that I indorse his attitude and belief fully, and to say that, so far as I am concerned, if I thought this amendment was to be an injury to the butter and dairying interests, I should be far from supporting it. But I stand for it from the point of view of those who believe in butter, and in greatly increasing the manufacture of butter. One product, however, is not more needed than the other; and hence I agree with the Senator from New York that we want a product that those can reach who can not reach butter at the price it brings now and should bring.

If the Senator will permit me, I want, in his time, to put that statement in the Record.

Mr. WADSWORTH, Naturally, Mr. President, I am gratified to know that the Senator from Wyoming agrees with my views upon this subject.

Mr. President, I am of the opinion that there is a vast deal of misinformation abroad in the land upon this subject. It is exceedingly difficult, as it were, to get a hearing, even in the Senate Chamber, and explain to the interested public what underlies the law that is now upon the statute books, and what deriles the law that is now upon the statute books, and what the reasons are for the proposal made by the Senator from Alabama. I fully expect that those who shall vote for the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama will be severely criticized by men engaged in the dairy industry, be-lieving as they do with utmost sincerity that it constitutes, or may constitute, a breakdown in the law; falling to realize up to this time, and failing to be informed, that the present law has itself broken down so for as fulfilling the expectations of has itself broken down, so far as fulfilling the expectations of its original proponents is concerned.

I would not support the amendment of the Senator from Alabama were I not convinced that it would reduce the amount of fraud, coloring matter or no coloring matter. Were I not conrand, coloring matter or no coloring matter. Were I not convinced that the present law is a failure, and that the dairy interests are indirectly at least suffering from its operations, I would not support this amendment. If it shall be adopted by this Congress—which I very much doubt, so great is the difficulty of persuading people that a law upon the statute books is a failure, particularly when it originally had the support of thousands of people who are interested in it—if this law shall be enacted by the present Congress, I have not the slightest doubt but that it will be infinitely more successful in its operations than the law which is now sought to be amended.

I can not help believing that we should face these things as they are. I know the strength and influence of floods of telegrams, and of the traditions that surrounded the enactment of the law back in 1902. But we have the word of the officials of the Government stretching back 10 years—the men charged with the enforcement of this law—that it is a failure. Just as Just as we have prevented the adulteration or the false branding and the fraudulent sale of other articles by limiting the size of the package in which they are presented over the counter to the customer, so in that way, and in that way only, in my judgment, can we reduce the fraudulent practice of selling oleomargarine over the counter for butter, at the butter price.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Finance I ask that we proceed to the consideration of the amendments to the bill offered by the committee.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, before doing that, will the Senator permit me to offer some telegrams relative to this amendment, to be printed in the Record? I will not take the time to read them.

Mr. SIMMONS. Certainly. Mr. THOMPSON. I have telegrams from the State dairy commissioner of Kansas, the master of the Kansas State Grange, and some creamery companies that I should like to have printed in the RECORD in connection with this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

SEDGWICK, KANS., February 16, 1917.

Senator W. H. THOMPSON,

Washington, D. C.:

Passage of Underwood amendment will seriously handicap development of dairy industry in State. Would appreciate anything you can do to defeat measure. Would suggest Haugen bill, now in House Agriculture Committee, as a substitute; it will bring revenue results and protect both producer and consumer.

GEO. S. HINE State Dairy Commissioner.

TOPEKA, KANS., February 6, 1917.

Hon. W. H. Thompson,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

We oppose the Underwood amendment to the revenue bill lowering tax on colored oleomargarine or any law that would permit oleomargarine to be sold as butter.

B. NEEDHAM, Master Kansas State Grange.

CONCORDIA, KANS., February 14, 1917.

Senator W. H. THOMPSON, Washington, D. C .:

Would appreciate your opposition to Senator Underwood's amendment to revenue bill taxing oleomargarine 2 cents per pound. Oleo sales heavier than ever. Largest per cent only paid one-fourth-cent tax. Believe passing amendment would be disastrous to dairy interests of your

THE CONCORDIA CREAMERY CO.

ATCHISON, KANS., February 15, 1917.

Hon. W. H. THOMPSON, United States Senator, Washington, D. C.:

Underwood amendment to present oleo law must be defeated to avoid great injury to the dairy business in the State of Kansas. Please op-

Derrick Creamery Co., J. W. Orr, C. J. Conlon, N. D. Bartlett, W. A. Blair, Chas. Linley, Frank S. Altman, Wm. Thistle, L. H. Munson, ABILENE, KANS., February 14, 1917.

Hon. W. H. THOMPSON, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Note that Underwood amendment revenue bill will be settled on the floor of Senate. Trust you can consistently use your influence to defeat this measure. If necessary support your adverse attitude to this measure can secure flood of telegrams from both business and agricultural interests in this section of Kansas.

E. H. FORNEY, Manager the Bellesprings Creamery Co.

WICHITA, KANS., February 14, 1917.

Senator W. H. Thompson,
Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Our attention has been attracted to Senator Underwood's amendment to the revenue bill taxing elemargarine 2 cents per pound and permitting same to be colored yellow, like butter. If passed, this will be a great detriment to the most valuable dairy industry of Kansas. Fermission to color similar to butter will result in fraud in its sale. I, as president of the Wichita Creamery Co., appeal to you to oppose this bill.

B. F. COPLEY.

TOPEKA, KANS., February 14, 1917. Senator WILLIAM H. THOMPSON, Washington, D. C.:

We appeal to you to oppose Senator Underwood's amendment to revenue bill regarding 2-cent tax on oleomargarine. We oppose the coloring of oleomargarine in imitation of butter, which permits a fraud to be perpetrated on the public.

THE TOPEKA PURE MILK CO.

GREAT BEND, KANS., February 15, 1917.

Hon. W. H. Thompson,
Schator, Washington, D. C.:

If the Underwood amendment to new revenue bill passes permitting the coloring of oleomargarine it will be a deathblow to all dairy interests of the country. Will greatly appreciate you using your efforts against it.

MERRITT SCHWEIR CREAMERY CO.

TOPEKA, KANS., February 14, 1917.

Senator W. H. THOMPSON, Washington, D. C.:

We appeal to you to investigate and to oppose Senator Underwood's amendment to revenue bill to tax oleomargarine 2 cents per pound, and permit coloring same. Please protect valuable dairy industry of Kansas. More oleomargarine manufactured last year than ever before, Permission to color yellow, like butter, will have tendency to fraud in its sale, and will, moreover, increase cost of living.

BEATRICE CREAMERY CO.

OTTAWA, KANS., February 15, 1917.

Senator W. H. THOMPSON, Washington, D. C.:

Senator Underwood's amendment to the revenue bill taxing oleomargarine 2 cents per pound will be a serious setback to the growing dairy industry of the State of Kansas allowing it to be colored in imitation of butter. We ask you to oppose this bill.

OTTAWA CONDENSED CREAMERY CO.

TOPEKA, KANS., February 14, 1917.

Senator W. H. THOMPSON, Washington, D. C .:

Please investigate Senator Underwood's amendment to revenue bill taxing eleomargarine 2 cents per pound. Dairy industry of Kansas valuable. Permission to color eleomargarine yellow like butter will increase cost of living and will result in fraud in its sale.

CAPITAL CITY CREAMERY CO.

BRATTLEBORO, VT., February 16, 1917.

WILLIAM H THOMPSON, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The Holstein Friesian Association of America, representing 100,000 owners and breeders of dairy cattle, protests against the passage of the amendment proposed by Senator Underwood, raising the tax on oleomargarine and removing all other restrictions, as it would work an irreparable infury to the dairy industry, and we deem the same as in the interests of the packers and cotton growers.

F. L. HOUGHTON, Secretary.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I move that the committee amendments be taken up in their order.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, many of us have been exceedingly busy since the amended bill has been brought in; and I should be gratified, and I believe other Senators would also, if the Senator from North Carolina would take up each one of these amendments, and in a brief way-the cogent way the Senator has of putting things-explain them. It is true that he made an interesting and extended speech in the Senate yesterday; but many of us were busy in committees or in conferences, and for that matter have not been able to peruse the RECORD as closely as we should. I dislike very much to proceed to vote on an amendment without all the Senators present and voting understanding fully what it

Mr. SIMMONS. I will say to the Senator that on yesterday I addressed the Senate for several hours, confining myself exclusively to an explanation of the various provisions of the bill and the amendments.

Mr. WARREN. Has that speech been printed in the RECORD?

Mr. SIMMONS. It has not been printed in the Record.
Mr. WARREN. I thought I had not seen it.
Mr. SIMMONS. I will state to the Senator—what he very well knows-that I spoke on yesterday without notes, and that I was here until 11 o'clock. I have been sick. I went home, and I have not had a minute of time to examine the notes since they have been sent to me. They will be in the Record as soon as I can go through them. If the Senator was not here yesterday, I regret that circumstance very much.

Mr. WARREN. I was here, Mr. President.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President.—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield, and to whom?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming, if he desires to interrogate me further.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to say that my request of the Senator was made with perfect confidence on my part that the Senator in charge of the bill had delivered himself fully and effectually here; but I said, not that I was absent, but that I was engaged on other business of the Senate. The Senator knows very well that we all have duties apart from each other, and so have different committees, and that we have to pick up the information as best we can. For instance, I only spoke of the Senator's speech not being in the Record because even if I had had the time to read it, it is not there for me to read; and so I am likely, and I think other Senators will be, to ask the Senator at various time to explain various parts of this bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. Oh, of course, I can not explain the bill That is all the time we have left. I should in five minutes. like to ask the Senator if he would have any objection to an agreement that we will first vote upon the oleomargarine amendment? That is the amendment that the Senate has discussed all day

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, will not the Senator bring up that matter to-morrow?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do not mean to-night. I am going to move to take a recess. It is too late for us to do anything further to-night. I am just suggesting that to get the views of Senators on the other side.

Mr. PENROSE. I think the Senator had better bring up that suggestion to-morrow. I believe there are several of the minority Senators who desire to speak briefly on the oleomargarine amendment.

Mr. SIMMONS. Of course, I wish to pursue the usual course, which is to take the committee amendments in their order; but in view of the fact that this amendment has atfracted special attention, and we have spent the day in dis-cussing it, and probably the discussion upon it will be resumed in the morning, I think it might be just as well that we should disregard the usual rule and have our first vote upon this amendment. I think probably that would facilitate the consideration of the bill.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I think that is a matter that ought to rest largely with the Senator himself, with reference also to the author of that amendment, and his colleague on the committee, who is the ranking minority member.

Mr. SIMMONS. I desire to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania, who is the ranking minority member, whether that would be satisfactory?

Mr. PENROSE. What is the proposition of the Senator? The suggestion that we first vote upon Mr. SIMMONS.

the oleomargarine amendment.

Mr. PENROSE. So far as I am concerned—and I have no reason to doubt that it will be satisfactory to the others of the minority-it will be entirely satisfactory to dispose of the oleomargarine amendment first.

Mr. SIMMONS. Then I move that the Senate take a recess until 10.30 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. PENROSE. Before that motion is put, may I ask whether the Senator's very able explanation of this measure will be in the RECORD to-morrow?

Mr. SIMMONS. If I have the time and the strength, after have finished, to read it over.

Mr. PENROSE. I know how busy the Senator is.
Mr. SIMMONS. I do not desire to print in the Record—no Senator does-a two or three hour speech without reading it over, and I have not read a line of it since I delivered it.

Mr. PENROSE. I know, Mr. President, how busy the Senator is, and how busy we all are; but—

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator must realize the fact that I have been quite sick recently.

Mr. PENROSE. I did not know that. Mr. SIMMONS. Well, I have been out of the Senate for a month on account of illness. If I have time to-night I will read it over, and if I can do it in time for the printer I will do so. Otherwise, I shall not.

Mr. PENROSE. I think the minority are entitled to see the explanation in print. Considerable criticism has arisen from the fact that Mr. Kitchin's statement did not appear in the RECORD until after the bill arrived in the Senate, which does not seem like a very orderly procedure.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I do not know whether the action of Mr. Kitchin has been criticized or not, nor am I particularly concerned about it; but I shall publish my remarks just as soon as I have time to read over the manuscript and to make such corrections as Senators ought to make when they deliver extemporaneous speeches.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on February 20, 1917, approved and signed the following

S. 809. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to accept the application for land entry of Richard Daeley;

S. 1361. An act for the relief of Thomas Smart;

S. 1378. An act to amend the military record of John P. Fitzgerald:

S. 2749. An act for the relief of George L. Thomas;

S. 3699. An act to donate to the city of St. Augustine, Fla., for park purposes, the tract of land known as the powder-house lot:

S. 1061. An act to allow additional entries under the enlargedhomestead act;

S. 5424. An act to construct a bridge in San Juan County, State of New Mexico; and

S. 7486. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE,

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House further insists upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19359) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, agrees to the further conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Lever, Mr. Lee, and Mr. Haugen managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18453) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918.

The message further announced that the House insists upon its amendments to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation, disagreed to by the Senate, agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Ferris, Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, and Mr. Lenroot managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills:

S. 1792. An act for the relief of settlers on unsurveyed railroad lands;

S. 5450. An act to provide for an additional judge in the State of Texas;

S. 5612. An act providing additional time for the payment of purchase money under homestead entries of lands within the former Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.;

S. 6654. An act to validate a patent to certain lands heretofore issued to the State of Florida, to allow the said State to claim certain other lands, and for other purposes; S. 7644. An act to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Texas, and to provide for terms of court at Wichita Falls, and for a clerk for said court, and for other purposes;

S. 5716. An act to establish the Mount McKinley National Park, in the Territory of Alaska; and S. 8044. An act providing for the extension of time for the reclamation of certain lands in the State of Oregon under the Carey Act.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. LODGE. I present resolutions adopted at a mass meeting at Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., indorsing the President's action in severing diplomatic relations with Germany and pledging their support in the maintenance of American rights. I ask that the resolutions be printed in the Record, together with the names of the committee, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the Record, together with the signatures, as follows:

BOSTON, MASS., February 19, 1917.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, 1765 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Hon. Henex Cabot Lodge,

1765 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I have the honor to inform you that a mass meeting of some 3,000 people, crowding Tremont Temple Sunday afternoon, February 18, adopted the following resolutions by acclamation and without a dissenting vote:

"Resolved, That we, American citizens, without distinction of race or party, assembled at Boston in mass meeting after the fashion of our foreinthers, unequivocally approve the recent action of the President in severing diplomatic relations between the American Republic and the German Empire.

"Resolved, That we repudiate indignantly the utterances and actions of certain so-called 'pacifists,' who cry 'Peace! peace!' when there is no peace, and who, whether consciously or unconsciously acting in behalf of kaiserism, are seeking by an insidious propaganda to divide American sentiment and to undermine the support which the Executive must have from Congress and the people.

"Resolved, That we brand as treasonable their endeavor to pledge our young men never to enlist in the Army or Navy of the United States.

"Resolved, That we denounce as cowardly and contrary to sound principles of self-defense every endeavor, by embargo or hoarding, to interfere with the free flow of supplies to our friends, the people and forces of Belgium, France, and England, who are fighting against the power which threatens to be our enemy; and we urge, in the name of true preparedness, the organized and intensified production and shipment of raw materials, manufactures, and food for that far-flung western front, which may soon be the advance line of our own defense against the Hohenzollern tyranny.

"Resolved, That we denounce as contrary to the law of nations and seliberately unfriendly to the United States the action of the Imperial German Government in setting aside the principle of visit and search, and in siking merchant vessels, both belligerent and neutral, without warning, thus imperilling and destroying the lives of noncombatants, including citi

Committee: Holker Abbott, William D. Austin, Stephen Chase, Ralph Adams Cram, M. R. Deming, James V. Donnaruma, Paul Revere Frothingham, Russell Gray, J. Pennington Gardner, Henry Copley Greene, Prof. W. E. Hocking, Alexander Sedgwick, W. T. Sedgwick, Dr. Frederick C. Shattuck, John A. Sullivan, William Roscoe Thayer, Joseph Lebowich, F. F. McLeod, Joseph B. Millet, Sara Norton, Herbert Parker, Arthur S. Pier, Edgar Pierce, Prof. Chandler R. Post, Dr. Morton

Prince, Ralph Barton Perry, Prof. Theodore W. Richards, Rev. William Harman van Allen, H. Langford Warren, Prof. Leo Weiner, Barrett Wendell, and F. E. Zerrahn.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented petitions of sundry citizens of Saginaw and Fremont, Mich., praying that the United States remain at peace, and that the question of war be submitted to a referendum, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of Pomona Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of Lapeer County, Mich., remonstrating against the proposed reduction of the tax on oleomargarine, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Michigan praying for national prohibition, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PHELAN presented a petition of the Solano County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and Children of Vallejo, Cal., praying for an investigation into the practice vivisection, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. OWEN. I present a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma, which I ask may be printed in the Record and referred to the Committe on Foreign

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House of Representatives, State of Oklahoma, February 14, 1917.

Hon. R. L. OWEN, Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Owen: Inclosed herewith, copy of house concurrent resolution No. 18, by Hodges, which has been passed by both the lower and upper houses of the Oklahoma Legislature now in session, which clearly indicates that the Oklahoma boys indorse the stand our President takes on the war situation.

The present session is nearing its close, and everything progressing very harmoniously.

Very respectfully,

C. C. CHILDERS,

Chief Clerk, House of Representatives.

House concurrent resolution 18. (By Mr. Hodges).

Whereas for two years the whole world has been shaken with the roar of the cannons of war across the seas, and
Whereas the bloodshed of the human family has been appalling, and Whereas before peace is declared the United States Government should formulate the conditions upon which it would feel justified in asking the American people for their formal and solemn adherence, and hereas a lasting peace in Europe can not be a peace of victory for either side, and either side, and

Whereas peace must be followed by definite action to assure the world that no horrors of war shall overwhelm it again, and Whereas by such definite action the United States can not withhold its participation to guarantee life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness throughout the world, and
Whereas our Monroe doctrine has stood the test of time and is proved to have been one of the wisest acts of our former illustrious President Monroe, and
Whereas our President, Woodrow Wilson, in continuance of his policy of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, and his policy for world-wide peace with honor, has addressed the United States Senate, announcing in no uncertain terms his uncompromising stand for world-wide adoption of the Monroe doctrine: Therefore be it be it

Resolved, by the house of representatives (the senate concurring therein), That we publicly express our confidence in President Woodrow Wilson in the action he has taken for the adoption for a world-wide Monroe doctrine; that we indorse his support of a league of nations to preserve the peace of the world, and urge Congress to unhold his hands seeking the adoption of such a worthy measure; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the journals of both houses, and that a copy of same be sent to the President of the United States, and each of our Representatives in Congress from Oklahoma.

Adopted by the house of representatives this 29th day of January, 1917.

PAUL NESBITT,

Speaker House of Representatives.

Adopted by the senate this the 2d day of February, 1917.

M. E. Trapp,

President of the Senate.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. JAMES, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 7039) providing for the free importation of seed grain and flaxseed under certain conditions, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1100) thereon.
Mr. SMITH of South Carolina, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 7858) to give effect to the convention between the United States and Great Britain for the protection of migratory birds, the ratifications whereof were exchanged on the 7th day of December, 1916, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1102) thereon.

Mr. WADSWORTH, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 3376) for the relief of Capt. Frederick B. Shaw, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1103) thereon.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. SWANSON for Mr. THAMAN. I ask leave, out of order, to report the bill (H. R. 20632) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 1101) thereon. I desire to get the bill printed as amended, and as the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Swanson] will have charge of it on the floor on account of my health, I will ask him to make a statement in reference to the

Mr. SWANSON. I give notice that as soon as the revenue bill has been disposed of I shall ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

AMENDMENT TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SMOOT submitted an amendment proposing to approprinte $40,000 for a post-office building and site at Park City, Utah, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill (H. R. 20967), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

RECESS

Mr. SIMMONS. I renew my motion that the Senate take a recess until 10.30 o'clock to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 8 o'clock p. m. Wednesday, February 21, 1917) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Thursday, February 22, 1917, at 10.30 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Wednesday, February 21, 1917.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal and most merciful Father, in whom is centered the destiny of men and of nations, illumine our minds, control our spirit, and lead us to a solution of the international entangle-ments in which we are involved. We love peace, abhor war. Spare us, we beseech Thee, from its horrors, and guide those in authority to a peaceful and just disposal of all questions involved; that we may be permitted to enjoy the industries and arts of peace guided by the spirit of truth and righteousness in Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. MOON, Mr. PAGE of North Carolina, and Mr. FLOOD

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Page] rise?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present for printing under the rules the conference report on the bill (H. R. 19119) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. J. Res. 215. Joint resolution to grant citizenship to Henry

S. 8148. An act to define and punish espionage;

S. 8296. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sallors;

S. 8295. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors; and

S. 8227. An act granting the consent of Congress to the city of Fort Atkinson, in Jefferson County, Wis., for the construction of a bridge across the Rock River.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 20827) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers a minute.

and sailors, had asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the said bill and amendments thereto, and had appointed Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Smoot as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 20755) to provide a temporary government for the West Indian Islands, acquired by the United States from Denmark by the convention entered into between said countries on the 4th day of August, 1916, and ratified by the Senate of the United States on the 7th day of September, 1916, and for other purposes, had asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the said bill and amendments thereto, and had appointed Mr. Stone, Mr. Hitchcock, and Mr. Lodge as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

A message, in writing, from the President of the United States, was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had, on February 20, 1917, approved and signed bills of the following titles:

H. R. 8492. An act to restore homestead rights in certain cases; and

H. R. 14471. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary."

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 8296. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors; to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 8295. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 8148. An act to punish espionage and acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 7796. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and convey to the Great Northern Railway Co. certain lands in the State of Montana for division terminal yards and other railway purposes, and for other purposes;

S. 40. An act to authorize agricultural entries on surplus coal lands in Indian reservations; and S. 8079. An act to amend the first and seventh paragraphs of section 4414 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of April 9, 1906.

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR SERVICE.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 19300) making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

Mr. BENNET. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Virginia if there is ever going to be an opportunity to vote on that amendment which I offered in the House and which has been disagreed to in the Senate?

Mr. FLOOD. I have no objection to a vote being taken on it we have the time.

Mr. BENNET. The only question is it is getting so late in the session I rather hesitate to bring that particular matter up.

Mr. FLOOD. I think the gentleman would be wise not to bring it up.

Mr. GARNER. Better let it go to conference. Mr. BENNET. I know what will happen to it in conference. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BENNET. I will not object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection and announces the following conferees: Mr. Flood, Mr. Cline, and Mr. Cooper of Wisconsin.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moone] makes the point of no quorum.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I withhold for

FUNERAL OF LATE ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY.

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate concurrent resolution No. 32, relating to the expenses of the funeral of the late Admiral Dewey here in the Rotunda.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House Senate concurrent resolution No. 32, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution 32.

Senate concurrent resolution 32.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the expenses incurred by the committee appointed by the Vice President and the committee appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives in arranging for and attending the funeral of the late Admiral George Dewey in the Rotunda of the Capitol at Washington, D. C., on January 20, 1917, be paid in equal proportions from the contingent funds of the Senate and House of Representatives, upon vonchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and the Committee on Accounts of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I have examined this Senate resolution. The House passed a resolution and the Senate passed a similar one to pay out of the contingent fund the expenses of the committees which attended the exercises at Arlington. If I understand, this resolution relates only to the exercises in the Rotunda?

Mr. PADGETT. To the exercises in the Rotunda.

Mr. MANN. They do not cross each other anywhere? Mr. PADGETT. No, sir. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I intended to make the point of no quorum, but I am anxious to have the Army bill passed and do not want to delay this Post Office I am suggesting the point of no quorum because I desire to offer a resolution which I assume will be objected to. If it is objected to, and it will take but a minute to find out, I want to make a parliamentary inquiry. If that inquiry is satisfactorily answered, the House will have no further trouble with me this morning.

The SPEAKER. What is the point of order?
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I desire to be recognized to offer a resolution. I ask unanimous consent to do so.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not going to recognize anybody to offer any resolution until the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] gets through with his bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the Speaker recognize me to offer a resolution after that bill is considered?

The SPEAKER. The Chair would have to know what the resolution is. The Chair would have to act in accordance with the ordinary rules of the House.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is a resolution to investigate the charges the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Callaway] inserted in the RECORD as to the activities of certain newspapers coloring war news.

Mr. GARNER. May I suggest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore], if he will permit, that he can introduce the resolution, put it in the basket, and it will go to the proper committee, and then he can demand a hearing from that committee and doubtless get it? That will obviate the inconvenience of having to call for a quorum, with this farcical performance each morning.

Mr. MANN. I think it would expedite business if the gentleman from Pennsylvania be recognized.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state when it is time to pass on the resolution he will pass on it according to the rules of the House, but the Chair thinks it is of the utmost importance to dispose of these great appropriation bills, so that we will not have an extra session.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. So does "the gentleman from Pennsylvania," Mr. Speaker, but permit me, before the Chair settles this question, to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Garner] if he knows that present consideration of the resolution that I have just indicated will be objected to on request for unanimous consent?

Mr. GARNER. I know I will object if it is the same resolution that the gentleman offered the other day.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. To unanimous consent?

Mr. GARNER. Oh, certainly; yes.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It being stated by the gentle-man from Texas [Mr. Garner] that he would object to unani-mous consent for the present consideration of the resolution to investigate the charges made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Callaway] against certain alleged newspaper interests, where would that resolution go if I should drop it into the basket?

The SPEAKER. To the Committee on Rules.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. To the Committee on Rules or to the Committee on the Judiciary?

The SPEAKER. To the Committee on Rules. It raises a committee for purposes of investigation.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, in view of the opposition that is announced by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Garner] to the present consideration of the resolution, and because of the fact that but few days remain of this Congress, and this resolution involves an inquiry of supreme importance to the country, and would have wide ramifications, I shall drop it into the basket in order that it may be referred at once, as the Speaker indicates, to the Committee on Rules, so that the responsibility for an investigation may be left with that committee. [Applause.]

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I call up for consideration the Post Office appropriation bill, H. R. 19410, and ask that the Clerk report Senate amendment No. 15.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Speaker recognize the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] to enable him to make a request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I wish to ask for leave of absence indefinitely for my colleague Mr. Humphrey, who is sick.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] asks for leave of absence indefinitely for his colleague Mr. Humphrey on account of illness. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Clerk report Senate amendment No. 15.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 15, after the word "devices," strike out "$1,061,000 for continuance of service now existing in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago. St. Louis, and Brooklyn," and insert: "$1,001,000: Provided, That the Postmaster General is hereby authorized and directed to extend existing contracts for pneumatic-tube service until June 30, 1918, and the Postmaster General is directed to expend this appropriation for the sole purpose of continuing the existing pneumatic mail-tube service, and no part thereof shall be expended for the transportation of malls in any other manner than herein authorized: Provided further, That a commission consisting of three members of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of the United States Senate, to be designated by the Vice President, and three members of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads of the House of Representatives, to be designated by the Speaker of the House, is hereby authorized and directed to investigate the value of the pneumatic-tube service, their properties, franchises, and other equipment, with a view to the purchase and operation of the same or any portion thereof by the Government and to ascertain the cost and the terms upon which such purchase may be made. The employment of expert and other assistance is authorized, and the expense of such assistance and of the inquiry shall be paid from the appropriation for service by pneumatic tubes, not to exceed $25,000, and said commission shall make a report, with recommendations to Congress, on or by the 1st day of January, 1918."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendment No. 15.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves that the House nonconcur in Senate amendment No. 15.

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do concur in the amendment offered by the Senate to this bill. It is preferential motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts moves that the House concur.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota offers a preferential motion, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Steenesson moves to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment, as follows:

Strike out the colon, in line 5, page 15, and insert a period in lieu thereof, and strike out all the rest of the amendment.

Mr. STEENERSON rose.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Steenerson].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized for five minutes.

nized for five minutes.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, this amendment strikes out the commission provision, and strikes out the direction to extend the contracts for one year, and leaves the appropriation the same as it was when it passed the House substantially.

Mr. LOBECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEENERSON. Yes.

Mr. LOBECK. It reduces it $60,000, does it not?

Mr. STEENERSON. Yes. It reduces the appropriation $60,000. It leaves the appropriation at $1,001,000, which is the amount fixed by the Senate, the House having fixed it at $1.061,000. It strikes out the other provisions of the amend-$1,061,000. It strikes out the other provisions of the amendment in regard to the commission and in regard to extending the contract for one year.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Minnesota yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. STEENERSON. In a minute. I want to explain it first. The objection to the Senate amendment in regard to extending the contract is this: That the present contract rate is $17,000 per mile, and the committee had advices that the extensions could be made on some of these routes, if not all, for very much less, and it seems to me the Postmaster General ought to have the discretion to make the contract at such a price as the owners are willing to make. It is not necessary to throw away this money.

And, in regard to the commission, it does not seem to me there is anything to be gained by having a commission; we have had so many commissions on this subject heretofore. As I stated when this matter was before the House originally, I believe that the appropriation for the full amount required should be made, and the responsibility for stopping this useful service in these cities, if it is to be stopped, should rest on the executive department. I have made that argument before on the floor of the House when the question was first up, and my amendment simply carries out that same proposition. I believe that most of this pneumatic-tube service ought to be continued, and I do not believe, if Congress appropriates the amount that is necessary, that any executive officer will dare to take away the service where it is actually performing a useful function in the expediting of the mails,

Now I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If this proviso is stricken out, it also strikes out the direction to the Postmaster General to use this service and make these contracts, does it not?

Mr. STEENERSON. It strikes out the direction. I do not think it is a proper thing for Congress to direct the extension of a contract when I do not know whether the contract price is correct or not.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Where it is common rumor, as it is here, that the Postmaster General is opposed to the pneumatic-tube service, and probably will not enter into contracts unless he is directed by Congress so to do, does not the gentleman think it important to keep that direction in the bill?

Mr. STEENERSON. I think perhaps we might give the di-rection in another form; but this absolutely ties his hands and gives the pneumatic-tube companies $17,000 a mile when they are willing, as I understand, to do the work for very much less

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Has the gentleman heard that this matter of rumor has gone so far that it is intimated that this bill may not be approved by the President unless Congress yields in this matter of the pneumatic tubes?

Mr. STEENERSON. I do not know whether there is such a rumor or not, or if there is such a rumor whether it is well founded; but I will say, however, that if any such threat had been made of vetoing the Post Office appropriation bill for the purpose of intimidating Congress I would resent it at once, and it would be an inducement to me to act according to my best judgment. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am glad to hear the gentleman say that.

Mr. STEENERSON. Nobody can intimidate this House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, or myself.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is correct. Now, one more question, if the gentleman pleases. Does not the gentle-man know that in another body the question was raised, and there was a ruling that there was such a difference between the Post Office Department and Congress that Congress would have to assert its right or become the creature of the department?

Mr. STEENERSON. I do not know what occurred in the other end of the Capitol during the debate, and there is nothing of that kind of record that I know of. I do know this: That if Congress appropriates the money for this service it is tantamount to a direction to perform the service. Suppose we appropriate the money for the rural-carrier service and the Post Office Department refuses to spend the money. The odium will be on the department, and no department of any common sense would ever undertake to fly in the face of Congress in that way. Appropriating money is a direction to expend it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman know.

that there was such a ruling as this, here or elsewhere:

The Chair believes that the Postmaster General is given the conduct of the affairs of the Post Office Department as a servant of the Congress of the United States, and not as its master, which conduct the Congress may change at will.

And is it not bruited about the Capitol that if this appropriation is made without a direction the Postmaster General will not perform the service for which the appropriation is intended?

Mr. STEENERSON. If that be true, and if that threat is carried out, well and good. The Cabinet officer who would act in that manner and deny the will of the people, through Congress, would go down into history as the most arbitrary official that ever held the office. Nobody dare do a thing of that kind. The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. MOON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts

[Mr. Tague] five minutes.

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I trust the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Steenerson] will not be agreed to. My reason for saying that is this: When this bill was before the House we increased the amount of the appropria-tion. The bill went to the other branch. When that appropriation was made, it should have been notice enough to the Postmaster General that the House of Representatives desired the continuation of the pneumatic-tube service. But not considering that, and considering his own position alone, and that he was supreme in this matter, he arbitrarily notified the committee at the other end of the Capitol that he would not continue to operate the pneumatic-tube service unless the Congress of the United States directed him by a mandatory law to do so. The hearings that were held there will bear out what I have said to this House. Now, all during this discussion we have tried to bring this matter fairly before the Congress. We have presented our case as fairly as we knew how. We have not injected anything of a personal nature into it. We have presented it in behalf of the citizens of the cities we represent, and with that in mind, and knowing the great damage that would be done to the mail service in our districts if the service is discontinued, we appealed to the Members of Congress, and by a substantial vote this House of Representatives indicated its desire to continue the pneumatic-tube service in these cities. Without a special rule we could go no further. As I have said, notwithstanding we voted that appropriation, when the First Assistant Postmaster General, the representative of the Post Office Department before the Senate committee, was asked whether or not this service would be put in operation as a result of the making of the appropriation, he informed the Senate committee that the Postmaster General had declared that unless he was compelled to do so, under no consideration would be continue the service, and that it was his intention on the 4th of March to discontinue it.

Mr. VARE. I should like to ask my colleague whether the adoption of this amendment would not permit the Postmaster General to abandon the service?

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, that is just what the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota would do. would put it back just as it was when it left the House. The Senate committee gave full consideration to this bill in every particular. It was the unanimous vote of that committee that this service should be continued. They had heard all the witnesses, they had heard the department and its representatives, and every single claim that the department had made against this service had been contradicted, even by their own witnesses before the committee. The postmasters from the several cities appeared and some of them agreed that this service should be under the control of the United States Government, that it was of such importance to the service that the Government should own and control it, and that it should not be conducted by private capital or private individuals, Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether some of the Members here realize the importance of this service to the large cities, but I believe if they could have listened to the evidence or have read the evidence presented before both committees, they would join with us to-day in making this vote so substantial that no head of any department would have the temerity to stand arbitrarily before the Congress of the United States and defiantly proclaim himself supreme to the Congress, as does the Postmaster General in this case.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. To what extent is this service used in the gentleman's city?

Mr. TAGUE. Why, we carry 85 per cent of all the firstclass mail in our city through the pneumatic-tube service.

While this bill was before the other body the Postmaster General sent a very lengthy letter and every statement made in a four-page letter addressed to the Senators was presented to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. This committee unanimously reported legislation directing the Postmaster General to continue the pneumatic tubes.

The Senate amended the House provision regarding pneumatic tubes, and made it mandatory because First Assistant Postmaster General Koons told the Post Office Committee of the Senate that Mr. Burleson, under the House provision, did not have to and would not continue the pneumatic tubes.

The Postmaster General states in his letter savings which would result from the entire abandonment of the pneumatic-tube system, and he was quoted in the Senate as saying that he did not now propose to continue even the New York pneumatic tubes.

IN REFERENCE TO PNEUMATIC-TUBE SERVICE.

1. The letter states that the Post Office appropriation bill contains a provision, on page 15, which practically nullifies the act of Congress of 1902 relating to pneumatic-tube service.

This provision was put into the bill because First Assistant Postmaster General Koons notified the Senate Post Office Committee that the Postmaster General would not carry out the vote of the House of Representatives on this matter unless the Senate mandatorily directed him so to do.

- 2. The act of 1902 was clearly meant by Congress to refer to new installations of pneumatic tubes, and was drawn to prevent the Postmaster General from extending the pneumatic tubes beyond the limits prescribed by Congress. When the tubes are once installed, it is self-evident that no further investigation regarding their "need and practicability" is necessary. This opinion is borne out by the fact that at the time the present contracts were made in 1906 Congress authorized the Postmaster General to enter into contracts, and provided that the service should not be extended in any other cities than those in which the service was then under contract, except in certain specified cities in which the service has never been constructed because the Post Office Department has found it impossible to secure contractors to bid on it.
- 3. The letter states that in accordance with this act a commission composed of the ablest experts was appointed. This commission consisted wholly of subordinates of the Postmaster General, except one member, who probably wrote this letter, and who has since been appointed First Assistant Postmaster General. This is the first unfavorable report since the tubes were established under the law of 1902. Previous commissions have consisted of postmasters and men of business experience. This commission was appointed on July 1, 1915, with orders to report before October 1, 1915. They did not make their report until the day on which the business interests of the country were notified to appear before the House Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads regarding the matter, viz, on December 11, 1916.
- 4. The letter states that the committee recommended the discontinuance of the service in Boston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, and St. Louis. It does not state that this same committee recommended the continuance of the service in New York City, where approximately one-half of the total mileage of the country is in operation.
- 5. The letter states that the postmasters of the cities involved unanimously approved the recommendation to discontinue the service. The St. Louis postmaster told the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads that the Government should own and operate the system in St. Louis. The letter makes no mention of the fact that the New York postmaster, a man who has been in the service for 40 years or more, and who has filled every position from letter carrier to postmaster, gives the pneumatic tubes his unqualified indorsement, and says that should they be discontinued there would be overwhelming complaint from the public.
- 6. The letter states that the rental paid for the tubes is exorbitant. The rate paid is that fixed by Congress in 1902, after an investigation and report by a commission composed of some of the ablest engineers of the country. Surely a rate established in 1902 can not be considered exorbitant in the year 1917.

7. The letter speaks of the inefficiency and limited capacity of the tubes. The hearings before the committee developed the fact that the tubes are claimed to be the most efficient service in Government use; that they have been indorsed by every previous commission, and by all Postmaster Generals and postmasters who have used them; that they were installed to carry first-class mail, and that they have a capacity of 180,000 to 200,000 letters an hour; and that this capacity is far in excess of that required by the Post Office Department.

8. The letter speaks of the inflexibility of the tube service and the resulting congestion, and quotes in particular delays in New York City, which occurred in that section of the tubes which the Postmaster General specifically recommends be continued at the present rate of compensation. The question of congestion is said to be one wholly dependent upon post-office operations. It is understood that the tube company claims that the delays to mail mentioned were due to lack of clerks and lack of equipment. It is further rumored that the delays mentioned are due to economies which have been introduced in the Railway Mail Service, because of which mail is now worked in the city terminals and carried in bulk on the railway trains instead of being sorted on the railway trains as heretofore.

9. The letter states that 87½ per cent of the mail now carried by pneumatic tubes can be handled by the present surface transportation; in other words, with the parcel-post and newspaper mail. The basis for such a statement is inconceivable. The postmaster at New York testified before the House committee that he now has 150 automobiles in use, and that if the tubes were discontinued three times as many would be required and that poorer service would result. He explained that if the tubes were discontinued light and fast automobiles of small capacity would be required, and that these would have to make trips on half-hour relays between post offices, thus greatly congesting the city streets. The inspector of traffic of New York testified that a mail auto truck was as bad as 10 ordinary trucks, since they claimed right of way; and also that mail trucks passed back and forth on the streets much oftener than ordinary trucks and therefore greatly added to city congestion.

The St. Louis postmaster told the committee that he could replace the existing 2 miles of tube service with three Ford cars at a cost of $4,700 a year. On examination he admitted that operating the automobiles 20 hours a day on the schedule of the tube service, chauffeurs alone would cost $6,000 to $9,000 a year, and, moreover, that the automobiles would move on the surface at one-half hour intervals, at a speed of 9 to 10 miles an hour, whereas the tubes go beneath the surface on 10-second intervals at a speed of 30 miles an hour.

The St. Louis postmaster testified that the Government should own and operate its tube service.

10. The congressional committee, of which Senator Hoke Smith was chairman, and which reported on October 24, 1914, stated that the pneumatic tubes carried 3,089,000 pieces of mail in Boston every day—that is, 76.5 per cent of the first-class mail—at a cost of 100 letters for 1 cent; in Chicago they carried 5,614,000 letters a day, or 75.7 per cent of the first-class mail, at a cost of 125 letters for 1 cent; in New York and Brooklyn they carried 9,332,000 letters a day, or 49.8 per cent of the first-class mail, at a cost of 79 letters for 1 cent; and in St. Louis they carried 308,000 letters a day, or 93.7 per cent of first-class mail, at a cost of 39 letters for 1 cent.

Based on the report of the 1909 investigating committee, some 3,000,000 letters made connections daily by pneumatic-tube service which could be made by no other known means of transportation, and, charging all of the cost of the pneumatic-tube service to the letters thus so materially benefited, the cost amounted to six-tenths of 1 mill per letter.

11. The Postmaster General's letter states that the department is not under the least moral obligation to continue the service further, and that this is admitted by the representatives of one of the companies. No such admission was made before the Senate committee. The representatives of the tube company stated that all they asked was fair treatment by the Government; that they did not stand upon a moral obligation, however warranted they might be in so doing, but that they stood upon the merit of their enterprise, which has been demonstrated by practical use and by the indorsement of every Postmaster General and every investigating committee.

12. The Postmaster General's letter states that the tubes are obsolete and have little merit, and states that this can not be demonstrated better than by the fact that a large proportion of the system in Boston, which was installed more than 15 years ago for the use of merchants in transporting parcels, proved a failure and was abandoned and then railroaded on the Postal Service.

This system, which consists of about 4 miles, was built in 1902, was used successfully for one year, but it was found that the parcel post which it carried did not require such fast transportation and that it did not pay to carry it in this way. The system was therefore rebuilt and leased to the Government. 1906 all the pneumatic mail tube contracts expired. At that time there were 27 miles of service in the country. New service was then advertised and later contracted for, and this included the so-called obsolete 10-inch line in Boston. To-day there are 57 miles of pneumatic tubes in use in the country. words, the systems have been doubled in length since 1906.

If the tubes are obsolete and of little or no value, why does the department ask an appropriation of $449,500 for continuing the service in New York City and at the same time recommend abandonment of the service in Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston, and Brooklyn?

13. The Postmaster General's letter states that if this amendment prevails Congress will direct the extension of contract without competition. It is self-evident that there can be no competition for a service which it has taken many years to install in the streets of the large cities, and which represent an investment of millions of dollars. Moreover, the Postmaster General, in advertising for pneumatic-tube service in New York City, stipulated that the 10-year contracts could be canceled at any time on six months' notice, making them in reality six-month contracts. No bids were received in answer to the first advertisement of the Postmaster General for this service, and he is now asking bids under a second advertisement which are due to be submitted on March 3 next.

All the service now in use was advertised for by the Post Office Department in 1906. Every pneumatic-tube line has been laid out by the Post Office Department, every post office to be connected, all details as to size of tubes, and so forth, has been recommended by the Post Office Department.

14. Pneumatic tubes have been recommended by every Post-master General since John Wanamaker until the present incumbent. They have been indorsed by every investigating committee since their establishment in 1902 until the present committee. The 1902 committee said:

The committee finds the system of immense advantage to the business interests of the country in its facilitation of mail transmission both local and generally throughout the United States.

This committee was composed of seven of the leading engineers and business men of the country, headed by Theodore C. Search, chairman, and their report was unanimous.

The 1905 investigating committee states:

Pneumatic-tube service in the largest cities can not be considered as a local service, since its benefits are directly or indirectly shared by the whole country.

The 1909 investigating committee states:

The pneumatic-tube service is a very important auxiliary for the rapid transportation of first-class mail in the most important cities, and performs a function not at present obtainable by other means.

The 1914 investigating committee stated:

The pneumatic-tube service for the transmission of mails in the cities in which service is now installed is a valuable adjunct to the mail transportation service for handling first-class, registered, and special-delivery mails not furnished by other means of transportation, and is justified by the advantages of availability, expedition, security, and

The present committee, upon which the Postmaster General bases his report, states "that the principal advantages of pneumatic tubes are a high rate of speed between stations for limited quantities of mail and freedom from surface traffic congestion.'

15. The House Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads held hearings on four days, viz, December 11, 12, 13, and 14, 1916, for the business interests of the country, who opposed discontinuance of the service. The Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads held hearings on seven days, January 26, 27, 29, 30, 31, February 1 and 2.

The House of Representatives discussed the matter before the Committee of the Whole House on January 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, and on January 16, by a vote of 123 yeas to 153 nays, increased the pneumatic-tube appropriation from $449,500 to $1,061,000, with the words "for continuance of service now existing in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, and Brooklyn."

The pneumatic tubes have the indorsement in the cities where they operate of every newspaper, of every civic organization, including such ones of national prominence as the Merchants' Association of New York, the Chambers of Commerce of New York, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, and Philadelphia, and the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, and many others. These organizations have had special committees make careful investigations and report on the subject. Not one word has been said against the pneumatic-tube service except by this special committee of subordinates and by certain subserviet post-masters, except the long-experienced postmaster at New York City, who gave the tubes his unqualified indorsement, which practically resulted in the fact that this special committee recommended the continuation of the tubes in New York, and, moreover, the St. Louis postmaster, who is recorded in opposition to the tubes, told the Senate committee that he was in favor of Government ownership and operation.

16. If the Senate does not take the action provided in the amendment unanimously reported by the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the pneumatic tubes will shut down on this coming March 4, and eight to ten million dollars' worth of property will become junk. Some 5,000 people have invested this money for the use of the United States Government. They have received a very small interest return on their investment, and absolutely no return of the money which they have put into the enterprise.

While ruling on the point of order in the Senate as to whether or not the amendment for pneumatic tubes was general legis-lation (see p. 3674 of Congressional Record of Feb. 14), the Vice President said:

The Chair does not think this is general legislation at all. The Chair believes that the Postmaster General is given the conduct of the affairs of the Post Office Department as a servant of the Congress of the United States and not its master, which conduct the Congress may change at will.

I desire to read and insert in the Record a telegram received by me from the Ford Motor Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.:

PHILADELPHIA, PA., February 21, 1917.

PETER F. TAGUE, Washington, D. C.:

Washington, D. C.:

North Philadelphia post office, with pneumatic-tube service, big consideration when we located and erected a million-dollar plant in this locality. Doing away with pneumatic tube would work great hardship.

FORD MOTOR CO.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. TAGUE. I ask unanimous consent to continue-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] has control of the time.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the parliamentary situation is not difficult to understand. The House, after quite a contest, passed an item in the bill, making an appropriation large enough to renew the existing contracts for pneumatic-tube service, and thereby the House placed itself on record in favor of that service. The House could not go further than to make the appropriation, because any additional legislation would have been subject to a point of order. The Senate has now added to the appropriation a direction to the Postmaster General to renew the existing contracts. It is well known that the Postmaster General is not favorable to these contracts. If the appropriation should be made without any requirement to the Postmaster General to expend it, I would have no criticism of him if he did not expend it. And that would be more strongly true if the House should now strike out the Senate amendment directing the Postmaster General to expend the money. House by that action would place itself on record practically reversing the position it took on the passage of the bill, and saying to the Postmaster General, "We give you the appropriation, but we leave it to your judgment whether it shall be expended." So that if the House occupies the same position So that if the House occupies the same position now that it did when the bill passed, we would now agree to the Senate amendment and not agree to the proposition offered by the gentleman from Minnesota. If we strike out the direction as proposed by the pending motion, we are saying to the Postmaster General, "We have no judgment on the matter; we leave it to your judgment."

Ordinarily we leave very largely such matters to the discretion of the executive officers, but it is quite within the power and the province of Congress, and especially of the House of Representatives, to indicate by direction whether and how it wants money expended. I have no criticism of the Postmaster General because at one time he declined to spend a large share of the money, or a considerable share of the money, appropriated for the Rural Free Delivery, and at another time declined to expend a considerable amount of money appropriated for city carriers and clerks. That was his province, but it is our prov-ince if we choose to reaffirm the position we took on the passage of the bill, and say that we appropriate the money and direct how it shall be expended. [Applause.] Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I believe the gentleman from New York [Mr. Benner] desires two minutes.

Mr. BENNET. I do not desire the time; I approve what the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from Illinois

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I do not care personally what the House does about this matter, it is a matter of no conse-quence to me, but it is one about which there seems to have been a very large misunderstanding. If I am capable of judging of the testimony at all, the record in this case shows that the tubes are being operated at an expense of $17,000 per mile per annum when they could be and ought to be operated for about $8,000 per mile per annum.

The record shows that only 2½ per cent of all the mail of the United States in any one of these cities goes through those tubes. It shows that they are ineffective and often destroy mail matter. It shows further that the mail can be carried, except in the city of New York, by automobile for one-third of the amount that it is carried in these other cities by tubes. It shows that time can be made quicker except in one instance.

Mr. Speaker, the law seems to have been lost sight of in this case. Here is a statute that provides for the protection of the Government against fraud and plunder in these matters, that there shall be an advertisement and submission of blds for this service. Is not that right? If the department can get the service for $7,000 less, ought it not to get it? Are you going blindly to direct this department to renew contracts for $17,000 per mile per annum, contracts that are tainted with fraud from the beginning down to this hour? Are you going to direct it and repeal the law that requires advertisement and submission of bids? Are you going to direct it and why? At the behest of corporations that own this ineffective service. I am here to say, sir, that the proof in this case—and I would be willing to submit it to any tribunal of honest men—is that this Government can not afford to operate a single tube out of the city of New York if the tubes were given to them. That is the proof. What does the law require? It requires before these contracts shall be renewed that an investigation shall be made by three or more postal experts appointed by the Postmaster They have made their investigation and have made their report, and in effect say that the pneumatic-tube service is a fraud and it ought not to be continued. The postmaster of Chicago comes before the committee and says it is of no value

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOON. Yes. Mr. DYER. Does the gentleman say that the commission states in its report that it is a fraud?

Mr. MOON. I said that the effect of it was a fraud, and I say so now. They say it ought not to be continued, and give reasons for it which amount to a fraud.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MOON. No; not now. I want to say to this House that when you vote to prevent the bids and submission of bids to the lowest contractor for the service and force upon the Government a contract at the rate of $17,000 per mile per aunum that is worth only $7,000 per mile per annum, you undertake to do a fraudulent thing that no honest man ought to subscribe That is all there is in this question.

Of course the paid attorneys of these tube companies have been fighting this matter for them all along. Of course gentlemen coming from the cities of some of these companies who own this service feel that they are bound to sustain the people there. Take the tube in Boston, which my friend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Tague] speaks of, that was an old commercial tube that was abandoned by the owners and turned over finally to a corporation that rented it to the Government. There are four to six stoppages in the tube before the mail can get to its destination. There never was a greater swindle perpetrated on the Government. I tell you, gentlemen of the House, every man of you that subscribes to this proposition when it comes before this country is going to be justly smirched.

Let us see what else they are proposing. Tell me that this proposition shall not go to conference, tell me that the judgment of the conferees on this question ought not to be submitted to the House, and you tell me that the House ought to subscribe to a wrong without knowledge of what it is doing.

Let us see for a moment, Mr. Speaker, what is the proposition of the House. In the motion I make I ask noncurrence with the Senate amendment. I have no objection to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota, because that amendment will throw this question into conference, but I do have an objection to any proposition that would commit this House to the provisions of the Senate amendment without a considera-tion in conference. Let us see what they have done. They have stricken out the provision as made by which I propose to stand. They have gone further. They have proposed a committee of the House and Senate for what? To see if they can not secure the purchase by this Government of tubes that are not worth the rent. That is their proposition here, and who do they select? Three Members of the House and three Members of the Senate. There are not three men on the floor of either House that has a scientific, technical, and mechanical knowledge sufficient to make a report on this question that ought to be reported upon. The truth is, if you consider this question, you ought to amend it here or in conference. If you want to consider the question of purchase, it should be by a committee with two scientific engineers and a postal expert to report on the question.

You shall not vote blindly on this matter. I tell you what the proof is, and if you will read it it will demonstrate that this whole business was commenced in fraud and iniquity and has been carried on at the expense of the Government down to this very minute. Why, sir, I would no more touch a commission that would report favorably upon this Senate amendment than I would ask that I be imprisoned for the crime of larceny. Is there anything wrong in sending this to the conference? it not be worked out and settled there? Why are you so anxious to have this House commit itself to a proposition that the postmasters in these cities condemn and that the Government condemns, that the commission that investigated it condemns?

Let any gentleman who proposes to stand by that proposition answer a constituency that will demand of him to know whether he has stood true as a representative of the people or whether he has stood by the local corporation that controls these instrumentalities. The pneumatic tube performs a very insignificant service. These tubes are 8-inch tubes. They are discredited everywhere and in every Government. They ought not to be unloaded upon this Government, This is the first step to perpetrate that fraud, and it ought not to be consummated in this House. Take your choice, gentlemen. There is the printed record, and I defy you to go behind it on the facts. Say whether you will have this Government protect the private interests of these corporations at a loss of $7,000 per mile per annum on every one of the miles of line or whether you will submit to a conference the consideration of the question of the disagreeing vote of this House. [Applause.] I propose as a conferee to stand as far as possible by the judgment of this House. If you want to consummate this transaction with the light before you, do so, but you can not do it with my vote, and I regret to say you can not do it with my respect.

yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Steenerson] proposes to appropriate the money to continue the pneumatic-tube service. The amendment of the Senate proposes to appoint a commission to buy the tubes and substantially makes it mandatory upon the commission to consider the question with a view to purchase only. The question for the House to decide is whether without any information it is willing to adopt the Senate amendment which in effect means the purchase of the tubes. I am willing that the tube service shall be continued. I want the appropriation made to continue that service, but I am opposed to the purchase of the tubes by the Government of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Not now.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Purchase is not contemplated, except that it is to be reported upon.

Mr. MADDEN. The amendment itself practically directs the purchase of the tubes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Oh, I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MADDEN. The information to be obtained by the commission to be appointed is with a view to the purchase of the tubes and for no other purpose. The question is, Does this House want blindly to decide upon the appointment of a commission to buy property that it ought not to own? If we want anything whatever we want the tubes to be used, and if we appropriate the money the tubes will be used, and I submit that the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Steen-ERSON] treats the question in the only way in which it ought to be treated, and I ask the House to vote for that amendment and to vote down the motion to concur in the Senate amendment, because I believe that we ought not to commit the Government of the United States to the purchase of property that some private owners are anxious to get rid of. [Applause.] Who knows what the value of this property is? Why should the Government buy it? The amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota will enable the Postmaster General to negotiate for better terms. Does anyone deny the wisdom of giving the Postmaster General the right to rent these tubes for $10,000 per mile per annum instead of $17,000, if he can get them at the lower rate? Do you want to tie his hands? you want to make the Postmaster General an automaton? Do you want to conduct the Post Office Department on business lines? Do you want to economize in the business of this great service as you would in any private business enterprise?

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MADDEN. If you do you will vote to adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota. I yield to the

Mr. BENNET. Is it not a fact that the First Assistant Postmaster General said frankly before the Senate committee that unless Congress directed the department to continue these tubes they would not use the appropriation for that purpose?

Mr. MADDEN. It does not make any difference what the First Assistant Postmaster General said.

Mr. BENNET. Did he not say that?

If the Congress of the United States-Mr. MADDEN.

He did say it. Mr. BENNET.

Mr. MADDEN. If the Congress of the United States by its vote appropriates the money with the understanding that it must be used for a given purpose, I deny the right of either the Postmaster General or any of his assistants to say that the orders of Congress shall not be obeyed.

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. TAGUE. Is it not a fact that since this money was appropriated by the House the Postmaster General has refused to advertise for bids in any city outside of the city of New York? Mr. MADDEN. How could be advertise for bids?

Mr. TAGUE. Has he not advertised for bids in the city of

New York?

Mr. MADDEN. The appropriation has not yet become a law. Mr. TAGUE. Has he not advertised for bids in the city of New York?

Mr. MADDEN. And the present contract does not expire until after the 4th of March.

Mr. TAGUE. That is not the question. Has he not advertised in New York?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know. Mr. BENNET. I say he has. Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me a moment? I think I can settle that.

Mr. MADDEN. I yield. Mr. MOON. The Postmaster General under the law can not advertise for any but New York, because the law provides that he shall not advertise nor renew the contract until a favorable report is made by a committee appointed under and in pursuance of the law, and that report was made, and it was unfavorable to every place except the city of New York.

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted—
Mr. MADDEN. I decline to yield any longer.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois has the floor.
Mr. MADDEN. I simply want to reassert that I am in favor of making an appropriation to continue this service, but I am opposed to the appointment of any commission with a view to buying the tubes, and a vote to concur in the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Tague] will be a vote in favor of the purchase of the pneumatic tubes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield-

Mr. DYER. How does the gentleman get that inference? [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I hope that the House will vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota, because that will put the whole question in conference, and we can determine then whether a commission should be appointed and for what purpose, and report can be made to the two Houses and settle the whole matter. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves the previous ques-

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to concur in Senate amendment 15 with

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the ayes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. Tague) there were-ayes 176, noes 106.

Mr. TAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER (after counting). Forty-three gentlemen have arisen, not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are

So the motion to concur with an amendment was agreed to. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report Senate amendment 19. The Clerk read as follows:

On page 18, strike out the figures "$28,208,300" and the word "Provided" and insert "Provided, That hereafter any substitute railway postal clerk shall, after having performed service equivalent to 313 days, be appointed railway postal clerk of grade 1, and in computing such service credit shall be allowed for service performed prior to the approval of this act: Provided further, That hereafter when railway postal clerks are transferred from one assignment to another because of changes in the service their salaries shall not be reduced by reason of such change: Provided further."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move to nonconcur in Senate amendment 19.

Mr. VAN DYKE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in Senate amendment 19.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman offers a preferential motion to concur. The question is-

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, just one minute. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to be heard on his amendment?

Mr. VAN DYKE. I do.

Mr. MOON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman. Mr. VAN DYKE. Mr. Speaker, this is practically the same amendment which was stricken out on a point of order before the House when the Post Office bill was under consideration here. It has to do with the taking care of substitutes in the Railway Mail Service. At present, according to a statement made by four different committees, we find the men in the Railway Mail Service, which is one of the most important, in fact the most important branch of the Post Office Department, acting as substitutes from two to three and three and a half years at a very low salary, making it necessary for them to quit before they have become regularly appointed. We find in the hearings on the bill H. R. 1187 a statement which was made and has been substantiated that in California the average monthly salary of California substitutes on the basis of substitutes available for duty for January of this year-that is, the year in which the hearings were taken-that of 109 available for duty the total days being 1,195, the average salary per month was $26.14.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. VAN DYKE. Yes. Mr. BORLAND. This proviso says that after 313 days the substitute shall be appointed in grade 1. Is that "shall" or

Mr. VAN DYKE. It means "shall,"
Mr. BORLAND. It means after one year's work he "shall"

he appointed?

Mr. VAN DYKE. If the gentleman will wait just a moment I will come to that point. I want to use my time in discussing We find that the salary of these substitutes in January, February, March, April, May, in fact, every month in the year, averages from $14 up to as high as $34.20 a month, meaning only one thing, that the average citizen of this country is unable to live on that salary, and will have to drop out of the service. Now, we find in the hearings before the Senate committee on this bill that the General Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service makes this statement, that the substitutes can be taken care of under this provision without an additional cent of cost to the Government, consequently the department, it would seem, would have no particular objection to this passing, and as a matter of fact the department did suggest amendment 22 because of this section.

Mr. MOON. Will the gentleman from Minnesota let me interrupt him? Mr. VAN DYKE. I will.

Mr. MOON. The first part of that section which provides-That hereafter any substitute railway postal clerk shall, after having performed service equivalent to 313 days, be appointed railway postal clerk of grade 1, and in computing such service credit shall be allowed for service performed prior to the approval of this act is not objected to.

While perhaps this matter should all of it go in conference, want to say to the gentleman from Minnesota I do not think the conferees will have any objection to that part of the amendment, but as to the proviso, that requires clerks to be transferred when changes are made and their salaries shall not be reduced by reason of such change, the department is of the opin-ion that it would materially interfere with the administration of affairs in the department.

I will say to the gentleman that I sympathize with him in this matter, and I would be willing in the conference, or even here, to concur in the first part of that section—to strike ont the proviso and concur with an amendment. Would the gentleman object to that?

VAN DYKE. Will the gentleman from Tennessee grant me a little more time, another five minutes, in which to go into this in detail?

Mr. MOON.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I have here the hearings before the Senate committee, in which the general superintendent

Mr. MOON. I want to ask you this: With the assurance that the conferees favor that part of the section, would you be willing to have this matter go into conference?

Mr. VAN DYKE. It is the second part of the section I desire to talk on now, and that is when railway postal clerks are transferred from one assignment to another because of changes in the service their salary shall not be reduced by reason of such

Under date of February 9, 1917, the department advises as follows:

When a reorganization of service or a reduction of classification contemplates a reduction in salaries in a railway post office, any clerk whose salary thereby becomes due to be reduced shall be given his choice of remaining on the same line with appropriate reduction in salary or of being transferred to another assignment carrying with it a salary not less than the salary he is then receiving. If he elects to remain on the same line, the required reduction in his salary shall then be made; but if he elects to be transferred, he will continue to receive temporarily the same salary he has been receiving pending an opportunity to give him such other assignment.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. VAN DYKE. I will.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. What will be the effect of the position you are taking?

Mr. VAN DYKE. It will mean simply this, that in the event of another reorganization of the railway mail service throughout the country, which is contemplated at the present time by the department, the men on the road can not be transferred off of the regular assignment they have now to the terminals throughout the country and have their salaries reduced because of that.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. VAN DYKE, Mr. Speaker, I ask for more time. I would like another five minutes.

Mr. MOON. I will yield to you three minutes. I want to get

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN DYKE. I want to finish this one statement, and then I will yield. This simply means we will not have a repetition of that which transpired as to rural carriers and city-delivery carriers, when the department reduced their salaries, and later on Congress reconfirmed their attitude and reappropriated and forced the department to pay that which they were asked to pay prior to the time in the previous Congress. We have certain classifications in the railway mail service, and under the reclassification act of 1912 there is one clause which states that no railway postal clerk shall suffer in salary because of the reclassification made. Now, at the present time, with the contemplated change in the railway mail service, we find that men are being taken off the road and being reduced from $1,500 to $1,200 a year by this reorganization.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. As I understand the situation now, the railway mail clerks that are taken off of their regular routes and put in what are called "terminals" have their salaries reduced?

Mr. VAN DYKE. Yes. Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Well, will this help their situation and those who have heretofore been reduced?

Mr. VAN DYKE. It will take care of their situation entirely from now on.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It did not seem to me to be worded quite right for that. I hope that will be the effect.

Mr. MOON. I do not think that will, I will say to the gentleman from Minnesota. I was going to say to him that there is no serious objection to the first part of the section. The proviso, however, would indicate that the department could not well administer this office under such strict rules. There ought to be times when the department would have the right-

Mr. VAN DYKE. I want to ask the gentleman from Ten-

The department ought to have the right to control, if not all the time.

Mr. VAN DYKE. The department has the absolute right under this amendment to reduce any man in the Railway Mail Service for cause, but where a man is transferred from one line to another, taken from one town to another, is taken from the road and put into the terminal against his own wishes, and the salary that he has been drawing for years is reduced, I | Illinois on that.

think it is time that Congress should state specifically that they should not do that.

Mr. MOON. Do you think that a man who has been laboring under heavy burdens on a heavy road all the time, and they take him off and transfer him to terminal work, where his work is very light, he should have the same amount as the other man involved in the transfer?

Mr. VAN DYKE. This does not even include the man who asked for the transfer. It is the man who is arbitrarily transferred.

Mr. MOON. And you want to control the department on that question?

Mr. VAN DYKE. Yes; when arbitrarily transferring a man from one assignment to another and reducing his pay it is no fault of the man who was arbitrarily transferred.

Mr. MOON. You had better let it go to conference, where it can be properly adjusted.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] to make a preferential motion.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion, by moving to concur with the following amendment, beginning with the word "Provided," in line 11, strike out all down to and including the word "change," in line 15.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend Senate amendment No. 19, on page 18, by striking out the second proviso, beginning in line 11 and ending with the word "change," in line 15.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of procedure. There are two provisos here, one of which it is suggested be stricken out.

Mr. COX. Beginning with line 11.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I ask that the question of concurrence be divided so that we can vote separately on the two

Mr. COX. The gentleman has the right to ask for a division. Now, just a word, Mr. Speaker. The railway postal clerks need not fear that they are in the hands of enemies. They can have every assurance and every reliance that they are in the hands of their friends, because I think and believe that the legislation passed in the last eight years and brought in here by the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads bears me out in the assertion that of all the postal employees the railway postal clerks have been the favored class.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COX. Yes. Mr. MANN. We had distributing stations at the va

We had distributing stations at the various railway stations, temporarily. The railway mail clerks were assigned to those. Those distributing stations were afterwards closed up and abandoned. The railway mail clerks were then transferred back to regular duty, and in many cases their salaries were reduced. Does the gentleman think that was fair?

Mr. COX. No.

Mr. MANN. Is not that what this House designed to cover? Mr. COX. I think this whole proposition ought to go to conference. I have full faith in the conferees, and so far as the House conferees are concerned, I believe they will report back something that will meet the gentleman's views. I know that the department is afraid of the language as it is now, for fear of the administration of it. But I do not believe for a moment that the department is antagonistic to any railway postal clerks affected in the way or manner referred to by the gentleman from Illinois

I think the whole matter should go to conference.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman's amendment, however, would express the opinion of the House that this second proviso ought entirely to go out.

Mr. COX. Well, I do not know what the House conferees might do when they got into conference, if the Senate insisted. Mr. MANN. I am not sure that the second proviso should remain as it is.

Mr. COX. I do not know, either. Mr. MANN. And I do not believe, when the work of a railway mail clerk is changed, without reflecting on him, that he should suffer a reduction of salary.

Mr. COX. I think so, too; but I think the whole matter should go to conference. Let the conferees work it out.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COX.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Does the gentleman think it proper when the railway mail clerk is taken off and put to work on one of these terminals that his salary should be reduced?

Mr. CON. I answered the question of the gentleman from

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Why does the gentleman think this proviso should not be stricken out?

Mr. COX. I think it should be left to the conferees.
Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I think we should have this language. Mr. COX. I think we would get it back here in the proper

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I would like three or four minutes.

Mr. MOON. I will yield to the gentleman after I have yielded to the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL], to whom I promised time. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California [Mr. Randall] is given two minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I hope the amendment offered by the Senate will be adopted by the House.

I spent 12 or 13 years in this service, and I know that the substitute clerk is the poorest paid, hardest worked, and the most shabbily treated clerk in the service. I have talked with the General Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service, and this amendment, if not suggested by him, is approved by him, and I hope the House will concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. MOON. Now I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cooper].

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] is to strike out the proviso beginning on page 18, line 11, which reads as follows:

Provided further, That hereafter when railway postal clerks are transferred from one assignment to another because of changes in the service their salaries shall not be reduced by reason of such change.

Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the motion because I do not think that in these times, when potatoes are a dollar a peck, when all the cost of living is higher than ever before in the history of the United States, when the House has voted to the secretaries of Members an increase in salary of 331 per cent, we should compel, or make it possible for, any employee of honorable character, transferred from one assignment to another in this business, to have his salary reduced. This would not be consistent with our professions of interest in the welfare of the persons who work for the Government of the United States. That is one amendment proposed by the Senate which ought to remain in the bill. [Applause and cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. VAN DYKE rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Minnesota rise?

Mr. VAN DYKE. To make a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I want to know what effect the presentation of the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] will have upon the question?

Mr. MOON. It just puts it in conference.
The SPEAKER. It sends it to conference.
Mr. VAN DYKE. It kills one-half of it, as I understand.

The Chair did not understand what the The SPEAKER.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I moved that we concur in Senate amendment numbered 19. The gentleman from Indiana offered a preferential motion. I would like to have that read to ascertain just what effect it will have on my motion.

The SPEAKER. If the motion of the gentleman from Indiana prevails, the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota will be just like the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee. The Clerk will report this amendment again.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Cox's amendment: On page 18 strike out the provise beginning in line 11, down to and including the word "change" on line 15, which reads: "Provided further, That hereafter when railway postal clerks are transferred from one assignment to another because of changes in the service their salaries shall not be reduced by reason of such change."

The SPEAKER. The question of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Parker]—

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Green] wants some time. I yield two minutes to him.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the motion of the gentleman from Indiana to strike out the last proviso for the reason stated by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cooper], and for other reasons which I regard as even more important.

This proviso as it stands ought to be consistent, otherwise the manner in which the department has been making these removals is very unfair to the men. It is unfair to pick out one man in that way. They will have to pick out somebody from a lower grade when there is no reason for demoting him, when his services are just as good as those of other clerks in the department. It is unfair to pick him out arbitrarily and reduce his salary in this manner.

If they are taken for another service when their record has been good, when they have been performing properly the work to which they have been assigned, they ought to receive the same salaries as they received before. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER] demands a severance of this. Consequently the vote is on the Cox amendment first.

The question being taken, the amendment of Mr. Cox was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on concurring-

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, there are two provisos in the Senate amendment, and my request was for a division of the amendment and a vote on the first proviso separately, and then a vote on the second proviso.

The SPEAKER. You can not do that. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendment.

Mr. MOON. Let us have a division, because I think this matter ought to go to conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] demands a division on the motion to concur.

The affirmative vote was taken.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the effect of the There seems to be some misunderstanding about it. gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER] moved a division of the vote, and the Speaker put the question as to whether the House would agree to the first part of the Senate amend-

The SPEAKER. No; the Chair put the question on agreeing to the Cox amendment.

Mr. MOON. That was voted down?
The SPEAKER. That was voted down. The House did not agree to that amendment. Now the question is on concurring in the Senate amendment as a whole.

Mr. MOON. There are two provisos.

The SPEAKER. Yes; but the Chair refused to separate the two provisos.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the vote be taken over again.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks that the vote be taken over again, so everybody will know how he is voting. Now, if you vote "aye" you vote to concur in this Senate amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. This is a straight vote to concur in the Senate amendment?

The SPEAKER. A straight vote to concur in the Senate amendment.

MEMBER. In the entire amendment?

The SPEAKER. In the entire amendment. The vote will be taken over again.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 161, noes 43 Accordingly Senate amendment 19 was concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report Senate amendment 30. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 30: On page 29, after line 8, insert the following: "That from and after the passage of this act privilege of admission to the mails as second-class matter extended to the bulletins issued by State boards of health under the provisions of the act 'making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, and for other purposes,' shall be extended to the bulletins issued by the boards of health of cities, in the same manner and under the same conditions."

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment, as follows

Mr. MOON. I move to nonconcur in the amendment.
Mr. RAKER. On line 16, page 29, after the word "cities," insert the words "and State boards or commissioners of high-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California moves to concur in amendment 30 with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "cities," in line 16, page 29, insert "and State boards or highway commissioners."

Mr. STAFFORD. I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the Senate amendment. It is clear that the Senate amendment merely provides for extending the franking privilege to bulletins issued by boards of health of cities. The gentleman is attempting to extend the franking privilege to State boards or commissioners of highways. It is providing an entirely different class, and the decisions are too numerous for me to cite them that such a proposition is not

The SPEAKER. The point of order is sustained. gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] moves that the House nonconcur in Senate amendment 30.

The motion of Mr. Moon to nonconcur in Senate amendment 30 was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report amendment 32. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 32: On page 36, insert the following:

"Sec. 3. That to provide, during the fiscal year 1918, for increased compensation at the rate of 15 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate per annum of $480 or less, and for increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate of more than $480 per annum and not exceeding $1,000 per annum, so much as may be necessary is appropriated: Provided, That this section shall only apply to employees who are appropriated for in the act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized herein: Provided further, That detailed reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next session showing the number of persons, the grades or character of positions, the original rates of compensation, and the increased rates of compensation provided for herein: Provided further, That the increases shall not apply to employees in the classified service now receiving salaries at the rate of $800 or more per annum."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move to nonconcur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Speaker, I move to cencur in the Senate amendment with the following amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas moves to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Ayres, of Kansas, moves to concur in Senate amendment 32, with the following amendment:
"Sec. 3. That to provide during the fiscal year 1918"——

Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. ER. The gentleman will state it. Mr. MANN.

The SPEAKER.

Mr. MANN. Without doing it all over again, I am sure the gentleman means to move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment striking out all the language of the Senate amendment and inserting in lieu thereof what he has sent up to the desk?

Mr. AYRES.

Mr. AYRES. Yes. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Ayres moves to concur in Senate amendment 32 by striking out all of the amendment and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 3. That to provide, during the fiscal year 1918, for increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate per annum less than $1,200, and for increased compensation at the rate of 5 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate not more than $1,800 per annum and not less than $1,200 per annum, so much as may be necessary is appropriated: Provided, That this section shall only apply to the employees who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized herein: Provided further, That detailed reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next session showing the number of persons, the grades or character of positions, the original rates of compensation, and the increased rates of compensation provided for herein."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Ayres] to concur with an amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Tennessee yield to me five minutes?

Mr. MOON. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, whatever action shall finally be taken in reference to increased compensation ought, in my judg-ment to be uniform in the various appropriation bills. The ment, to be uniform in the various appropriation bills. amendment now proposed is the same amendment that has heretofore been agreed to by the House. But we are in a rather unfortunate predicament in one sense, not about this bill. The conferees on the Agricultural bill have reported back to the House an agreement on that bill changing the House amendment and changing the Senate amendment, and providing for an increase in salary of 10 per cent up to and including $1,000, and 5 per cent for salaries over $1,000 and up to $1,500. The conferees on the Indian appropriation bill reported back to the House agreeing to the House provision, which is offered in this amendment. My recollection is that the conference report on the Agricultural bill will come up in the Senate first for action, and that the conference report on the Indian bill will come up in the House first for action. I do not know whether the Senate will act on the Agricultural bill before we do on the Indian bill, or whether we will act on the Indian bill first. Of course we can not afford, in my judgment, to put one increase in the Indian bill and then a different increase in the Agricultural bill. We can not afford to discriminate between different employees because they happen to be in different services or because different Members happen to be on conference committees. I take it that we will work it out in some way, but I for 8 or 10 days. On the last House omnibus bill the confer-wanted to call it to the attention of the House before these matters come up so that they will understand that there is a quandary on the part of the conferees on these bills.

Mr. MOON. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Does not the gentleman think it would be bet-Mr. MOON. ter, in view of the situation, in order to obtain a uniform action, for it to go to conference?

Mr. MANN. Certainly I think we ought to agree to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas, and that will send it to conference to determine what the rate of increase Without this amendment the House will be foreclosed. Mr. MOON. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD].

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I agree that this amendment should be agreed to as quickly as possible, and that the two Houses should indicate the character of the amendment upon which they are willing to agree for the proposed increase in salaries to Government employees. The legislative bill is in conference, and most of the differences have been adjusted. The Indian bill, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has said, carries one adjustment, and the Agricultural bill a different adjustment. Those bills can be finally agreed upon and enrolled and sent to the President for approval this week if the two Houses can determine upon some one of them just what the increase for employees is to be. It would be almost ridiculous for the Congress to enact legislation providing for one rate of increase for the employees in one department, and an entirely different rate of pay for employees in some other department of the Government.

I do not know upon which bill it would be most advisable to thrash out what the House proposes to do. I have heard it intimated that it was the intention to withhold the Agricultural bill from consideration in the Senate until some other bill had been acted upon in the House. It would be better, Mr. Speaker, since the Agricultural bill has been agreed upon, if that bill could be taken up in the Senate and acted upon immediately and then taken up in the House. If the two Houses were to agree what the proposed compromise should be, if any, it would be notice to the managers of all other bills as to what the attitude of the House would be. I hope some attempt will be made quickly to settle that question so that we may not in the last week of the session be so jammed with work that it will be impossible to complete it under any possible conditions.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. FITZGERALD. I will.

Mr. MANN. I know the gentleman, with his great experience, will say that it is quite important that some of these conference reports should be agreed to soon in order that the bills may have time to be enrolled.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois sounded a warning yesterday that should be heeded. It will be physically impossible to enroll all the bills within the last two or three days of the session. It requires men of experience, men of training, who are competent, to enroll bills properly. They can not be taken on at random. It requires time. During the last two or three days of the session the enrolling clerks will be employed continuously without interruption all day and all night, and perhaps on a stretch of 34 to 40 hours under the best conditions. We must try and expedite our work, so that some of the enrollment and comparison work that is imperative can be done early next week. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Browning] knows the difficulty that will exist, and everyone should make a special effort to speed up the agreements on conference reports on appropriation bills so that the work can be done.

The sundry civil bill and the general deficiency bill necessarily will come into the last day or two for enrollment. There should not be six or seven large bills turned over to the emrolling room to be handled in the last 50 or 60 hours of the session. do that, we are bound to have very serious errors, and perhaps fail to complete what must be done.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to get the attention of some of these gentlemen who handle pension bills. I think there are quite a number of pension bills in conference that have been practically, if not entirely, agreed upon. I was told that they were holding back the reports of conferees until the last one was agreed upon. As soon as they can agree on a conference report on a pension bill, some of which are long bills, the would be very desirable to have the conference report agreed to and in the hands of the enrolling clerk and out of the way.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I will state to the gentleman from Illinois that there are two of the House omnibus pension bills in which the conferees have been appointed ees were appointed yesterday afternoon. I have been trying to get the Senate conferees to consent to a conference on the two first for a week or more, but they have insisted that they wanted to get all of the bills in conference at the same time, so as to avoid more than one conference.

Mr. MANN. That is no excuse; they do not have to enroll

the bills

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. I called this morning and asked if we could not have a conference to-day, but they said it ought to be put off until Saturday, so that two Senate bills may be passed and considered by the conferees at the same time. The House conferees will get the conference at the earliest time possible.

Mr. MANN. The Senate does not have any trouble about enrolling bills, because they do not originate many. If the gentleman from Missouri does not look out, some of his pension bills will fail, because no enrolling clerk will stop to enroll a pension bill when there is an important public bill waiting for enroll-

Mr. MOON. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Browning]

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to be heard upon this amendment. I only desire to confirm what the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGEBALD] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] have stated relative to the enrollment of bills at the end of a session of Congress. It has been a physical impossibility for the enrolling clerks to enroll the great volume of bills that have poured in upon them during the last few days of a session, and during the 16 years of my experience in assisting in this work I have known the clerks engaged upon it to remain in their office continuously for three days and three nights, with very few and short snatches of sleep. The quantity of work these men have been called upon to perform in the last days of Congress should not be put upon them in the future, and I hope the warning given by the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Illinois will be heeded right now.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Kansas to concur, with an amendment.

The motion was agreed to.
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment 33. Insert as a new section the following:

"SEC. 4. In order to promote economy in the distribution of supplies, and in auditing and accounting, the Postmaster General may hereafter designate district and central offices in such districts through which supplies shall be distributed and accounts rendered, and may for the above purposes establish such branch offices within such districts as he may deem necessary; but in no case shall the postmaster at the central office be given authority to abolish offices, to change officers or employees in offices included in such districts."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move to nonconcur in the Senate amendment

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment, with an amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Tennessee a question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Alabama to withhold his amendment for a moment, so that the gentleman from Illinois may ask the gentleman from Tennessee a question.

Mr. BLACKMON. Very well. Mr. CANNON, I think this amendment ought to go to conference

Mr. MOON. That is all I want to do.

Mr. CANNON. I believe it ought not to be agreed to. There is no economy in it.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, will the chairman promise the House that it will have a chance to vote upon this before it is agreed to?

Mr. MOON. It is immaterial to me. I just move to non-concur.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I aim to say, without being offensive to anybody, that this will result, in my judgment, offensive to anybody, that this will result, in my judgment, in creating from time to time, whatever party may be in power, in creating a whole lot of unnecessary places without limit, depending upon discretion. That will not be an economy but an extravagance.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I desire only to say that these motions I make, as in this case, are formal motions, in order to get the matters into conference.

Mr. CANNON. I am not antagonizing the motion. Of course, it must go to conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves to concur in the Senate amendment 33 with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Blackmon moves to concur in Senate amendment 33 with an amendment as follows: Section 4, page 37, strike out, on lines 17, 18, and 19, the following: "and may for the above purposes establish such branch offices within such districts as he may deem necessary."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I have no possible objection to the Postmaster General providing for the distribution of supplies from a central office to be designated by him, but I do object to the Postmaster General being authorized to make substations out of presidential post offices. In other words, under the provisions of this amendment, the Postmaster General might designate the capital of a State as the distributing point, and all the other post offices in that State might be designated substations of the principal office in the State. It strikes me as being a most dangerous proposition to give that power to the Postmaster General. It is said that he may never exercise it. I do not believe that it is proper to give to any department of this Government discretion to do that which we do not believe it ought to do, and therefore I think that this provision unquestionably ought to be stricken from this amendment. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Tennessee to yield me five minutes.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Black-MON]. This provision is our old friend that we have had here several times, proposing to do away with third-class postmasters and establishing branch offices. We voted it down several times before, and it is very closely related to the Poindexter amendment, which we voted down the other day, except that the Poindexter amendment probably would have gone a little further. This provision authorizes the Postmaster General to designate districts and central offices in such districts from which supplies shall be distributed and accounts rendered, and so forth. We had hearings on a similar provision before the House Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads several times

It was explained that the ideal administration of postal affairs would be to establish one office in every large county and have all of the other offices subordinate to it, or perhaps one office in each State. In Indiana, for instance, they suggested Indianapolis might be made the central office, and then all of the other offices in the State would be branch offices to that. Under this provision you could abolish every other office in Indiana and make Indianapolis the head office, and the others would be branch offices. The postmasters would walk the plank, and you would have a civil-service clerk in their places. At the least calculation, if this is carried into effect it will abolish over 6,000 third-class post offices, and they will be branch offices, because they will not be distributing points. They are presidential offices now, and the postmasters are selected from the residents of the towns or the patrons of the office. If this is carried out the postmasters very largely will be imported individuals under the civil service. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me strange that the administration of this great executive department will insist upon trying to perpetrate these Jokers on this House repeatedly. [Applause.] This House has expressed its condemnation of that and yet every once in a while this same attempt is made, destructive of the rights of the House. It comes up in a different form every time. I support the gentleman from Alabama, and I ask the House to vote in his amendment, which takes the substance out of it.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to concur, with an amendment.

The motion to concur, with an amendment, was agreed to. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 34: On page 37 insert the following:

"Seo. 5. That no letter, postal card, circular, newspaper, pamphlet, or publication of any kind containing any advertisement of spirituous, vinous, malted, fermented, or other intoxicating liquors of any kind, or containing a solicitation of an order or orders for said liquors, or any of them, shall be deposited in or carried by the mails of the United States, or be delivered by any postmaster or letter carrier, when addressed or directed to any person, firm, corporation, or association, or other addressee, at any place or point in any State or Territory of the United States at which it is by the law in force in the State or Territory at that time unlawful to advertise or solicit orders for such liquors, or any of them, respectively.

"If the publisher of any newspaper or other publication or the agent of such publisher, or if any dealer in such liquors or his agent, shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited, or shall knowingly send or cause to be sent, anything to be conveyed or delivered by mail in violation of the provisions of this section, or shall knowingly deliver or cause to be delivered by mail anything herein forbidden to be carried by mail, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both; and for any subsequent offense shall be imprisoned not more than one year. Any person violating any provision of this section may be tried and punished, either in the district in which the unlawful matter or publication was mailed or to which it was carried by mail for delivery, according to direction thereon, or in which it was caused to be delivered by mail to the person to whom it was addressed. Whoever shall order, purchase, or cause intoxicating liquors to be transported in interstate commerce, except for scientific, sacramental, medicinal, and mechanical purposes, into any State or Territory the laws of which State or Territory prohibit the manufacture or sale therein of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes shall be punished as aforesaid: Provided, That nothing herein shall authorize the shipment of liquor into any State contrary to the laws of such State: Provided further, That the Postmaster General is hereby authorized and directed to make public from time to time in suitable bulletins or public notices the names of States in which it is unlawful to advertise or solicit orders for such liquors."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of getting this

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of getting this amendment before the House, and not as an expression of my own views, I move to nonconcur in this amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves to

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment No. 34.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ALMON. I wish to know of the Speaker if this amendment is divisible; and if so, I want to demand a division into two parts, of which I think it is susceptible. wish to demand a division of the amendment, beginning

The SPEAKER. Wait a minute. You can not divide to

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I want to suggest it is in order for the gentleman to ask a division of the question, if he proposes to concur with an amendment. That throws the whole Senate amendment open to amendment.

That is what the Chair was going to state, The SPEAKER.

if he ever got a chance.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion— The SPEAKER. No; the gentleman from Virginia offers a

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a preferential motion to that of the gentleman from California, and ask that the amendment be reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. SAUNDERS: Page 39, after the word "Territory," on line 3, strike out all that follows down to and including the word "purposes," in line 5, and insert the following: "contrary to the laws of such State or Territory," so that the provision as amended will read.

"Whoever shall order, purchase, or cause intoxicating liquors to be transported in interstate commerce, except for scientific, sacramental, medicinal, and mechanical purposes, into any State or Territory, contrary to the laws of such State or Territory, shall be punished as aforesald."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman offers an amendment now to the Senate amendment. Does the gentleman move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment?
Mr. SAUNDERS. That is the motion.

Mr. MANN. But that is not the way it was stated.
Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Kentucky rise for a point of order?

Mr. SHERLEY. Not for a point of order, but I want to make parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SHERLEY. Whether it is in order to offer any motion to concur with an amendment while the motion of the gentleman from Virginia is pending?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can demand a division of this question, which throws the Senate amendment open to amendments.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division of the amend-

The SPEAKER. Now, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] has moved the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia. The question is on the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SHERLEY. If that motion shall prevail and the previous question be ordered on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia and the motion of the gentleman from Virginia be not agreed to, will it then be in order to make a motion to concur with an amendment?

Mr. MANN. Why, certainly.
Mr. SHERLEY. I know that; but I wanted the Chair to

The SPEAKER. Yes. The question is on the previous

The question was taken, and the previous question was or-

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, can we have that reported again? I ask unanimous consent that we have that motion again reported. The amendment was again reported.

The SPEAKER. Now, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Almon] demands a division of the question, and the question is on agreeing to this amendment.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. Humphreys of Mississippi) there were—ayes 81, noes 206.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi demands the yeas and nays. [After counting.] Forty-two gentleman have arisen—not a sufficient number.

Mr. BLACKMON and Mr. NORTON. The other side, Mr.

The SPEAKER. The other side is demanded. [After counting.] Two hundred and forty-six gentlemen. Forty-two is not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur with the following amendment.

The Clerk will report the amendment. The SPEAKER.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SHERLEY: Page 38, line 25, after the word "whoever," insert the words "after one year from the approval of this act."

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I have not consumed much of the time of the House since I have been a Member. I have a few things that I desire to say to the House on this occasion, and therefore I ask my colleagues not to interrupt me until I shall have stated what I desire to say, and if I have any time left I will be glad to answer ques-tions to the best of my ability. I have always been a prohibitions to the best of my ability. I have always been a prohibi-tionist. I have voted for prohibition for 25 years—city, county, State, and National-and it is inconceivable to me that any prohibitionist can be opposed to the amendment before this House. [Applause.] I can readily see how gentlemen who do not favor prohibition can oppose it, and I have no fault to find with my colleagues who differ with me; but I desire to address my remarks principally to the prohibitionists of this House, and if they will stand together before this Congress adjourns we will have the best prohibition law on the statute books that has been enacted since this Government was founded. [Applause.] Now, what is the amendment before the House? It is an amendment to prohibit whisky advertisements being transmitted through the mails in any of those States where by law the advertisement of liquor is prohibited; and it also prohibits the interstate shipment of liquors in any quantity into any State where by the law of that State it is prohibited, except for medicinal, scientific, and sacramental purposes

Strange as it may seem, Mr. Speaker, a number of prohibi-tionists are opposed to the amendment, and they place their opposition, so far as I have been able to gather from personal conversation with the Members of this House, on three grounds. In one of them they say that the amendment was proposed by a very distinguished gentleman, a Member of another august body, who is not in sympathy with prohibition. I know the maxim, "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts"; but, Mr. Speaker, when this amendment was offered by the distinguished gentleman it was a very different proposition from the amendment now before the House. The amendment as offered, among other things, made it a crime to take a drink of whisky in a dry State. Possibly it was offered for the purpose of making the legislation obnoxious; but it has been perfected in another body at the other end of this Capitol, and it comes before us now a splendid prohibition measure [applause], the best one and the most practical one, the most effective one for prohibition that has ever been before this body since I have been a Member of it. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, to oppose this amendment on that ground does not attribute much intelligence to this body, for the Members of this body can read the English language, and we know what the amendment says. It is a good prohibition amendment, and will make dry States bone-dry. Other gentlemen may do as they please, but I shall not desert my flag or vote against a good, practical, workable prohibition measure because it was suggested by an enemy of prohibition.

Now, the second opposition to it is that it interferes with State rights. How often, Mr. Speaker, have gentlemen used the State rights proposition to get behind a thing they do not favor! [Applause.] I do not believe this interferes with State rights. We have a dual form of government, State and National, each being supreme within their respective jurisdiction. When this Government was organized, and the respective States confederated themselves into one Government, certain powers were reserved by the States, and certain other powers were by them delegated to the Federal Government, and among the powers delegated to the Federal Government was the right to regulate

I know some of the States have a law to the effect that you can import certain quantities of whisky, and those who are arguing now that the Reed amendment is an infringement of State rights say it takes away the right of a citizen, in a particular State where the law authorizes him to have a quart, to get it. Good Lord, I can not understand a "quart prohibitionist." [Laughter.]

interstate commerce between the several States.

Mr. Speaker, it does take away that right. Until the Webb-enyon law the States could not prohibit the importation of whisky into it through interstate commerce in any quantity; but the Webb-Kenyon Act outlawed whisky so far as interstate commerce was concerned. I grant you if this amendment passes it will be unlawful to ship whisky in quarts or half gallons or gallons into any State where it is prohibited except for sacramental, medicinal, or scientific purposes; but that is not inter-fering with State rights. The States had no rights in the premises save what the Federal Congress gives them, and the Federal Congress had the right to amend the Webb-Kenyon Act. and that is all the Reed amendment does. It says to the States, "You may be wet or dry; choose for yourselves." If whisky is injurious, and I believe it is, I think whisky shipped into my State from some other State will affect the health, morals, and welfare of the people of my State as much as if it was manufactured in Georgia.

Another thing, Mr. Speaker, some of the friends of prohibition say they favor national prohibition. So do I. But it is a "long, long way to Tipperary" before you get national prohibition. It must pass, or be submitted, by a two-thirds vote of both branches of Congress, and then be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States in the Union. I voted for national prohibition in the last Congress. I will vote for it again. But I am not fooling myself that it is going to become a law in the near future. But I want some of those friends who favor nation-wide prohibition and oppose this law to differentiate how this law is interfering with State rights and the national constitutional prohibition would not. Say three-fourths of the States want constitutional prohibition and one-fourth of the States do not, do not the three-fourths force prohibition on the one-fourth of the States that do not want it, thus clearly interfering with the rights of those States?

Then, Mr. Speaker, some friends say they are opposed to it because it is too drastic. Now, I want to say in my experience the greatest argument prohibitionists have always had to combat is composed of two propositions: One of them is that prohibitionists are not sincere. Mr. Speaker, if prohibitionists oppose this Reed amendment it seems to me there is some foundation for that criticism. [Applause.] The other is they say it interferes with quart laws of the respective States. My State has a 2-quart law. But I want to say that when my State enacted that law the proponents of prohibition desired to make It as dry as possible. Our law was enacted before the decision in the West Virginia case, and there was a common idea prevalent that if you prevented the transportation of whisky entirely in interstate commerce from one State to another the courts would hold the whole law unconstitutional; and that alone is the reason that they put the 2-quart proposi-tion in it. I have received this morning a telegram from Georgia which I desire to read:

ATLANTA, GA., February 21, 1917.

Hon. Charles R. Chisp, The Driscoll, Washington, D. C.:

At a meeting of 150 citizens of Atlanta at the Ansley Auditorium, including Anti-Saloon League and Georgia Dry Federation forces, it was unanimously voted that we stand for drastic legislation and everything else that will make the Nation dry. We are with you and urge all Georgia Representatives to fight to a finish for bone-dry legislation.

CHAS. F. JONES,

Chairman Headquarters Committee

Georgia Anti-Saloon League.

Mr. Speaker, remarkable as it is, some prohibitionists say they are opposed to this Reed amendment because it will make the States too dry, and a number of States now dry in name, if they are made dry in fact, will again vote in favor of liquor. I do not subscribe to this proposition. On the contrary, I telieve a number of citizens in the respective States in past prohibition elections have voted against prohibition because they sincerely believed it would not prohibit. If this amendment is passed, it will prohibit, and it will have back of it, to insure its enforcement, both the laws of the States and United States. This amendment will make dry States "dry," and, in my judgment, the beneficial effects of a "bone-dry" State will be so great that the people will not for one moment consider voting again in favor of barroms, but the neighboring States, seeing the splendid effects of the bone-dry law, will themselves go dry. Mr. Speaker, I am frank to say this is my honest belief; but I am candid enough to say if a majority of the people of a State desire to be "wet," under our form of government they have a right to control. As I have before stated, we have a 2-quart law in Georgia, and I earnestly wish the advocates of "quart prohibition" could visit the different express offices in the various cities and towns of Georgia on any Saturday and see the hundreds of persons, mostly negroes-men and women-lined up to get their monthly installment of liquor. I desire to save them from themselves, and if this law is passed it will do it, and this unseemly sight will be a thing of the past, humanity will be benefited, and an ugly cancer removed from the body politic.

Mr. Speaker, this is a practical age, and a man, to succeed in business, must be practical. In my opinion we must be practical to secure desirable legislation. Now, what is the practical thing for the prohibitionists to do regarding the Reed amendment? A reference to the proceedings had in another distinguished body will show that four of the five honorable gentlemen who might be the conferees on this bill if the Reed amendment is amended in any way and it is sent to conference are antagonistic to the Reed prohibition amendment. I fear if we amend the provision and it goes to conference that the Senate conferees will recede from that part of the amendment prohibiting the shipment of liquor into dry States and we would lose a golden opportunity to make dry States "bone-dry." I earnestly appeal to all prohibitionists to stand together; for "united we stand, divided we fall." I beg that the true friends of prohibitions will recede down any appendment and let us hid or the standard of the standard hibition will vote down any amendment and let us bide our time, and, under the rules of the House, I assure you that in due course we will have an opportunity to vote on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL] to concur, without amendment, in the Senate Reed amendment; and if this prevails, the conferees will have no power to alter or change the amendment in any way and we will then have a prohibition law that prohibits in fact as well as in name, a consummation devoutly to be wished for. [Applause.]

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a parliamentary

inquiry

The SPEAKER. What is the parliamentary inquiry?
Mr. SMALL. I desire to ask whether it is in order to offer as a substitute for the pending motion a motion to concur with an amendment?

The SPEAKER. That is the kind of motion that is pending here now

Mr. SMALL. I wish to offer a motion as a substitute. motion to concur with an amendment as a substitute for the pending motion.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman has an amendment that is germane to the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY]-

Mr. SMALL. I would like to have it read. I think it is germane and in order.

The SPEAKER. Send it up to the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMALL moves to concur in amendment 34 with an amendment, as follows: "Page 38, line 25, strike out the remainder of line 25, beginning with the word 'Whoever'; also strike out, on page 39, line 1 and down to and including the word 'State,' in line 8."

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that amendment is not germane to the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley], because the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky applies only to the time that this bill shall go into effect.

Mr. SMALL. Upon which, Mr. Speaker, I would like to be

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear all of these gentlemen if they will wait until the Chair can find two or three bills here. In the meantime the Clerk will read the Sherley amendment and then read the Small amendment to the Sherley amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Sherley: "Page 38, line 25, after the word 'Whoever,' insert the words 'after one year from the approval of this act,' so that the line as amended will read: 'Whoever after one year from the approval of this act shall order, purchase, or cause intoxicating liquors,' etc.

Mr. Small moves to concur in amendment 34 with an amendment, as follows: "On page 38, line 25, after the word 'addressed,' strike out the remainder of line 25, beginning with the word 'Whoever'; also strike out, on page 39, line 1 and down to and including the word 'State,' in line 8."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order, so as to keep the Record straight: You can not offer another motion to concur with an amendment while a motion to concur is pending.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows. The proper construction to put on the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] is that it is an amendment to the Sherley amendment.

Mr. MANN. Or a substitute for the Sherley amendment.

The SPEAKER. Yes; one or the other.

On the theory that the motion has been divided? The SPEAKER. On the theory that the motion has been divided. Now the Chair will hear from the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL].

Mr. ALLEN rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from

Mr. ALLEN. If it is in order now, I will make the motion for a division of the vote on this amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman demands a separation. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] is recognized.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] was a motion to concur with an amendment by the insertion of certain words. My motion to concur is with an amendment, by way of a substitute, to strike out the paragraph to which his motion is an amendment. If my motion prevails, it would make the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky unnecessary and out of order. My motion includes a paragraph which his motion is to amend by the addition of certain words and by way of substitute. It would seem to me that the motion I submitted is in order, because it includes and embraces the entire paragraph of which his motion is amendatory.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on the gentleman's statement he rules himself out of order. If his motion is to strike out the paragraph to which the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] offers an amendment, it can not be a substitute for the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky, because the question on his amendment to perfect the text would have to be put to the House before any other amendment could be put. It can not be a substitute. Whether it is an amendment, or whether it is germane or not, that is another question.

The SPEAKER. The point of order made by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Howard] is sustained.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion shall be considered as pending and considered in order if it shall be in order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I object.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman to make the motion again in a certain event.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Heflin] five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Heflin] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I am in favor of protecting prohibition States from whisky circulars and advertisements, but I am not in favor of imposing a fine and imprisonment upon a citizen in my State for ordering a bottle of whisky when the law of my State gives him the right to do so. I will vote for a provision that will prevent the shipment of whisky into a prohibition State contrary to the laws of that State, but I will not vote here for a Federal law that will set aside the law passed by my State. Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Webb-Kenyon case it is held that the State has the right not only to pass a law preventing the manufacture and sale of whisky but that the legislature can permit or prevent the shipment of whisky into the State. In the State of Alabama a legislature, strong for prohibition, passed a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of whisky within the State and at the same time provided in the law that the citizen could order occasionally a bottle of whisky for personal use.

Strange to say, Mr. Speaker, the whisky interests were there opposing the provision which would permit the citizen to order a bottle every now and then, and they were actually advocating a "bone-dry" statute. Why? Because, they said, if you allow the people to order in limited quantity the cause of prohibition will grow stronger and stronger and the quantity ordered will grow smaller and smaller, but if you make it "bone-dry" the people will vote back the saloons. That is why the whisky interest here to-day is favoring the Reed amendment. There are gentlemen here voting for this "bone-dry" amendment who do not believe in prohibition in any form, and some of them are frank enough to say that if this amendment becomes a law dry States will vote wet, and this is their hope. How, then, can the friends of practical prohibition join hands with those who are trying to prevent the States from working out this prohibition question? The Senate has passed a bill preventing the manufacture and sale of whisky in the city of Washington and in the District of Columbia, and the prohibition leaders in the Senate voted for a provision giving the people of the District the right to order whisky in limited quantity for personal use. Why should that same Senate that deemed it wise and best to thus handle the whisky problem in the city of Washington vote to deny to the State the right to do the very same thing? The lawmaking body of the States that have passed prohibition laws had to deal with conditions as it found them, and in my State and in others the legislature decided that it was wise and best to make haste slowly but surely in working out this great question, and it has provided that the citizen should be permitted to order a small amount of whisky within periods prescribed by law.

Mr. Speaker, in Alabama during the campaign for a prohibition amendment to our State constitution the leaders of the opposition said that it was our intention to take away from the citizen the right to order a bottle of whisky for personal use and that he would not be permitted to keep it in his home for medicinal purposes. We denied that that was our intention, and we told the people that we had no desire to take away from them the right to order for the uses that I have mentioned. Since that campaign the Legislature of Alabama has passed a law in keeping with the promises made in that campaign. While the law now prohibits the manufacture and sale of whisky within the State, it permits the citizen to order a bottle of whisky for medicinal purposes and personal use. lature was dealing with conditions-not as it wished them to be, but conditions as it found them to exist.

Gentlemen of the House, Alabama under the the Supreme Court decision in the Webb-Kenyon case can now permit or prevent shipments of whisky into her borders, and the people of that State feel that they are fully competent to determine this question in the manner that they think wisest and best. A few years ago there were barrooms all over Alabama, and you know that they could not exist unless the people patronized and supported them. The time came when the fight was made against the barroom evil, but a great many people were not ready to give up the use of whisky entirely, so we put out the barrooms and established the dispensary, and through agitation and education and the good work of our Christian temperance forces we reached the time when the people were willing to do away with the dispensary if provision could be made for ordering whisky in limited quantity for medicinal purposes and per-In all questions of genuine reform you have got to sonal use. consider the feelings and the convictions of the people to be affected, and if you want public sentiment to be back of your movement, you must be considerate of that sentiment, appeal to that sentiment, and educate that sentiment to your way of thinking.

So in a question of this kind, gentlemen of the House, you have got to give due regard to the facts of human nature. You must pay proper respect to the appetites of the people and do not forget that you have got to pay proper consideration to the thirst still lingering in prohibition "settlements." [Laughter and applause.] I am reminded of a story about an old fellow who wanted to be rid of the barrooms, but who did not want to sever his connection with the privilege of getting a small smidgen of "spirits" now and then. He was sitting in the amen corner at church on Sunday, and when the preacher said, "I hope to see the day when there will be no whisky sold in this town." The old fellow said "Amen." The preacher continuing, said, "I hope to see the day when there will be none sold in the State." Again the old fellow said, "Amen." And when the preacher said, "I hope to see the time when it will be impossible to get a drop in the whole United States," the old fellow said, "Um, Um, Parson, you are going a leetle too fast for me."

[Laughter and applause.]
Mr. Speaker, Senator Jones, of Washington, the author of the provision to protect prohibition States from whisky circulars and advertisements voted against the Reed amendment which interferes with State laws that permit limited quantities of whisky to be shipped to persons within the State. I had rather trust the local sentiment and the practical judgment of the people of my State in working out this whisky problem than to follow the suggestions of these long-distance fellows who live a thousand miles from Alabama and who do not favor prohibition in any form. The people of my State are more competent to handle this question so far as it affects Alabama than are the Members of this House from other States who do not know local conditions and who are not so vitally interested as are the people of my State. All that has been accomplished in this great work has been accomplished in and through the States. All reforms that are of any value come from within. They proceed from the convictions and desires of the people affected. No law is a success unless it has public sentiment back of it. The people of my State are working out this whisky question in a way that they think best. They are preaching a crusade against the evil and at the same time are paying due regard to the opinions and habits of people who desire to order a limited amount of whisky for medicinal purposes and personal

I will not vote for a Federal statute which disregards the registered will of the people of my State and which interferes with our plan of working out this whisky problem. I will not help here to-day to pass a Federal provision that strikes down and nullifies the statute of my State. I have talked with some of our prohibition leaders on this subject recently and they expressed satisfaction with the Alabama law which permits shipments in limited quantity. The way to uproot the whisky evil is to keep up the work of education. Be patient and be considerate of the fellow who thinks that he must have it. Reach his judgment and his conscience; get him rooted in the right view of the question, and he will help to convert others to the right way. [. Mr. MOON. [Applause.]

I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr.

SHERLEY] 10 minutes.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, before we vote on legislation of this kind it is well that we should clearly consider what it does, and then consider whether we desire to do that thing. shall not undertake to discuss the merits of prohibition. would be a useless thing, for men have their convictions, and nothing that I might say would serve to change in the slightest degree those convictions. But I do want to call attention to the effect of this law, both as to the sale of alcoholic liquors and the effect that it will have upon certain property interests in

The effect of this law, as I understand it, is to nullify all State laws that now permit alcoholic liquors to be imported within their respective States in limited quantities. In other words, wherever a State has seen fit to prohibit manufacture and sale, but has not seen fit to prohibit importation, the effect of this law is to nullify that part of the State law which permits importation, and to prevent any importation of alcoholic liquors into the State. I submit that whether it be a desirable thing or not, no man here with intellectual candor can contend that it is in keeping with the idea heretofore urged that the States should be permitted to settle this matter for themselves, because the effect is instantly to prevent those States, until they repeal their laws which prohibit the manufacture and sale, from permitting importation. It is probably true that many States in the Union left in their laws provisions in regard to importation out of some fear as to the constitutionality of the act that they might pass if they prohibited importation for personal use, and it may be that some of them did it for the purpose of getting regulatory and prohibition laws where they might not have succeeded if they had undertaken to make the State absolutely dry. have exercised their sovereign judgment, as they had a right to do, and the amendment that I propose would give them, in view of the new situation that has arisen under the interpretation that is being placed upon the Webb-Kenyon law by the Supreme Court and under the provisions of this proposed amendment, a year in which to determine what course they wanted to take, before the law became effective.

But I want to call attention to another phase of this matter. I know it will not appeal to a great many men here present. I realize that in dealing with this question there are many gentlemen who honestly consider that any question of property rights or investment is, and ought to be, secondary to what they consider the great moral principle involved; but to those of you who believe that it is proper in a matter of this kind, affecting morals as it does, to give some consideration also to the property interest that is involved and that has not been illegitimate, but has been legitimate under the law, I desire to call your attention to what the effect of this Senate amendment would be.

There are in general and distillery bonded warehouses in America 228,687,000 gallons of distilled spirits, or at least that was the amount on June 30, 1916. There are in the State of Kentucky, in bond, 137,983,000 gallons of distilled spirits. The distiller is required to give a bond to the Federal Government, conditioned to pay $1.10 tax upon each gallon of whisky made and put into a bonded warehouse. He is permitted to keep that whisky in a bonded warehouse for eight years. He is permitted after four years to withdraw it and have it bottled in bond, but he is not permitted to withdraw it until four years in order to bottle it in bond. Of the whisky that is manufactured in the State of Kentucky and sold by the manufacturers, 40 per cent of it goes into States that now have provisions prohibiting manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors but permitting importation in limited quantities. The result of this amendment is to say that 40 per cent of the market of these men shall be destroyed. Now, of course, if men believe that it should be destroyed irrespective of any other consideration, what I say will make no appeal to them; but I submit to the fair sense of this House that a business that has been operated under law, that pays to the Government of the United States a tax of a million dollars a day, ought not to be ruthlessly injured unless there is some great, compelling reason for it. submit to the gentlemen who favor prohibition, who have been in the forefront in leading the States to adopt prohibition, that they will do more to help and less to injure their cause if they give to their States, as my amendment would give, a year to adjust their laws according to the sentiment of those States, and give to the great interest that is invested an opportunity legitimately under the law to dispose of property that has been brought into existence under the law, and under which the owners are obligated by tax bonds to the Federal Government in hundreds of millions of dollars. It is not simply a case of property, but it is a case of property with a Federal obligation that amounts to nearly four times the value of that property when it is first made. To make a gallon of alcoholic liquor costs somewhere between 25 and 35 cents. The tax is $1.10, more than four times the usual cost of making it. These men are under bond to the Federal Government to pay this tax, no matter whether there be a market for their goods or not. They have invested their money under the sanction of the Federal laws, and I submit that it is not asking an unreasonable thing that they be given a year's time in order to adjust their business and their property interests to the view that is now to be the controlling view if this amendment is agreed to. I trust that when men vote on this matter they will bear in mind these conditions which ought to be borne in mind, even on a question about which men are so accustomed to feel rather than think. [Applause.] Mr. MOON. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. to think.

Cox | five minutes.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, this item under consideration contains two propositions, one prohibiting the mails from carrying any liquor advertising into States or Territories in which liquor advertising is made unlawful by the laws of the State. second proposition prohibits shipment of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes into States which prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The first part of the bill is in no sense a prohibition measure. It is but an aid to prohibitory laws passed by the States and in support and in aid of the Webb-Kenyon bill.

The latter part of the bill, known as the Reed amendment, is strictly a prohibition measure prohibiting the shipment or importation of intoxicating liquor into States where liquor is prohibited from being manufactured or sold except it be shipped for medical, scientific, or sacramental purposes. The bill provides a penalty against sending through the mails any liquor advertisements. It provides that the violator of the law may be punished at the place where the unlawful liquor advertisement is deposited in the mail or at the place where it is finally delivered to the addressee named on the letter, card, or advertisement. Some may think that the jurisdiction should be confined alone to the place where the law is violated. I do not agree with this. I believe that the man who intentionally and knowingly violates this law should be prosecuted at the option of the Government at the place where the unlawful matter is mailed or at the place where it is finally delivered. If this provision is permitted to remain in the bill, it will never be violated. The catalogue liquor house in Baltimore or New York will not risk being prosecuted in the State of Indiana or Texas when it knows it can be prosecuted at any point or place in the United States where the law is violated.

In my opinion this is one of the most important provisions in the bill. This provision means the ability of the Government to enforce this law, to make it a real measure. No violator of the law will knowingly attempt to violate it knowing that if he does that he may be taken and tried in a jurisdiction many hundreds of miles from his own home.

Mr. Speaker, I want to address myself particularly to what is known as the Reed amendment, which means absolute prohibition in all States where the manufacture and sale of liquor is made unlawful by the laws of the State. The author of this amendment is unquestionably one of the ablest attorneys in the Senate, and I assume, and I have a right to assume, that he studied every word and every line and was fully conversant with its meaning and effect before he offered it in the Senate.

I assume—and I have a right to assume—that he was honest and conscientious and believed in exactly what his amendment proposes to do, although I have heard it said privately on the floor and outside this House that it is a wet amendment. no stretch of imagination, by no conjuring with the English language, by no twisting and distorting of human thought, can the Reed amendment be construed as a wet amendment. It is prohibition pure and simple in the States prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor-no more, no less—and it is the first time in my 10 years' service in the House that I have seen a real prohibition measure with "teeth" in it come before the House, and on which the House will soon vote. This amendment means something, and it means it now—not to-morrow or 10 years hence, but now—and we will soon see whether or not the House is in favor of prohibition, especially we will see whether or not States which pretend to be in favor of prohibition are truly and sincerely in favor of it. What kind of prohibition are you in favor of? Are you in favor of prohibition in spots? Do you want States as spotted as the leopard's hide? During the past two weeks the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads wrestled with the Bankhead bill, the same bill at present under consideration. We were told by numerous doctors, reverends, and divines that the use of intoxicating liquor had an exceedingly deleterious and degrading effect upon the colored race in the Southland. Let us see whether you are in favor of prohibition in the Southland for the colored race and against prohibition for the white man. You say the intoxicating liquors have a woeful and dangerous effect upon the negroes. Grant this to be true, does not the same liquor when drank by a white man have the same woeful and degrading effect upon him? If so, why not? [Applause.] How can intoxicating liquors when drunk by a negro degrade him and when drunk by a white man have an elevating effect upon him? By what law of reason or logic can you arrive at the nim? By what law of reason or logic can you arrive at the conclusion that intoxicating liquors elevate the white man and destroy the negro? [Applause.] If the use of intoxicating liquor destroys the negro and his home, upon the same line of reason does not the use of intoxicating liquor destroy the white man and his home? In this line of reasoning we find ourselves riding a horse going in opposite direction at the same time, and, to pursue this argument very far, we find that the horse is carrying you at breakneck speed to a complete destruction of your own argument. I admire a man of convictions and who has the physical and moral courage to carry his convictions into execution, but I have no use for a man who has no courage of his convictions. Oh, but, you say, my State allows each person to have shipped to him or her, for their own individual and personal use, 1 quart of intoxicating liquor per month, or one-half gallon, or, possibly, a gallon, as the case may be, and for this reason my State is not in favor of bone-dry prohibition. If this be true, the prohibition laws of those States standing on this ground is not worth the paper on which they are written. If this be the philosophy of those States, then, indeed, prohibition, so far as these States are concerned, is a delusion, a snare, a weaver's net designed to catch the few and aid the many; designed to catch the weak and protect the strong.

If public opinion will not back up this kind of prohibition in the various prohibition States, pray God tell me why you asked us three years ago to vote on the Hobson resolution proposing to submit to the States for their ratification an amendment to the Constitution to give us a bone-dry Nation? Why are we to be called upon to vote for the same resolution this time, bearing the name of the illustrious son of North Carolina, Mr. Webb? If public opinion will not back up the present amendment under consideration—the Reed amendment—in States now dry, what assurances have you and what assurances can you give the House that the same States will ever ratify the proposed Webb constitutional amendment, if Congress should pass it? If your States will not ratify such a constitutional amendment, what are you attempting to do; what are you seeking to accomplish? Are you playing with the desires, the hopes, and aims of millions of men, women, and children who are serious in their beliefs in a dry cause, and who are asking not for prohibition in spots but for bone-dry prohibition applied to both States and Nation? Are you attempting to deceive them on the proposed constitu-tional amendment? Are you talking in the voice of Jacob and holding out the hand of Esau in the Webb resolution and going back to your respective districts and saying to the white man who persists in having his morning toddy and his noonday mint julep, "Do not be scared, do not be frightened, do not get stage struck; we are only fooling with this matter. We know that the Webb amendment will never pass Congress by its constitutional that the webb amendment will never pass Congress by its constitutional transfer and the stage of the sta tional two-thirds majority, and even if it does we know three-fourths of the States will never ratify it, therefore your morning toddy, your noonday mint julep, is not being jeopardized; it is safe and secure."

At last this question has come to a showdown. There is no beating a retreat. It is stand face to face, shoulder to shoulder, and declare by your votes whether you are in favor of prohibition in States which pretend to be in favor of it or against it. No middle course is possible. The issue is plain, the route well blazed. You are either for or against it. I feel too much "pussyfooting" has been going on around this Capitol, both in and outside of it, in the past on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that the Sherley amendment will be voted down. I hope that every amendment offered by any gentleman proposing to concur with an amendment will be voted down [applause] until we finally reach the motion made by the gentle-man from California [Mr. RANDALL], which is a direct motion to concur in the Senate amendment, and when that motion is reached I hope every Member will vote for it. [Applause.] Let every man that is a friend of this measure be not deceived when he casts his vote. If it becomes necessary in order to save the business of the men in these dry States, as contended by the gentleman from Kentucky, there will be abundance of time for Congress to pass a resolution giving them a year's time to clean up their business. I am not in favor of letting the amendment go to conference if I can avoid it [applause], because I am not willing to trust the conferees other than the House conferees receding from the Senate amendment. There is just one way to shut off that recession, and that is for this House to concur in the Senate amendment word for word and line for line, exactly as written. [Applause.]

For 20 years the liquor interests of this country have hurled defiance full and fair in the faces of the dry people of this country, and challenged them to mortal combat on every field over which the two forces have traveled. Were you insincere in the States where you now have what is supposed prohibition when you passed prohibition laws in those States? I trust the House will vote down every amendment offered by any gentle-man proposing to concur with an amendment, because to agree with an amendment, no matter what it is, would mean the sending the whole proposition to conference, and thereby jeopardize the entire proposition by giving the conferees a chance to decide. The Senate amendment should be concurred in and keep this proposition out of conference.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, the amendment of the Senate to this bill—that part of it that is now under consideration reads as follows:

Whoever shall order, purchase, or cause intoxicating liquors to be transported in interstate commerce, except for scientific, sacramental, medicinal, and mechanical purposes, into any State or Territory the laws of which State or Territory prohibit the manufacture or sale therein of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes shall be punished as aforesaid: Provided, That nothing herein shall authorize the shipment of liquor into any State contrary to the laws of such State: Provided further, That the Postmaster General is hereby authorized and directed to make public from time to time in suitable bulletins or public notices the names of States in which it is unlawful to advertise or solicit orders for such liquors.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] offers an amendment to the Senate amendment by inserting, after the word "Whoever" in the Senate amendment, the words "after one year from the approval of this act."

If the gentleman's amendment to the Senate amendment is agreed to, it will postpone the operation of the Senate provision for one year.

I want now to speak of another thing. We can tear our hair about this and that and the other, but over six thousand million dollars since 1861 has come into the Treasury of the United States by the taxation of alcoholic liquors.

dustry has been built up; great quantities of money have been invested. In a broad equity, when prohibition becomes universal, if it ever does, there might well be compensation from the United States Treasury for the property which is destroyed.

But I am not proposing that. This legislation does not propose it. There are now over 232,000,000 gallons of distilled liquors in bonded warehouses that may be withdrawn and put upon the market. Some of the States could receive them; many of the States could not. Some gentleman here has said that about 40 per cent of the States can not receive them when this law is passed. I have not examined that question carefully. But these liquors, as I am informed and believe, being in the bonded warehouses, and the certificates of ownership being given as security to individuals and corporations, the tax of $1.10 per gallon has not been paid, and will not be paid until the liquors are taken out of the bonded warehouses. Banks and investors have taken largely these certificates as collateral security. Now, if you shut off that market at once, query: What will become, first, of the $250,000,000 of revenue; and, second, what will become of this property?

Mr. SIMS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON. No; I have but five minutes.
Mr. Speaker, in the West Virginia case the Supreme Court of the United States sustained the Webb-Kenyon Act, under which the State of West Virginia prohibited the importation of intoxicating liquors, and so forth, and many other States have enacted similar legislation.

This Senate amendment, in such States as have enacted or may hereafter enact such legislation, makes the use of inter-state commerce a violation of the United States law.

This amendment meets my approval in principle. In other words, a State, to go dry and keep dry, can enforce its own laws and have the help of the United States in protecting it against the importation of intoxicating liquors from other States and foreign countries.

I am informed that the State of Indiana has lately enacted dry legislation, but has postponed its going into effect until the 1st of April, 1918. The amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley] is similar in this respect to the Indiana provision, and I shall vote for it. If it falls, I shall vote for the Senate amendment.

This legislation is demanded to prevent the Federal Government from using a part of its exclusive machinery to break down the local laws of certain States that have prohibited the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors. It is local option in its broad sense. The amendment prohibits the use of interstate commerce to break down the prohibition laws of States whose people, by a majority, have voluntarily placed these prohibitions upon themselves.

I believe in local self-government, and that all law must have behind it the support of the majority to give it vitality. So when some States have, by a majority vote, adopted prohibition, this amendment will prohibit the use of interstate commerce, controlled by the Federal Government, from interfering with that local policy.

In the same way the Federal Government would, in my judgment, make a mistake in attempting to use its power to break down the local governments which have adopted a contrary policy that is in harmony with and has the support of the majority in those States. The principle is the same in both cases. Congress can not adopt this policy of aiding the prohibition States to enforce their local laws, and then turn about and try to force that policy upon people who do not believe in it, but have made their laws to regulate and tax the liquer traffic. We can not make fish of one group of States and fowl of another group of States.

It is because I believe in local self-government that I vote for this amendment.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Blackmon].

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I have always been taught that the Congress of the United States was a body of men that were ready at all times to go on record when a great public question was at stake. In fact, I myself formerly believed this, because they should, but my service here has demonstrated that I was wrong in reaching this conclusion. To my great disappointment this morning gentlemen here who are much delighted, as they say, in having an opportunity to vote for a "bone-dry" law were unwilling to allow the roll to be called in the House, and thereby go on record, in order that future generations might see how they voted on this important question. Important not only from the standpoint of a Prohibitionist, but important as a guide for the people who shall hereafter be called upon to select their Representatives for this body. Again, it is important for the people of this Nation to know the men who believe, or claim to believe, that the Congress of the United States have a right to nullify the solemn legislative enactments of a sovereign State. Again, it is important for the people to have the benefit of this record vote, for they are entitled to expect from Members who vote for "bone-dry" prohibition that they will teach prohibition, both by precept and example. While I shall not vote for this amendment, I, for one, will practice prohibition both here and elsewhere.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLACKMON. I have only a few minutes.

Mr. FIELDS. I just want to say that we are willing to go on record when it comes to the final question. We do not want to take up time calling the roll on these amendments.

Mr. BLACKMON. I did not know how the gentleman stood on that. Mr. Speaker, when I think about it I am not surprised that a great many gentlemen whom I personally know in this body are ashamed to go on record as favoring that which their own States have repeatedly refused to do. I can see why they fear to go on record, when their own States have refused to do that which they are being forced into doing right now by the handclaps and applause from this Hall and the galleries. A great number of our States have refused to go on record as favoring what is called "bone-dry" prohibition. In but few instances has this question been submitted to the people, and where the legislatures of the States, with but one or two exceptions, have acted, they have not pretended to go to the extreme to which we are asked to-day to go.

Let us look for a moment at the history connected with this important question,

The people were assured by the Anti-Saloon League and other temperance organizations throughout the country that they entertained no desire to prevent law-abiding citizens from obtaining whisky for their personal use. All that was claimed or asked for was that the saloon be put out of business. claimed that if this was done this question would be eliminated from politics and that legislators would be left free to devote their time and their best energies to the enactment of legislation on all subjects that affected the masses of our people. Have these people kept faith with the different State legislatures that have been influenced by these promises? argument has been made that it was not necessary to submit the question to the people of the different States, because they would be satisfied with the elimination of the saloon, and that was all that was desired or expected.

Now, let us see what legislation we have on this subject.

Many years ago, through the activity and leadership of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Humphreys], Congress passed a law requiring that shipments containing whisky should be plainly marked on the outside of the package that it was whisky. Then, as far back as 1904, Congress passed a law forbidding the transportation of whisky through the mails, and when we were considering the parcel-post bill, in 1911, I offered an amendment to this bill which would prevent the transportation of liquor by parcel post. When I found that this had been fully covered by previous legislation I pursued it no further. Then, again, the Congress of the United States passed what is known as the Webb-Kenyon Act. By the provisions of this act each State has full power to determine what its prohibition laws shall be. If the people of the State shall determine that whisky shall not be manufactured, sold, used, kept, or stored in such State, then not one drop of whisky can be shipped into such State through the channels of interstate commerce. The Supreme Court, the highest court in the land, has determined that the act in question is constitutional and that each sovereign State is within its rights when it says that whisky shall not be manufactured, sold, stored, used, or kept within its borders.

Notwithstanding this, we are called upon to nullify the statutes of the States of Alabama, Georgia, Virginia, and many other States, which have by solemn enactments of their legislatures said that it was not a violation of the law for citizens of those States to order whisky for their personal use in quantities specified by the acts of their legislatures

We are dealing to-day, it is true, with the whisky question; but I want to know what assurance the people of this country have that a Member of Congress who will vote to nullify the solemn enactment of a sovereign State on this question may not do so on many other questions? I warn you that this is the be-ginning of the breaking down of all State lines and a complete surrender of every right which the States have to the Federal Government.

For myself I am not willing, and will never be, to admit that my people are incapable of local self-government. I am not willing to advertise to the world that the people of the State of Alabama are incapable of deciding for themselves what they want to do on this or any other question. Are we not placing ourselves in a ridiculous position to advertise to the country that the sovereign States of this Union have so retrograded in intelligence and virtue that they must now throw up their hands in holy horror and say that our people are incapable of governing themselves and that we must call on the Federal Government to become our guardians?

The people of my State have been denied the right to express their views on this question, but the legislature has spoken for them. I am urged by people outside of my State and some few living within its borders to do that which they are not willing themselves to undertake to do. As a Representative in Congress, I am not willing to say that the legislature of my State, acting within its constitutional limitations, did not know what they were doing when they passed a law dealing with this question, and, further, I have not reached that high and exalted position in my own estimation where I am willing to say my people do not know what they want, that the legislature of my State does not know what the people of the State want, nor have I risen to that lofty self-imagined pinnacle of greatness that I am willing, by my vote, to strike down what they have done. If the proponents of this amendment are correct, what use have we for a State legislature? Why not turn the entire matter of State legislation over to Congress and let the Members of Congress say what laws the people of the different States shall or shall not have.

It is no answer to say that whisky is a great evil and should be put down, even if it takes the nullification of a State statute to accomplish it. Just how it shall be put down, Members of Congress are at great variance. Some think it should be put down one way and some another. For myself, I am willing to leave the method by which this shall be accomplished to the people of the different States.

A few days ago I voted for the bill to make the Territory of Alaska dry. I did this because the people of Alaska at an election held for this purpose voted dry. Those voting to-day for this amendment by their votes say that the people of Alaska are capable of determining this question, but that the people of some of the States are incapable of doing so. I contend that the principle involved in the case of Alaska is no different to that involved here. How can we say that the people of Alaska, a Territory not yet a State of this Union, are capable of local self-government and that the people of Alabama, Georgia, Virginia, and other States of this Union are not? If justice and fair dealing is to count, if solemn agreements made with the people of a State are to be kept our action in voting for the Reed amendment is absolutely indefensible.

Those of you who believe conscientiously that you are called upon to break every well-settled principle of Government, that you are wiser and greater than the framers of the Federal Constitution and are wiser and greater than the people whom you represent, and that possessing this wisdom are called upon to nullify the action of your sovereign State, all well and good.

Mr. Speaker, I am not different from other people, but if it takes such a performance as this to enable me to hold my seat in Congress I would scorn it. I would not sacrifice the allenable rights of my people and become a party to this fatal step toward the centralization of all power at Washington, even though it meant a lifetime job for me in this body.

Mr. Speaker, in my judgment the Reed amendment is positively cruel. By its adoption you not only nullify the statutes of a number of the sovereign States of this Union, but you subject law-abiding citizens of this country to heavy pains and penalties for doing that which the legislatures of their States have said they could do. For the life of me I can not see how a Member of Congress could be forced to vote for this amendment when he knows that it subjects a great many well-meaning and law-abiding citizens to the severe penalty of $1,000 and also imprisonment for merely ordering whisky for his personal use, and in only such quantities as his own State legislature has said that he might lawfully have. In other words, by this legislation you force the citizens of some of the States to legalize the manufacture and sale of whisky or be denied the right in a lawful and orderly way to order a reasonable quantity of whisky for his personal use. Is it not a sad day for a free people to be told that in order to exercise a right which they have always believed they had and a right which their own State legislature by solemn enactment has assured them that they did have, that they are denied this right unless they legalize the manufacture and sale of whisky in their own State, notwithstanding a large majority may object to this method?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL].

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I am not a quart-bottle prohibitionist [applause] and I do not want to see any quart-bottle amendments adopted upon this bill.

I wonder what has come over the dreams of the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley]? As a lightning change artist he exceeds the speed limit, for upon this floor on the 2d day of February Mr. SHERLEY used these words:

For my part, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to have a prohibition law in Alaska, I want to see it just as stringent as it is possible to make it, because I do not believe in pretending to do a thing and then not doing it. If you are going to have prohibition laws, then I want to have real prohibition laws. Alaska has declared its desire for prohibition and for my part I shall vote for the bill.

What has come over the spirit of the dreams of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDALL. No; I refuse to yield; if the gentleman has yielded, I never will. Mr. Speaker, "The Tragedy of the Distillery, or the Story of a Fatal Blunder" might well be the headline of a newspaper article which will thrill 100,000,000 people upon the passage of this bill. This story will be the first half of the last chapter of the liquor traffic. With the business outlawed from the United States mails and with booze driven from 27 States and Territories by Federal power, public opinion will rapidly crystallize for the finish.

Down at the New Willard Hotel the register of guests looks like a city directory of Louisville, Ky. Panic and pandemonium reign throughout the lobbies and corridors. "Is there any way on earth to stop the Reed amendment?" is the universal question, and the universal reply is, "Only by an amendment."

From the bottom of our hearts the prohibitionists thank the distinguished Senator from Missouri for the slip of his pen. If he only wanted to be shown, we are ready to show him. [Applause.] We accept his amendment without crossing a "t" or dotting an "i." Delays are dangerous, and at this late day amendments are fatal. I think no friend of prohibition should accept any amendment to this bill. Neither should he accept any amendment to the District prohibition bill which will be upon this floor in a few days.

Mr. Speaker, I shall take time to give a few illustrations of the value of the provision prohibiting the mailing of liquor advertising. I hold in my hand two copies of the publication known as Life, published in New York, both of the issue of January 11, 1917. There is no apparent difference in these papers on the outside, but as you look through the inside pages you find that on page 45 of one copy there is a full-page adver-tisement of whisky, and if you will look on page 45 of the other copy of the same date, apparently the same publication, you will find a full-page announcement reading like this:

Are you curious to know what is in this space in the regular edition of Life? We can not tell you here; it is against the law in this State. You can find out only by becoming a subscriber, thus receiving a copy of the regular edition through the United States mails. We are still on good terms with Uncle Sam.

If you examine the outside again, you will find this copy labeled "Dry States edition," and the other is the regular edition, containing a great number of liquor advertisements.

Under the law of 13 States, Mr. Speaker, it is unlawful to advertise intoxicating liquors. But these States have no control over the mails, and copies of Life containing liquor advertising may be mailed in clear evasion of the local law direct to subscribers. The Postal Service is in perfuership with the liquor scribers. The Postal Service is in partnership with the liquor traffic to break down State laws and build up the business of the liquor dealers. The bill under consideration will dissolve the partnership.

ALABAMA WOMAN IS NOT CURIOUS.

The "Are you curious?" announcement in Life produced at least one answer which did not please that paper. Here it is:

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

When I open the pages of Life the first advertisement my eyes rest upon begins, "Are you curious to know what is in this space in the regular edition of Life? We can not tell you here. It's against the law in this State."

I am not curious; I know.

For 16 drab years I was the wife of a drunkard. We are childless, I gave birth to one living child that died in infancy; then came one stillborn, and after that years of suffering. I have heard my husband rave like a madman, drivel like an idiot. I have known hunger; have felt the blow of a drunkard's fury.

Six years ago a change came; he drinks no longer, and is to-day a sober man.

You offer a prize of $500 for a criticism of Life. Not for $5,000 would I forego the satisfaction of telling you how I loathe a magazine that will publish a liquor advertisement. Not for $5,000 would I go back to the day when your bold headlines, "Are you curious?" would have the power to lure my husband on to drink, drin

AN ALABAMA WOMAN.

NEWSPAPERS OPPOSING LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Mr. Speaker, the newspapers of the United States are the most powerful factor in the advance of the antidrink movement.

Peculiarly expressive of their attitude in the contest which American industry and the public welfare are waging with the drink institution is the fact that 8,367 of them have just signed a statement that they decline to accept any advertising of alcoholic liquors.

Four years ago only a small number of daily papers and not a very lengthy list of other publications declined to assist the liquor trade in appealing for customers, but a spontaneous move-ment among publishers augmented this list of "abstaining" papers so rapidly that an investigation on January 1, 1915, dis-closed 540 daily papers which had adopted a no-liquor advertis-ing policy. By January 1, 1916, the number had become 850. An inquiry in January of 1917 directed to every publication in the United States, no matter what its character or frequency of issue, reveals that 8,367, or nearly one-third of all the publications in the country, now decline to serve as a medium of drink solicitation. Thirteen States have passed laws prohibiting such advertising.

Some of the powerful newspapers which adhere to this principle in their advertising columns are the New York Tribune, Chicago Herald, Times-Picayune, New Orleans; Express, Los Chicago Herald, Times-Picayune, New Orleans; Express, Los Angeles; Tribune, Los Angeles; Express, Denver; Times, Denver; Times, Indianapolis; News, Indianapolis; News, Des Moines; Register, Des Moines; Capital, Des Moines; Christian Science Monitor, Boston; Journal, Minneapolis; Tribune, Minneapolis; Bulletin, Rochester; Star, Kansas City; Review, Atlantic City; North American, Philadelphia; Banner, Nashville; Tennesseean and American, Nashville; Commercial-Appeal, Memphis; Press, Memphis; Virginian, Richmond; Ledger, Philadelphia; Gazette-Times, Pittsburgh; and Chronicle Telegraph, Pittsburgh. These names are taken at random and do not include many potable publications which are more influence. not include many notable publications which are more influential than some of those named.

In announcing its determination to follow this policy the New York Tribune said:

York Tribune said:

We have discontinued alcoholic liquor advertising purely as a matter of business policy.

We recognize the fact—emphasized more forcibly as each year passes—that indulgence in alcohol is incompatible with efficiency in any field of effort. In industry, trade, and transportation, as well as in artistic and professional pursuits, the man who uses alcohol habitually imposes upon himself a serious disability.

When alcohol is mixed with business, it is alcohol which profits, not business. It is our conviction also that when alcohol is mixed with advertising, it is alcohol which benefits not advertising.

The Tribune wants to eliminate from its advertising columns altraces of evil or even suspicious association. We feel that liquor advertisements will not help to attract to us either the readers or the advertisers whose patronage we especially desire.

The Chicago Tribune expresses the thinking back of its The Chicago Tribune expresses the thinking back of its policy against liquor advertising in the simple sentence, "If harm is done by intoxicants, the Tribune does not care to be a party to it," and Mr. James Keeley, editor of the Chicago Herald, which some time ago expelled liquor advertisements from its columns, states his platform thus:

A newspaper must have a social conscience. There is no better investment than a single standard of honor, honesty, truth, and integrity from the title to the last agate line on the back page. Those who reap the weedless fields of honesty gather golden harvests. Truth, cleanliness, and decency are the greatest dividend payers on earth.

Mr. Keeley pays a tribute to present-day newspaper standards in the following words:

The average newspaper in America to-day is a clean paper and an honest paper. There are not many examples of virtue on the editorial page and vice in the advertising columns.

During eight months succeeding the decision of the Chicago Herald to exclude the advertising of liquor, it refused $50,000 worth of such advertising, but showed a net gain of 3,000 columns of advertisements and 50,000 in circulation.

The Detroit Times in its announcement declared that it refused-to identify itself with the sales department of the iniquitous traffic or to classify for a membership in the bartender's union. The advertiser of to-day is beginning to pick his company—

Says Mr. James Keeley, editor of the Chicago Herald-

He doesn't like to sit in the same pew with the quack, the loan shark, the mining swindler, the oil pirate, and the merchandise faker.

The Christian Science Monitor of Boston accounts for the changing attitude of advertising mediums toward the drink advertiser on the score of the changing attitude of general business toward drink. It says:

More and more the general advertiser discriminates against the newspaper which sells its space to distillers and brewers, just as the average employer more and more discriminates against the worker who impairs his worth by insobriety.

Newspapers the country over are sensing the value of such an advertising appeal as the following, made by the Morning Tribune, of Los Angeles:

The news and advertising columns of the Morning Tribune are kept faultlessly clean. It does not print liquor or other advertising to influence its readers to indulge in harmful practices. It is a clean, wholesome, home paper which mothers need not fear will contaminate the minds of their children.

Associated Advertising, in noting the remarkably rapid development of sentiment in newspaper circles against selling space to alcoholic drink dealers, declares:

space to alcoholic drink dealers, declares:

On the whole, aside from the loss of revenue which must temporarily result, the net effect will be good for advertising. Parenthetically, it might also be added that eventually other advertisers will take the place of the liquor makers, because the communities that drink less as a result of the lack of advertising will employ their funds in the purchase of other things.

It is obvious that the drinker, temperate or otherwise, will not have less confidence in advertising because liquor is not advertised, and, on the other hand, millions of people who are opposed to the liquor traffic will have an increased confidence in advertising and advertisers as a whole. Call them prudish if you will, yet they do hold such views and they have millions of dollars to spend for advertised goods.

The opposition to liquor sales' publicity is leavely besed upon

The opposition to liquor sales' publicity is largely based upon love for decency and honesty. Liquor advertising is seldom honest. Before its recent exclusion of all liquor advertising the New York Tribune received an offer of a beer ad which claimed food value for that product. The Tribune objected to the claim, as they did not believe it to be based on fact. To ascertain whether or not they were correct in their belief, the Tribune had an expert analyze a bottle of beer. The report stated that it had no appreciable food value.

The United States Supreme Court has declared that when a proposed seller "assigns to the article qualities which it does not possess, invents advantages, and falsely asserts their existence," he commits a criminal offense under the statutes governing the use of the mails.

Other advertising organizations, as, for instance, the Associated Bill Posters and Distributors' Protective Co., are also putting the ban on the advertising of intoxicating liquors.

The purpose of advertising and solicitation is to cause demand The purpose of advertising and solicitation is to cause demand where demand did not previously exist. Whatever may be the opinion as to the propriety of supplying an existent demand for alcoholic beverages through an institution under strict regulation, it will not be disputed that it is not well to create a demand for such a product. The country suffers a distinct loss whenever an American citizen who has habitually abstained is induced to become a consumer of alcohol as a beverage. The Government can not with complacency view a use of its agencies which converts abstainers into drinkers and defeats the resolution of drinkers who may be attempting to conquer the drink habit.

The distribution of liquor advertising, whether in periodical, circular, or letter, has that purpose and effect. The appeal concurred by reveyed in the reading matter, the suggestion conveyed by the illustration, both tend to that end. It is conclusively proven that this liquor advertising, conveyed through the mails, is especially designed to cause drinking by those who, if not prompted, would abstain; to promote drinking among the abstinent classes of our citizens, and to provoke the latent appetite where already existent. The mails are also being used to prompt violation of law in prohibition territory and to defeat the purpose of those laws, which are intended to reduce the consumption of liquor to the minimum unprompted demand.

That such is the purposive character of this advertising and dicitation may be easily established. In a recent issue of solicitation may be easily established. Midas's Criterion of the Wine and Spirit Interests, it is said:

Thousands of dollars are spent each year during the hot months in an effort to get the public to use grape juice, pineapple juice, and other fruit juices in cold punches. Why not advertise wine as a summer drink? Many a family that does not to-day use a drop of wine could be taught by attractive copy, illustrated with tempting colored drawings, to use our light red and white wines in punches and lemonades.

The Brewers' Journal, of September 1, 1914, outlined a course of advertising designed to "mold public sentiment in favor of beer and create home consumption by those who have never before drunk beer."

In another issue of the same journal the following is found: Nearly every adult in your community may be considered as a prospective buyer. Some will respond quickly, others will require time in order to convince them of the desirability of beer.

It is also apparent that advertising and solicitation by mail is being used upon the assumption that women and children as well as men of adult age are prospective buyers of liquors, in spite of the fact that in America both women and children are considered as abstinent classes and in further despite of the fact that the public safety requires that they remain so classed. The Brewers' Journal says:

Newspaper advertising for beer should be designed to attract and appeal to women as well as men, for if beer is to be used in the home the women must be won over to it.

A great many advertisements exhibited to your committee show women and young girls drinking liquors, while others both by illustration and direct appeal, prompt the use of liquors by children. An advertisement of the Moorhead branch of the Hennepin Brewing Co. bears a picture of a man, his wife, and small son, all drinking liquors, and underneath the illustration it is explained that the beer the boy is drinking is why he is "so spry.

The following is a typical advertisement used to promote the whisky-drinking habit by women and children:

For all folks who want to stay young. No home should be without this wonderful youth and health preserving stimulant. ——'s Pure Malt Whisky is a wonderful health-preserving stimulant, strengthening the liver, kidneys, and bladder, enriching the blood, toning and upbuilding the entire system, promoting a good appetite, keeping you young and vigorous. Invaluable for overworked men, nervous, run-down women, and delicate, undeveloped children.

Beer is frequently recommended in this advertising for "hardplaying, fast-growing youngsters," and illustrations accompanying advertisements of liquor frequently show children of small size drinking. Letters and circulars of solicitation often present premiums of chinaware and similar articles which naturally appeal to women more than to men. In other ways the mails are being used to promote the use of whisky and beer in the home, especially among those members of the family popularly supposed to be free of the drink appetite.

Mail-order solicitation and published advertising also, in frequent instances, declare that all correspondence is considered confidential, and declaration is made that shipments will be made in deceptive packages, thus encouraging the inclination to order of those members of the family who may fear parental authority or objection on the part of the husband.

Here is one envelope mailed at Chattanooga, Tenn., addressed to "Occupant" of a certain number in Birmingham, Ala., and here is another envelope taken from a private mail box in Chicago, which does not even bear a stamp, but carries the words "private mail." One advertisement offers a box of cigars, a quart of whisky, and a revolver for $3.48 if sent to the Eagle Supply Co. (Department 9) of Jacksonville. Another advertisement presents "Madison XXX ale" for the use of mothers, with evident intention of inculcating the alcohol appetite in nursing babies. The professors of therapeutics and practice in a majority of American medical schools emphatically condemn the giving of alcohol to nursing women, and thousands of eminent physicians in all parts of the world consider this superstitious practice a menace to the race. Nevertheless, one advertisement recommending such use of beer says, "Obviously baby participates in the benefits." One beer advertisement shows a picture of an entire family at table and bears the line "A royal treat for the whole family." Beer is shown in the hands of the father and mother, the 15-year-old daughter, and the 10-year-old boy.

Numerous advertisements show minors and other young people, both boys and girls, drinking beer at picnics, on shady porches, on fishing trips, at different kinds of social occasions, and one shows a delivery man bringing in a case of beer and saying to the housewife, "Madam, this is the most wholesome thing that comes into your home." The Glenside Distilling Co., of Kansas City, Mo., is advertising a method by which a quart of whisky will be sent free, while many concerns advertise methods of delivering liquors in packages that look like groceries, shoes, etc. For instance, "Taylor's," 232 Washington Avenue, Albany, N. Y., publishes the following advertisement:

It's nobody's business but yours and ours. Wines and liquors for family and medicinal use sent to your home incognito. Send for free sealed information.

Permitting the use of the mails for the distribution of such advertising contributes the services of the Central Government to the flouting of law, the provocation of ill feeling between States, and the making of antisocial attacks upon politically organized communities.

The Atlanta Constitution, in an editorial which is typical of hundreds recently appearing in the press, says:

of hundreds recently appearing in the press, says:

Occupant, 50 Blank Street, Atlanta, Ga., is all the address some of more or less enterprising liquor houses on either side of the Georgia line are putting on their liquor literature, with bargain offers and solicitation of orders, sent by the thousand through the United States mall. It is just a case of up one side of the street and down the other. If it is on a rural route, the only address, perhaps, is the box number. Whole streets and entire rural routes are thus canvassed by the liquor interests without so much as a single real address on an envelope, and that, too, in a State that makes penal the publication of a whisky advertisement of any sort.

But the Federal Government, and not the State, controls the malls, and the State can interpose no effective objection to this trampling upon its laws. If a private citizen started about, anywhere in Georgia, to hand out liquor literature, he would be jailed before he had gone half a dozen blocks. But carriers in postal uniform do that which the State specifically forbids, under the direct and fostering protection of the Nation.

The States of Washington, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Oregon, West Virginia, North Dakota, Colorado, Maine, Alabama, Georgia,

South Dakota, Virginia, and Mississippi have done what they may to forbid the advertising of liquors. The present attitude of the Federal Government is directly hostile to them.

During Christmas week, Postmaster Purdy, of Minneapolis, stated that 2,000,000 such liquor circulars were sent out from his office.

The following is a sample of a particularly obnoxious advertisement:

R. P. Webb Co., Monroe, La., Lock Box 681. $3.20—Four quarts. Express prepaid. We all have confidence in our great Government. We honor Old Glory, the flag of the country, and when we find Uncle Sam's O. K. and stamp on anything we have confidence in it.

You will find on every bottle of Post Office whisky Uncle Sam's green stamp and O. K. This is your guaranty. Will you accept this and send us a trial order for this fine whisky? Post Office whisky is made right, aged right, and has the Government stamp; and last but not least, the price is right.

You will note the name of this fine bottled-in-bond whisky is Post Office. We have been permitted to use this name "Post Office," and the brand is fully protected by the law.

The circular is illustrated by a big picture of a whisky bottle of the so-called Post Office brand. At the side is a picture of a post office with Uncle Sam smiling and pointing toward the whisky.

The result of this unrestricted promotion of the drink trade by means of the mails is made manifest in long lists of crimes and disasters in both wet and dry territory.

Men are daily starving, freezing, dying of gunshot wounds and stabs, or kicking their lives away at the ends of ropes because of a system which yields the liquor mail-order houses about $4 per gallon profit on whisky and which yields the United States, in addition to the revenue, the price of a two-cent postage stamp.

Here is a specific case:

Olaf Jacobson, a tiler working near Guckeen, Minn., was found dead on the farm of John Gerry at 7 o'clock on a morning not 10 days gone by. Jacobson had died from exposure and alcohol. Beside the body was a jug full of "Welcome" booze which had been ordered by express in response to advertisements conveyed to Jacobson by the Federal Government at a fee of two

Some time ago the father of a poor family in the State of Alabama, becoming alarmed at the long absence of his 11-yearold daughter, started out to find her. He found her body in a little wood with blood spots on her clothing and her swollen tongue protruding from between her teeth. A few miles away the guilty man, a mulatto negro who had been known as a reliable and hard-working fellow, was found asleep on the hay in a barn. By his side was an empty whisky bottle. The United States Government, acting as a solicitor for a liquor mail-order house at a fee of 2 cents, had induced this man to buy and consume the stuff which had brought in its train such a series of fatal consequences. The Jacksonville liquor dealer got his few dollars of profit; the little girl got shame and agony and death; her father and mother got humiliation, bitterness, and sorrow unspeakable; the Government got the price of a postage stamp.

Details of crimes of the most revolting character directly traceable to the use of whisky sold through the medium of the mails are to be had from nearly every State.

During last Christmas week, the board of temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, through its 17,000 pastors, kept a record of the crimes and disasters indisputably due to drink. That one week's drink toll showed 110 murders, 24 suicides, 39 dead by accident or exposure, 169 badly hurt, 19 hurt by accident. 3 criminal assaults, including two upon children, 25 children in dangerous condition from drinking alcohol, and 354 miscellaneous crimes, accidents, and other misfortunes. No record was taken except where the event was clearly due to the drinking of liquors.

It may not be said that the United States is simply a mechanical agent of conveyance in these cases. The United States has recognized its responsibility in the matter of lottery tickets, refusing to carry them through the malls or to convey advertisements of them. Alcoholic liquors themselves are excluded from the parcel post, not because they are liquid, for the mails do not exclude many other liquids, but because of their inherent viciousness. The moral responsibility of the United States for the mails and interstate commerce is as complete as its powers. This principle was recently recognized in the passage of a law excluding the products of child labor from interstate com-

The time has come to put the thing to the issue. Is it right for the United States to assist in creating and intensifying an appetite for alcoholic drinks, by inducement and suggestion causing men to consume liquor who would not consume it if they were not induced? If it is right the present practice should continue. If it is wrong the coming session of Congress, without any attempt to shift responsibility upon the States, should recognize the wrong and exclude from the mails liquor advertisements and solicitation.

Will Congress sit still while murder and rape is being promoted for profit by every device of modern trade?

Will Congress sit still while every effort is being made to extend the debauchery of the drink habit to American woman-

Will Congress sit still while liquor dealers offer premiums to rural mail carriers for "lists of boys" who may be induced to begin the drink habit?

Will Congress sit still while liquor dealers are using the mails to place drink invitations into the hands of persons of all ages and both sexes?

Will Congress sit still while drink sellers advertise that they will ship drug poisons in deceptive packages, thus facilitating their reception by small boys and girls and adolescents?

Will Congress sit still while decent citizens are subjected to the burning annoyance of liquor solicitation?

Beyond any question of a doubt there is a more clamorous demand on the part of the people for this temperance reform than for any other similar law. It is being discussed in hundreds of editorials, in many thousand pulpits, and has been demanded by various church organizations aggregating a constituency of 17,000,000 to 20,000,000 people. If Congress should neglect to pass this law at this session, the growing clamor of the good people of the country would become a cry of indignation, for every home is being assaulted by these liquor circulars, and the abstaining citizen is each morning reminded by his mail that a Federal agency is being used in an attempt to offend his sentiments and demoralize his home. So loud has become the cry against this evil that Barrels and Bottles, a liquor trade paper, has itself said "liquor should be advertised by the manufacturers to the retail liquor merchants, and not otherwise," and gives as its reason that the people are becoming dangerously irritated by the present advertising policy of that trade.

As a matter of decency the United States Government will not transport through the mails alcoholic liquors. This is not because of the perishable nature of these goods, for the mails will transport almost anything from roasted chicken to a box of flowers. Uncle Sam is simply too decent to carry liquors from seller to consumer.

Why is Uncle Sam not too decent to transport the liquor seller's invitation to drink? Why should he aid the liquor wholesaler in propagating a harmful practice, a bad habit, a drug-using custom?

Mr. Speaker, I call to the attention of these representatives of the people the fact that the list of newspapers which I append herewith, and which refuse liquor advertising and request the passage of this law, contains the names of great dailies, of both Protestant and Catholic church organs, of medical and other professional journals, of trade and business publications, of literary and news magazines, of fraternal and agricultural periodicals, and of publications which appear in various foreign languages.

The list, compiled by the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is as follows:

Arkansas
California
Colorado
Connecticut
Delaware
District of Columbia
Kansas
Kentucky
Louisiana
Massachusetts
Mississippi
New Hampshire
New Jersey
New Mexico
New York
North Carolina
North Dakota
Oklahoma
Oregon

Pennsylvania	241
Rhode Island	31
South Carolina	10
South Dakota	8
Tennessee	16
Texas and a company with the company of the company	40
Utah	5
Vermont	3
Virginia	100
Washington	209
West Virginia	104
Wisconsin	308
Wyoming	16
	11
Total	8, 36

STRONG ARGUMENT BEFORE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Speaker, I desire to include in my remarks part of a statement made before our committee by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, representing the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He spoke as follows:

representing the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He spoke as follows:

1. It should be stated that the people I represent are in favor ultimately of the Randall bill as it is already recommended by this committee, but in view of the fact that we are pressed for time and as the Senate adopted the Jones amendment we shall be satisfied with that.

2. Let me state that the Methodist Church, by official action of its general conference, has asked for this legislation, and by action of 17.000 churches representing 4,000,000 members and 10,000,000 constituents. Every other evangelical church has approved the movement.

3. This approval has not been simply in a general way, but has been a definite request that Congress will enact this law at this session.

4. If Congress should fall to pass this bill before March 4, the abuses it is sought to remedy are of such a flagrant and scandalus nature that before Congress could take the matter up again there would be a Nation-wide outburst of indignation and scandal.

5. This bill is not in any sense a restriction upon the freedom of the press. Newspapers and other publications will still be free to express any opinion as to prohibition, as to the liquor traffic, or as to the advisability of using liquors. They will simply not be free to be a retail selling intermediary, unlicensed and uncontrolled, of the liquor traffic. If there is any necessity for licensing and regulating the traffic, the principle of local license should be made universal except where prohibition has supplanted it.

6. The fact that the mail-order trade in liquors is without the bounds of either the license system or prohibition system destroys the efficacy of the argument that it is a "legitimate" business and therefore should not be restricted in its use of the mails. An unregulated business in liquors is not a legitimate business, and the Federal Government is under no obligation whatever to recognize it as such or to order its relations toward such

The is a mistake to think that that is mail order business is entirely in prohibition States. It obtains just as much in communities dry under local option and in communities where the license system is so strict that a mail-order trade in competition with the local saloon is at a great advantage.

The time has come when the Government must cease to assist in breaking down the antiliquor laws of the various States. The sending of advertisements through the mail, even into States where the whole State has voted dry, is an assault upon the temperance purpose of the majority of the States of the Union.

About 20 years ago the liquor dealers began a propaganda to create an appetite among boys, to induce women to drink, to furnish samples free until the appetite got started. I hold in my hand a statement from T. M. Gilmore, made in June, 1902, to the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Convention, saying, "We must create the demand for our brands and not depend upon disinterested parties to do it for us." The United States Brewers' Association convention passed this resolution on June 20, 1902: "It is our duty to rebegin a systematic literary agitation." An experienced advertising man refers to a half dozen whisky dealers who have actually made millions through newspaper advertising. These advertisements are sent into dry territory and wet, to minors of both sexes, to women, with free sample bottles and the promise of finery and brick-a-brac and special inducements for the first order. Frequently they are sent addressed simply to the "Occupants of a liquor advertisement sam has considered that an adequate address for a liquor advertisement sam has considered that an adequate address for a liquor advertisement softer combination lots. Here is one offering a pack of cards, a box of dearettes, a bottle of whisky, and a revolver, all for $2.48. There is a promise of severy in these ads. Here is one that reads: "It is nobody's business but y variant and conditions and encourage the use of "home" beer. Here is one showing mother," and it is said that obviously the "baby participates in the benefit." Nothing has been more definitely settled by science than that drinking by mothers predisposes the offspring to the use of habit-forming drinks. Here is a big ad that calls beer drinking "the happy habit," and another that shows the whole family, including a 10-year old boy and a 15-year old girl, drinking. Here is the Hollister Distilling Co. asking the mail carriers for lists of boys to whom they can mail their advertisements. Another recommends mait whisky to all "who want to stay young; to nervous, run-down women; and to delicate, undeveloped children." Here is a picture of a toy nursing bottle, filled with whisky, given to a boy on Fourth Street, Cincinnati, shewing hew the drink trade creates an appetite in children. Here is a picture of 16 hollow toys, filled with whisky, collected from children of Portland, Oreg. Here is a picture of the cigars, bottled whisky, and revolver sent in job lots to all who answer an ad. in a newspaper of Jacksonville, Fla. Here are envelopes actually sent through the mails, "To the occupant of the house." Here is another, unstamped, and marked "private mail." Here are "medicinal" advertisements in direct violation of the recent decision of the Supreme Court.

They say "Disheter may be driven from the system by good whisky."

Court.

They say, "Diabetes may be driven from the system by good whisky" and that 2 ounces of their brand would cure even the severest cases, when the most careful scientists tell us that diabetes is caused by whisky. Here is one that says, "Pure rye whisky has staved off many a cold, many attacks of malaria and grip; no home should be without it." Here's another which claims "there is food value in beer as well as beverage enjoyment," when there is no more food in these intoxicating liquors than in a rotten egg. Here is an advertisement in which beer is advised for athletes, but Willard, the world's champion, was raised in Kansas and never touches a drop of it, and Connle Mack won't allow a man on his team if he uses it at all. Here is a letter extolling a Baltimore brand of whisky. It is signed by W. J. Mackay. It says: "You certainly must be interested in things intended for your personal use and are undoubtedly in need of whisky," etc., but this letter did no harm. It was addressed to Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts.

Here are advertising contracts offered to newspapers providing that tended for your personal use and are undoubtedly in need of whisky," etc., but this letter did no harm. It was addressed to Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts,

Here are advertising contracts offered to newspapers providing that "this contract shall be void if any legislation detrimental to the said interests of such company shall be passed." But the bait did not get the fish, for 840 daily newspapers have signed the pledge, and their letters are on record in our office, declaring that they will not receive a dollar of liquor money or advertise intoxicating liquors on any terms. The national convention of advertising men in Chicago applauded to the echo prohibition speeches and denounced liquor advertisements as false and ruinous.

Here is an advertisement of free whisky to get you started, and any boy or girl who can write a name can fill in the address and get a bottle free. Here are deceptive packages for "private persons only." with correspondence confidential, so that young people and women may get the dope without the knowledge of fathers or husbands.

All other liquor selling is under some restriction against selling to inebriates, to minors, etc. This mail order business is under no control. For 2 cents the United States becomes the hired agent and solicitor of the liquor trade and runs an unceasing "mail-order rum shop" with no restrictions whatever. This incites the people in dry territory to the violation of law. It feeds the publisher's avarice with "hunger-making gold dust." It feeds the publisher's avarice with "hunger-making gold dust." It feeds the publisher's avarice with "hunger-making gold dust." It feeds the publisher's avarice with "hunger-making gold dust." It feeds the publisher's avarice with "hunger-making gold dust." It feeds the publisher's avarice with "hunger-making gold dust." It feeds the publisher's avarice with smalls all obscene literature, contraceptive devices, lottery tickets, and advertising; makes it a prison offense to put intoxicating liquor in the mails, not because it is a liquid, b represents ruin to about 800 homes, murders, suicides, wounds, rape, at 2 cents apiece!

Is it right for the United States to assist the liquor traffic in hunting down men, women, and children who would not drink if not induced to do so?

Is it right for the United States to assist the liquor trade in making abstinent classes into drinking classes, especially women and children? The illustrating of liquor advertising with women in a suggestive way shows the trend of this propaganda. Here I have a basketful of such ads to show you.

The liquor interests are using the mails to create an appetite in young boys and girls. The Hollister Distilling Co., of St. Paul, solicited from rural mail carriers lists of names of boys who might be taught to drink, offering premiums for such lists. A typical advertisement of whisky reads as follows:

"——"s pure mait whisky is a wonderful health-preserving stimu-

and is found in mail boxes without so much as an address on it. I have several such here.

What is more, the biggest brewers in the country, including such prominent concerns as the Fred Miller Brewing Co., the Pabst Brewing Co., Schiltz, Schuitz, Jung, and Gutsch companies, are using the mails to instigate and encourage violation of the law. There is conclusive proof of this at our office.

This advertising is frequently fraudulent, claiming food and medicinal value for drinks, in despite of the recent Supreme Court ruling that the manufacturer of a product can not legally attribute to it qualities which it does not possess.

Nearly half of the daily newspapers of the country are refusing to publish liquor advertising, and the States of Washington, Oklahoma, Oregon, West Virginia, North Dakota, Colorado, Maine, Alabama, Georgia, South Dakota, Virginia, and Mississippi forbid liquor advertising in the State. But for 2 cents the United States becomes agent and solicitor for sales.

Annoyance is caused by this mail to people who do not wish to receive it, the publisher's avarice is fed with hunger making gold dust, and the land is flooded with seductive instigation to buy and drink even in violation of law.

Such advertising under the present system can be received by any child who can order and get the goods, free. Saloons sell under restrictions; there is no regulation attempted for mail-order dope incentive under our postal system.

One whisky concern offers as a premium a picture of "the most beautiful woman in the world." Notice the small want ads which advertise secrecy in delivery of goods, etc. This especially appeals to high-school boys and would-be fast girls. "It is nobody's business but yours and ours," it says. One of these actually tried to sell its mail-order list to a Keely cure firm, saying, "Our patrons are your future patients."

Note the constant suggestion as to the home use of beers and their use by women, and one picture showing beer good for the whole family, with a glass in the hands of t

They print in the papers that are read in Christian and temperance homes beautiful pictures enticing to drink and add, "No home should be without it," while we ought to see that every home is without newspapers that spread this sentiment among our children.

Here are a lot of them that tell "how mother and the baby picked up" on grog, and claim poison as "a real benefit to mothers and, of course, the baby shares."

Note the number of ads that appeal to women and the home trade.

The decent cities of the Nation have stopped department stores from selling liquors to women and children and offering it as prizes. It is time for our Government to stop conducting its solicitations to drunkenness and vice into the homes of America. Our malis exclude obscene literature, contraceptive devices, lottery tickets, and should exclude advertisements of whisky and beer. Now, let us stop its advertisement in dry and wet territory alike and be consistent.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker how much time have I remaining?

Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining? The SPEAKER. Seventeen minutes.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Howard].

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, this is a day the real friends of prohibition have been praying for. The amendment we are about to vote upon closes interstate commerce to liquor itself consigned to those States where by law the sale and manufac-ture is prohibited, and it denies the use of the mail for the purpose of circularizing such States in the interest of mailorder liquor houses

In a word, it allows the dry States engaged in the great work of raising for the generation to come sober men, happy children, and contented wives and mothers to pursue human conservation unmolested by those who are willing to damn the universe for gold. [Applause.]

No real friend of prohibition, no matter who he is or what his declarations may be, will vote against this amendment or vote for a single amendment to the amendment. Friends will vote to concur, enemies will attempt to amend it, to throw it in conference. it in conference.

From circulars handed Members, I see the members of the Antisaloon League who hold the salaried jobs in the league are divided. Too drastic, some of them say. They are homeopathic prohibitionists; I am allopathic. [Applause.]

The truth is the real prohibitionist who believes this amendment too drastic would condemn the honey of the bee for its sweetness or the music of the mocking bird for its harmony.

Gentlemen who profess to be prohibitionists and are opposing this amendment remind me of an incident that occurred in my boyhood. One morning, as I was on my way to school, I discovered a poor bug in the dusty road laboring under many I thought at first it was a June bug, but it was difficulties. not; its plight touched my boyish sympathies and I thought I would assist it in its predicament, but upon close inspection I found that this bug was pushing one way and looking another, and in boyish disgust I left it to its task. [Laughter and applause. ]

So gentlemen who are imitating this unfortunate insect, I leave you to your fate, for I believe myself to be a truer and more sincere friend to the cause of temperance than you ever The temperance forces of Georgia have wired me they are praying for the adoption of this amendment.

The leaders of the Negro race who realize the havoc liquor has wrought in the progress of these people are praying for their friends to support this amendment. Gentlemen, for God's

The riends to support this amendment. Gentlemen, for God's sake help them. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman yields back one minute.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HUMPHREYS].

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Howard] says that no sincere friend of prohibition will oppose the Reed amendment. If I know my own prohibition will oppose the Reed amendment. If I know my own heart, Mr. Speaker, I am a sincere prohibitionist, but I shall certainly oppose the Reed amendment. I am not willing to match words with the gentleman from Georgia, but I am willing to match deeds with either of them on the question of pro-hibition. [Applause.] The first public speech I ever made was against the saloon. It was in the local-option election in my home county, when that county was full of saloons, too. I have been fighting for Federal aid to the States in the enforcement of their prohibition laws for 14 years in this House. I introduced and secured the passage of the bill which requires the internal-revenue collectors to open their books to inspection of State officials and give certified copies to them and so aid them in the prosecution of violations of State prohibition laws. I introduced a bill requiring packages containing liquor shipped in interstate commerce to be so marked as to indicate accurately the kind and the quantity of the liquor contained therein, to bear the name of the consignee, and to be delivered to no one That became the law. When the Criminal Code was under consideration I offered the amendment which broke up the C. O. D. liquor business in interstate commerce, and I challenge these wordy warriors who question the sincerity of my faith to submit their record of deeds done.

Mr. HOWARD rose.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I can not yield.

Mr. HOWARD. But the gentleman challenged and I rose in response to the challenge.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. The gentleman will have ample opportunity when he extends his remarks in the RECORD, and he can then make his speech to his stenographer.

Mr. HOWARD. I will reply to the gentleman.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I am opposed to this amendment. We have in the Webb-Kenyon law at last arrived, under the recent decision of the Supreme Court, at a perfect regulation of interstate commerce in the interests of the State, and as soon as that decision was rendered giving the States full power to regulate the liquor traffic, even interstate traffic, gentlemen rush in immediately, even gentlemen who have here-tofore opposed all Federal aid, and with the enthusiasm characteristic of all new converts, propose this the most radical proposition ever made, and then challenge the good faith of those who oppose it. Mr. Speaker, I was prosecuting attorney for many years before I came to Washington. There was a patent medicine doctor who used to go around with us wherever we held court and he carried three or four negroes along who sang and picked the banjo in open-air entertainments every night to draw the crowd to whom he sold his nostrums between numbers. The doctor acted as middle man. One of his boys said one night, "Doctor, did you hear bout me playing bad." "No; I didn't hear about that." "Oh, I played bad." "When was that?" "Down in Cuba," "I did not know you were ever in Cuba." "Oh, yes; I was there in the Spanish War." "Well, tell us about it." "You heard of San Juan Hill, ain't you?" "Yes; I have heard of San Juan." "Well, that's where I played bad." "How did you do it?" "Well, sir, I got a great long sword about this long and I went up that hill and I cut the feet off of them Spains as I come to them." "Why," said the doctor, enthusiasts. [Applause.] The Webb-Kenyon bill has already accomplished all that the States have asked and all that the States have the right to ask. That law provided:

* * That the province.

* * That the shipment or transportation, in any manner or by any means whatsoever, of any spirituous, vinous, malted, fermented, or other intoxicating liquor of any kind from one State, Territory, or District of the Unit 1 States * * into any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, * * which said spirituous, vinous, malted, fermented, or other intoxicating liquor is intended, by any person interested therein, to be received, possessed, sold, or in any manner used, either in the original package or otherwise, in violation of any law of such State, Territory, or District of the United States * * * is hereby prohibited.

And in construing it the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that under its terms a State may forbid the importation of intoxicating liquors in any quantity whatever from any other State. In other words, Congress under this law has wholly withdrawn all Federal protection from liquors shipped in interstate commerce and left the States free and unhampered to act as they may themselves determine, either to forbid wholly or partially the importation of such liquors from abroad. There is but one other further step which Congress can properly and consistently take in this matter. The Webb-Kenyon law simply abandoned intoxicating liquors entering interstate commerce to the tender mercies of the State. It provided no penalty. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Saunders] takes that further step. It provides:

Whoever shall order, purchase, or cause intoxicating liquors to be transported in interstate commerce, except for scientific, sacramental, medicinal, and mechanical purposes, into any State or Territory contrary to the laws of such State or Territory shall be punished as aforesaid.

The "punishment aforesaid" being $1,000 fine and six months in jail. After many years, step by step, and each advance being encountered by most stubborn resistance, the protection enjoyed by virtue of their character as articles of interstate commerce has gradually but progressively been withdrawn until at last by the Webb-Kenyon Act Congress said, "We will have no more to do with you," and abandoned the whole subject matter to the States. But now as soon as the Supreme Court declares that act constitutional Congress is asked by this Reed amendment to take still further action; and in what direction, pray Not to broaden the power of the State, because it can not be broadened. Police power the States already have, and by the Webb-Kenyon bill we gave them power to regulate interstate commerce; so the power of the State is complete. The proposition in this Reed amendment is to lessen the power, to take back from the States a part of the power so lately grantedthe power to regulate commerce—unless that regulation is, in fact, an absolute prohibition of all importation. In other words, no State may under its provisions regulate the ship-ment of liquor into its borders in limited quantities—1 quart every two weeks, for instance, as my State does. either forbid all importation or it must open its saloons. never question any man's motives, Mr. Speaker. I know that some of the strongest prohibitionists in this House, as well as out of it, are for the Reed amendment. It is equally true, Mr. Speaker, that some of the strongest antiprohibition influences in the country are actively and aggressively for it also. understand the purpose and the theory of the latter, but I confess that I do not get clearly the viewpoint of the former. Let us consider this Reed amendment and analyze it:

Whoever shall order, purchase, or cause intoxicating liquors to be transported in interstate commerce, except for scientific, sacramental, medicinal, and mechanical purposes, into any State or Territory the laws of which State or Territory prohibit the manufacture or sale therein of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes shall be punished as aforesaid.

In other words, if a State merely forbids "the sale" or "the manufacture" of intoxicating liquors, either or both, then Congress will prohibit the shipment of such liquors into that State. It says to the State: "Lay not your profane hands upon the saloon, for if you do we will not permit a drop of intoxicating liquors thereafter to enter your borders, although your legislature may specifically authorize it."

Mr. Speaker, the prohibition ranks, which have swept the country and carried so many States, are composed of two ele-ments: First, the prohibitionists, who believe in forbidding not only the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor but even the consumption of it; second, another class, a large class, numbering thousands of men all over this country who have voted dry in county as well as State-wide elections, not because they were opposed to the use of such liquors in the home but because they believed that morally, socially, politically, and economically the influence of the saloon was evil. They joined hands in the fight to abolish the liquor traffic, to overthrow and destroy the saloon, and their success has not only surprised, it has appalled the common enemy.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none,

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. What will happen, Mr. Speaker, after this Reed amendment is the law? So far as the State of Mississippi is concerned it will make no difference. We are already dry, and have been gradually getting dryer for many years, and when our legislature meets next January we will go "bone dry." But, Mr. Speaker, my interest in the cause of prohibition is not limited by the boundaries of Mississippi. I have a broader purpose, a wider interest in this great movement. I believe there are now some 25 or 26 dry States, but I hope to see the day when the saloon will be driven a vaga-bond beyond the borders of this Republic. Will this Reed amendment hasten this consummation so devoutly to be wished?

The success of the prohibition movement has not been attained by sudden flight. It is the outcome of many years of persistent and continuous agitation and education. In my own State I know we were some 25 years, possibly, in the campaign before the State went dry, and without intending to be presumptuous, I believe that other States could profit by the experience and example of the State of Mississippi.

When the movement for prohibition was in its incipiency, we were fortunate in having in our State as a champion and adviser one of the greatest men, one of the choice and master spirits of his age—Bishop Charles B. Galloway. Enthusiasts then insisted upon State-wide prohibition by constitutional amendment, but he advised against it. The policy he advised was twofold—first, to proceed against it. The policy he advised was twofold—first, to proceed against the saloon by county option; second, to keep prohibition out of politics. No election on that subject could be held in any county at or near the date of any other election. The result of this wise course was that county after county outlawed the saloon, until in the fullness of time there were less than one-half dozen places in the State where the saloon was legalized, and when the proposition was at last made in the legislature to provide State-wide prohibition there was but one vote against it. Another most happy result of this great man's wise counsel was that never in any general election in any county, district, or in the State, so far as I am advised, was prohibition the issue or the views of any candidate on this subject the test of his qualifications for office

Last fall several States voted dry. I am told by Members here from the State of Nebraska that in their campaign the statement was made from every stump by prohibition orators that the question before the voters was simply and solely: "Shall we outlaw the saloon?" and this was universally coupled with the further declaration that it was not intended to prohibit the personal use of intoxicating liquors or the right to have them in the home. The result was that the State went dry and the legislature which convened, in strict accordance with these promises, has refused to prohibit the importation of liquor into the State. Would Nebraska have gone dry in this election without that assurance? It is the belief and conviction of prohibitionists that where a State outlaws the saloon that in a few years the experience will be so satisfactory and the good effects so manifest to everybody that the further step which will make the State "bone dry," to use the common ex-pression, will be inevitable. Elections are to be held next fall in some of the wet States to determine the question of saloon or no saloon. What effect will the Reed amendment have in those States? As I stated a few moments ago, the strength of the dry movement is dependent upon the votes of two schools of thought-the absolute prohibitionist and that other class who do not believe in prohibition, but who are heartily in favor of abolishing the saloon. That many thousands of this latter class will be driven out of the dry column if they must choose in the first election between absolute prohibition and a Stateregulated liquor traffic, in my opinion there is no doubt; whereas, if left to the States, as it is now, under the Webb-Kenyon law and as it still would be under the Saunders amendment, to determine the single question, "Shall the saloon be outlawed?" both these elements could and would unite in a common fight against the saloon and having won that in a few years the next step in the progressive movement would surely follow. The liquor interests are thoroughly alarmed. They see the steam roller coming toward them and for that reason many of them are advocating the adoption of this Reed amendment, hoping that thereby they may divide the forces behind the dry movement and in that way check temporarily, if not permanently, its progress

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, only a few minutes being left of the hour I have

The SPEAKER. Nine minutes.

Mr. MOON. I want to move the previous question on the motion within that hour, unless there can be some understanding as to this debate. Gentlemen have asked for time that will cover about an hour and a half more. Of course, it is impossible to yield that time. I simply wanted to know the desire of the House on that question [cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] because I desire to move the previous question—

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask unanimous consent for five minutes after this hour has expired.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I can not yield for that purpose. I am going to move the previous question within my hour.

Mr. SMALL. I think I can ask unanimous consent—
The SPEAKER. What is the request?

Mr. SMALL. That I have five minutes' time after the hour has expired

Mr. MANN. Is not the present hour on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky to amend?

The SPEAKER. There are nine minutes remaining on the Sherley amendment.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can move the previous question on that amendment, if he desires, without cutting off opportunity to offer other amendments.

Mr. MOON. Do I understand the Chair that on the other part of the amendment there will be another hour?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman would have another hour.
The SPEAKER. If anybody makes the proper motion.
Mr. BURNETT. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.
The SPEAKER. Another hour in the control of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon].

Mr. MOON. I think we will try to get the House together. I move the previous question on the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sherley].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves the previous question on the Sherley amendment.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the Sherley amendment.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Sher-LEY] demands the yeas and nays. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Forty-two gentleman have risen in the affirmative, On the basis of the last vote that is not a sufficient number. The gentleman can demand the other side, if he chooses. [Cries of "Question!"] The noes seem to have it. [Af pause.] The noes have it, and the amendment is rejected. [After a

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, is it in order now to offer the amendment which was sent up to the Clerk's desk?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to concur offered by the gentleman.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion which wish to have read at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman on the committee?

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. I think my motion is to come before

The SPEAKER. I know. But the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] has already made his motion. Does the gentleman want his amendment read for information? Mr. ABERCROMBIE. I will be glad to have it read for the information of the House. This amendment will be read for information solely. The Clerk read as follows:

The SPEAKER.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE moves to concur with the following amendment: Page 39, line 3, after the word "Territory," strike out all that follows down to and including the word "purposes" in line 5, and insert lieu thereof the following: "Or the District of Columbia."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL].

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMALL moves to concur in amendment 34 with an amendment, as follows:

Page 38, line 25, after the word "addressed," strike out the remainder of line 25 beginning with the word "Whoever." Also strike out, on page 39, line 1, down to and including the word "State" in line 8.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on these amendments.

Mr. SMALL. Will the gentleman withhold his motion? Mr. MOON. I withhold the previous question for five min-tes. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] withholds his motion for five minutes, and the gentleman from North Carolina is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the first provision of amendment 34, prohibiting sending through the mails advertisements of liquor. I am opposed to the amendment regarding interstate commerce in liquor, which is known as the Reed amendment and which I have moved to strike out. And I think I can give some good reason in support of the motion.

The Reed amendment is unnecessary and is an invasion of The Reed amendment is dimecessary and is an invasion of the rights of the States which they now possess. Under the Webb-Kenyon law, as construed by the Supreme Court, each State has the right to settle the question of importation of liquor into the States. Every State which has adopted prohibition—that is to say, prohibited the sale and manufacture of liquor—may go further and prohibit the use of liquor as a beverage in

Ba Ba Ba Ba Ba Ba Ba

Br

DODDODDODD

Dill

that State or its importation into the State, and through the force and effect of the Webb-Kenyon law there can be no importation of liquor into the State. This amendment which we are going to vote upon attempts to control this discretion which now exists with the several States.

Take the State of Georgia, for instance, two of whose Representatives, Messrs. Howard and Crisp, have advocated so zeal-ously this amendment, when at this time its people, speaking through its legislature, permit the importation of liquor into Georgia in limited quantities. And yet the Representatives from Georgia have exhibited a distrust and an unwillingness to abide by the legislative action of their State and wish to nullify the law of the State of Georgia and prohibit the importation of any liquor into that State. That is the position which they have taken, and which they can not deny. They are perfectly willing to come to Congress, the Federal legislative body, and ask this body to pullify to record to cot of the state of the body to nullify, to repeal, to set aside the solemn act of the legislature of their State.

I believe that upon this question of intoxicating liquors each State has the right, and ought to have the right, to settle it for itself. I voted two years ago against a proposition to amend the Consitution of the United States for so-called nation-wide prohibition because I believed it was an invasion of the right of local self-government which existed and ought forever to exist in these States. And I shall vote against it again. I shall vote against it, although I live in a dry State. Why? Because, regardless of the attitude of a man toward prohibition, the question of the right of local self-government, the continuous exercise of the police power by the State, ought to remain and forever abide with the State, and the Federal Constitution ought never to be amended so as to take away in whole or in part that right from the State. [Applause.] So in order to be consistent I am opposed to this Reed amendment.

The gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL] is in favor of Yet his State, as I understand, upon a referendum on the question of State-wide prohibition voted 100,000 against pro-

We have presented here for consideration by this body a Senate amendment to the Post Office appropriation bill which embraces two distinct propositions. The first excludes from the mails any letter, circular, or any newspaper advertising intoxicating liquors to be delivered in any State which has made unlawful the advertising or soliciting of orders for intoxicating liquors. As before stated, I favor this law because it is intended to make more effective the law of the States which have legislated upon this subject. It is simply invoking the aid of Congress to give full force to a State law.

The other proposition forbids transportation into any State of any intoxicating liquors where by the law of such State the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors has been pro-As the several States under the Webb-Kenyon law hibited. already have the power to prevent the shipment of liquors into such States, the exercise of such power should be left to their discretion and wisdom. If any dry State deems it wise to permit the shipment of liquors to its citizens in limited quantities, why should Congress, by the exercise of its jurisdiction over inter-state commerce, seek to nullify the law of the State? Such legislation by Congress is indefensible. It is insincere. It was not conceived in the interest of temperance. Some of its strongest supporters are the uncompromising opponents of prohibition in any form.

Mr. Speaker, we are here witnessing one of the results of in-In this as in all other reforms we should seek to consistency. preserve the balance of power between the Federal and State Governments. Prohibition advocates should make the States the unit for prohibition legislation. It belongs to the States. It is a part of the scheme of local self-government and should be zealously preserved. The heresy of amending the Federal Constitution should be abandoned. If we had been consistent we would not be witnessing to-day this attempt by indirection to curtail one of the powers of local self-government,

In conclusion, I may make this final statement: If this amendment can not be separated so as to allow a separate vote on each proposition, then I shall feel constrained to vote against the entire amendment.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the original and the other amendments to final passage.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman move the previous question also on the motion to concur?

Mr. MOON. Yes. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves the previous question on everything.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Small motion.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. SMALL. I demand a division, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. A division is demanded.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 23, nees 226. So the motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Randall motion to concur.

Mr. MANN. On that I demand the yeas and nays. Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Howard] demand the yeas and navs

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. Those in favor of the motion of the gentle-man from California [Mr. RANDALL] to concur will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BURNETT. What became of the amendment of my colleague from Alabama [Mr. ABERCROMBIE]?

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] cut it out. He moved the previous question on the whole thing. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 319, nays 72, answered "present" 6, not voting 36, as follows:

319.

ALL CONTRACT	YEA	s—
ercrombie	Dillon	H
lair	Dixon	H
lamson ken	Deoling Doolittle	H
exander	Doughton	Ja
mon	Dowell	Ja
nderson	Drukker	Jo
hbrook	Dunn Eagan	Jo
well	Engle	Ke
res	Edmonds	K
illey	Edwards	K
rchfeld irkley	Elisworth Elston	K
rnhart	Emerson	K
all	Esch	Ki
medict	Evans	Ki
nnet aek	Farley Farr	KI
oher	Ferris	K
orland	Fess	K
owers	Fields	La
owne	Fitzgerald	La
owning	Flood Focht	Le
uckner	Foss	Le
umbaugh	Foster	Le
ichanan, Tex.	Frear	Le
irgess	Fuller Gandy	Li
wit Lores	Garland	L
rnes, S. C. rns, Tenn.	Garner	11
rns, Tenn. ildwell	Garrett Gillett	Li
illaway	Glass	L
mpbell	Godwin, N. C.	Lo
impbell indler, Miss.	Good	M
intrill	Goodwin, Ark. Gould	M
raway	Gray, Ind.	M
erlin	Choon Lower	M
rter, Mass.	Greene, Mass. Greene, Vt.	M
rter, Okla.	Greene, Vt.	M ary nandler, N. Y.	Gregg Griest	M
narles	Grimn	M
ark, Fla.	Guernsey	M
ollier	Hadley Hamill	M
nnelly	Hamilton, Mich.	M
nry	Hamilton, Mich. Hamilton, N. Y.	M
ooper, Ohio	Hamiin	M
ooper, W. Va.	Hardy Harrison, Miss.	Mi
pley	Harrison, Va.	M
ostello	Haskell	M
X	Hastings	M
rago	Haugen Hawley	Mo
amton	Hayden	M
illop	Hayes	Ne
ale, N. Y. ale, Vt.	Helgesen	Ne
allinger	Helm Helvering	Ni
anforth	Hensley	No No Ol
arrow	Hernandez	0,
avenport avis, Tex.	Hicks Hilliard	Pi
ecker	Holland	P
empsey	Hollingsworth	P
enison	Hopwood	Pi
ickinson	Houston	D

ughes ull, Tenn. usted utchinson coway imes hnson, S. Dak. hnson, Wash. nes eating eating eister elley ennedy, Iowa ettner ey, Ohio iess, Pa. incheloe ing inkaid itchin reider afean a Follette angley ee enroot enroot esher ever ewis ieb indbergh inthicum ittlepage loyd
obeck obeck oud cClintic cCracken cCulioch cFadden eGillicuddy eKellar cKenar cKenzie cKinley cLaughlin cLemore lagee laher ann lapes lays liller, Del.
liller, Minn.
liller, Pa.
loon
loores, Ind. organ, La. organ, Okla. orin orrison eely elson icholls, S. C. orth orton Shaunessy adgett age, N. C. aige, Mass. rker, N. Y.

Peters Phelan

Porter Powers Pratt Price Quin Ragsdale Rainey Raker Ramseyer Randall Rauch Rayburn Reavis Reilly Ricketts Roberts, Mass. Roberts, Nev. Rogers Rowe Rowland Rubey Rucker, Ga. Russell, Mo. Russell, Ohio Saunders Schall Scott, Mich. Scott, Pa. Sears Sells Shackleford Shallenberger Shouse Siegel Sims Sinnett Slayden Slemp Smith, Idaho Smith, Mich, Smith, N. Y. Smith, Tex. Smith, Tex.
Snell
Snyder
Stedman
Steele, Iowa
Steenerson
Stephens, Miss.
Stephens, Nebr.
Stephens, Tex.
Sterling
Stiness
Stone
Sulloway
Sumners Sumners Sutherland Sweet Swift
Switzer
Talbott
Tavenner
Taylor, Ark,
Taylor, Colo.
Temple
Thomas
Thompson
Tillman
Timberlake
Towner Towner Treadway Vare

Venable

Vinson Volstead

Walker Walsh Wason Watkins Watson, Pa. Watson, Va.	Webb Whaley Wheeler Williams, T. S. Williams, W. E. Williams, Ohlo	Wilson, Fla. Wilson, Ill. Wilson, La. Wingo Winslow Wise	Wood, Ind. Woods, Iowa Woodyard Young, N. Dak. Young, Tex.
	NAY	S—72.
Allen Bacharach Blackmon Britten Burke Casey Church Coady Coleman Crosser Curry Davis, Minn. Dent Doremus Driscoll Dupré Dyer Estopinal	Fairchild Freeman Gallagher Gallivan Gard Gardner Glynn Gordon Gray, Ala, Gray, N. J. Heaton Heflin Henry Hood Hull, Iowa Humphreys, Miss. Igoe Kahn	Konop Lazaro Liebel Longworth McAndrews McArthur MeDermott Madden Martin Meeker Mondell Montague Moss Mudd Nichols, Mich. Oakey Overmyer Parker, N. J.	Platt Pou Rodenberg Rouse Sanford Scully Sherley Sherwood Sloan Small Stafford Steagall Steele, Pa. Tague Tilson Tinkham Van Dyke Ward
		PRESENT "-6.
Hulbert Kent.	London Moore, Pa.	Oliver	Smith, Minn.
Had done	NOT VO	FING-36.
Austin Beakes Beales Buchanan, III. Capstick Carew Chiperfield Dewalt Flynn	Fordney Graham Hart Hill Hinds Huddleston Humphrey, Wash, Johnson, Ky. Kearns	Kennedy, R. I. Lehlbach Loft Matthews Mooney Mott Murray Nolan Oglesby	Olney Patten Riordan Rucker, Mo. Sabath Sisson Sparkman Stout Taggart

So the motion to concur was agreed to. The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. Sisson (for) with Mr. Hulbert (against).

Mr. CHIPERFIELD (for) with Mr. SMITH of Minnesota (against)

Until further notice:

Mr. STOUT with Mr. HILL. Mr. BEAKES with Mr. MOTT.

Mr. OLNEY with Mr. NOLAN. Mr. PATTEN with Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington.

Mr. Murray with Mr. Kearns. Mr. Oliver with Mr. Austin.

Mr. Buchanan of Illinois with Mr. Beales. Mr. Carew with Mr. Capstick.

Mr. Dewalt with Mr. Fordney. Mr. Taggart with Mr. Graham.

Mr. HART with Mr. HINDS. Mr. HUDDLESTON with Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island.

Mr. Sabath with Mr. Lehlbach. Mr. Riordan with Mr. Matthews.

Mr. Rucker of Missouri with Mr. Mooney.
Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I voted "nay," but I find I am paired with the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. Austin, who is absent, and I desire to withdraw my vote, and to answer "present" present.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, I voted "nay." I find I am paired with the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. Sisson, who, if present, would have voted "yea." Therefore I withdraw my vote and vote "present.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. MILLER of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on Senate amendment No. 34.

Mr. McARTHUR. I make the same request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania and the gentleman from Oregon ask unanimous consent to extend their remarks on Senate amendment 34 to this bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOON. I move that the House agree to the conference asked by the Senate; and pending that I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House have leave, for five days, to print remarks in the RECORD on this bill.

Mr. MANN. I object to the latter request.
Mr. MOON. Does the gentleman object to Members printing their views?

Mr. MANN. I object to filling up the RECORD with a lot of things that did not take place on a very important proposition.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

Mr. MOON. I do not know but what the gentleman from Illinois is right about that, but I ask that gentlemen who spoke may extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that gentlemen who spoke on this subject have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MANN. If the gentlemen make the request themseives,

I have no objection.

Mr. MOON. I make it at their request.

The gentleman may make it for himself; I have Mr. MANN.

no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] asks leave to extend his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

a pause.] The Chair hears none.

By unanimous consent, leave was given to Mr. Cannon,
Mr. Rubey, Mr. Wm. Elza Williams, Mr. McArthur, Mr.
Fess, Mr. Barkley, Mr. Keating, Mr. Tillman, Mr. Oliver,
Mr. Burnett, Mr. Gray of Indiana, Mr. Abergrombie, Mr.
Ayres, Mr. Byenes of South Carolina, Mr. Bell, Mr. KincheLoe, Mr. Small, Mr. Blackmon, Mr. Hamlin, Mr. Taylor of Colorado, Mr. Goodwin of Arkansas, Mr. Kettner, Mr. Raker,
Mr. Saunders, Mr. Dull, Mr. Nicholds of South Carolina, Mr.
Mr. Saunders, Mr. Dull, Mr. Nicholds of South Carolina, Mr. Mr. Saunders, Mr. Dill, Mr. Nicholls of South Carolina, Mr. Cary, Mr. Dyer, Mr. Cox, Mr. Smith of Idaho, Mr. Langley, Mr. Siegel, Mr. Mondell, Mr. Hayes, Mr. Fields, Mr. Britt, and Mr. Timberlake to print remarks in the Record on the

Mr. Moon. Mr. Speaker to pint remarks in the Akcord on the Post Office appropriation bill.

Mr. Moon. Mr. Speaker, the Speaker announced that I had made a request to extend my remarks after the objection of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann]. The gentleman from Illinois and the Speaker misunderstood me, as far as I was concerned, because I did not make any such request for myself and do not make it now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not have to extend his remarks unless he wants to.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Who else besides the gentleman from Tennessee and myself failed to make the request?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not recollect. He hardly had strength enough to count them all.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Arkansas gets into the Record anyhow, or into the limelight, and a good many other gentlemen do not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Moon] moves to agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. Moon, Mr. Bell, Mr. Cox, Mr. Steenerson, and Mr. Madden.

NATIONAL SOCIETY UNITED STATES DAUGHTERS OF 1812-VETO MESSAGE (H. DOC. NO. 2081).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message on the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 230) authorizing the National Society United States Daughters of 1812 to file its historical material in the Smithsonian Institution and to make annual reports to the secretary thereof:

To the House of Representatives:

I take the liberty of returning this joint resolution (H. J. Ites. 230) without my signature, not because I am not in sympathy with its purpose, namely, to accord a place to the records of a great patriotic society in a national repository, but because I am convinced that it would not be just to accord this privilege to one such society without according it to all that might desire to avail themselves of it, and because it would be impossible to do that with the present space and equipment available at the Smithsonian Institution and the National Museum.

I would be in sympathy with any purpose to supply those institutions with the necessary space and equipment, but unless it is in contemplation to do that, I do not believe that it is wise to begin the policy represented by this resolution.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 21, 1917.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the President's message be referred to the Committee on the Library. The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19359) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, had further insisted upon its amendments to said bill, and asked a further conference with the House of Representatives, and ordered that Mr. SMITH of South Carolina, Mr. SMITH of Georgia, and Mr. WARREN be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the Agricultural appropriation bill (H. R. 19359) and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments to the Agricultural appropriation bill-

Mr. MANN. And upon its amendment to Senate amendment No. 111.

Mr. LEVER. And upon its amendment to Senate amendment

111, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the Agricultural appropriation bill, and upon its amendment to Senate amendment 111, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. The motion was agreed to; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. Lever, Mr. Lee, and Mr.

REPUBLIC COAL CQ.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to lease the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. HILLIARD. Will the gentleman yield? I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Oklahoma if all that was said here in debate to the effect that the Senate would reject any leasing proposition and insist upon the sale of the coal land to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. has not been justified by the action of the Senate in rejecting the House

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, not at all. They merely ask for a conference in the usual way.

Mr. HILLIARD. Do they not object to our amendments and reject them?

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, no; they merely disagree to all our amendments and ask for a conference.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, if it is in order, I move that the House conferees be instructed to adhere to the leasing amendment which the House put on the joint resolution.

Mr. FERRIS. That is not in order-

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order until we get the unanimous consent.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. We were unable to hear what the request was which was made by the gentleman from Okla-

The SPEAKER. His request was to take from the Speaker's table the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) about the sale or leasing of coal lands to the Republic Coal Co.

Mr. FERRIS. And agree to the conference asked by the

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks to take that joint resolution from the Speaker's table, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma report that the Senate has disagreed to this amendment?

Mr. FERRIS. The Senate has disagreed to the amendment.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Was any vote taken on it in the Senate?

Mr. FERRIS. No; they simply asked to disagree with the House amendments.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.
Mr. FERRIS. I move to take from the Speaker's table the Senate joint resolution 50 and agree to the conference asked for.
The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House Senate joint resolution 50. Mr. FERRIS. I move to agree to the conference asked for.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma moves to agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the conferees be instructed to adhere to the amendments of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado moves that the conferees be instructed to adhere to the amendments of the

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HILLIARD) there were 43 ayes and 106 noes.

So the motion was lost.

The following conferees were announced on the part of the House: Mr. Ferris, Mr. Taylor of Colorado, and Mr. Lenroot.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on House bill 18453, making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection? There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1513).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18453) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 13, 14, 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 33, 34, 36, 38, 39, 55, 58, 62, 65, 66, 73, 74, 76, 82, 88, 96, 100, 103, 106, and 112.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 15, 17, 18, 23, 25, 37, 40, 41, 43, 44, 45, 47, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 59, 61, 64, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 75, 77, 78, 79, 81, 83, 86, 89, 91, 94, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 104, 105, 107, 108, and 109, and agree to the same 108, and 109, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided further, That $5,000 of the above amount shall be used for an investigation and report on the merits of the claim of the Indians of the Warm Springs Reservation in Oregon to additional land arising from alleged erroneous surveys of the north and west boundaries of their reservation as defined in the treaty concluded June 25, 1855 (12 Stat. L., p. 963), and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make such survey or resurveys as may be necessary to complete said investigation and report"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided, That automobiles or any other vehicles or conveyances used in introducing, or attempting to introduce, intoxicants into the Indian country, or where the introduction is prohibited by treaty or Federal statute, whether used by the owner thereof or other person, shall be subject to the seizure, libel, and for-feiture provided in section 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,600,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 10: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"For construction, lease, purchase, repair, and improvement of school and agency buildings, including the purchase of necessary lands and the installation, repair, and improvement of heating, lighting, power, and sewerage and water systems in connection therewith, $400,000: Provided, That of this amount $300 may be expended for the purchase of a perpetual water right and right of way across the lands of private individuals, for the purpose of running a pipe line from a certain spring or springs located near the Sisseton Indian Agency buildings, South Dakota, to said buildings, the purchase of such water right to include sufficient land for the construction of a small cement reservoir near such spring or springs for the purpose of storing the water so acquired: Provided further, That not to exceed $500 of the amount herein appropriated may be used for the acquisition on behalf of the United States, by purchase or otherwise, of land for a site for the Mesquakie Day School, Sac and Fox. Iowa: Provided further. That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allow employees in the Indian Service who are furnished quarters necessary heat and light for such quarters without charge, such heat and light to be paid for out of the fund chargeable with the cost of heating and lighting other buildings at the same place: And provided further, That the amount so expended for agency purposes shall not be included in the maximum amounts for compensation of employees prescribed by section 1, act of August 24, 1912."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "Provided further. That where practicable the transportation and expenses so paid shall be refunded and shall be returned to the appropriation from which paid"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "$475,000, of which sum not less than $75,000 shall be used for the employment of additional field matrons"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of said amendment strike out the figures "$10,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$8,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$400,000"; and the Senate agree to the

Amendment numbered 22: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in line 1 of said amendment insert "$75,000";

and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 24: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of said amendment numbered 24 and the following language appearing in lines 10 to 14, inclusive, on page 13 of the bill:

"That from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall have the power to authorize any superintendent, clerk, or other employee in the Indian field service to administer oaths and take acknowledgements in connection with matters pertaining to their official duties.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 32: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: line 4 of the amendment proposed, after the word "Interior," strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the following: "reimbursable to the United States from any funds now or hereafter placed in the Treasury to the credit of the Navajo Indians in Arizona, to remain a charge and lien upon the lands and funds of said tribe of Indians until paid"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000"; and the Senate agree to the same

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"IOWA. SEC. 6. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to pay to the enrolled members of the Sac and Fox of the Mississippi Tribe of Indians of the State of Iowa, entitled under existing law to share in the funds of said tribe, or to their lawful heirs, the sum of $10,334.96, together with the interest which has or may hereafter accrue thereon, remaining in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Sac and Fox of the Mississippi Tribe of Indians of the State of Iowa, from the sum of $42,893.25 transferred to the credit of those Indians under the provisions of the act of June 10, 1896, said sum of $10,334.96 to be apportioned per capita among the enrolled members of said tribe

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 46: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46, and disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85:

agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 6 of the amendment strike out the following: "for setting out trees, $500," and in line 7 of the amendment strike out the figures $75,175" and in lieu thereof insert the figures "$74,675"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 48: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 48, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 4 of the amendment strike out the word "on," after the word "bridge," and insert the following: "across the Mississippi River on the"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of the amendment, after the word "been," strike out the words "omitted erroneously from the rolls," and in lieu thereof insert the following: "heretofore erroneously stricken from the rolls and reinstated prior to the passage of this act"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "Washington," in lines 21 and 22 of the amendment, insert the following: "and other Chippewa Indians visiting said city"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 60: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lines 3 and 4 of the amendment strike out the following, "for the purchase of additional land, $41,600; in all, $129,920," and insert the following: "in all, $88,320"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 63: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 63, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of the amendment strike out the figures "$52,100," and in lieu thereof insert the figures "$50,430"; and in line 4 of the amend-ment strike out the figures "$99,100," and in lieu thereof insert $97,430"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered S0: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to the enrolled members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes of Indians, of Oklahoma, entitled under existing law to share in the funds of said tribes, or to their lawful heirs, out of any moneys belonging to said tribes in the United States Treasury or deposited in any bank or held by any official under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, not to exceed $100 per capita, said payment to be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That in cases where such enrolled members, or their heirs, are Indians who by reason of their degree of Indian blood belong to the restricted class, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, withhold such payments and use the same for the benefit of such restricted Indians: Provided further, That the money paid to the enrolled members as provided herein shall be exempt from any lien for attorneys' fees or other debt contracted prior to the passage of this act: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to use not to exceed $8,000 out of the Chickasaw and Choctaw tribal funds for the expenses and the compensation of all necessary employees for the distribution of the said per capita payments.

And the Senate agree to the same. Amendment numbered 84: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"That the sum of $5,000, to be immediately available, be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any funds of the Chickasaw Nation, not otherwise appropriated, to reimburse Douglas H. Johnston, governor of the Chickasaw Nation, for extra expenses incurred in the performance of his duty as chief executive of the Chickasaw Nation and principal chief of the Chickasaw Tribe of Indians during the period covered between the years 1907 and 1912, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to make such payment from the funds of said nation.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its

and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"Hereafter no allotments of land shall be made to members of the Creek Nation: Provided, That upon the approval of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall, in lieu of an allotment, pay out of any funds in the Treasury of the United States, to the credit of the Creek Nation, the sum of $800 each, to Lula Butler, Quenton Garrett, Jack Elton Wilson, and David Bowlegs, who have not received an allotment or money in lieu of an allotment: Provided further, That if it shall be found that any of said parties have received a partial allotment the Secretary of the Interior shall pay to such party or parties a sum sufficient to equalize such partial allotment up to the sum of $800." ficient to equalize such partial allotment up to the sum of $800." And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 87: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 7 of the amendment strike out the following: "$40,000; in all, $162,200," and insert "$30,000; in all, $152,200"; and the Senate agree to the same,

Amendment numbered 90: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 90, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 12 of the amendment, after the word "prescribe," strike out the period, insert a colon, and add the following: "Provided, That the application of this provision shall not interfere with any rights guaranteed by treaty to any allotted Umatilla Indian or Indians"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 92: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 92, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed insert the following:

"Sec. 21. For support and education of 365 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Flandreau, S. Dak., and for pay of superintendent, $62,955; for general repairs and improvements, $8,000; for new barn, $3,000; in all, $73,955."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 93: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 93, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following: "in all, $53,750."

On page 40, line 1, of the bill, after the figures "$43,750," insert the following: "of which amount not exceeding $900 may be expended for the purchase of two new busses."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 95: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

amendment proposed insert the following:

"For acquiring, constructing, or enlargement and equipment of school buildings on the following reservations: Crow Creek, Pine Ridge, Rosebud, Standing Rock, Yankton, Sisseton, Lower Brule and Cheyenne River, $300,000, of which sum not to exceed $50,000 shall be used for the construction and equipment of new school buildings at Fort Yates, N. Dak. And it is hereby declared to be the settled policy of the Government to have of the proportion whatever out of the Treasury hereafter make no appropriation whatever out of the Treasury of the United States for education of Indian children in any sectarian school."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 110: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 110, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"Sec. 26. That until the meeting of the Sixty-fifth Congress, those members of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives, not less than five in number, who are Members elect to the Sixty-fifth Congress, are authorized to Members elect to the Sixty-fifth Congress, are authorized to conduct hearings and investigate the conduct of the Indian Service, at Washington, District of Columbia, and elsewhere, and the sum of $15,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to be immediately available and remain available until expended, is hereby appropriated for expenses incident thereto. The said committee is hereby authorized and empowered to examine into the conduct and management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and all its branches and agencies, their organization, and administration to examine all books, documents, and tion and administration, to examine all books, documents, and papers in the said Bureau of Indian Affairs, its branches or agencies, relating to the administration of the business of said bureau, and shall have and is hereby granted authority to subpæna witnesses, compel their attendance, administer oaths, and to demand any and all books, documents, and papers of whatever nature relating to the affairs of Indians as conducted by said bureau, its branches and agencies. Said committee is hereby authorized to employ such clerical and other assistance, l including stenographers, as said committee may deem necessary in the proper prosecution of its work: Provided. That stenographers so employed shall not receive for their services exceeding $1 per printed page."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 111: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 111, and agree to the same.

JNO. H. STEPHENS, C. D. CARTER, P. D. NORTON. Managers on the part of the House. HENRY F. ASHURST, H. L. MYERS, MOSES E. CLAPP, Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The bill as it passed the House carried appfollows:	ropriations as
Gratuity_ Reimbursable	2 697 700 00
Total	10, 695, 956, 67
The bill as it passed the Senate carried appropriate follows:
Gratulty
Total	12, 398, 107, 67
The bill as agreed upon in conference carries as follows:	appropriations
Gratuity	$8, 078, 176, 67 2, 880, 500, 00
Total

The estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, were $12,230,356.67. The bill as agreed upon in conference is $426,-320 less than the estimates of the department and $594,071 less than the bill carried when it passed the Senate.

The Senate conferees have receded on the following amendments: 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 13, 14, 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 33, 34, 36, 38, 39, 55, 58, 62, 65, 66, 73, 74, 76, 82, 88, 92, 96, 100, 103, 106, and 112.

The House conferees have receded unqualifiedly on the following amendments: 15, 17, 18, 23, 25, 37, 40, 41, 43, 44, 45, 47, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 59, 61, 64, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 75, 77, 78, 79, 81, 83, 86, 89, 91, 94, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 104, 105, 107, 108, and

The effect of the recession of the House conferees on the amendments on which they have unqualifiedly receded is as

On No. 15: Provides for three warehouses in the Indian Service instead of two permanent warehouses in last year's law.

On No. 17: Makes $5,000 of the $135,000 appropriation for general expenses of the Indian Service immediately available.
On No. 18: Allows six Indian Service inspectors an increase of $1 in per diem expenses when actually employed on duty in the field.

On No. 23: Requires land purchased by the United States for day school or other administrative purposes to be sold to the highest bidder when any sale is made as contemplated by the

On No. 25: Amends the act of March 11, 1904, so as to permit of temporary rights of way for pipe lines across Indian lands for the conveyance of oil and gas. On No. 37: Provides for the erection of a new school at the Fort Bidwell Indian school, California, and appropriates $12,000 therefor. Also, corrects the totals. On No. 40: Authorizes an amendment to the act of January 12. 1891, so as to enable the President to extend the trust period on the lands held in trust for the use and benefit of the Mission Bands of Indians in California.

On No. 41: Permits the using of the funds arising from the sale of lands on the Klamath Indian Reservation for the purpose of constructing roads, trails, and other improvements for their benefit in addition to the purposes set forth in the act of June On No. 43: Corrects the section number.

On No. 44: Grants an increase of $2,000 for general repairs and improvements at the Indian school, Kickapoo Reservation,

On No. 45: Appropriates $8,000 for the purchase of additional land at the Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich.

On No. 47: Directs the Secretary of the Interior to accept the application of Richard Daeley to enter 11 acres of land as assignee of Evaline Gallagher, and to issue patent to Daeley on his complying with the requirements of the law relative to making soldiers' additional homestead entries.

On No. 52: Removes the requirement of the act of June 30, 1914, for showing the quantum of Indian blood in the roll that is being prepared of Chippewa Indians.

On No. 53: Corrects the section number.

On No. 54: Does not increase the appropriation, but provides that $1,000 may be used for the purchase of two automobiles on the Flathead Indian Reservation, Mont.

On No. 56: Increases the appropriation to the amount estimated by the department for the irrigation systems on the Fort

Belknap Indian Reservation, Mont. On No. 57: Increases the appropriation for the support and civilization of the Rocky Boy Band of Chippewa Indians in Montana.

On No. 59: Corrects the section number. On No. 61: Corrects the section number. On No. 64: Corrects the section number. On No. 67: Corrects the section number.

On No. 68: Corrects the section number. Also provides for 10 additional pupils, an assembly hall and gymnasium, and additional land for a school farm at the Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., in accordance with the department estimates.

On No. 69: Corrects the section number. On No. 70: Provides for the construction and equipment of a gymnasium building at the Fort Totten Indian School, North

On No. 71: Provides for an assembly hall and employees' cottages at the Wahpeton School, North Dakota, in accordance with the department estimate.

On No. 72: Corrects the section number.

On No. 75: Provides that Osage County, Okla., shall be deemed Indian country within the meaning of acts of Congress making it unlawful to introduce intoxicating liquors into Indian country.

On No. 77: Provides for a reappraisement of Osage County, Okla., and appropriates $5,000 from tribal funds for such pur-

On No. 78: Corrects the section number.

On No. 79: Provides that the city of Tishomingo, Okla., shall convey sites for the dormitories for the Murray State School of Agriculture by fee-simple title.

On No. 81: Provides for the payment of M. L. Mott, formerly national attorney for the Creek Nation of Indians, for expenses incurred during the period January 15 to February 8, 1914, when his successor was appointed.

On No. 83: Reinstates existing law providing for a national attorney for the Creek Indians, and authorizes the expenditure of Creek funds to pay for the same. On No. 86: Corrects the section number.

On No. 89: Provides for the purchase of tracts of land on the Columbia River, Oreg., as fishing grounds for the Oregon Indians, and appropriates $5,000 therefor.

On No. 91: Corrects the section number. On No. 94: Merely corrects the language.

On No. 97: Appropriates $7,500 for the repair and improvement of the road from Canton, S. Dak., to the insane asylum for Indians at that place.

On No. 98: Corrects the section number. On No. 99: Corrects the section number.

On No. 101: Provides that certain patents issued to certain Indians as fee-simple patents under the homestead act of May 20, 1862, be ratified and confirmed as of the dates of their

On No. 102: Corrects the section number.

On No. 104: Appropriates $1,500 for the purchase of a storage battery at the Indian school, Tomah, Wis.

On No. 105: Corrects the totals to correspond with amendment

On No. 107: Amends the House provision authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw $300,000 of the tribal funds of the Menominee Indians of Wisconsin, and to spend the same in clearing the land, building of homes, purchase of seeds, ma-chinery, tools, etc., so as to protect the timberlands of the In-dians where they seek to farm their allotments by requiring first a survey and certification of the Forest Service, of the Indian Bureau, that the lands are more valuable for agricultural purposes than for the preservation of the timber growing on the land. Also, the amendment provides for a per capita payment, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, of $50 to each member of the Menominee Tribe.

On No. 108: Corrects the section number. On No. 109: Increases the appropriation for the irrigation system within the diminished Shoshone or Wind River Indian Reservation, Wyo., and indicates two partly completed ditches or canals on the reservation where the work shall be completed. The amendment also appropriates $5,000 additional for the purpose of making further surveys and examinations relative to the irrigation of the conditionally ceded lands on the reservation.

On the following amendments the House conferees receded, with modifying or substitute amendments: 2, 5, 9, 10, 11, 12, 16, 19, 22, 24, 32, 35, 42, 46, 48, 49, 50, 51, 60, 63, 80, 84, 85, 87, 90, 92, 93, 95, 110, and 111.

The effect of the recession of the House conferees on the amendments on which they have receded, with modifying or substitute amendments, is as follows:

On No. 2: Strikes out the $5,000 appropriated for the investigation provided for and authorizes and directs the expenditure from the lump-sum appropriation for the survey, resurvey, classification, and allotment of lands to Indians.
On No. 5: Provides that automobiles used in introducing or attempting to introduce intoxicating liquor into Indian country in violation of law shall be subject to seizure, libel, and forfeiture, as provided in section 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

On No. 9: Decreases the amount allowed by the Senate for the support of Indian day and industrial schools from $1,650,000 to $1.600,000.

On No. 10: Decreases the amount allowed by the Senate for the construction, lease, and repair of school and agency buildings from $625,000 to $400,000 and restores two provisos as estimated for by the department.

On No. 11: Provides that when expenses for transportation and collection of pupils have been refunded, that they shall be returned to the appropriation from which paid.

On No. 12: Decreases the appropriation for industrial work among the Indians from $500,000, as it passed the Senate, to $475,000, and provides that $75,000 of this amount shall be used in the employment of additional field matrons.

On No. 16: Decrease the appropriation for pay of judges of Indian courts from $10,000 to $8,000, and provides that no part of this money shall be expended for any judge for the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico.

On No. 19: Decreases the appropriation for industry and selfsupport among the Indians from $450,000, as it passed the Senate, to $400,000.

On No. 22: Decreases the appropriation for reimbursing In-dians for loss of stock infected with dourine and other contagious diseases from $100,000, as it passed the Senate, to $75,000, and provides that the same shall be immediately available and remain available until expended.

On No. 24: Strikes out both the Senate and House provision authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to empower any employee in the Indian Service to administer oaths and take acknowledgments in connection with matters pertaining to their official duties.

On No. 32: Provides that the appropriation for the construction of two bridges near the Leupp Indian Agency, Ariz., shall be reimbursable from any funds now or hereafter placed to the credit of the Navajo Tribe of Indians in the Treasury of the United States.

On No. 35: Decreases the appropriation for the purchase of lands for homeless Indians in California from $25,000, as it passed the Senate, to $20,000.

On No. 42: Directs the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, to make a per capita payment to the enrolled members of the Sac and Fox of the Mississippi Tribe of Indians in Iowa.

On No. 46: Authorizes certain expenditures for the support and education of 225 Indians at the Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., including a domestic-science cottage, an addition to the hospital, a central heating plant, and for road and drainage, and decreases the total appropriation for this school from $75,175, as t passed the Senate, to $74,675.

On No. 48: Provides for drainage assessments of tribal and allotted lands in Minnesota and makes the charges reimbursable from the funds of the Indians whose lands are benefited.

On No. 49: Authorizes the expenditure of $5,000 of the funds of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River, Cass Lake Reservation, Minn., upon condition that Congress shall hereafter appropriate $10,000 to be contributed to the Forestry Service, and that the State of Minnesota, or the local Minnesota authorities, shall also contribute $10,000 for the construction of such bridge.

On No. 50: Authorizes the payment from Chippewa Indian funds to persons whose names had been erroneously stricken from the rolls of the Chippewa Indians and had been reinstated prior to the passage of this act.

On No. 51: Appropriates $6,000 of the funds of the Chippewa Indians for the expenses of the general council of such tribe to be held at Bemidji, Minn., and also the necessary expenses of delegations of Chippewa Indians when attending to the business of the tribe in Washington, D. C.; also, authorizes a special agent of the Interior Department to attend future meetings

On No. 60: Authorizes the erection of a steel water tank and employees' quarters at the Indian school at Genoa, Nebr., and decreases the appropriation for the school from $129,920, as it passed the Senate, to $88,320.

On No. 63: Decreases the appropriation for the Indian school at Carson City, Nev., from $99,100, as it passed the Senate, to $97,430, this decrease being necessary by the action of the Senate conferees in receding from Senate amendment No. 62.

On No. 80: Restores the House provision and language, but provides for a $100 per capita payment to the Choctaw Indians, instead of $200.

On No. 84: Changes the wording of the amendment appropriating $5,000 from the funds of the Chickasaw Nation of Indians for the purpose of reimbursing Douglas H. Johnston, governor and principal chief of the Chickasaw Indians, for extra expenses incurred in the performance of his duties as such governor and principal chief between the years 1907 and 1912.

On No. 85: Provides that hereafter no allotments shall be made to members of the Creek Nation of Indians without specific authority of Congress, and authorizes the Secretary to pay to the enrolled members of the Creek Nation who have not as yet received an allotment of lands $1,040 each in lieu of an allotment, said payments to be made from the funds of the Muskogee Creek Nation of Indians.

On No. 87: Reduces the appropriation for the construction of buildings at the Indian school, Salem, Oreg., from $40,000, as it passed the Senate, to $30,000, and corrects the total to correspond.

On No. 90: Authorizes an allotment of not exceeding 80 acres to each Umatilla Indian residing on the Umatilla Reservation, Oreg., who has not been allotted but who has allotment rights on the reservation, so long as the lands remain available for such purpose, and authorizes the issuance of trust patents for the selections so made. Also provides that the application of this provision shall not interfere with rights of the Umatilla Indians as guaranteed by treaty.

On No. 92: Corrects the section number and reinstates the House provision.

On No. 93: Strikes out the specific appropriation of $900 for two busses at the Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., and provides that such busses may be purchased from the appropriation for the support and education of the Indians at this school. Also decreases the appropriation for this school from $54,650, as it passed the Senate, to $53,750.

On No. 95: Provides for constructing and equipping school buildings on certain specified reservations in North and South Dakota, appropriates $300,000 therefor, and declares the policy of the Government to be that no money shall be expended from the Treasury of the United States for education of Indian children in sectarian schools.

On No. 110: Restores the House language providing for an investigation by the members elect of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fifth Congress; makes the appropriation immediately available and to remain available until expended; also gives the committee authority to examine all books, documents, and papers of the Indian Service, to subpœna and compel the attendance and administer oaths to witnesses, and to employ such clerks and other assistance, including stenographers, as may be necessary for the proper prosecution of its work.
On No. 111: Adopts the House provision for an increase in salaries to the field employees in the Indian Service, appropriates so much as may be necessary therefor, and requires a report on the first day of the next session from the Secretary of the Interior with respect thereto.

JNO. H. STEPHENS, C. D. CARTER, P. D. NORTON, Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the confer-

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for one minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. I want to ask the gentleman from North Caroline [Mr. Kitchin] if it is the intention to have the House remain in session after 6 o'clock this evening?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; I think the House should have a continuous session and go on with the military bill until 10 o'clock to-night.

Mr. MANN. Without any recess?

Mr. KITCHIN. Without any recess.
Mr. CANNON. Will a vote be taken on the bill to-night?
Mr. KITCHIN. I do not think there will be any vote on it to-night.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BRITT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the Senate amendment to the Post Office bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection. Mr. NORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a concurrent resolution adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, sitting in general assembly at Harrisburg, conveying to the President and Federal Government assurances of loyal support in the present national crisis, which was offered by Hon. William C. Sproul, a member of the senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the Senate amendment to the Post Office appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 20783) making appropriation for the supplies of the Army.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. SAUNDERS in the chair.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, when the committee rose yesterday we had finished the title "Transportation of the Army and its supplies." I move to strike out the last word. the Army and its supplies. I move to strike out the last word. I do this for the purpose of calling attention to the hearings on this bill, page 1083, the testimony of Brig. Gen. William M. Black, Chief of Engineers of the Army, and to invite the committee's attention to the remarks that Gen. Black made in connections. tion with the operation of the public act 156, Sixty-fourth Congress, which provides that the United States shall aid the States

In the construction of rural post roads.

I will not take the time of the committee to go over the testimony of Gen. Black in detail, but I will improve this opportunity to ask the committee to notice the fact that there is no provision in that act providing for Federal aid to the good-roads movement in the several States that will give the War Department any opportunity to supervise the construction of those roads along lines designed for their possible use for military

purposes

It is obvious when one stops to think of it, that if the con-struction of the roads under Federal aid continues, without some eye to the possible use of those roads for military purposes, they will not be constructed in such a manner as to permit the transportation of the Army and its supplies in time of great necessity. The details of this matter are more fully set forth in the testimony, and I will ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including pages of that testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Vermont asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

The matter referred to is as follows:

The matter referred to is as follows:

Mr. Greene. In that connection, General, let me ask you this question: Since the Federal good-roads act has gone into effect, is there some cooperation between your department and the Department of Agriculture in the matter of specifications for bridges which will withstand the travel of transportation wagons or guns of the Army?

Gen. Black. When the good-roads act was passed by Congress, the Secretary of Agriculture wrote to the Secretary of War and asked for the detail of an officer to consult with the officials of the Department of Agriculture as to the Federal military necessities, so far as their relation to roads was concerned. An officer was so detailed, but we found that he could do nothing.

The Department of Agriculture considers that under the law it has no right to make any demands whatever on any State. When a State desires some of this Federal cooperation, its representatives come to the Department of Agriculture. They show, first of all, that there is a State commission or State official who has charge of the State organization. Then they say they want to build certain roads, some of which are to be dirt roads, some macadam roads, etc. They name the kind of roads they want to build. They say the specifications for each class of road are so-and-so. Then the Department of Agriculture gives its approval and extends the aid. But the Department of Agriculture does not attempt to exercise any control whatever over the question as to what roads are most needed, or over the question whether a certain road shall be a dirt road, or an asphalt road, or a macadam road.

I think the Secretary of War has taken this matter up with the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of War is convinced that if the United States is giving this large amount of money to aid the States, that the Federal Government should have some say as to which of the roads are most necessary for Federal use.

Mr. McKellar. I am telling you what the circumstances are.

Mr. McKellar. I know that

Gen. BLACK. I am telling you what the circumstances are.

Mr. McKellar. I know that the act gives the Secretary of Agriculture full authority.

Mr. Greene. It would seem that in a country like ours, where military problems are very complex, the problem of transportation is the foremost of those problems.

Gen. BLACK. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. Greene. And, with our roads in such an immature condition, that will be one of the most serious questions in time of war.

Gen. BLACK. There is no question about that.

Mr. Anytiony. Is it not true that that problem is working itself out pretty well over the country at this time? In the West the old wooden bridges are being replaced with concrete and cement structures.

Gen. BLACK. The question of the strength of bridges is working itself out by the advent of automobile busses and trucks, and if they get bridges strong enough for the busses and trucks they will be strong enough for all ordinary military purposes.

Mr. Anthony. The average cement bridge is strong enough for military purposes, is it not?

Gen. BLACK. Yes. The part that is not working itself out is the Strong enough for all ordinary military purposes.

Mr. Anthony. The average cement bridge is strong enough for military purposes, is it not?

Gen. Black. Yes. The part that is not working itself out is the coordination of the roads of the various States so that we will have through highways. The General Government has to look beyond State limits. It has to get through routes, and it should be able to require that an improved highway system of one State connect with the highway system of another State. In the administration of State road funds localities sometimes get the preference over through routes.

When I was in Cuba during the second intervention I submitted to the provisional governor of Cuba a scheme for a system of strategic roads in Cuba, intended to aid the Government of Cuba in putting down the rebellions that used to be constant in the outlying parts of the island. To my intense gratification, in working out that scheme I found that the system of strategic roads was the very best system of commercial roads, because they connected central points everywhere, I do not think there was a single measure submitted in the government of intervention which met with more popular approval than that scheme of roads, or with greater clamor for its being carried out. I have not any doubt that would also be the case in the United States.

As a rule, the highways most needed for Federal purposes will be those that will also be most used for commercial purposes, and it is simply a question of having such Federal supervision as will see to it that the most needed roads are built first.

Mr. Anthony, In the State of Kansas they are considering expending that State's allotment of Government money for road purposes in the construction of a highway between Fort Riley and Fort Leavenworth, along the line of your suggestion.

Gen. Black, Before this appropriation was made by the Federal Government for roads the State authorities of the State of New York and they said, "How shall these roads be best extended to meet the Fed

Gen. BLACK. That is quite true.

Mr. Kahn. In your opinion, there ought to be absolute cooperation between the Department of Agriculture and the War Department in the building of these new roads?

Gen. Black. More than that, Mr. Kahn. I think there is no lack of cooperation, or desire to cooperate, but the Department of Agriculture deems that it has no authority to call on the States for anything.

Mr. Gordon. Permit me to suggest that you recommend to the War Department that it, in connection with the Agricultural Department, take up this matter with the Committee on Roads of the House of Representatives. It seems to me, in view of your statement—in which I heartily concur—that if any amendment to this legislation is necessary to carry out the idea you have expressed—and that seems to be the case—it ought to be initiated by the War Department and the Department of Agriculture.

Gen. BLACK, I may say I made this recommendation to the Secretary of War probably a month or six weeks ago. He at once wrote to the Secretary of Agriculture about the matter, and just what status the question is in now I do not know. But I do know that the Secretary of War is quite in accord with that idea. I understand the Postmaster General has also taken the matter up and has proposed something along this line in connection with the Rural Free Delivery Service. I do not know just what his proposition is. There has been no conflict at all between the Agricultural Department and the War Department. It is simply that the Department of Agriculture has deemed that it has not the authority.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, I will add simply

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Chairman, I will add simply that the whole matter is summed up perhaps in saying that if highways under this act are constructed for mere purposes of transportation for commercial uses, and no contemplation is had of the possibility of military uses, it is very possible that we shall have highways that in time of war will give out under the heavy transportation of baggage wagons, artillery, and similar paraphernalia of the Army and become absolutely useless for this purpose. It is very plain to see that unless culverts, bridges, and similar parts of the highway are made under the supervision of at least some plan proposed by the Army engineers, we may have the most important part of the paraphernalia of the Army brought up perhaps within a mile and a half of where it is to be used in some great emergency, only to find the highway impassable because of culverts or bridges were not made sufficiently strong to carry this heavy transportation.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Yes.
Mr. STAFFORD. Do the hearings disclose any estimate of the cost that will be required on the part of the national and State authorities to build these roads to bear the strain of heavy artillery going over them, as contemplated by the gentleman?

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Oh, no. My only purpose in citing the committee to this testimony is that perhaps when this good-roads act, so called, may be further considered, at some time, that very important matter perhaps can be taken into consideration and some provision made whereby the War Department may have an opportunity to consult with the Department of Agriculture in carrying on some practical plan for the construction of those roads so far as the military neces-it is may be involved.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman realizes that an entirely different character, of road will be needed for military operations to that which is desired for ordinary purposes of travel throughout the country?

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I do, precisely; and I am speaking more particularly with regard to bridges and culverts.

Mr. STAFFORD. It may cost fourfold or tenfold as much as a road that would be suitable for purposes other than military

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I understand that.

